This instructional error went to the heart of Mr. McDonnell's defense. Mr. McDonnell never disputed that his actions were settled practices, since referring people for meetings, asking aides questions, and attending events are things governors reflexively do hundreds of times a week. His central argument, rather, was that his actions were not "official" because none sought to inappropriately influence any governmental decision. The Government capitalized fully on the instructional error to circumvent this defense—arguing to the jury that it need not find any effort to influence any governmental decision. See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 6042 ("[Y]ou look for the word pressure. It doesn't appear anywhere."). It argued that Mr. McDonnell "didn't have to say a single thing" at the Mansion event because his mere presence conferred "credibility" on Star. Id. at 5843-44, 5845. Similarly, the Government argued it was irrelevant that no request for action followed from Mr. McDonnell's suggested meeting. "[Defense counsel] said that nothing came out of it. But, ladies and gentlemen, that's not the point. The Governor of Virginia is saying, 'You should meet with them.'" Id. at 6042:6-11. The Government argued it was enough that "Mr. McDonnell's involvement with every single one of these things was in his official capacity as Governor." Id. at 5870:2-3. It argued that even the email to Mr. Eige counted as an "official act" because: "He's emailing. He's doing something." Id. at 6041:8.

[10] The district court reiterated its agreement with these legal principles in its recent Order denying bond. That Order repeats that "Mr. McDonnell attempted to use his gubernatorial office to influence governmental decisions in favor of Star Scientific" and asserts that "Mr. McDonnell assuredly did more than provide mere access to Williams." Ex. A at 2. Mr. McDonnell disagrees with these conclusions, of course, but once again the district court did not even attempt to explain why it declined to communicate these critical limitations on "official action" to the jury in its jury instructions.

Not only that, but the district court gave an unwieldy instruction that no other court has given, which improperly expanded and modified the "settled practice" instruction. The court instructed that "official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description," that "a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end," and "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6103. These instructions thus invited the jury to conclude that any customary action, any act "in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end," or even any act that Mr. Williams claimed he "reasonably believe[d]" was a "means" to some unspecified "end" (whatever that means) was automatically an "official act."

At the very least, however, whether the broad "official act" instruction—unaccompanied by any limitations remotely akin to Ring or the principles in Urciuoli, Rabbitt, and Valdes—was error is plainly a substantial question of law.[11] The instructions thus present a second substantial legal question which, if decided in Mr. McDonnell's favor, warrants a new trial on all counts.

[11] The Government has argued [illegible] the instruction here is the same as in Jefferson. False: Jefferson never approved anything like these expansions. See 674 F.3d at 357 (quoting the pertinent instruction). But regardless, it is black letter law that "[j]ury instructions should be drawn with reference to the particular facts of the case on trial," United States v. Holley, 502 F.2d 273, 276 (4th Cir. 1974), because "[a]bstract propositions of law stated to the jury without regard to the factual circumstances are potentially confusing." Duke v. Uniroyal, Inc., 928 F.2d 1413, 1421 (4th Cir. 1991). Appellate courts thus routinely reverse trial courts for relying on instructions that the court of appeals has previously approved in cases with different facts. See,

II. There Is A "Substantial Question" Whether This Court's Voir Dire Of The Jury On Pretrial Publicity Was Adequate.

Trial courts abuse their discretion in conducting voir dire on pretrial publicity if (1) the "pretrial publicity about the case raised a significant possibility of prejudice" and (2) "the district court's voir dire procedure failed to provide a reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered if present." United States v. Pratt, 728 F.3d 463, 470 (5th Cir. 2013). Here, it is undisputed that there was a great deal of negative publicity during the run-up to Mr. McDonnell's trial. See Mem. in Supp. Mot. Voir Dire Relief, at pp. 2-12, Dkt. 110 (gathering examples). Both sides thus suggested individualized voir dire for jurors who admitted exposure to publicity, to ensure discovery of prejudice.[12] The district court declined. Tr. Vol. I, at 139

Instead, the district court limited its voir dire on pretrial publicity to two questions. After acknowledging that the "case has generated a lot of media interest" the court asked the room full of prospective jurors to stand up "if you have read, heard or seen something in the media." Id. at 140. Almost everyone stood. The district court then said: "Based on what you have heard or read or seen relating to this case, if you are, in your mind, able to put aside whatever it is that you ve heard, listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides, then I want you to sit down." Id. at 141. Everyone sat. See id. The court then stated that it was "satisfied with the responses," id. at 141, and rejected repeated requests for individualized inquiry, see id. at 139

e.g., United States v. Regan, 937 F.2d 823, 828 (2d Cir. 1991) ("[A] charge that is adequate and proper in one case may not play the same role in another case involving a different set of facts."); United States v. Lung Fong Chen, 393 F.3d 139 (2d Cir. 2004) (instructions regarding intent in bank funds case not appropriate for cases involving more complex transactions). And this case presents starkly different facts and legal arguments than Jefferson.

[12] See Tr. Vol I, at 137 ("[I]t might be advisable for us to do some limited inquiry or bring them up or something ") (Government); id. at 138-39 (same) (defense).

("[I]f somebody is exposed to pretrial publicity, they have to be individually voir dired.").[13]

It is a substantial question whether that was enough. This Court has endorsed the following procedure: "'[T]he court must ascertain if any jurors who had been exposed to such publicity had read or heard the same. Such jurors who respond affirmatively must then be examined, individually and outside the presence of the other jurors, to determine the effect of the publicity.'" United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71, 77 (4th Cir. 1974). That is why, in United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 733-34 (4th Cir. 1991), the trial court "questioned potential jurors about exposure to pre-trial publicity including specific media reports, about exposure to the opinions of others, about the juror's personal opinions about the case, and about whether media attention during the trial would influence a juror's decisions" and this Court held that such "careful" voir dire was "proper." Courts have thus set aside convictions where trial judges relied "solely on a juror's assertion of impartiality." Pratt, 728 F.3d at 470. Should this Court agree with Mr. McDonnell, he will be entitled to a new trial. See, e.g., United States v. Beckner, 69 F.3d 1209, 1293-94 (5th Cir. 1995); Skilling, 561 U.S. at 438 (Sotomayor, J., dissenting) ("The majority [ ] envisions a fixed point at which public passions become so intense that prejudice to a defendant's fair-trial rights must be presumed."). This issue thus provides another basis for bond.

CONCLUSION

Mr. McDonnell respectfully requests that the Court grant him bond pending appeal.

[13] The final jury questionnaire, from which the court excluded many of the requested questions, did not cure this problem because the court declined to ask prospective jurors whether their exposure to pretrial publicity had caused them to form an opinion about guilt or innocence. See, e.g., Ex. C to New Trial Mem., Dkt. 548, at 31. Instead, it simply asked whether they had "expressed" an opinion to a third party. Ex. B to New Trial Mem., Dkt. 548, at 23. The questionnaire thus did not identify those prospective jurors who kept their opinions to themselves. Defense counsel accordingly objected that the court had no basis for determining which jurors were biased by pre-trial publicity save those who had expressed their bias to third parties. See Tr. Vol. I, at 139, 141 ("I can't make any judgments or arguments to you without any further inquiry."). Thus, nobody ever asked about "the impact" that "both past and future media attention would have upon potential jurors." Bakker, 925 F.2d at 733.

Proceedings recorded by mechanical stenography, transcript produced by computer officials

Now, as I just instructed, the legality of any campaign contributions in this case is not an issue before you   But you are not to infer from this instruction that the meals, tickets and other gifts described in this trial were necessarily illegal or criminal   These things may also be perfectly proper and legal as well

Standing alone, providing gifts of meals and tickets to public officials are not crimes, even if they are provided by someone seeking to curry favor or influence with those officials   It is not illegal to give a thing of value to a public official merely to build a reservoir of good will that might ultimately affect one or more unspecified acts now or in the future   Offering hospitality to a public official through payments for entertainment, sports events and the like would not constitute violations of the illegal gratuities or honest services wire fraud statutes if the intent of the Defendant was simply to cultivate a personal, professional, business or political -- I'm sorry -- cultivate a personal, business, or political friendship

A lobbyist is a person who, for compensation on behalf of a client, engages in direct communication with public officials for the purpose of influencing legislative or administrative actions   Lobbyists often use hospitality to cultivate personal and political relationships with public officials As I said, there is nothing illegal about this practice The fact that gifts or hospitality might make a public official willing to take a lobbyist's phone call or might provide the lobbyist greater access to the official's appointment schedule is not enough by itself to demonstrate the lobbyist's intent to provide illegal gratuities or to deprive the public of the government official's honest services Therefore, you cannot find that the Defendant has provided illegal gratuities or committed honest services wire fraud if you find that his intent was limited only to the cultivation of business or political friendship

Such gifts become criminal only if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that they were given in violation of either the illegal gratuities or honest services wire fraud statutes, as will be described below If you find beyond a reasonable doubt that gifts were given in violation of these statutes, it makes no difference that the giver also had a lawful reason or motivation for giving the gift

Now, we talked a lot about thing of value I will be instructing you in a moment about the offenses charged in the indictment For purposes of these charges, a quote, thing of value, end of quote, includes things possessing intrinsic value, whether tangible or intangible, that the person giving or offering, or the person soliciting or receiving considers to be worth something

This would include a sum of money, tickets, meals, drinks, golf outings, trips and jobs or the offer of jobs, but it does not, as I previously instructed you, include campaign contributions It also includes things of value given not to the public official but to a family member or third party for the benefit of the public official and at the public -- and at the public official's knowing direction

A public official is defined as an officer or employee or person acting for or on the behalf of the United States or any department, agency or branch of government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency or branch of government It is undisputed here that members of Congress, their employees, and employees of the executive branch are public employees

Official act In general, an official act, and that's in quote, means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy which may at any time be pending or which may, by law, be brought before any public official in such official's official capacity or in such official's place of trust or proffer The six terms, question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, refer to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the Government

An act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law Rather, official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of an official -- public official's position Therefore, official act includes the exercise of both formal official influence such as a legislator's vote on legislation and informal official influence such as the legislator's behind-the-scenes influence on other public officials in the legislative or executive branches

Official act also includes a public official altering his or her official acts, changing a position which he or she would have otherwise taken, or taking actions in his or her official capacity that he or she would not have taken but for the scheme or artifice to deprive the United States and its citizens of their intangible right to the honest services of certain government officials

Mere favoritism, as evidenced by a public official's willingness to take a lobbyist's telephone call or to meet with a lobbyist is not an official act In addition, sharing information with the lobbyist or helping to develop a lobbying strategy does not constitute an official act

Kevin Ring denies all of the charges against him and maintains his innocence His position is that the evidence shows that he only used the legitimate tools at his disposal, including his past experience on Capitol Hill, policy

United States' Response to Motion for Bail Pending Appeal

The United States respectfully opposes defendant Robert F McDonnell's motion for bail pending appeal under 18 U.S.C. § 3143(b) and Fed. R. App. P 9(b). After a six-week trial, the jury rejected defendant's lead argument for bail—his claim that he never agreed to perform official acts in exchange for roughly $177,000 in money, luxury goods, and other benefits. And as the district court explained, the jury made this finding after receiving an official-action instruction "nearly identical" to the one that this Court affirmed in United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 648 (2012). Attach. A at 9. As the district court determined after sitting through the trial, neither defendant's sufficiency-of-the-evidence challenge nor his jury-instruction challenge poses "a 'close' question or one that could very well be decided the other way," a prerequisite for bail pending appeal. United States v. Steinhorn, 927 F.2d 195, 196 (4th Cir. 1991) (per curiam).

Defendant also contends that there is a "close" question on whether the district court abused its discretion in conducting voir dire on pretrial publicity and says this is a question of first impression for this Court after Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358 (2010). But his legal argument on pretrial publicity relies on the dissent in Skilling. Def. Mem. at 20. In defendant's case, the district court "issued a 99-item questionnaire to 650 prospective jurors," inquired about pretrial publicity in court, and permitted individual voir dire of every prospective juror that defendant identified as a potential concern using the questionnaire and in-court questioning. Attach. A at 14-15. This Court's precedent and Skilling fully support that the over seven-hour voir dire here fell well within the district court's discretion, just as the five-hour voir dire affirmed in Skilling did.

Defendant invokes his 24-month sentence as a reason for granting bail, but as the plain language of § 3143(b) and this Court's precedent establish, a defendant must establish a "close" question to obtain bail. Section 3143(b) states that a court "shall order" that a defendant be detained during an appeal "unless" the appeal "raises a substantial question of law or fact likely to result in," as relevant here, a reversal or new trial. A defendant who challenges his convictions on appeal must raise a "close" question "important enough to warrant reversal or a new trial on all counts." Steinhorn, 927 F.2d at 196. The length of a defendant's sentence never removes that statutory requirement.

And under the 1984 Bail Reform Act, the law governing release during a defendant's appeal "shifted from a presumption of release to a presumption of valid conviction." United States v. Perholz, 836 F.2d 554, 556 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (per curiam) (citing S.Rep. No. 225, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 27 (1983)). "[T]he conviction is presumed correct and the burden is on the convicted defendant to overcome that presumption." United States v. Giancola, 754 F.2d 898, 901 (11th Cir. 1985) (per curiam). This shift in the law was "a significant change from the 1966 Act," under which "any question that was fairly debatable was considered substantial," justifying bail. 3B Fed. Prac. & Proc. Crim. § 770 (4th ed. 2013).

I. Background

Defendant's bribery scheme with his wife and Jonnie Williams, Sr., a Virginia businessman, unfolded over more than two years while defendant was governor of Virginia. During that time, Williams paid defendant to assist Williams's company, Star Scientific, in securing research studies of Star's product, the dietary supplement Anatabloc, at state medical schools in Virginia. The bribery scheme arose from the central policy initiative of defendant's administration. When defendant was campaigning to be governor, job loss from the recession was a major concern, and he "embraced that as really the chief challenge" of his administration. Tr. 4355. Promoting Virginia businesses to help create jobs in Virginia was an objective that voters elected him to accomplish and a longstanding goal of governors before him, a point that was uncontested at trial and conclusively established. See, e.g., Tr. 2037, 2234-35, 2541-42, 2918-20. In defendant's administration, "Bob's for Jobs," his campaign slogan, was regnant. Tr. 1307, 4333-35.

In this case, as part of the bribery scheme, defendant received money and luxury goods for himself and his family, payoffs that have long been at the core of public corruption. And as the jury found, he received those payments with corrupt intent and without good faith, and the payments were, by agreement, in exchange for helping Williams on his goal of obtaining studies at state medical schools. Defendant hid the payoffs when he could from both his staff and the public, and kept secret his understanding with Williams. And defendant assisted Williams through activities central to a Virginia governor's duties—arranging meetings with cabinet-level officials and carrying out events in defendant's capacity as governor to promote Virginia businesses. Tr. 2038, 2040-41, 2235-36, 2542, 2545-46, 2918-20. Those events and meetings targeted, moreover, the very state employees that Williams hoped to convince—both defendant's cabinet officials and the state-employed medical professionals who might sponsor research at the University of Virginia (UVA) and Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU).

As governor, defendant did regularly promote businesses, as other governors before him have, even without directing cabinet-level officials and conducting events targeted at state employees who might act on a business's behalf. "I've been in front of signs and with products in my hand hundreds and hundreds of times as Governor. Yes, sir," defendant testified. Tr. 5182. But when asked, "How many other times had anybody affiliated with those products or proposals given your wife a $50,000 check," defendant replied, "None." Tr. 5182.

At the time of defendant's inauguration on January 16, 2010, the McDonnells owed nearly $75,000 in credit-card debt, an "unconscionable amount," the first lady acknowledged, that soon grew to $90,000. Exhs. 54, 568, 572. Not long into defendant's administration, in October 2010, he learned what Williams wanted during a six-hour flight on Williams's Learjet. Tr. 4468. As defendant acknowledged in his testimony at trial, Williams talked "[e]xtensively" with defendant during the flight, even "had a PowerPoint," and "was kind of marching through his exhibits." Tr. 4468-71. Williams agreed in his testimony. He flew out to California and then flew back with defendant because Williams "figured that would give me five or six hours with the Governor to explain to him what I had discovered here in Virginia and to explain to him that I needed his help and—in moving this forward." Tr. 659. As the district court concluded, the trial record includes "substantial evidence" that "McDonnell knew what Williams was seeking, specifically, research studies for Star Scientific's Anatabloc product." Attach. B at 5.

Meanwhile, the McDonnells' joint venture that owned two beach houses, MoBo, was placing significant demands on the McDonnells' finances. After the McDonnells were rejected by every bank from which they sought refinancing for the houses—Bank of America, Wachovia, Monarch, and Sun Trust—the members of MoBo owed $11,557.23 per month on loan payments alone. Tr. 4961-62; Exh. 709. In an email, defendant's sister proposed a short sale of the beach houses. "I understand short sales will not hurt our credit, unlike bankruptcy." Exh. 51. At trial, defendant maintained that his sister was "exaggerating" in this email about the finances for the beach houses, and that his wife was "exaggerating" when she described the problems posed by their then-$70,000 and growing credit-card debt. Tr. 4938-39. Defendant repeatedly invoked at trial his $200,000 credit limit on his credit cards to explain why he was in good health financially, see, e.g., Tr. 5008, 5011, but the jury was entitled to conclude that he was under financial duress. "[I]t is the responsibility of the jury—not the court—to decide what conclusions should be drawn from the evidence admitted at trial." Coleman v. Johnson, 132 S. Ct. 2060, 2062 (2012) (per curiam).

B. April to July 2011. The McDonnells began secretly receiving large financial benefits from Williams and understood that in return they would help him.

On April 13, 2011, Williams bought nearly $20,000 in luxury clothing for the first lady, and in exchange, Williams was seated next to defendant at an event that evening. Tr. 674, 963, 4486. Five days after the shopping spree, the McDonnells invited the Williamses to the governor's mansion, and at the private dinner on April 29, Williams discussed Anatabloc, an upcoming fundraiser for Anatabloc at the Roskamp Institute, and scientific studies of Anatabloc. Tr. 4499-4500, 4991 Defendant acknowledged in his testimony that "I had heard a lot of this before when I was on the plane with him in October," and testified that "if they want to do clinical trials in Virginia, I thought that would be a good thing." Tr. 4500, 4502. Williams confirmed that he brought up the studies again. Tr. 677

On May 2, 2011, a few days after the mansion dinner, Williams met the first lady at the mansion, and she said, "The Governor says it's okay for me to help you and—but I need you to help me. I need you to help me with this financial situation." Tr. 680. That month, Williams gave the McDonnells a $50,000 loan that required no payments until the loan was due several years later and also gave the McDonnells $15,000 to cover the catering costs that defendant had contracted to pay for his daughter's wedding. Tr. 680-82, 799.

At trial, defendant claimed the $15,000 was really a gift to his daughter. During the April 29 dinner, defendant's daughter, Cailin, had stopped by and mentioned her upcoming wedding, which was about five weeks away. Tr. 4497 Defendant agreed that this was the first time that Cailin had met Williams and that the Williamses and McDonnells were not friends at this point. Tr. 4505, 4989, 5002. Cailin testified that she spoke with Williams "about ten, fifteen minutes," and that, remarkably, after the conversation, "possibly a couple days, maybe a week" later, her mother "told me that Mr. Williams was so impressed by me and really enjoyed meeting me, and as a wedding gift he wanted to pay for our reception." Tr. 321-22. When Williams gave the McDonnells the $15,000, he was not on the wedding guest list and did not attend. Tr. 4990. The jury was entitled to conclude that the $15,000 was not a gift to Cailin.

And as Williams testified, the McDonnells were not his personal friends. Tr. 683. "This was a business relationship." Tr. 684. On his publicly filed statement of economic interests (SOEI), defendant never disclosed the $15,000 gift, had his press secretary report that "the family was paying" for the wedding, described the $50,000 loan as "medical services," and did not disclose more than $2,380 in golf at an exclusive country club that Williams paid for defendant and his sons to enjoy. Tr. 2239, 4772-73, 5098-99.

On May 28, 2011, defendant wrote to Williams, "Johnnie [sic]. Thanks so much for all your help with my family Your generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated as well as the golf round tomorrow for the boys. Maureen is excited about the trip to fla [for a fundraiser for Williams at the Roskamp Institute] to learn more about [Anatabloc] and to see Celeste." Exh. 134.

On June 16, 2011, Williams outlined for defendant his plan to have studies of Anatabloc performed at Virginia medical schools. In a cover letter that began, "Dear Governor McDonnell," Williams briefly described studies already underway of Anatabloc and quickly moved to his goal. "I am suggesting that you use the attached protocol to initiate the 'Virginia study' of Anatabloc at the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia School of Medicine, with an emphasis on endocrinology, cardiology, osteoarthritis and gastroenterology " Exh. 162. At trial, defendant admitted that he had a "good sense" of this letter but claimed that "I was surprised to get the letter. It kind of came out of the blue." Tr. 5036-37 The $50,000 loan, as well as golf clubs and equipment that Williams later gave defendant and his sons in June, also came "out of the blue." Tr. 5043. The jury was entitled, however, to disbelieve defendant's assertions that the letter, gifts, and money "came out of the blue." "[A] statement by a defendant, if disbelieved by the jury, may be considered as substantive evidence of the defendant's guilt," and "when a defendant chooses to testify, he runs the risk that if disbelieved the jury might conclude the opposite of his testimony is true." United States v. Godwin, 765 F.3d 1306, 1322 (11th Cir. 2014) (citations omitted). See also Wright v. West, 505 U.S. 277, 295-96 (1992) (same); United States v. Burgos, 94 F.3d 849, 867-68 (4th Cir. 1996) (en banc) (same).

After receiving the June 16 letter, defendant forwarded it to William Hazel, his Secretary of Health and Human Resources, a cabinet-level position. Tr. 4552. And on July 28-31, 2011, Williams gave the McDonnells free use of his Smith Mountain Lake vacation home and arranged for a boat and a Ferrari to be there for their use. Tr. 5063-64.

C. August 2011 to May 2012. After being showered with gifts and money, the McDonnells advanced Williams's goals.

At the end of the Smith Mountain Lake vacation, defendant drove Williams's Ferrari on the three-hour trip home, Tr. 5064-66, and then, shortly after arriving home at 11:29 pm, emailed Secretary Hazel. Defendant directed, "Bill, would like to have [one of your deputies] attend a short briefing at the mansion about 10 am with first lady on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva." Exh. 189. At 6:28 am the next morning, the cabinet official replied, "Will do," and complied, sending a deputy to the meeting with Williams and the first lady. Later that month, defendant and his sons again played golf on Williams's tab, which defendant again omitted from his SOEI. Tr. 4773.

On August 30, 2011, defendant hosted a product launch for Anatabloc at the mansion, an event whose invitees included the state government employees from UVA and VCU that Williams wanted to persuade to conduct research on Anatabloc. Tr. 727-29. And defendant knew the purpose of the event was not ceremonial, but was rather to help Williams obtain the studies. On the briefing form that described the event and listed its attendees, defendant handwrote asterisks next to the names of the UVA and VCU researchers who attended the event. Exh. 231, Tr. 2572-73, 5080-81. At the event, defendant spoke favorably of Williams's product, and Williams handed out $200,000 in seed grant money. Tr. 732-33. Two cabinet-level officials attended the event with defendant. Tr. 4729. All of this, defendant testified, "was really part of the job creation focus." Tr. 4729

And defendant made time to attend the event even though Virginia had in the preceding week been afflicted by a series of natural disasters. As defendant's chief of staff testified, "within a one-week span, we had an earthquake, a sizeable earthquake in Louisa County; we had a major hurricane, one of the most devastating hurricanes that Virginia has had come up its east coast; and there were fires in the Great Dismal Swamp and the Chesapeake area which were affecting traffic up and down the interstate in Virginia as far west as the Richmond area." Tr. 2569. Defendant denied knowing that almost a quarter million people in Richmond were without power at the time of the Anatabloc event, but said that he "met with Secretary Napolitano an hour later" to discuss the aftermath of the hurricane. Tr. 5085.

Both before and after the August 30 Anatabloc event at the mansion, defendant's support of Williams's product was clear to university officials, who were defendant's subordinate government employees. For example, before the event, VCU's Dr. John Clore wrote to his medical school colleagues, "Mr. Williams is a very good friend with the Governor and the Governor would like to sponsor these trials as evidence of Virginia's commitment to research and entrepreneurship." Tr. 1546; Exh. 167 Dr. Clore was later invited to the mansion event and received a $25,000 check from Williams as seed grant funds. Tr. 1552.

Similarly, after the event UVA's Dr. John Lazo reported on the event to at least four other UVA officials and referenced defendant's attendance, including on his drive back to Charlottesville. Tr. 1797-1800. One of those officials later wrote a pro/con list about UVA's potential involvement with the studies. The first "pro" was "[p]erception to Governor," and the first "con" was "[p]olitical pressure from Governor and impact on future UVA requests from the Governor." Exh. 267, Tr. 2770.

On December 20, 2011, defendant's wife sold all of her shares of Star stock at a loss of $17,812.56, and then repurchased them on January 20, 2012, allowing defendant to file an SOEI in January that truthfully did not report the stock ownership. Tr. 4597 At Christmas, defendant received a Rolex watch that Williams bought him and had engraved "71st Governor of Virginia" at defendant's wife's request, and on January 7 spent $1,424 playing golf on Williams's tab. Defendant reported neither gift on his SOEI. Tr. 725, 4598, 4600, 5105.

On January 19, 2012, while Williams was at the mansion, the first lady handed Williams the phone so that Williams could discuss MoBo's troubled finances with Michael Uncapher, the husband of defendant's sister and then-manager of MoBo. Tr. 2740-41, 3353-56. Defendant maintained that an email exchange on January 27, 2012, between him and his wife was the first he learned that Williams was going to loan them (or MoBo, as he insisted at trial) what turned out to be another $50,000. Tr. 5147; Exh. 295. Defendant claimed that his wife "told me that she had reached a tentative agreement and Mr. Williams was willing to lend $50,000 to MoBo for the choice that we had made for a loan." Tr. 5147 A loan from Williams was important because, as defendant acknowledged, "traditional credit might not be available that year." Tr. 4642.

Defendant testified that he first spoke to Williams about the loan in a phone call on February 3, 2012, and that Williams proposed loaning stock to the McDonnells and "suggested I could get a margin loan from a brokerage." Tr. 4652. In notes defendant took during the call, he wrote "reportability" but testified that dealt solely with Williams "explaining to me his reportability requirements." Tr. 4657; Exh. 822. "I didn't have any problem with reporting anything I had to do with Mr. Williams," defendant claimed. Tr. 4659, 5159. Of course, after defendant ultimately received another $50,000 loan and a later $20,000 loan, neither of which required payments while defendant was in office, defendant did not report either loan on his SOEI, claiming they were loans to MoBo, not to him or his wife. Tr. 5290-91.

After talking to Williams on February 3 about borrowing more money, defendant reviewed a list of attendees for the upcoming healthcare leaders event at the governor's mansion. Tr. 5163; Exh. 629. In an email that defendant's scheduler sent on February 8, she noted that the "Governor wants to make sure" that "[h]ead officers at VCU/MCV, UVA" were among those invited. Tr. 5164; Exh. 306.

Also on February 8, 2012, Williams forwarded to the first lady names and contact information of UVA officials with whom Star had spoken on November 29, 2011, about "UVA's role in submitting an application to the VA Tobacco Commission to fund" the studies that Williams wanted. Exh. 312.

On February 9, the first lady forwarded the information to defendant and Jasen Eige, whom defendant had elevated to a cabinet-level position. Tr. 4748. The subject line of the email read, "Anatabine clinical studies—UVA, VCU, JHU," and the first lady wrote, "Here's the info from Jonnie. He has calls in to VCU & UVA & no one will return his calls." Tr. 5165-66; Exh. 312. Eige responded late the same day and said, "Lets talk next week when you return." Ex. 314. In email that she sent the next morning, while seated next to defendant, Tr. 5175-76, the first lady shot back: "Pls call Jonnie today get him to fill u in on where this is at. Gov wants to know why nothing has developed w studies after Jonnie gave $200,000. I'm just trying to talk w Jonnie Gov wants to get this going w VCU MCV Pls let us know what u find out after we return. Jonnie's cell is [redacted]. Thanks, ~mm." Exh. 314.

Defendant testified that he did not see this email until "after the investigation started" and denied that he ever had a conversation with his wife in which he expressed that he wanted "to get this going" with the state medical schools. Tr. 4737; 5173-74. Again, when a defendant testifies, the jury may "conclude the opposite of his testimony is true." Godwin, 765 F.3d at 1322. When asked, "So your testimony is that your wife was misleading one of your most trusted advisors and assuming that the two of you would not discuss this so that he could find out what you really wanted. That's your testimony?" Tr. 5174-75. Defendant answered, "There was a lot of parts to that question. Mr. Eige was her lawyer as well." Tr. 5175.

At 11:56 pm on February 16, 2102, defendant wrote to Williams, "Johnnie [sic]. Know u have been slammed. Do u want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents. Thanks for all your help. Gov " Exh. 318. Defendant testified that his reference to the "certificates" related to what he and Williams had discussed on their February 3 call as an alternative to a cash loan, and said that when he sent his email, "I figured we needed to have money for MoBo operations probably by no later than early March." Tr. 4743, 5179; Exh. 318.

Six minutes after defendant emailed Williams about the prospective loan, defendant emailed his chief policy deputy and cabinet member, Eige, at 12:02 am and wrote, "Pls see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA. Thx." Exh. 319; Tr. 4748. Within four minutes, Eige responded to defendant, "will do. We need to be careful with this issue." Exh. 320.

On cross-examination, defendant was asked, "at this point, you know that Mr. Williams wants your assistance in getting UVA and VCU to agree to help with the studies, right?" Tr. 5181. Defendant replied, incredibly, "No." Tr. 5181

Defendant claimed that he wanted to get legal advice from Eige, but emphatically rejected any suggestion that he had informed, or was going to inform, Eige that defendant was presently negotiating a loan from Williams or had accepted the luxury goods and other gifts from Williams. "No, sir, I don't talk about my personal finances with my subordinates. No, sir." Tr. 5184-85. Defendant confirmed that Eige did not know about the $15,000 wedding gift. "That's right. Because we don't make decisions based on money. No, sir." Tr. 5185.

On February 29, 2012, defendant and Williams met at 1.30 pm in the governor's private conference room to discuss ways that Williams could provide money to defendant by transferring stock, and defendant took notes on various proposals for how Williams could help financially. Tr. 4665, 5198-99; Exh. 823.

That evening, the healthcare leaders reception featured doctors that Williams invited and wanted to study his product, to the dismay of Secretary Hazel. Tr 761-63, 2081, 2075-77, 2084-85, 2159, 2205. The reception costs for Williams's guests were covered with taxpayer dollars. Tr. 2087-90, Exh. 364. But Secretary Hazel said that the people affiliated with Williams at the event did not "contribute in any way to the policies, public policy and healthcare in Virginia" or "even to the economics of healthcare in Virginia." Tr. 2209.

Secretary Hazel was asked if he could "recall any other group other than Mr. Williams" that had "the level of support from the McDonnells?" Tr. 2215. Hazel replied, "I can't recall that there was ever a situation quite like this one." Tr. 2215. He continued that "looking from sitting here now four years into this, there was never anything quite like this that I saw. I don't think I was ever looking at a product like this. I don't think that there was the involvement that we had in terms of just the repeated contacts. The Mansion event was unique. That was the only time that happened. Not that Mansion events were unique, but the whole arrangement of the thing that we just went through." Tr. 2216.

At the mansion event, defendant had heard Dr. Ladenson speak on Anatabloc's behalf and knew that Ladenson was affiliated with Williams. Tr. 5207-08. Defendant publicly recognized Ladenson at the Virginia healthcare leaders event, even though Ladenson is from a Maryland university. Tr. 5208, 5359. And by making all of the Star participants invitees to the healthcare leaders event, defendant honored them too.

On March 6, 2012, when Williams's assistant issued the $50,000 check, she first added the words "Maureen McDonnell" in the memo line, which caused her to void the check. Tr. 5232; Exh. 350. She repeated the error on a second check, voiding it as well. Tr. 5232; Exh. 351. A third and final check was made out to "MoBo Realty," with Maureen Uncapher listed below that and "Beach House" in the memo line. Tr. 5233; Exh. 352.

Defendant did not report the $50,000 loan on his SOEI for 2012 because, he claimed, the loan was to MoBo, although he acknowledged that the McDonnells were the ones obliged to repay it. Tr. 4944, 5290-92. Defendant denied that he was trying "to hide any gifts or loans from Mr. Williams" on the SOEI. Tr. 4775.

But he admitted, "The reason there's public disclosure is to be able to let people know what kind of gifts that an officeholder has received to determine whether there is any influence associated with a person or entity. So there's a lot of scrutiny." Tr. 4778.

In March 2012, defendant attended a meeting with another cabinet official, his Secretary of Administration, about state employee health plans. Defendant's chief of staff was also scheduled to attend the meeting because it was a "pretty big deal." Tr. 4764. In the meeting, defendant pulled Anatabloc out of his pocket and told the cabinet secretary that he had been taking the pills, that "they were working well for him, and that he thought it would be good for [] state employees." Tr. 2676. Defendant then "asked us if we would meet with" the Anatabloc people. Tr. 2676.

Defendant admitted that Williams "had told me on several occasions that if we needed to borrow more after that $50,000, that he would do that." Tr. 4682. In a text message defendant sent on May 18, 2012, he wrote, "Johnnie [sic]. Per voicemail would like to see if you could extend another 20k loan for this year. Call if possible and I'll ask mike to send instructions. Thx bob." Exh. 379R. Defendant acknowledged that his wife played no role in this $20,000 loan. Tr. 4886.

On July 3, 2012, Williams sent a message to defendant inviting the McDonnells on a vacation at a resort—an invitation they accepted. Williams wrote, "Johns Hopkins clinical trials report on August 8th. If you need cash let me know Let's go golfing and sailing Chatham Bars Inn Chatham Mass Labor Day weekend if you can. Business about to break out strong. Jonnie." Tr. 4889.

After claiming that his wife had "procrastinated, essentially, for a year and a half," defendant claimed that his wife transferred Star stock to defendant's children as a gift, right before the end of the year. Tr. 4706. "I was pretty upset with her," defendant testified, but he promptly filed an SOEI that did not report the stock after his wife transferred enough stock to the children to get below the reporting threshold. Although defendant claimed he was "pretty upset" with his wife, he also testified that whether the stock was transferred or not "was not a big deal." Tr. 4701, 4707

Immediately before law enforcement interviewed the first lady, on what defendant believed would be a discussion of the mansion chef's stealing food, defendant chose to review documents from Cailin's wedding and claimed that he learned for the first time that his wife had kept a refund from the catering company. Tr. 4826-28. A refund was due because defendant had made two payments totaling roughly $8,000 before Williams offered to write the $15,000 check, exceeding the balance due. Tr. 295-96, 317 Defendant testified that, after discovering that catering refund had come back to his wife, "I took prompt action" and claimed that his wife's receipt of the refund "was absolutely improper. It was Cailin's money. And I told Maureen, 'Write the check now.'" Tr. 4829 Thus, even though Cailin testified that she wanted to pay for her wedding, she ended up making a $5,266.50 profit from the catering. Tr. 295-96, 326.

Defendant and his wife were indicted on 14 counts on January 21, 2014. Attach. C. The jury found him guilty of counts 1-11—including conspiracy to commit honest-services wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. § 1349; honest-services wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. § 1343; conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right, 18 U.S.C. § 1951, and obtaining property under color of official right, 18 U.S.C. § 1951

II. Sufficient evidence easily demonstrated that defendant agreed to and did perform official actions, and the district court did not err in giving instructions nearly identical to ones affirmed by this Court. Neither issue is close.

Defendant argued to the jury that he never did anything for Williams. Defense counsel asked defendant, "Did you ever do anything for Williams or Star in exchange for any gifts, any loans, any money?" Tr. 4852. Defendant replied, "No. Absolutely not." Tr. 4852. Likewise, defense counsel argued in closing that defendant never agreed to do anything that constituted official action. "The judge will instruct you that the term 'official action' means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy which may at any time be pending or which may, by law, be brought before any public official in that official's official capacity." Tr. 5974 (citing 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3)). Defense counsel continued that "even if you believe Jonnie had a real plan" to obtain funds from the Tobacco Commission "so he could fund studies at the universities, you still can't convict my client without finding" that he "promised to take official actions that satisfy Judge Spencer's instruction." Tr. 5974-75.

Defense counsel then marched through each alleged official action. The August 1 meeting after the Smith Mountain Lake vacation? "It didn't have anything to do with helping Jonnie Williams." Tr. 5975. Defendant "sent someone to a meeting at the First Lady's office to ensure that no improper decisions or commitments were made." Tr. 5976. The mansion event on August 30? "[I]t wasn't a launch" and "was closed to any more than 29 total people." Tr. 5976. "Bob rarely knows the details about his next event until he reads the briefing sheet right before." Tr. 5977 The healthcare leaders event? "They have not shown that Bob had anything to do with inviting anyone from Star." Tr. 5979. Similar arguments were offered about defendant's communications with his cabinet-level officials, Eige and Hicks-Thomas, on Williams's behalf. Summing up, defense counsel argued, "[T]he prosecution's evidence does not prove that Bob made any decisions or took any action on any issues that were pending before him in his official capacity. To the contrary, Bob didn't make any decisions at all." Tr. 5980.

After weighing the evidence in this six-week trial, the jury could have accepted defendant's arguments, but they did not—a decision soundly within their province. The jury was correctly instructed using instructions nearly identical to ones this Court has affirmed. Tr. 6102-03, 6114; Attach. A at 9. The validity of that verdict is not a close call.

Quoting the language of § 201(a)(3), the instructions stated that "official action means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such public official's official capacity." Tr. 6102.

In defining what constitutes official action, the Supreme Court has long held that "[i]n numerous instances, duties not completely defined by written rules are clearly established by settled practice, and action taken in the course of their performance must be regarded as within" the federal bribery laws. Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 351-52 (quoting United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223, 230-31 (1914)). As Jefferson and the district court here explained, official action encompasses "conduct that is taken 'as part of a public official's position'—whether pursuant to an explicit duty or as a matter of 'clearly established settled practice.'" Attach. B at 3 (quoting Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 353). The jury instructions captured this point when they explained that the definition of official action > includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description. And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor. In addition, official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end.

The first two sentences follow directly from the settled-practice standard in Birdsall and Jefferson. The third sentence is equally well-established because "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of the offense." Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992). See also United States v. Brewster, 408 U.S. 501, 526 (1972); United States v. Hairston, 46 F.3d 361, 365 (4th Cir. 1995). And the fourth sentence is well-supported by Jefferson, as the district court explained: "[I]t is unnecessary 'to link every dollar paid to one of the Jefferson family companies to a specific meeting, letter, trip, or other action by Jefferson to fulfill his end of a corrupt bargain.' Rather, it is enough that the 'payor intended for each payment to induce the official to adopt a specific course of action.'" Attach. A at 10 (quoting Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359; United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 673 (4th Cir. 2004)). "[B]ribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359 (quoting United States v. Ganim, 510 F.3d 134, 149 (2d Cir. 2007) (Sotomayor, J.)).

Jefferson illustrates how these standards apply. Jefferson held "first" that "performing constituent services was a settled practice of Jefferson's congressional office and, second, that African trade issues were 'matters' or 'causes' that were pending before him." 674 F.3d at 357 (emphasis added). Similarly, here the major policy initiative of defendant's administration was promoting Virginia businesses, and arranging meetings with cabinet-level staff and holding events at the mansion to promote those businesses were both settled practices and actions on those matters and causes pending before defendant.

The acts that qualified as official acts in Jefferson included "meeting[s], letter[s], trip[s], and other action[s] by Jefferson," including (i) "[g]ranting requests for assistance to business ventures by corresponding and visiting with foreign officials"; (ii) "[s]cheduling and conducting meetings with Army officials and representatives, at which [Jefferson] promoted [a bribe-paying business]"; (iii) "[t]raveling to Nigeria and Ghana, and meeting with representatives of the [Export-Import] Bank [of the United States] to endorse, assist, and promote [a bribe-paying business's] scheme"; and (iv) "[v]ouching for [a bribe-paying business] in Nigeria and seeking to secure construction contracts for [its] entities." Id. at 359, 356.

Defendant's official actions here are materially indistinguishable from these actions—he agreed to help Williams obtain state research studies and advanced that goal by ordering meetings with cabinet-level officials and conducting official events with state employees Williams wanted to act on his behalf. Courts have routinely found official actions far less substantial than defendant's to be official action. See, e.g., United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 468-70 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (email and phone call to further visa application); United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 695 (2d Cir. 2013) (state legislator, among other things, "wrote a letter on State Assembly letterhead stationery" and "set up a meeting between Rosen and the Governor's chief of staff"); United States v. Moore, 525 F.3d 1033, 1041 (11th Cir. 2008) (rejecting that "the 'low level actions alleged in this case'" were not official acts; actions such as prison officers switching unit assignments, allowing telephone calls, making telephone calls, permitting meetings, and giving a key to help facilitate meetings all sufficient to "fall within the broad definition of 'official act' set forth in Birdsall").

Defendant insists that the principles above create limitless liability. But any official action must be "on" a "question, matter, cause," etc., pending before the public official. The quo also had to be part of an agreed-upon exchange, a quid pro quo, as the jury instructions required. Tr. 6100, 6113. And the jury was required to find that defendant acted corruptly, Tr. 6100, 6101, with intent to defraud, Tr. 6098, 6103, and without good faith, Tr.6123.

Defendant's refrain is that no official action occurs unless a defendant "attempt[s] to exercise governmental power," Def. Mot. at 1, but that is not a standard found in § 201(a)(3), not required by Jefferson, and not defined by defendant in any meaningful or manageable way. And to the extent the standard makes sense, it was met. Defendant understood that Williams wanted state medical schools to perform studies of Anatabloc, and defendant hosted official events and ordered cabinet-level officials to meetings to help Williams accomplish that goal—a goal that fell squarely within the major policy initiative of his administration. Those circumstances should be deemed an attempt to exercise government power, even if such a requirement exists.

And by requiring the jury to find that the official action satisfied the definition in § 201(a)(3), the court addressed whatever requirement of "government power" exists. "A trial court has 'considerable discretion in choosing the specific wording of [its] instructions.'" United States v. Whitfield, 695 F.3d 288, 305 (4th Cir. 2012) (citation omitted).

Likewise, as the district court found, defendant's actions rose above "mere 'ingratiation and access.'" Attach. B at 5. Defendant did not merely provide "access" to Williams so that he could "ingratiate" himself. Rather, defendant took specific steps using his powers of office to further Williams's business interests, in exchange for accepting the payoffs from Williams. "The hallmark of corruption is the financial quid pro quo: dollars for political favors." Citizen United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 359 (2010). That is what the jury instructions required and the facts showed here.

Defendant also relies heavily on a mix of dicta and outlier, out-of-circuit cases that do not aid him. First, defendant invokes dicta in United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398 (1999), a gratuities case. But Jefferson already rejected the argument that Sun-Diamond somehow restricted the definition of "official action" where, as here, the instructions limit that term to § 201(a)(3)'s definition. 674 F.3d at 355-56.

The same is true of defendant's reliance United States v. Valdes, 475 F.3d 1319 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc). There, the district court "refused to include" § 201(a)(3)'s language "or anything comparable," id. at 1325, which did not happen here. Thus, as Jefferson explained, Valdes poses no restriction to official action encompassing a public official promoting "specific business ventures." 674 F.3d at 356.

Defendant's reliance on United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), and United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290 (1st Cir. 2008), fares no better. First, Rabbitt has been superseded by numerous legal developments. In seeking to impose limits on corruption laws, Rabbitt emphasized harm to the government and control over the ultimate outcome—standards contradicted by settled bribery law. See, e.g., United States v. Dimora, 750 F.3d 619, 626-27 (6th Cir. 2014). See also United States v. Holzer, 816 F.3d 304, 309 (7th Cir. 1987) ("very much doubt[ing] the soundness of this reasoning" in Rabbitt). Indeed, Rabbitt is essentially dead letter in its own circuit: "Actual authority over the end result" sought "is not controlling if [defendant], through his official position, had influence and authority over a means to that end." United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993). This quotation from Loftus is nearly verbatim what the district court instructed the jury here.

As for Urciuoli, the First Circuit found fault with instructions that were much broader and more nebulous than those given here and defined official action as encompassing all actions taken "in an official capacity" or "under the cloak of his office." Id. at 295. The instructions never tied back to § 201(a)(3)'s language and failed to account for the settled-practice standard from Birdsall. And Urciuoli's distinction between ambulance-run lobbying (an official act) and insurance-company meetings (not official acts) reflects the requirement that there be a "question, matter, cause," etc. pending before the public official that the official action be "on." See id. at 295-96. The court satisfied that requirement here by requiring the jury to make that finding.

In the end, defendant's claim is that a governor may secretly accept, with corrupt intent and without good faith, unlimited cash payments, and the governor may do so in exchange for ordering cabinet-level officials to attend meetings and hosting events—even when those meetings and events further a particular business's efforts to obtain state government assistance and fall within the central policy initiative of that governor's administration. Such a claim does not withstand scrutiny and does not present a close question here.

III. The district court acted well within its discretion in addressing pretrial publicity.

In Skilling, the Supreme Court held that jury selection is "particularly within the province of the trial judge." 561 U.S. at 386. "No hard-and-fast formula dictates the necessary depth or breadth of voir dire." Id. And in evaluating voir dire, courts must consider a wide range of measures that can "mitigate the adverse effects of publicity." Id. at 388 n.21.

For example, just as the district court in Skilling sent jurors a 77-item questionnaire, so too here prospective jurors received a 99-item questionnaire that "helped to identify prospective jurors excusable for cause and served as a springboard for further questions to put to the remaining members of the array." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 388 & n.22.

Likewise, here prospective jurors were asked to identify themselves if they have "read, heard, or seen something in the media" about the case, and asked if they could "put aside whatever it is that you've heard, listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides." Attach. A at 14. The court then "brought to the bench each juror that McDonnell's counsel identified as cause for concern and questioned each about his or her opinion of the case and ability to be impartial." Attach. A at 15. "At the end of this questioning the Court asked McDonnell's counsel if there is 'anybody else' he would like to question, and McDonnell's counsel responded 'not on publicity.'" Id.

Defendant objects that the district court began in-court questioning on publicity by putting questions to the panel collectively, but it is "well established that a trial judge may question prospective jurors collectively rather than individually." United States v. Bailey, 112 F.3d 758, 770 (4th Cir. 1997) (quoting United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991)). The district court had already posed 29 questions to the entire venire collectively, and individual jurors had stood up 274 times to volunteer answers, demonstrating the effectiveness of collective questioning. Defendant counters with United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71, 77 (4th Cir. 1974). But Hankish addressed a sitting jury's exposure to media coverage during trial—a claim defendant has never raised. In Bailey and Bakker this Court rejected a mandate of individual voir dire on pretrial publicity for each of hundreds of prospective jurors.

Significantly, defendant also fails to show, just like in Skilling, that the selected jurors were biased. 561 U.S. at 390. And the jurors' decision to acquit defendant of all bank-fraud counts also supports that "the court's assessments [of no bias] were accurate." Id. at 395.

IV. Conclusion

For all of these reasons, this Court should affirm the district court's order denying bail pending appeal.

Counsel for Defendant-Appellant
Robert F McDonnell

The Government's Opposition largely ignores the legal issue before this Court and instead offers a lengthy, distorted recitation of "facts." The Government's tendentious account demonstrates the degree to which the parties contest the record. But one thing the parties do not disagree about is the nature of the alleged "official acts." The Government all-but-concedes that Mr. McDonnell never promised Williams anything and never did anything that suggested he wanted Virginia's government to do anything for Williams. No court has ever upheld a corruption conviction absent such evidence, while numerous courts have overturned them. Whether the evidence satisfied the legal definition of "official action" presents a substantial question.

The Government sought at trial (as it does here) to mask this deficiency with harsh condemnation and misleading spin. But that prosecutorial strategy only underscores the importance of carefully instructing the jury on the scope and limitations of "official action." Instead, the district court gave the jury a Rorschach-inkblot that meant whatever they wanted it to mean. It created that instruction by importing different elements of the crime into "official action," and by rejecting even the most modest limitations, e.g.: "[M]ere ingratiation and access are not corruption" and "the fact that an activity is a routine activity, or a 'settled practice,' of an office-holder does not alone make it an 'official act.'" RFM Prop. Jury Instructions, Dkt.287, at 79. The instructions present a second substantial question.

Voir dire on pretrial publicity presents a third. The district court never asked potential jurors whether their exposure to negative publicity had caused them to form opinions about guilt. The parties thus did not know and could not know which jurors formed opinions prior to trial. The Government does not dispute that this is a question of first impression post-Skilling, instead seeking to avoid it by fabricating a defense waiver of more probing questions. The record confirms, though, that this issue is likewise substantial. (Given these disputes, attached are the transcript pages concerning pretrial publicity, Exhibit A, and other pages cited herein, Exhibit B.)

ARGUMENT

The Government's Opposition essentially ignores whether Mr. McDonnell's appeal "presents a close question that could be decided either way," United States v. Steinhorn, 927 F.2d 195, 196 (4th Cir. 1991)—a much lower standard than "likelihood of success." The Government emphasizes that Mr. McDonnell was convicted by a jury and lost in district court. But that is always true for defendants seeking bond. It says nothing about whether this appeal raises substantial questions of law or fact, which this Court reviews de novo. See, e.g., United States v. Pollard, 778 F.2d 1177, 1182 (6th Cir. 1985); United States v. Suado Mohamed Ali, 735 F.3d 176, 188 (4th Cir. 2013). Courts thus routinely grant bond pending appeal in cases like this, including in Jefferson. Mr. McDonnell easily satisfies this standard.

I. The Government's Tendentious Factual Recitation Cannot Mask The Substantial Question Whether Mr. McDonnell Took "Official Action."

A. Mr. McDonnell cannot, in this short reply, rebut every Government distortion. Five examples show why this Court should be highly skeptical of the Government's drive-by recap of this nearly-six-week trial:

First, the Government claims "the jury found" Mr. McDonnell "received those payments ... in exchange for helping Williams on his goal of obtaining studies at state medical schools." Opp.4. That is false. The jury made no such finding. The jury instructions never mention studies in explaining the elements of the offenses, instead inviting the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell for sending any email, appearing at any event, or arranging any meeting—regardless of their purpose. And that is precisely how the Government argued its case, telling the jury it was welcome to convict Mr. McDonnell for anything he did "on the issue of Virginia business development" that was "in his official capacity as Governor" because "[w]hatever it was, it's all official action." Tr.5869-70. That is because the essence of the Government's case was not studies; it was that Mr. McDonnell was supposedly "lending the prestige of the governor's office" to Williams (per The Washington Post's stock language). Matt Zapotsky, Ex-Attorneys General Ask to Support McDonnell Request for Bond Pending Appeal, WASH. POST, Jan. 14, 2015.

Second, the Government blatantly mischaracterizes the following statement Williams claimed Mrs. McDonnell made: "The Governor says it's okay for me to help you and—but I need you to help me. I need you to help me with this financial situation." Opp.7 (quoting Tr.680). The Government changes its meaning by omitting the critical exchange immediately after:

> Q: Well, to be clear, she's saying that she's going to help you, but she's not promising you that the Governor is going to help you, right?
>
> A. No.
>
> Q: And she never tells you at this meeting, "I'll get Bob to do X, Y or Z if you give us the money"?
>
> A. No.

Tr.680-81 (emphases added).

Third, the Government implies that Mr. McDonnell and Williams had an agreement. But the Government conceded below that "[t]here [was] no express agreement in this case." Tr.6045. All the jury needed to find was that Mr. McDonnell—based on supposed "winks and nods," Tr.6101—"solicited or received a thing of value at least in part in exchange for the performance of official action," Tr.6101-02 (emphasis added). Those loose requirements reinforce the importance of defining "official action" correctly.

Fourth, the Government claims Mr. McDonnell's "support of Williams's product was clear to university officials." Opp.12. Again false. The only time Mr. McDonnell interacted with anyone at UVA or VCU in connection with Star was at the mansion event. The two university officials who attended that event testified Mr. McDonnell never "spoke favorably" about Star. Rather, UVA's Dr. Lazo testified that Mr. McDonnell asked whether "there was some scientific validity" to the studies, whether "there was any reason to explore this further," and whether this could be "good for the Commonwealth." Tr.1793-95; see also Bond Mot. 16. And VCU's Dr. Clore testified that "the Governor spoke at a high level about health and wellness in Virginia and the compound." Tr.1582. As for Dr. Clore's "good friend [of the Governor]" email, Opp.12, the Government omits that Dr. Clore's understanding was based solely on what Williams' consultant represented to him, not anything Mr. McDonnell said or did. Tr.1572.[1] That is, no doubt, why nobody ever applied for grants, no grants were made, and nothing happened for Star at UVA or VCU.

[1] The Government's invocation of the pro/con list is particularly egregious because the person who created it never interacted with anyone from the McDonnell Administration. Tr.2772. She based her inference of "political pressure from Governor" on a Google search revealing a photograph of Mr. McDonnell, Tr.2777—taken months before the supposed conspiracy—that Star posted to Facebook after the McDonnell Administration forbade it from suggesting that Mr. McDonnell was endorsing Star, Tr.1422-24.

Fifth, the Government criticizes Mr. McDonnell for supposed deficits in his state disclosure forms. But it never mentions the undisputed fact that "[t]here has been no suggestion in this case that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia law." Tr.6125 Virginia law did not require Mr. McDonnell to (1) list gifts to family members, (2) identify by name someone who provides a loan, or (3) list loans to LLCs, even jointly owned ones.[2] (Throughout the so-called "scheme," Mr. McDonnell publicly disclosed numerous things from Williams. Tr.4593-94, 4782-83.) Mr. McDonnell obviously did not break federal law by failing to over-disclose under state law.[3]

B. But ultimately none of this matters. Not even the Government claims Mr. McDonnell asked anyone to do anything besides hear Williams out and do whatever they believed was in Virginia's best interests. Mr. McDonnell arranged only one meeting involving Williams during the "conspiracy"—which he did not attend—and the testimony of the staffer (Molly Huffstetler) who attended that meeting proves Mr. McDonnell was not trying to influence anyone:

[2] Nor must officials list gifts from spouses. The Government misleadingly refers to the "Rolex watch that Williams bought him," Opp.13, but the evidence showed that Mrs. McDonnell gave the watch as a Christmas gift from her Mr. McDonnell did not discover its true source, or about the "shopping spree"—neither of which support any conviction—until the investigation became public a-year-and-a-half later.

[3] Recognizing the weakness of the record, the Government contends that Mr. McDonnell's denials are affirmative evidence of the opposite. But the jury made no special findings and the trial court rejected the Government's request to find that Mr. McDonnell lied. See Sent.Tr.28, Ex. C. And the cases the Government cites do not support its assertion, which, if true, "would mean that in cases in which defendants testify, the evidence invariably would be sufficient to sustain the conviction." United States v. Zeigler, 994 F.2d 845, 849 (D.C. Cir. 1993).

> "Q: What did you understand the desires of the Governor and the First Lady to be specific to this issue?
> "A. At the time of the note, nothing more than attending the meeting." Tr.1493.
>
> "Q: When you wrote this [blow-off] email, what did you understand your job to be going forward. ?
>
> "A. Nothing at the time of the written email." Tr.1507
>
> "Q: So after this meeting .. you still had no idea what [Mrs. McDonnell's] desires, if any, were with respect to Mr. Williams or Star. Is that fair?
>
> "A. Shy of attending the meeting, no." Tr.1529.

Indeed, Ms. Huffstetler agreed that Mr. McDonnell never "interfere[d] with that decision-making process by [her and her] colleagues in [her] office." Tr.1520.

C. The Government has not cited a single case affirming a conviction on similar facts.[4] By contrast, numerous cases Mr. McDonnell cites are directly contrary. Bond Mot. 8-13. The existence of those decisions demonstrates that reasonable jurists could disagree about the Government's theory, which, again, is all Mr. McDonnell need show The Government's half-hearted attempt to distinguish these decisions confirms the close question.

[4] The three cases it does cite simply prove that its theory is unprecedented:

- United States v. Ring supports Mr. McDonnell by emphasizing that "a purely informational inquiry" is not an official act. 706 F.3d 460, 468-70 (D.C. Cir. 2013). That is all Mr. McDonnell did when he emailed a question to his in-house counsel.
- United States v. Rosen considered a different issue, but made clear that official actions are things like "voting in a certain manner or supporting grants to certain businesses." 716 F.3d 691, 701 (2d Cir. 2013).

First, the Government dismisses the language in the Supreme Court's unanimous decision in United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398 (1999), as "dicta." Even if true, that would still create a substantial question, since "inconvenient Supreme Court statements may not be so easily wished away." United States v. Chappell, 691 F.3d 388, 394 (4th Cir. 2012). And the Government's claim that United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012), dismissed Sun-Diamond as "dicta" is wrong. What this Court actually held was that Sun-Diamond did not "supersede[]" Birdsall, id. at 356—a point Mr. McDonnell does not contest. This Court never rejected Sun-Diamond's clear statement that customary actions just like Mr McDonnell's are not "official" ones.

Second, the Government does not even attempt to distinguish United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), effectively conceding that decision forecloses its position. It instead claims that Rabbitt is bad law Opp.28. But the federal courts have cited Rabitt over 100 times and the Eighth Circuit reaffirmed Rabbitt's vitality in United States v. Loftus, explaining that Mr. Rabbitt's conviction was properly vacated since he never "promise[d] to use his official position to influence" any officials. United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993). Indeed, United States v. Urciuoli relied directly on Rabbitt. See 513 F.3d 290, 296 (1st Cir. 2008).

- In United States v. Moore, the alleged official acts involved altering specific government policies. 525 F.3d 1033, 1041 (11th Cir. 2008).

Finally, as to Urciuoli, the Government notes that the First Circuit found some conduct was "official action." But the court's distinction proves Mr. McDonnell's point. It held that a legislator urging local officials to route ambulances to the bribe-payor's hospital was not criminal because there was "no indication that [the legislator] invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers in support of his advocacy." Id. at 296. It drew a sharp line between "trad[ing] .. on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office," id. at 296, and "us[ing] his legislative powers as a threat to extract favorable treatment for [the bribe-payor]," thereby "misusing his official power over legislation," id. at 297 Urciuoli rested on the critical difference between acts that use (or threaten to use) "official power[s]," id. at 295-97, and acts that do not, id. at 296. The latter acts are not "official."

The Government has cited no evidence that Mr. McDonnell used his official powers to do anything for Williams, who never received a penny from the Virginia government over a supposedly-two-years-long conspiracy that, if real, was the least successful bribery scheme in history. Whether the Government proved Mr. McDonnell took "official action" under federal law presents a substantial question.

II. The District Court's Unprecedented Jury Instructions Present A Substantial Question.

The foregoing shows that the jury instructions likewise present a substantial question. The Government disagrees, claiming the trial court delivered an instruction "nearly identical" to Jefferson. Opp. 1, 21, 23. That is irrelevant and wrong. It is irrelevant because jury instructions must be adapted to each case. Mr. McDonnell argued that his actions were not "official," yet the jury was not instructed on any of that term's basic limits. It is wrong because the district court's instruction was not identical—or even "nearly identical"—to Jefferson. Instead, at the Government's urging, the district court altered and expanded the Jefferson instruction in critical ways.

A. Even if the instructions were identical to Jefferson, it would be irrelevant. As Mr. McDonnell has explained, see Bond Motion at 18 n.11, countless courts have held "[j]ury instructions should be drawn with reference to the particular facts of the case on trial." United States v. Holley, 502 F.2d 273, 276 (4th Cir. 1974); see also, e.g., Taita Chem. v. Westlake Styrene, 351 F.3d 663, 670 (5th Cir. 2003).

The Government ignores this rule, but this case exemplifies its rationale. Mr. McDonnell's central defense was that, while he obviously did things governors customarily do hundreds of times a week, he never took "official" action on behalf of Williams. There is a fundamental difference between actions like a Governor asking his counsel to "see me" (this case) and actions like a Congressman pressuring the Export-Import Bank to give a bribe-payor specific "financial assistance" (Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 342). Those differences made it essential that this district court—like Judge Huvelle in Ring—instruct the jury about the distinction between miscellaneous customary actions and ones that "use official powers in support of [] advocacy." Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 296. Yet this district court refused to include any limits in its instruction. For that reason alone, it is plainly debatable whether these limitless instructions were correct.

B. In any event, the district court's instructions differed from Jefferson in multiple ways. The only similarity is that the district court quoted the definition from § 201(a)(3), and stated it "includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law." Tr.6102:23-6103:2. The district court then added two entirely-new instructions:

McDonnell	Jefferson
"And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor." Tr.6103:5-10.	"Moreover, an act on a particular question or matter may still be official even if the public official did not have authority to make a final decision or take binding action on the issue." Jefferson Tr.58:8-11, Ex. D.
"In addition, official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr.6103:10-14.	None.

First, the court made "official action" turn on what the bribe-payor "reasonably believes." No authority suggests that whether an action is official—an objective element—depends on the bribe-payor's subjective beliefs. The court also instructed that actions are "official" if the bribe-payor believes they exert "influence" over a "means" to an "end." That collides directly with the instructions in Ring, which explained "sharing information with the lobbyist or helping to develop a lobbying strategy does not constitute an official act," Bond Mot. Ex. E at 39—even though such practices plainly exert "influence" over a "means" to an "end."

The Government claims this instruction flows from cases holding that "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of the offense." Opp.24. Wrong again. That entirely-separate principle has nothing to do with defining "official action." This instruction actually appears to have been lifted from instructions defining "under color of official right" for the Hobbs Act, see, e.g., United States v. Bencivengo, 749 F.3d 205, 212-13 (3d Cir. 2014), an element that goes to the bribe-payor's motivations but has nothing to do with whether actions are "official," see, e.g., United States v. Mazzei, 521 F.2d 639, 643 (3d Cir. 1975). The notion that non-official actions become "official" based on the secret beliefs of a witness the Government transactionally immunized for multiple unrelated felonies is absurd.

Second, the district court gave the novel instruction that "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals." Virtually anything could be in "furtherance" of some goal. Photo-ops, public appearances, recommending a lobbyist—all are commonplace actions that "further[]" a donor's "longer-term goals." But they are not official acts.

Finally, the court charged that "an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr.6103:12-14 (emphasis added). This unprecedented instruction presents a "close" question for at least four reasons. (1) It defines "official action" circularly, presupposing that the action is "official." (2) It instructs that actions become "official" if they are "steps" toward an actual "official act," regardless of whether the actions themselves constitute "official acts." (3) It instructs that actions are official even if they do not attempt to "influence" an end, but are merely "steps" to "achieve an end," which includes virtually everything. (4) It instructs that actions are "official" if the jury decides they were "steps to exercise influence." But practically everything an official does—attending a donor's birthday party, smiling for the cameras, wearing a power tie—are "steps to exercise influence." It would be ridiculous to claim those are official acts, yet all are under this instruction.

The Government argues these latter two instructions flow from Jefferson's holding that the Government need not link every payment with every official act. Opp.24 (citing 674 F.3d at 359). But even if these elastic instructions accurately paraphrased Jefferson—which they do not—the passage the Government cites discusses a completely different element: the quid pro quo requirement. See Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 358 ("The instruction at the center of this challenge relates to the 'quid pro quo' element."). Defending the district court's definition of official action by invoking this Court's explanation of a different element is like saying the "official act" instruction was sound because it was based on the well-established definition of corrupt intent.

The district court's instructions—which Mr. McDonnell repeatedly challenged—were unprecedented. If adopted, virtually every elected official in America would be at perpetual risk of prosecution for engaging in routine political conduct. The instructions thus present, at a minimum, a substantial question about which reasonable jurists could disagree.

III. Pretrial Publicity Presents A Third Close Question.

There is also a "close" question whether the district court conducted sufficient voir dire on pretrial publicity. This is an issue of first impression in this Circuit post-Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358 (2010), which held that its district court's voir dire sufficed because it (1) asked in a questionnaire whether jurors "have any opinion about the guilt or innocence of [the defendant]" and whether "any opinion you may have formed ... [would] prevent you from impartially considering the evidence," id. at 371 n.4; and (2) individually examined all prospective jurors in-court about exposure to pretrial publicity, allowing both sides to ask follow-up questions, id. at 373-74, 389. (Despite that, there was still a vigorous dissent. Id. at 426 (Sotomayor, J. dissenting).) Here, the district court refused to do these things, despite specific requests by Mr. McDonnell. It instead (1) asked in a questionnaire only whether jurors had expressed an opinion to someone else, rather than if they had formed one, see Mot. at 20 n.13; and (2) in court, twice denied requests from both sides for individual voir dire of jurors who admitted reading or hearing about the case, see Tr.138:7-9 ("I'm not going to do what you suggest."); Tr.139:19-20 ("I'm not asking these questions.").

The Government's assertion that the defense had the opportunity to ask follow-up questions based solely on exposure to pretrial publicity, see Gov't Resp. at 30-31, is patently false. The defense made clear that its "position is that if somebody is exposed to pretrial publicity, they have to be individually voir dired, and I have a list of questions I'd like to give to the Court that I think they should be asked." Tr.139:7-11. The trial court refused to pose individual questions, instead asking potential jurors standing 100+ feet from the bench en masse to sit if they could be impartial. Tr.139-41. That was it. The defense again explained that without "further inquiry," it could not identify jurors for further questioning based solely on exposure to pretrial publicity. Tr.141:20-25.

The district court thus consistently rejected requests for individual voir dire. The significant differences between voir dire here and Skilling pose a third substantial question.

CONCLUSION

The Government's interest in denial of bond is minimal. If Mr. McDonnell's convictions are upheld, he will serve his two-year sentence. His interest in remaining free until the appellate courts resolve these issues, however, is impossible to overstate. Mr. McDonnell vigorously maintains his innocence and is entitled to know whether he actually broke the law before he serves his entire sentence. He respectfully requests bond pending appeal.

JURY INSTRUCTIONS BY THE COURT 15

acts charged in the indictment, then you may consider evidence of similar acts allegedly undertaken on other occasions to determine whether Defendant Jefferson had the state of mind or intent necessary to commit the crimes charged in the indictment; whether defendant acted according to a plan or in preparation for commission of a crime; whether defendant committed the acts for which the defendant is on trial by accident or mistake

In other words -- let me make that clearer If you find beyond a reasonable doubt from other evidence in the case that the defendant did commit the acts charged in the indictment, and in doing that you must not consider the evidence of ePrime

But if you find from other evidence that he did commit the acts charged in the indictment, then you may consider evidence of similar acts, ePrime, allegedly undertaken, if you find those have been proven beyond a reasonable doubt, to determine whether he had the state of mind or intent necessary to commit the crimes charged in the indictment, or whether he acted according to a plan or in preparation or commission of the crime, or whether he committed the crimes by accident or mistake.

Now, as I have told you, the conspiracy counts just discussed, Counts 1 and 2, charge that one of the objects of those conspiracies was to violate Section

201(b)(2)(A) of Title 18, which makes it a crime for a public official to solicit or receive anything of value in return for being influenced in the performance of an official act.

Counts 3 and 4 charged substantive violations of Counts -- I beg your pardon -- of that code section. In other words, Counts 1 and 2 charge a conspiracy to do that, and I have instructed you on that. Now Counts 3 and 4 charge substantive violations of the Bribery Statute.

Count 3 of the indictment charges that: Beginning in or about January 2001, through in or about August 2005, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, the defendant, then a public official, corruptly demanded, sought or received things of value from Vernon Jackson and iGate for ANJ, a Jefferson family-controlled company, in return for being influenced in the performance of official acts, to advance iGate's business ventures.

Count 4 of the indictment charges that: Beginning in or about June 2004 through in or about August 2005, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, the defendant, then a public official, corruptly demanded, sought or received things of value from Lori Mody and Lori Mody's companies, W2-IBBS and IBBS, in return for being influenced in the performance of official acts to advance Lori Mody's business ventures.

Now, Section 201 of Title 18 provides, in pertinent part, that: Whoever, being a public official, directly are indirectly, corruptly demands, seeks, receives, accepts or agrees, to receive or accept anything of value personally or for any other person or entity, in return for being influenced in the performance of any official act, shall be guilty of an offense against the United States

So in other words to sustain its burden of proof for the crimes of demanding, seeking or receiving a bribe by a public official as charged in Counts 3 and 4, the government must prove the following three essential elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

First, that the defendant directly or indirectly demanded, sought, received or accepted, or agreed to receive or accept, anything of value, personally or for another person or entity;

Two, that defendant was at that time a public official of the United States; and

Three, that the defendant demanded, sought, received, accepted or agreed to receive or accept the item of value corruptly in return for being influenced in the performance of any official act

If the government fails to prove any of these essential elements beyond a reasonable doubt for either Count 3 or Count 4, or both, then you must find the defendant not guilty of that count or counts

Now, with respect to the first essential element, the phrase "anything of value" means any item, whether tangible or intangible, that a person -- that the person giving or offering or the person demanding or receiving considers to be worth something

The phrase "anything of value" includes a sum of money, shares of shock, percentage of revenue, commissions, favorable treatment, a job, or special consideration

Now, with regard to the second essential element, the term "public official" includes a member of Congress

With respect to the third element, the term "official act" means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy which may at any time be pending or which may by law be brought before any public official in such official's official capacity or such official's place of trust or profit

In order to violate to Bribery Statute, the defendant must have corruptly sought, received or agreed to receive a thing of value in return for being influenced in his own performance of an official act; that is, a decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy that may at any time be pending or which may by law be brought before the defendant in his official capacity

An act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law Rather, official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part a public official's position.

Moreover, an act on a particular question or matter may still be official even if the public official did not have authority to make a final decision or take binding action on the issue

It is not a defense that the offer or promise or demand or receipt of anything of value concerned an official act that was actually lawful, desirable, or even beneficial to the public.

The third essential element also requires that the government prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant corruptly sought, received, or agreed to receive an item of value in return for being influenced in the performance of an official act

And as I had have previously instructed you, to act corruptly means to act knowingly and dishonestly for a wrongful purpose.

The offense -- the offense of bribery requires the intent to be influenced in the performance of an official act. In other words, for bribery there must be a quid pro quo, a specific intent to receive something of value in exchange for being influenced in the performance of an official act

Yet each individual payment need not be correlated with a specific official act. Rather, it is sufficient to show that the defendant intended for each payment to induce him to adopt a specific course of official action. In other words, the intended exchange in bribery can be this for these, or these for these; not just this for that

Further, it is necessary for the government to prove that the defendant intended to perform a set number of official -- I'm sorry

Further, it is not necessary for the government to prove that the defendant intended to perform a set number of official acts in return for payments The quid pro quo requirement is satisfied if you find the evidence shows a course of conduct of things of value flowing to the defendant in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor

What must be shown is that the defendant sought, received or agreed to receive payments with the intention of providing a specific type of official action in return.

For example, the quid pro quo requirement is satisfied if you find that the government has established beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant agreed to accept things of value in exchange for performing official acts on an as-needed basis, so that whatever the opportunity presented itself, he would take specific action on the payor's behalf

Thus, you may convict defendant only if you find that the govern- -- that he solicited or accepted something of value in exchange for some specific official act or course of action.

The government is not required to prove an express intention or agreement to engage in a quid pro quo; rather, such an intent may be established by circumstantial evidence

Now, in order for you to return a verdict of guilty on the bribery charges in Counts 3 and 4, the government must prove -- must convince you that the offense, or any part of it, took place in the Eastern District of Virginia

Unlike all of the other elements I have described, this is a fact the government only has to prove by a preponderance of the evidence That means the government only has to prove that it is more likely than not that the crime or some part of the offense conduct took

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOVANT'S MOTION TO SEAL CASE AND DOCUMENTS

In support of his Motion to Seal Case and Documents, Movant, by counsel, submits the following memorandum.

BACKGROUND

Concurrently with this motion to seal, Movant is filing a Motion to Order Return of Private Information requesting this court to specifically enforce an agreement between the Government and Movant. Under that agreement, the Government agreed to return to Movant or destroy all copies of particular evidence provided to the Government pursuant to grand jury subpoenas and in connection with a grand jury investigation in the Eastern District of Virginia. Because this matter involves the Movant's response to grand jury subpoenas, Movant requests that the instant case and all documents filed in the instant case be sealed indefinitely.

ARGUMENT

Both the First Amendment and the common law provide for the public access to judicial documents and the courts, but the Fourth Circuit is clear that any public right of access is not without limits. Va Dep't of State Police v. Wash. Post, 386 F.3d 567, 575 (4th Cir. 2004). In fact, "[t]he trial court has supervisory power over its own records and may, in its discretion, seal documents if the public's right of access is outweighed by competing interests." In re Knight Pub. Co., 743 F.2d 231, 235 (4th Cir. 1984); see also Rushford v. The New Yorker Magazine, Inc., 846 F.2d 249, 253 (4th Cir. 1988) (requiring that any denial of public access "serves an important government interest and that there is no less restrictive way to serve that governmental interest").

Before sealing court documents, the Fourth Circuit requires the district court to: "(1) provide public notice of the request to seal and allow interested parties a reasonable opportunity to object; (2) consider less drastic alternatives to sealing the documents; and (3) provide specific reasons and factual findings supporting its decision to seal the documents and for rejecting the alternatives." Ashcraft v. Conoco, Inc., 218 F.3d 288, 302 (4th Cir. 2000) (citing Knight Pub. Co., 743 F.2d at 235-36). These three requirements can be easily met here.

The instant case involves the protection of information disclosed pursuant to grand jury subpoenas in the Eastern District of Virginia. Rule 6(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure protects federal grand juries and "confirms the long-established policy of maintaining the secrecy of grand jury proceedings." United States v. Penrod, 609 F.2d 1092, 1096 (4th Cir. 1979). Specifically, Rule 6(e) prohibits the disclosure of "matters occurring before the grand jury" except under particular exceptions outlined in the rule itself. Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)(2).

Documents produced to a grand jury pursuant to a subpoena clearly fall under Rule 6(e)'s secrecy protections provided to "matters occurring before the grand jury." See Smith v. United States, 423 U.S. 1303 (1975) (presupposing the applicability of Rule 6(e) to the "files and records of the grand jury"); In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, April, 1978, 581 F.2d 1103, 1008-09 (4th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 971 (1979) (finding "that materials secured by the grand jury in the course of its investigation shall not be disclosed except as authorized in" Rule 6(e)); In re Grand Jury Disclosure, 550 F Supp. 1171, 1175 (E.D. Va. 1982) (holding that Rule 6(e) applies to subpoenaed documents).

In recognition of the secrecy associated with grand jury proceedings, Local Criminal Rule 49(b) notes that "no separate motion to seal is necessary in investigative proceedings made confidential by law." As such, this Motion to Seal, the instant case, and all documents filed in it should remain under seal to protect the interest in keeping grand jury proceedings out of public view.[1]

Additionally, alternative methods of restricting access to the instant case and all filed documents in the instant case do not exist. Redaction could serve as a possible alternative in some cases. May v. Medtronic, 05-794, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31245, 2006 WL 1328765, at *1 (D.S.C. 2006). But redaction will not properly restrict access to the information in cases, such as the instant case, when it renders court filings meaningless. Id. Here, redaction of all sensitive information will strip the filings of all substance. Names of the Movant and third parties, information related to grand jury subpoenas, and details concerning evidence submitted to the Government pursuant to grand jury subpoenas will have to be redacted, leaving available only meaningless information for the public.

In the instant case, Movant's rights and interests in protecting the secrecy of the information disclosed pursuant to grand jury subpoenas, including sealing the instant case and documents, far outweighs any competing public interest. Indeed, if Movant's Motion to Order Return of Private Information is not sealed, the Court is opening the door to an otherwise secret institution and inviting public scrutiny of information in connection with grand jury proceedings. Moreover, the public does not need access to Movant's Motion to Order Return of Private Information, as the underlying dispute concerns personal and private information that is unknown to and not accessible by the public. Importantly, the grand jury subpoenas themselves ask the recipient to not disclose the existence of the subpoenas and to otherwise maintain their secrecy.

[1] Even if the Court disagrees and views the instant case outside of a grand jury context, the Court's obligation to provide public notice of the instant case is limited to simply docketing the motion to seal and nothing more. See Bronitsky v. Bladen Healthcare, LLC, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129914 (E.D.N.C. 2013) (finding that the first Ashcraft requirement "is satisfied through electronic docketing of the motion to seal"); East West, LLC v. Rahman, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 126259 (E.D. Va. 2012) (finding that a docketed motion to seal that resulted in no objection from the public was enough to meet the first Ashcraft requirement); Local Criminal Rule 49(e) ("The Clerk shall provide public notice by docketing the motion in a way that discloses its nature as a motion to seal, with its hearing date (if any).").

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Movant, by counsel, requests that the instant case and all documents filed in the instant case be kept under seal indefinitely in accordance with Local Criminal Rule 49.

Dated: March 12, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

MOVANT

MOTION TO ORDER RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

Acting on an agreement under grand jury subpoenas, eight months ago Jonnie Williams Sr. allowed the Government temporary access to the contents of his iPhone, in an illegible electronic format. That content included more than 6,200 irrelevant, personal, and potentially privileged files in addition to the 137 iPhone files he had already produced under several grand jury subpoenas.[1] Williams allowed the Government to access the iPhone contents under the mutual understanding that it would use the iPhone contents solely to search for metadata surrounding a single responsive photograph. Williams' understanding from the beginning was that after this single search, the Government would promptly delete or return all of the iPhone files, and indeed, on his later request, the U.S. Attorney's Office specifically agreed to do so. To ensure that the Government kept its promise, Williams' counsel observed an FBI technician running the sole allowable search and then deleting the files from the Government computer.

But contrary to the U.S. attorney's instructions, the FBI not only mistakenly retained a copy of the entire iPhone in the FBI's encrypted BIDMAS system, but also mistakenly released that encrypted copy to counsel for defendants Robert and Maureen McDonnell, all in the violation of the Government's promises. While the U.S. Attorney's Office has been honest about the Government's errors and would like to undo the potential harm to witness privacy, it has suggested that Williams' only recourse is with this Court.

Indeed, unless this Court intervenes, the Government plans to release the iPhone files to the McDonnells in a legible format, minus only what Williams can identify as privileged. Having erred twice and breached its agreement with Williams, the Government has now indicated that unless ordered otherwise by this Court, it will hand over more than 6,200 of Williams' personal, irrelevant files to the defense without even determining what the files contain. The Government has ignored its normal policies of review before production and refused Williams' attempts to persuade the U.S. Attorney's Office to review the content of the files to establish that they are irrelevant, personal, and should not be disclosed. Cf. U.S. Attorney Manual Title 9. § 5.001 (stating that information "is not subject to disclosure" when it "goes only to" the "consideration of information which is irrelevant or not significantly probative of the issues before the court" or "involve[s] spurious issues or arguments that serve to divert the trial process from examining the genuine issues").

The only equitable way to avoid injury to Williams' privilege and privacy, as well as that of his friends and family, is for this Court to order both the Government and the McDonnells to return or destroy all copies of the iPhone content. None of the parties to United States v. McDonnell has any right to troll through Williams' personal files, including familial text messages, personal and family photos, call histories, contacts, unrelated business messages, jokes (some of which are offensive) and banter sent by friends, browser data, and cookies—not by agreement and not by criminal discovery rules.[2] Release of those files would infringe not only on Williams' privacy, but on the privacy of numerous family members, friends, and business associates, who play no role whatsoever in the grand jury investigation or criminal case. This data, in the hands of the Government and McDonnells, would allow an uninvited dive into Williams' personal, private, and business life, including photos of his grandchildren, conversations with family members and friends, contact information for everyone in his address book, interactions related to his work and business affairs, and even his passwords. None of this data is relevant or admissible. But because the files remain encrypted, this Court has an opportunity to solve the problem by ordering their prompt destruction or return.

I. The Government received Williams' iPhone files under an agreement not to examine them, to use them only for one specific search, and then to return or destroy them.

On January 11, 2013, Williams received grand jury subpoena number 13-1/12-3032/13-16, requesting documents related to Williams' assets, to Star Scientific stock and marketing, and emails to or from a dozen other people. On February 13, 2013, Starwood Aviation received grand jury subpoena number 13-1/12-3032/13-190, requesting documents under its custody. On May 8, 2013, Williams received grand jury subpoena 13-1/13-1785/13-633, requesting Williams' communications with Virginia's employees, elected officials, and their families.

As part of his rolling productions to the grand jury, on May 22, 2013, Williams produced 137 documents from his iPhone that were responsive to these subpoenas. A photograph of Governor McDonnell displaying a Rolex watch was among those documents.

[2] The McDonnells' team and supporters have previously taken every opportunity to make personal attacks against Williams—through various newspapers and electronic mailings distributed by the Restoration Fund (http://therestorationfund.com/)—all in an effort to bolster their defense and discredit Williams.

After the Government examined the photograph, the U.S. Attorney's Office expressed an interest in gathering "metadata" related to it—that is, in learning who had sent the photograph to Williams and exactly when. Accordingly, the U.S. Attorney's Office requested the original "image" of the entire iPhone, so that FBI technical staff could recover any metadata linked to the Rolex photograph. Government Letter to Counsel, March 10, 2014, attached as Ex. 1, at 1. All parties recognized at the time that the iPhone contained large amounts of extraneous information beyond the 137 responsive documents—including thousands of irrelevant, personal, and possibly privileged files.

Thus, on June 21, 2013, Williams' counsel agreed to turn over the entire iPhone image, on the condition that the Government would never examine it. None of the content of the iPhone was to be converted into a readable format; an FBI technician would simply search for metadata around a single file—nothing more. Only with this understanding did Williams' counsel agree to turn over the entire iPhone image. Ex. 1, at 2. Consistent with this agreement, Williams and the Government agreed that once the metadata search was finished, the Government would not review or even keep the iPhone image.

On June 24, 2013, Williams' counsel delivered a DVD containing the image of Williams' iPhone to the Government. Ex. 1, at 2. The accompanying cover letter confirmed that the submission was made "in connection with the grand jury investigation," and that the production was "not intended to waive, and do[es] not constitute a waiver of any privileges or rights, including, but not limited to, the attorney-client or work product privilege." June 24, 2013 Production Letter, attached as Ex. 2.

Concerned by the passage of time, in September 2013, in accord with Williams' understanding of the arrangement and the fact that the iPhone image included privileged as well as irrelevant materials, Williams' counsel officially requested that the DVD and any copies be returned or destroyed. Ex. 1, at 2. The U.S. Attorney's Office agreed, but noted that the purpose of the deal—to allow the Government to look for metadata around the Rolex photograph—had not yet been fulfilled. The U.S. Attorney's Office reported that, consistent with the original deal, the image had been loaded into the Government's system in an unreviewable format, and that no one had looked at it. Therefore, the U.S. Attorney's Office requested that counsel for Williams visit the Richmond FBI office to observe the FBI's attempt to recover metadata surrounding the Rolex photograph. Ex. 1, at 2.

On September 30, 2013, Williams' counsel met an Assistant U.S. Attorney and FBI agents at the Richmond FBI office. The FBI then worked to recover metadata for the Rolex photograph. After the search, and in accord with the agreement between the Government and Williams, the Assistant U.S. Attorney and Williams' counsel observed the FBI technician delete the iPhone image from the Government computer. At that time, the deal appeared complete. The Government got what it wanted (to search for metadata on the Rolex photograph), and Williams received his due (the Government had not viewed the iPhone contents, and all counsel believed the Government had deleted its only copy of the material).

II. The Government breached that agreement.

On February 24, 2014, the Government alerted Williams' counsel that it had failed to uphold its part of the bargain. Specifically, the Government reported that unbeknownst to all counsel, the FBI had in fact copied the entire iPhone into the FBI's encrypted BIDMAS system. Moreover, the FBI had also released that encrypted image of Williams' iPhone to McDonnells' counsel, which the U.S. Attorney's Office has admitted was a further error. We understand that McDonnells' counsel has now asked the Government to provide an unencrypted version for their review. Unless this Court intervenes, the Government has stated that it plans to release the iPhone contents in legible format to the McDonnells, minus only what Williams identifies as privileged material. Ex. 1, at 4.

III. Specific performance is the only remedy.

Williams thus respectfully asks this Court to order the Government to perform its half of their bargain (to do what the U.S. Attorney's Office said it would do in September). Williams requests that this Court order the return or destruction of all copies of the iPhone contents, including the encrypted copy sent to McDonnells' counsel. The Government does not object to this equitable solution, which is effectively specific performance of their agreement, but it has stated that it will not perform absent a Court order to do so.

Equitable principles justify specific performance here. "Specific performance may be granted or refused under established equitable principles and the facts of a particular case with a view to the substantial justice of the case." Vienna Metro LLC v. Pulte Home Corp., 786 F. Supp. 2d 1090, 1102 (E.D. Va. 2011) (Lee, J.); id. at 1101 (noting that "courts routinely grant specific performance"). Specific performance is particularly appropriate when there is no remedy at law, and also when the parties to the agreement agree that it is fair. Vienna Metro, 786 F.Supp.2d at 1102. Further, "where a contracting party can feasibly be given what he or she bargained for, specific performance is the preferred remedy." 71 Am. Jur. 2d Specific Performance § 9.

Courts commonly order specific performance in an analogous situation—when the Government has breached a plea-bargain deal. United States v. Martin, 25 F.3d 211, 217 (4th Cir. 1994) ("Accordingly, Martin is entitled to specific performance of the government's promise to reward him for his presentence substantial assistance."); United States v. Dixon, 998 F.2d 228, 231 (4th Cir. 1993) ("Dixon is entitled to specific performance of the government's promise to move for a substantial assistance departure"); United States v. Peglera, 33 F.3d 412, 415 (4th Cir. 1994) ("Because of the government's breach of the plea agreement, we grant appellant the requested specific performance [A]t the new sentencing, the government is required to satisfy its obligations under the agreement.").

As in a plea deal, here, Williams as a witness took action to his detriment in reliance on a deal with the Government. He provided the entire contents of his iPhone—including thousands of non-responsive and personal files not otherwise discoverable—to the Government, for the purpose of a sole search related to a specific single file. The deal was that the Government would not peruse the non-responsive files and indeed, consistent with Williams' original understanding, the Government later agreed to destroy the files, and attempted to do so. Because the Government failed to keep its part of the bargain, both the Government and the McDonnells now possess thousands of Williams' personal files and those of people he corresponded with over several years. For several reasons, the equitable solution is for this Court to order their return.

First, clearly, there is no legal remedy. Williams has no interest in recovering money from the Government for this breach of his deal and his privacy. Nor is it clear, even hypothetically, how damages could redress the potential injury here or be computed or recovered.

Second, it is not too late to roll back the Government's breach. The iPhone files are formatted in a way that makes them difficult, time-consuming, and expensive to access. Our understanding is that neither the Government attorneys nor the McDonnells have actually yet examined the files in a comprehensible format. Thus, speedy return of all copies of those files would solve the Government's breach and preserve Williams' privacy.

Third, the Government does not object to this solution. See, e.g., Vienna Metro LLC, 786 F.Supp.2d at 1102 (finding "specific performance is particularly appropriate" when the defendant "has conceded in pleadings and at trial that specific performance is an appropriate remedy").

IV The McDonnells are not entitled to retain and review the contents of the iPhone image.

Ordering the return of all copies of the iPhone image would also be proper because the McDonnells have no right to the information either.

First, the McDonnells already have, or presumably will, acquire fully comprehensible access to the 137 iPhone files that were relevant to the grand jury investigation and responsive to the Government subpoenas. Williams released those files to the Government for its review in May 2013, under the January 11 subpoena and others. No one disputes the McDonnells' access to those files, which are the only iPhone files the Government has reviewed—the only ones it lawfully possesses.

Second, to the extent the McDonnells wish to seek other personal files, the proper path is a subpoena under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 17. Under Rule 17, a criminal defendant who seeks to subpoena a witness's files must demonstrate, among other requirements, that "the documents are evidentiary and relevent [sic]" and that "the application is made in good faith and is not intended as a general 'fishing expedition.'" United States v. Caro, 597 F.3d 608, 620 (4th Cir. 2010) (quoting United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 699-700 (1974)). In Caro, for instance, the Fourth Circuit held that the district court had properly refused to allow Rule 17 subpoenas when the defendant "could only speculate as to what the requested information would have shown," and when the "subpoenas cast a wide net that betokens a 'general fishing expedition.'" Id. at 620; see also In re Martin Marietta Corp., 856 F.2d 619, 621 (4th Cir. 1988) ("A party seeking pretrial production of documents must demonstrate (1) relevancy, (2) admissibility, and (3) specificity with respect to the documents.") (emphasis added). Here, the McDonnells lack any specific knowledge of what information might be on the iPhone, and could have no reason other than a "general fishing expedition" to troll through thousands of Williams' personal files.

In any event, litigating the proper scope of a Rule 17(c) subpoena is the correct way to handle any disagreement over what contents of Williams' iPhone should be available to the McDonnells. Put differently, information about Williams that the McDonnells could not secure by directly asking for it should not become theirs because a third party breached its agreement with him (through no fault of Williams). A Government error does not justify the defendant invading the privacy of a witness by sifting through files that the Government itself never examined and should not possess. Neither party has any right to Williams' personal files, and because of their format, this Court has the opportunity to correct the situation before anyone is able to review them.

Third, the agreement struck between Williams and the Government did not waive any privacy or privilege. Williams provided the iPhone image to the Government in an illegible electronic format and with the understanding that the Government would never convert the contents into viewable format. Instead, the image would remain electronic gibberish, useful and available only as a backdrop for the Government's hunt for metadata surrounding a single file. That electronic gibberish then would be deleted or returned to Williams when the brief hunt was over—a premise of the agreement that the U.S. Attorney's Office later specifically accepted and attempted to carry out.

Under waiver rules, therefore Williams never even "disclosed" the iPhone contents to the Government. Inadvertent Disclosure, 23 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Evid. § 5445 (1st ed.) ("To constitute a "disclosure", the party must reveal the content of the privileged communication") (emphasis added); The Navajo Nation v. Peabody Holding Co., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 37, 48 (D.D.C. 2009) ("A document will be considered disclosed by a plaintiff when the 'defendant has learned the 'gist' of the documents's [sic] contents.'") (citing Chubb Integrated Sys. Ltd. v. Nat'l Bank of Washington, 103 F.R.D. 52, 63 (D.D.C. 1984)); Scott v. Glickman, 199 F.R.D. 174, 180 (E.D.N.C. 2001) (distinguishing between "glancing at a document in an open file drawer when the party does not learn the 'gist' of the document's contents" and turning a document over "to be copied, digested, and analyzed," and finding disclosure where the party had "surrendered the entire box of uncounted documents to opposing counsel to inspect and copy outside the presence of plaintiff's attorneys"). Here, the Government never had permission to "digest" or "analyze" Williams' personal iPhone files, never learned the "gist" of any of those files, and only retained a copy at all by inadvertently breaching its agreement with Williams. Indeed, the fact that the Government has not reviewed the contents of the iPhone because the U.S. Attorney's Office feels it has no right to do so proves the non-disclosure. Government Letter, March 10, Ex. 1, at 2, 4.

Along the same line, because of the agreement and the format of the files, when Williams provided the iPhone image to the Government he had no expectation that any human could ever, or would ever, view that content. For that reason also, provision of the iPhone image did not waive Williams' privacy as to its contents (or attorney-client privilege as to any privileged materials). The cover letter sent to the Government with the iPhone image confirms this Ex. 2 ("This letter and our production of the enclosed DVD are not intended to waive, and do not constitute a waiver of any privileges or rights

Nor did the Government's inadvertent provision of the iPhone image, in encrypted format, to the defense waive any of Williams' rights. See United States v. McDonnell, No 3:14-cr-12, Doc. 46 (Protective Order), at ¶ 2 (E.D. Va. Feb. 6, 2014) ("The disclosure or provision of documents or materials by the parties to each other shall not operate as a waiver of any privilege or protection that could or may be asserted by any third-party holder of any such privilege or protection.").

Fourth, the equity of this situation strongly favors returning the iPhone image. On one hand, the McDonnells already have, or will receive from the Government, each of the 137 relevant files from Williams' iPhone. And as recognized by Rule 17, criminal defendants are not entitled to more—they are not permitted to fish through witnesses' personal files and communications. See, e.g., Caro, 597 F.3d at 620; United States v. Sobral, 149 F.3d 1172 (4th Cir. 1998) (unpublished) (denying a criminal defendant's "sweeping" subpoena request for financial documents, and noting that the defendant had already received relevant victim information from the Government). Thus, the McDonnells already have or will receive their due. Williams, on the other hand, who is simply a witness in this case, stands to have all the communications, records, and files on his iPhone exposed. That exposure would occur not through Williams' own judgment or error, but based on the Government's failure to keep its bargain with him. And because the files remain in an encrypted format, action by this Court to order their return can prevent that injustice.

V Conclusion

For these reasons, Williams respectfully asks the Court to order the destruction or return of all copies of the iPhone image, from the Government and from the McDonnells. In the alternative, and for the same reasons stated above, Williams asks that if this Court is unwilling to order the return or destruction of the iPhone files without reviewing them first, it should undertake an in camera review of the files to satisfy itself that the defense has no right to them.

Re: Inadvertent Possible Production of a Forensic Image of an iPhone
Belonging to Jonnie Williams, Sr., and Containing Privileged Materials
United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14cr12 (E.D. Va.)

Dear Counsel,

We write to provide notice and a factual chronology related to the inadvertent possible production of a copy of a forensic image of an iPhone belonging to Jonnie Williams, Sr., that included privileged materials. We are providing this information to you pursuant to the Protective Order entered by the Court on February 6, 2014, and we consider the information included herein to be governed by the terms of that Protective Order.

Before June 24, 201[illegible] GuireWoods had produced to us all material from Mr. Williams's iPhone that Mc[illegible] Woods determined was responsive to the grand jury subpoena served on Mr. Williams and [illegible] rivileged or otherwise being produced by another third party (e.g., Star Scientific). We subsequently requested that McGuireWoods produce a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone to us to allow the Government to attempt to obtain metadata and other electronic information about certain specific pictures on Mr. Williams's iPhone of Mr. McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch, which pictures had already been produced to us. See

JWS0060000134, JWS0060000135 (previously produced to you and associated with FBI Tracking #1A167). Pursuant to that request, on or about June 24, 2013, we received a DVD from counsel for Jonnie Williams, Sr., that contained a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone. See Exh. 1 (Ltr. From A. McCray to M. Dry-(June 24, 2013)).

Thereafter, on or about September 24, 2013, McGuireWoods sent us the attached letter requesting the return of the forensic image previously provided. McGuireWoods explained that the forensic image included communications and information protected by the attorney-client privilege or attorney work product doctrine, as well as that all information within the forensic image that was responsive to the grand jury subpoena had been disclosed to us in other productions. See Exh. 2 (Ltr. From T. Vick to M. Dry (Sept. 24, 2013)) (previously produced to you and associated with FBI Tracking #1A381).

Upon receipt of the September 24 letter from McGuireWoods, we determined that no Government personnel had reviewed, processed, or analyzed the information from the forensic image, either for the reason it was requested (i.e., to attempt to retrieve metadata or other electronic information related to certain images from Mr. Williams's iPhone that had previously been produced to us) or otherwise. We then instructed the FBI personnel in possession of the original DVD not to access the forensic image and to set it aside for return to McGuireWoods. We also instructed the FBI to remove any part of that forensic image that may have been present in the FBI's BIDMAS database.

McGuireWoods agreed to allow the Government access to the forensic image of the iPhone, but such access was limited to the specific images of the Governor posing with the Rolex, for the limited purpose of attempting to extract any additional metadata or other electronic information as originally contemplated. On or about September 30, 2013, in order to ensure that the Government did not view any potentially privileged material on the forensic image and that the access was limited as agreed, a McGuireWoods attorney personally observed the FBI tech personnel's extraction and copying of the specific images. The information that FBI tech personnel extracted and a copy of the September 24 letter from McGuireWoods were placed in the FBI file and have previously been produced to you, both in raw form and in Relativity-compatible format, through FBI Tracking #1A381. After extracting that information, we returned the original DVD with the forensic image to McGuireWoods.

As we prepared to reprocess the materials produced to us by third parties in a Relativity-compatible format, we learned on or about February 24, 2014, that after FBI-BIDMAS personnel were instructed to remove any part of the iPhone forensic image from BIDMAS, they did so by administratively blocking access to the FBI Tracking # associated with the original forensic image. Accordingly, we learned that on February 17, 2014, when FBI-BIDMAS personnel provided you in Production #3 with servers that contained a copy of the BIDMAS database and the administrative privileges necessary to use it, we may have inadvertently given you servers through which access to the entire forensic image containing privileged information might be possible.

In addition, on or about February 24, 2014, we learned that the FBI's Computer Analysis Response Team ("CART") had inadvertently retained a copy of the forensic image after the original DVD was returned to McGuireWoods. We have confirmed, however, that no one on CART, nor any other Government personnel, have reviewed, processed, or analyzed any information from that forensic image, other than the information already produced in FBI Tracking #1A381.

That same day, we contacted McGuireWoods to alert them of the Government's inadvertent retention of the forensic image, and requested that they provide us with a privilege log for the materials within the forensic image that they believe to be protected by the attorney-client privilege. McGuireWoods reiterated that all of the information that they determined was responsive to the Government's subpoenas had been produced and informed us that the forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone contained attorney-client privileged materials, as well as a significant amount of irrelevant, personal materials that are not discoverable but implicated Mr. Williams's privacy interest.

In subsequent discussions, we explained to McGuireWoods that we could not make any determination regarding the discoverability of the materials since we had not reviewed the forensic image. We further explained that regardless of whether the non-privileged materials contained on the forensic image were legally discoverable, in an abundance of caution and to be consistent in how we have treated evidence obtained from other third parties in this case, we intended to disclose to you all non-privileged materials obtained from third parties during our investigation. Accordingly, we again requested that McGuireWoods provide us with a privilege log for the materials within the forensic image that they believe to be privileged. We also requested a clean copy of the image with all privileged materials removed, so that we could produce it to you and begin our own review of the image.

McGuireWoods stated that they would consider our request, but on March 7 informed us that they disagreed with our intention to disclose the entire, non-privileged image to you. Their primary concern is that the iPhone image apparently contains a significant amount of irrelevant, personal materials that are not discoverable, as well as materials that are protected by the marital privilege. McGuireWoods has refused to provide us with a privilege log or clean copy of the image and informed us that they intend to file a motion with the Court early this week (of March 10) asking the Court to order the Government to return any copies of the forensic image of the iPhone. McGuireWoods has further informed us that they will be prepared to comply promptly with any final order from the Court regarding production of any materials included within the forensic image.

In light of the possible inadvertent production of privileged materials, and McGuireWoods's intention to seek legal relief, we ask that you not review the copy of the complete iPhone forensic image that we believe to be included on the BIDMAS servers provided to you until this matter is resolved. McGuireWoods also has requested that you return the BIDMAS servers to the Government. Should you return the BIDMAS servers to us, we will instruct FBI-BIDMAS personnel to delete any information contained on them without accessing it. We note that the protective order entered in this case provides that "[t]he disclosure or provision of documents or materials by the parties to each other shall not operate as a waiver of any privilege or protection that could or may be asserted by any third-party holder of any such privilege or protection." Doc. No. 46 ¶ 2.

In closing, we summarize the situation as follows: (1) no Government personnel have reviewed, processed, or analyzed any information from the forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone, other than the information already produced in FBI Tracking #1A381, (2) we anticipate that McGuireWoods will seek relief from the Court this week; (3) should McGuireWoods fail to seek relief from the Court this week, the Government will institute taint team procedures in order to identify and segregate privileged materials (attorney-client and marital) from the forensic image; (4) unless the Court orders otherwise, the Government intends to produce to you all of the non-privileged materials, regardless of Mr. Williams's privacy interests or the materials' lack of relevancy to this case.

Sincerely,

Dana J. Boente

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES TO JONNIE R. WILLIAMS, SR.'S MOTION TO ORDER RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, hereby responds to Jonnie R. Williams, Sr.'s Motion to Order Return of Private Information. In that Motion, Williams seeks an order from this Court directing the return or destruction of any copies of a forensic image of Williams's iPhone that are in the possession of the Government or defendants Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell in United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14cr12. As set forth in greater detail below, the Government agrees with Williams that the Government's only intent in originally obtaining the forensic image was to obtain specific picture metadata, not to conduct a general search of the iPhone's contents. The Government also agrees with Williams that the Government inadvertently retained copies of the forensic image and may have inadvertently produced copies to the McDonnells in discovery. However, the Government has represented to defense counsel its intention to produce in discovery all nonprivileged materials the Government obtained from third parties via grand jury subpoena without making independent relevance or responsiveness determinations. Accordingly, although the Government has never reviewed the full forensic image, the Government has informed Williams and the McDonnells that absent an order from this Court directing otherwise, the Government intends to produce all nonprivileged materials from that forensic image to the McDonnells irrespective of those materials' relevance or responsiveness.

The Government set forth the factual background relevant to this motion in a letter to the McDonnells' counsel on March 10, 2014, and Williams has attached that letter to his motion. See Mot., Exh. 1. That background can be summarized simply:

- Before June 24, 2013, Williams's counsel represented that they had produced all material from his iPhone that was responsive to the grand jury subpoenas served on Williams and not privileged or otherwise being produced by a third party. Among that information were two pictures of Mr. McDonnell posing with a Rolex, which Williams originally produced without any electronic metadata.

- In an effort to obtain any metadata relating to those pictures—specifically, information about how Williams received these pictures and when they were taken—the Government requested, and Williams's counsel agreed to produce, a forensic image of his iPhone. Williams produced that forensic image to the FBI on or about June 24, 2013.

- On September 24, 2013, Williams's counsel requested that the Government immediately return the forensic image and destroy any copies, in part because it contained attorney-client privileged materials. After verifying that no Government personnel had reviewed or processed the contents of that forensic image, the Government agreed to comply with Williams's request after satisfying the purpose of obtaining the forensic image by extracting the specific pictures' metadata.

- On September 30, 2013, the Government and Williams's counsel met at the Richmond FBI field office, and after extracting the two pictures' metadata, the Government returned the original forensic image to Williams's counsel. At that time, Government counsel believed that the Government had retained no usable copies of that forensic image.

- On February 17, 2014, the Government produced to the McDonnells servers that contained the FBI's "BIDMAS" database—the database the Government had been using to review materials produced by third parties.

- On or about February 24, 2014, the Government learned that the FBI had inadvertently retained two usable copies of the forensic image of Williams's iPhone—one at the Richmond FBI field office and one with FBI-BIDMAS personnel. Although neither copy had been processed or reviewed by any Government personnel, and although FBI-BIDMAS personnel had administratively blocked Government counsel and agents from accessing that forensic image in BIDMAS, FBI-BIDMAS personnel indicated that the McDonnells may have access to the forensic image via the administrative privileges given to them to set up the BIDMAS servers.

- On or about February 24, 2014, the Government contacted Williams's counsel and indicated the Government's intent to produce all nonprivileged materials from the inadvertently retained forensic image to the McDonnells, irrespective of those materials' relevance or responsiveness. Accordingly, the Government requested that Williams's counsel provide a privilege log and a "clean," nonprivileged copy of the forensic image (or the materials within that image) for production to the McDonnells. The Government did not initiate an independent taint-team review because of its understanding that Williams's counsel were undertaking this task.

- On March 7, 2014, Williams's counsel informed the Government that they did not intend to produce a privilege log and nonprivileged copy of the forensic image. Rather, they indicated their intent to seek relief from this Court because they had determined the forensic image included only materials that were (a) responsive to the grand jury subpoenas but had already been produced; (b) protected by the attorney-client or marital privileges; or (c) otherwise nonresponsive, nondiscoverable materials that implicated Williams's privacy interests. The Government informed Williams's counsel that because no Government personnel had reviewed the information, the Government could not agree or disagree with their assessment, but the Government would promptly disclose the situation to the McDonnells.

- On March 10, 2014, the Government informed the McDonnells in writing of the facts set forth above, including Williams's intent to seek relief from this Court, and that, in the event Williams failed to seek relief this week, the Government intended to initiate taint-team procedures to review the forensic image and produce all nonprivileged[1] materials to the McDonnells, absent a contrary order from this Court. See Mot., Exh. 1. The Government further requested that the McDonnells not review the forensic image that may be in their possession and instead return the BIDMAS servers to the Government.

[1] For the remainder of this response, "nonprivileged" in reference to the forensic image means materials that implicate neither the attorney-client nor the marital privilege.

The Government's position with respect to production, return, or destruction of the copies of the forensic image in the Government's possession is the same position it has taken since learning of those copies on February 24, 2014, and that it conveyed to the McDonnells on March 10, 2014.[2] Specifically, because the Government has not reviewed the forensic image, the Government cannot take a position with respect to the specific responsiveness, relevance, or discoverability of the materials contained within that forensic image.[3] In addition, because the Government has informed the McDonnells that it intends to produce all nonprivileged materials obtained from third parties via grand jury subpoena, the Government's intention—absent an order to the contrary—is to produce all nonprivileged materials from the forensic image of Willams's iPhone. The Government is aware that its discovery obligations do not necessarily require production of all materials obtained from third parties, but the Government has attempted to do so in an abundance of caution in this case in light of the McDonnells' repeated requests for "every shred of evidence in its possession," United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14cr12, Doc. No. 9, at 2.[4]

[2] The Government notes that although it notified the McDonnells of Williams's intent to seek relief from the Court, the Government has not informed them that Williams's motion has been filed because the matter was sealed by the Court.

[3] Although Williams has represented that the forensic image is "encrypted," Mot. at 3, 11, the Government does not know whether Williams means to say that the image is password-protected (and thus impossible to process without additional information) or merely in a format that requires particular software to be used (and thus possible to process without additional information).

[4] Thus, although Williams represents that the Government "does not object," Mot. at 6, to the relief he seeks, the Government clarifies that it cannot take an informed position with respect to that requested relief because the Government has not reviewed the forensic image and therefore cannot make its own independent assessment as to the discoverability of any nonprivileged materials. The Government agrees with Williams, however, that the McDonnells should be directed to return the BIDMAS servers to the Government because those servers may contain privileged materials within the copies of the forensic image.

In sum, the Government acknowledges that it originally obtained the forensic image of Williams's iPhone in order to obtain electronic metadata associated with two particular pictures and that the Government never intended to review—and indeed, has not reviewed—the forensic image for any other purpose.[5] The Government also acknowledges that it inadvertently retained copies of that forensic image and may have inadvertently produced copies of it to the McDonnells in an effort to produce discovery rapidly and in a usable format. However, the Government must fulfill its discovery obligations to the McDonnells, and in an abundance of caution and an effort to be consistent in doing so, the Government intends to produce to the McDonnells all nonprivileged materials obtained from third parties. As such, the Government intends to initiate taint-team procedures and produce all nonprivileged materials contained within the forensic image of Williams's iPhone unless the Court grants Williams's requested relief or directs otherwise.

[5] Williams refers to the pictures in question as a "single responsive photograph," Mot. at 1, but there are actually two separate, mirror-image versions of what appears to be the same original picture, and the Government has thus referred to them in the plural in its correspondence and in this pleading.

MOTION TO ORDER RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

Two months ago, this Court ordered the Government to return the forensic image of Jonnie R. Williams, Sr.'s iPhone and to "seek the return" of all copies provided to counsel for the McDonnells in United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14-cr-12. March 13 Order (Exhibit A). This Court then unsealed that Order expressly so it could be shown to the McDonnells' counsel. March 14 Order (Exhibit B). After several requests from the Government and Williams' counsel, having taken two months to "assess" this "complex issue," counsel for the McDonnells now refuse to return their copy of the iPhone image. As has been clear to everyone all along, if the McDonnells may keep and eventually review the iPhone image, that would nullify this Court's March 13 Order. For that reason, in order to secure the privacy interest this Court already recognized, Williams is forced to return to this Court and ask it to order the McDonnells specifically to return or destroy the iPhone image.

The Original iPhone Issue

Acting on an agreement under grand jury subpoenas, eleven months ago Jonnie Williams Sr. allowed the Government temporary access to the contents of his iPhone, in an illegible electronic format. That content included more than 6,200 irrelevant, personal, and potentially privileged files in addition to the 137 iPhone files he had already produced under several grand jury subpoenas[1] Williams allowed the Government to access the iPhone contents under the mutual understanding that it would use the iPhone contents solely to search for metadata surrounding a single responsive photograph. To ensure that the Government kept its promise, Williams' counsel observed an FBI technician running the sole allowable search and then deleting the files from the Government computer. But contrary to the U.S. attorney's instructions, the FBI not only mistakenly retained a copy of the entire iPhone in the FBI's encrypted BIDMAS system, but also mistakenly released that encrypted copy to counsel for defendants Robert and Maureen McDonnell, all in the violation of the Government's promises.

Previous Briefing and This Court's Orders

Thus, in March 2014 Williams filed in this Court a Motion to Order Return of Private Information. Williams explained that "[t]he only equitable way to avoid injury to Williams' privilege and privacy, as well as that of his friends and family, is for this Court to order both the Government and the McDonnells to return or destroy all copies of the iPhone content." (first emphasis added). Williams' Motion added:

> None of the parties to United States v. McDonnell has any right to troll through Williams' personal files, including familial text messages, personal and family photos, call histories, contacts, unrelated business messages, jokes (some of which are offensive) and banter sent by friends, browser data, and cookies—not by agreement and not by criminal discovery rules. Release of those files would infringe not only on Williams' privacy, but on the privacy of numerous family members, friends, and business associates, who play no role whatsoever in the grand jury investigation or criminal case. None of this data is relevant or admissible.

At the same time, Williams briefed this Court about why the McDonnells, in particular, had no right to retain the iPhone image. In short, the McDonnells already had acquired full access to the 137 iPhone files that were relevant to the case and grand jury investigation. Any additional documents the McDonnells want could and should be sought through the proper channel—a Rule 17 subpoena, which does not permit "general fishing expeditions." United States v. Caro, 597 F.3d 608, 620 (4th Cir. 2010) (holding that the district court correctly refused to allow Rule 17 subpoenas when the defendant "could only speculate as to what the requested information would have shown," and when the "subpoenas cast a wide net that betokens a general fishing expedition.""). Nor did Williams waive any protection by sharing the iPhone image in an illegible electronic format, for the sole agreed purpose of allowing the Government to run a metadata search around a single photograph, after which the Government agreed to, and attempted to, delete the image without reviewing it. See, e.g., The Navajo Nation v. Peabody Holding Co., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 37, 48 (D.D.C. 2009); Scott v. Glickman, 199 F.R.D. 174, 180 (E.D.N.C. 2001).

After receiving that briefing, this Court agreed and ordered the Government to "return to Williams any copies of the forensic image of Williams iPhone in its possession," and also to "seek the return of said forensic image from any third parties to which it may have been provided or disclosed." March 13 Order, Ex. A. The Government requested that the Order be unsealed so that it could be shown to counsel for the McDonnells, and this Court agreed. March 14 Order, Ex. B (specifically "allowing the Government to provide a copy of the two Orders to counsel for the defendants in United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell").

The McDonnells' Refusal to Return the Image

The same day this Court granted permission to share its March 13 Order with counsel for the McDonnells, the Government did so. In response, counsel stated that the "issue" was "complex" and they were "assessing" it. Two months later—this Saturday morning, May 17—

counsel for McDonnell stated to us that he "believe[s]" he is "rightfully in possession of the contents of Mr. Williams' iPhone," and proposed to "have a taint team begin the review of the contents of the iPhone." Email from Brownlee to Cullen, attached as Exhibit C. Other counsel for the defense has also commented that this Court's March 13 Order "by its terms does not purport to instruct us."

Nullification of this Court's March 13 and 14 Orders

From the beginning, Williams' concern was that the McDonnells, if allowed to review the iPhone image, would make hay of his contacts, pictures, family texts, and jokes. The McDonnells have no right to troll through Williams' irrelevant personal files but every incentive to do so. For that reason, Williams originally asked this Court to order the return or destruction of all copies of the image.[2]

This Court recognized that request by ordering the Government to "seek the return" of any copies of the image it had provided to any third party, and then by unsealing that order specifically so it could be shared with counsel for the McDonnells. In sum, this Court has already evaluated the arrangement under which Williams shared the iPhone image with the Government, and has ruled that Williams has a right to have the image back. If the McDonnells—who only received their copy through the Government—can simply refuse to give it back, that entire exchange was a waste of this Court's time and consideration.

Conclusion

Therefore, Williams respectfully asks the Court to vindicate its earlier Orders by ordering the destruction or return of all still-outstanding copies of the iPhone image.

[2] Williams' understanding is that the Government obeyed this Court's March 13 Order and has destroyed or returned its only cop(ies) of the iPhone image.

Subject: Mr. Williams' iPhone

Richard and Toby -

Good morning. We wanted to get back to you regarding the information contained on Mr. Williams' iPhone that was produced to us as part of the Government's Rule 16 production. I know there have been several inquiries about the information, and I apologize for my delay in responding. I am in the final week of a five week jury trial and have been tied up during most days.

After careful review, and based on the facts as we currently understand them, we believe we are rightfully in possession of the contents of Mr. Williams' iPhone. We also believe that Mr. Williams waived all purported privileges over the iPhone image when he turned it over to DOJ on June 24, 2013. In particular, we believe Mr. Williams disclosed the image voluntarily, not inadvertently, which conclusively waives any privileges that might have formerly applied to any of the phone's contents. And, even if Mr. Williams is able to characterize the disclosures as inadvertent, simple inadvertence would suffice to defeat any privilege claim. We thus do not believe that Mr. Williams can carry his burden of showing "the absence of any waiver." United States v. Bolander, 722 F.3d 199, 222 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 549 (2013). As for the non-privileged information on the iPhone, that information has never been privileged and we believe we can review it. If you disagree, however, and believe that we are not entitled to review the non-privileged information on the iPhone, or believe that some of the information on the iPhone remains privileged, please promptly let us know the basis for your position.

Given that the Government has requested the return of its two BIDMAS servers that contained the image of the iPhone, we propose that an IT person at Holland & Knight make a copy of the iPhone data without reviewing its contents. We will then retain that information without reviewing it until any privilege issues are resolved, returning the BIDMAS servers to the Government in the meantime. Please let us know immediately if this interim step -- which would simply preserve the status quo in all meaningful respects -- is acceptable.

As for the information itself, we offer the following proposal in light of the limited time before the trial begins. We are prepared to have a lawyer at Holland & Knight, who has not worked on the case and will be formally walled off from the case, review the contents of the iPhone for any privileged materials. That lawyer will then segregate those materials and prepare a privilege log. We will then share the privilege log with McGuireWoods. We reserve the right at that time to take the position that any privilege which formerly existed over this information has been waived. Hopefully, the parties will be able to resolve any issues related to the assertion of privilege without seeking relief from the Court. If this proposal is agreeable to you, we will have a taint team begin the review of the contents of the iPhone as described above.

Please let us know if this is acceptable to you all. We can be available for a conference call in the evening—typically after 8:00 pm.

Thanks so much. John

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion to Order Return of Private Information ("Motion") filed by Jonnie R. Williams, Sr., which requests that the Court order Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell to return or destroy a forensic image of an iPhone inadvertently provided to them by the Government as part of its discovery obligations in United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14-cr-12. The Court previously ordered the Government to return any copy it possessed to Williams and to seek the return of any copies it provided to third parties. The Court's previous order did not purport to command Robert and Maureen McDonnell, who are not parties to this action and who had no notice of its pendency. Williams has not identified any legal authority justifying court-mandated return of the iPhone image, and the Court declines to intercede in a private dispute between Williams and the McDonnells regarding possession of Williams's private information. How the Court will deal with any attempt to use wrongfully obtained and/or illegally retained information/evidence is an issue for another day and forum. Accordingly, the Motion is hereby DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

MOTION FOR LIMITED UNSEALING & RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

I.

Jonnie Williams, Sr. respectfully requests that the Court issue an order unsealing its June 4, 2014 Order in this matter and this present Motion for the limited purpose of permitting Williams to disclose them to counsel for the defendants in United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14-cr-12. Williams requests this limited unsealing for the purpose of settling the iPhone issue in a forum that remains sealed yet is accessible to the three relevant parties—Williams, the Government, and the McDonnells.

It has become apparent in the good-faith negotiation of the "private dispute between Williams and the McDonnells regarding possession of Williams' private information," June 4 Order, that Williams and the McDonnells are not both privy to all of the orders from this Court on this topic. Accordingly, to assist the parties and avoid the redundancy caused by Orders that naturally do not command non-parties who "had no notice," June 4 Order , of the pending motions, Williams requests this limited unsealing.

Specifically, this Court has previously: (1) recognized Williams' privacy interest in the iPhone contents by ordering the Government to return its copy and "seek return" of the copy improperly provided to the McDonnells (March 13, 2014 Order) (unsealed for purposes of being shown to the McDonnells, March 14, 2014); (2) stated that Williams has "not identified any legal authority justifying court-mandated return of the iPhone" and refused to order its return against the McDonnells, who had "no notice" of the relevant motion (June 4 Order); and (3) specifically noted it was not sanctioning "any attempt to use wrongfully obtained and/or illegally retained information/evidence," calling it "an issue for another day and forum." (June 4 Order). In light of these holdings, Williams respectfully asks this Court to order a limited unsealing so that the McDonnells will receive notice of this Motion, in an effort to resolve this issue among all relevant parties.

On the merits of the issue, legal authority does justify a court-mandated return of the iPhone, as an equitable solution to a breach of Williams' privacy that was not his fault. Thus, Williams asks this Court, after the McDonnells have received this Motion and made any response they see fit, to order the McDonnells to return the iPhone image. Williams promises a rapid response to any Rule 17(c) subpoena that the McDonnells may issue for whatever contents of the iPhone are relevant to this case and not privileged.[1]

Equitable relief is proper here because if the McDonnells access the contents of Williams' iPhone, he will have no adequate remedy at law and will suffer irreparable harm. Gilliam v. Foster, 75 F.3d 881, 903 (4th Cir. 1996). There is no remedy at law, nor obvious means to repair, a man's privacy and that of his family and friends. Because the McDonnells have no right to the information, because they came to possess it through no fault or error by Williams, equitable relief is proper here.

[1] For example, Williams would readily agree to produce data related to conversations or communications with either or both defendants, Mary Shea Sutherland or any other relevant party.

As an initial matter, none of the parties to United States v. McDonnell has any right to troll through some 6,200 of Williams' personal files, including familial text messages, personal and family photos, call histories, contacts, unrelated business messages, jokes (some of which are offensive) and banter sent by friends, browser data, and cookies—not by agreement and not by criminal discovery rules. Release of those files would infringe not only on Williams' privacy, but on the privacy of numerous family members, friends, and business associates, who play no role whatsoever in the grand jury investigation or criminal case. This data, in the hands of the McDonnells, would allow an uninvited dive into Williams' personal, private, and business life, including photos of his grandchildren, conversations with family members and friends, contact information for everyone in his address book, interactions related to his work and business affairs, and even his passwords.[2] None of this data is relevant or admissible, and it is greatly injurious to Williams' privacy.

The equity of this situation strongly favors returning the iPhone image. On one hand, the McDonnells already have, or will receive from the Government, each of the 137 relevant files from Williams' iPhone. And as recognized by Rule 17, criminal defendants are not entitled to more—they are not permitted to fish through witnesses' personal files and communications. See, e.g., Caro, 597 F.3d at 620; United States v. Sobral, 149 F.3d 1172 (4th Cir. 1998) (unpublished) (denying a criminal defendant's "sweeping" subpoena request for financial documents, and noting that the defendant had already received relevant victim information from the Government). Thus, the McDonnells already have or will receive their due. Williams, on the other hand, who is simply a witness in this case, stands to have all the communications, records, and files on his iPhone exposed. That exposure would occur not through Williams' own judgment or error. And because the files remain in an encrypted format, action by this Court to order their return can prevent that injustice.

First, the McDonnells already have fully comprehensible access to the 137 iPhone files that were relevant to the grand jury investigation and responsive to the Government subpoenas. Williams released those files to the Government for its review in May 2013, under the January 11 subpoena and others. No one disputes the McDonnells' access to those files, which are the only iPhone files the Government has reviewed—the only ones it lawfully possessed.

Second, to the extent the McDonnells wish to seek other personal files, the proper path is a subpoena under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 17. Under Rule 17, a criminal defendant who seeks to subpoena a witness's files must demonstrate, among other requirements, that "the documents are evidentiary and relevent [sic]" and that "the application is made in good faith and is not intended as a general 'fishing expedition.'" United States v. Caro, 597 F.3d 608, 620 (4th Cir. 2010) (quoting United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 699-700 (1974)). In Caro, for instance, the Fourth Circuit held that the district court had properly refused to allow Rule 17 subpoenas when the defendant "could only speculate as to what the requested information would have shown," and when the "subpoenas cast a wide net that betokens a 'general fishing expedition.'" Id. at 620; see also In re Martin Marietta Corp., 856 F.2d 619, 621 (4th Cir. 1988) ("A party seeking pretrial production of documents must demonstrate (1) relevancy, (2) admissibility, and (3) specificity with respect to the documents.") (emphasis added). Here, the McDonnells lack any specific knowledge of what information might be on the iPhone, and could have no reason other than a "general fishing expedition" to troll through thousands of Williams' personal files.

In any event, litigating the proper scope of a Rule 17(c) subpoena is the correct way to handle any disagreement over what contents of Williams' iPhone should be available to the McDonnells. Put differently, information about Williams that the McDonnells could not secure by directly asking for it should not become theirs because a third party breached its agreement with him (through no fault of Williams). A Government error does not justify the defendant invading the privacy of a witness by sifting through files that the Government itself never examined and should not possess. Neither party has any right to Williams' personal files, and because of their format, this Court has the opportunity to correct the situation before anyone is able to review them.

Third, Williams' provision of the iPhone image to the Government did not waive any privacy or privilege. Williams provided the iPhone image to the Government in an illegible electronic format and with the understanding that the Government would never convert the contents into viewable format. Instead, the image would remain electronic gibberish, useful and available only as a backdrop for the Government's hunt for metadata surrounding a single file. That electronic gibberish then would be deleted or returned to Williams when the brief hunt was over—a premise of the agreement that the U.S. Attorney's Office later specifically accepted and attempted to carry out.

Under waiver rules, therefore Williams never even "disclosed" the iPhone contents to the Government. Inadvertent Disclosure, 23 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Evid. § 5445 (1st ed.) ("To constitute a "disclosure", the party must reveal the content of the privileged communication") (emphasis added); The Navajo Nation v. Peabody Holding Co., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 37, 48 (D.D.C.

2009) ("A document will be considered disclosed by a plaintiff when the 'defendant has learned the 'gist' of the documents's [sic] contents.'") (citing Chubb Integrated Sys. Ltd. v. Nat'l Bank of Washington, 103 F.R.D. 52, 63 (D.D.C. 1984)); Scott v. Glickman, 199 F.R.D. 174, 180 (E.D.N.C. 2001) (distinguishing between "glancing at a document in an open file drawer when the party does not learn the 'gist' of the document's contents" and turning a document over "to be copied, digested, and analyzed," and finding disclosure where the party had "surrendered the entire box of uncounted documents to opposing counsel to inspect and copy outside the presence of plaintiff's attorneys"). Here, the Government never had permission to "digest" or "analyze" Williams' personal iPhone files, never learned the "gist" of any of those files, and only retained a copy at all by inadvertently breaching its agreement with Williams. Indeed, the fact that the Government never reviewed the contents of the iPhone because the U.S. Attorney's Office felt it has no right to do so proves the non-disclosure.

Along the same line, because of the agreement and the format of the files, when Williams provided the iPhone image to the Government he had no expectation that any human could ever, or would ever, view that content. For that reason also, provision of the iPhone image did not waive Williams' privacy as to its contents (or attorney-client privilege as to any privileged materials). The cover letter sent to the Government with the iPhone image confirms this; it stated: "This letter and our production of the enclosed DVD are not intended to waive, and do not constitute a waiver of any privileges or rights "

Nor did the Government's inadvertent provision of the iPhone image, in encrypted format, to the defense waive any of Williams' rights. See United States v. McDonnell, No. 3:14-cr-12, Doc. 46 (Protective Order), at ¶ 2 (E.D. Va. Feb. 6, 2014) ("The disclosure or provision of documents or materials by the parties to each other shall not operate as a waiver of any privilege or protection that could or may be asserted by any third-party holder of any such privilege or protection.").

III.

For these reasons, Williams respectfully asks the Court to: (1) unseal its June 4 Order and this Motion for the limited and express purpose of providing notice to the McDonnells and an opportunity to object; and (2) once that is done, order the return or destruction of all copies of the iPhone image in the possession of the McDonnells. Williams has attached a proposed order satisfying the first portion of this request.

MOTION OF ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO INTERVENE

Robert F McDonnell, by and through undersigned counsel, moves to intervene in the above-captioned case for the limited purpose of opposing the request of Jonnie R. Williams, Sr., that this Court order Mr. McDonnell to return or destroy all copies in his possession of an image of Mr. Williams iPhone. "[A] district court must permit intervention as a matter of right if the movant can demonstrate (1) an interest in the subject matter of the action; (2) that the protection of this interest would be impaired because of the action; and (3) that the applicant's interest is not adequately represented by existing parties to the litigation." Stuart v. Huff, 706 F.3d 345, 349 (4th Cir. 2013) (citation omitted). These requirements are clearly met in this instance. Mr. McDonnell has a possessory interest in the imaged copy of the iPhone; this interest will be not only impaired but extinguished if he is ordered to return or destroy the copy; and neither the Government nor Mr. Williams can adequately represent Mr. McDonnell's interest.

Mr. McDonnell respectfully informs the Court that both Mr. Williams and the Government consent to his intervention for the limited purpose of opposing Mr. Williams' motion.

A proposed Order is submitted herewith for the convenience of the Court.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S SEALED MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO JONNIE WILLIAMS' MOTION FOR RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

INTRODUCTION

Jonnie Williams is the Government's chief witness—and unquestionably an unindicted co-conspirator under the Government's theory of the law—in its public corruption case against Robert F. McDonnell and his wife. In response to one of the Government's grand jury subpoenas, Mr. Williams, by counsel, produced to the Government a DVD containing a forensic image of his entire iPhone, which likely includes evidence and information that will greatly aid Mr. McDonnell's defense. Nothing in Mr. Williams' production letter accompanying the DVD purported to limit the Government's access to his iPhone's contents in any way. See June 24, 2013 Letter from A. McCray to M. Dry, Ex. A. And Mr. Williams did not seek "to rectify the disclosure error" until a full three months later, when he asked the Government to return the DVD and destroy any copies. See Sept. 24, 2013 Letter from H. Vick to M. Dry, Ex. B.

On February 17, 2014, the Government produced a copy of the iPhone image to Mr. McDonnell in accordance with its discovery obligations under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16, and Mr. McDonnell was not alerted about any alleged privilege or claw-back issues until weeks later. Only technological problems and sheer coincidence prevented Mr. McDonnell from viewing the iPhone's contents—which would have been both legal and appropriate.[1]

The Court should not order Mr. McDonnell to return the copy of Mr. Williams' iPhone image that Mr. McDonnell is in legal and rightful possession of and received in good faith as part of the Government's Rule 16 production. First, Mr. Williams has no legally enforceable right to any non-privileged information in the copy of Mr. Williams' iPhone that his lawyers voluntarily disclosed to the Government and that the Government then produced to Mr. McDonnell. Mr.

[1] To maintain the status quo pending judicial resolution of this dispute, Mr. McDonnell and his legal team have refrained from viewing any information from the iPhone image.

McDonnell is now in lawful possession of that information, and Mr. Williams has not—and cannot—cite a single legal principle that authorizes this Court to order Mr. McDonnell to return or destroy it. Second, with respect to potentially privileged information, Mr. Williams no longer retains any legally cognizable privileges in that information because they were extinguished when Mr. Williams' counsel voluntarily disclosed the iPhone image to the Government. Third, the equities decisively favor Mr. McDonnell. Mr. Williams tendered the image as part of his successful quest for transactional immunity from prosecution for the same conspiracy and underlying crimes that the Government has accused Mr. McDonnell of committing. Mr. McDonnell obtained it lawfully. Mr. Williams cannot now be allowed to wrest the image out of Mr. McDonnell's hands on the basis of an ill-defined equitable privacy interest when the information it contains is highly likely to aid Mr. McDonnell's investigation and presentation of his criminal defense.

The Court should deny Mr. Williams' motion seeking the return of the iPhone information now lawfully held by Mr. McDonnell.

ARGUMENT

I. Mr. Williams Has No Legally Enforceable Right To The Non-Privileged Information In Mr. McDonnell's Lawful Possession.

Because Mr. McDonnell has lawful possession of the information, he has a right to that information unless Mr. Williams can establish a right or interest in the information that overcomes Mr. McDonnell's possessory interest. Mr. Williams cannot meet that burden. He has failed to identify a single statutory or common law right or interest that any court has enforced by ordering the return or destruction of information in another's lawful possession. Instead, he asserts a general privacy interest, but there is no enforceable privacy interest in information beyond legally recognized privileges. And in any event, even if Mr. Williams had an enforceable privacy interest in non-privileged information lawfully held by Mr. McDonnell, it would not apply here since Mr. Williams abandoned that interest when he, through his lawyers, voluntarily disclosed an image of his iPhone to the Government as part of a criminal investigation.

1. Mr. Williams does not—and cannot—claim that Mr. McDonnell unlawfully obtained the image of Mr. Williams' iPhone. Mr. Williams' counsel voluntarily produced to the Government a DVD with a digital copy of the iPhone's contents. The letter accompanying the production placed no limits on what information the Government could access from the iPhone. The Government, in turn, loaded a copy of the DVD onto a server, which the Government voluntarily produced to Mr. McDonnell as part of its Rule 16 production in Mr. McDonnell's criminal case. Mr. McDonnell is thus an innocent and rightful recipient of a copy of the iPhone image that Mr. Williams' counsel provided to the Government.

2. Mr. Williams' ipse dixit assertion that Mr. McDonnell has no right to the non-privileged information in his possession is not only wrong, it is an improper attempt to shift the burden of persuasion away from Mr. Williams—the party who is seeking affirmative judicial relief—onto Mr. McDonnell. Mr. McDonnell has a right to the non-privileged information by virtue of his lawful possession of it. Mr. Williams can defeat that right only if he can show that he has a legally cognizable right or interest in the information that somehow divests Mr. McDonnell of his possessory interest.

Mr. Williams's argument that Mr. McDonnell is entitled to review the information in his possession only if he could have independently obtained that information via a Rule 17(c) subpoena is therefore entirely misguided. See Williams Mem. at 4–5. Rule 17 is a procedural device that allows the criminally accused to compel evidence from a witness. See Fed. R. Crim.

P 17(c)(1) (providing that a "subpoena may order the witness to produce" various listed items (emphasis added)). It is not a substantive constraint on the universe of evidence that the accused is permitted to possess. And it certainly does not apply here, where Mr. McDonnell already lawfully possesses the information. A witness can always voluntarily produce more evidence than Rule 17(c) might require, and that is precisely what has happened here. The fact that Mr. Williams now wants the evidence back does not alter the analysis.

3. At bottom, Mr. Williams has failed to identify any right or interest in the disclosed non-privileged information that could overcome Mr. McDonnell's right to information that he already possesses. First of all, the only tangible property that Mr. Williams could possibly lay claim to is the DVD that his lawyers provided to the Government. But Mr. McDonnell does not have the DVD; he only has a copy of the information that was on the DVD. And with respect to the non-privileged information copied from the DVD, Mr. Williams has not identified any applicable statutory or common law right or interest entitling him to a court order that information in the lawful possession of a third party must be returned or destroyed. He does not claim, for instance, that he has a copyright in the information or that the information contains trade secrets. Instead, he only asserts a general "privacy" interest in the information. See Williams Mem. at 2–3. But Mr. Williams cites no authority for the proposition that a mere privacy interest can justify the return or destruction of information lawfully held by a third party. Privacy interests are enforceable in this way only to the extent that they are protected by a cognizable privilege, but the issue here is Mr. Williams' privacy interest in non-privileged information. Because Mr. Williams has no property right or privilege in the non-privileged information in Mr. McDonnell's lawful possession, he has no right to demand the return of that information from Mr. McDonnell.

4. Even if there were such a thing as a legally enforceable privacy interest in non-privileged information that trumps another's lawfully acquired possessory interest in that information, Mr. Williams privacy interest evaporated the moment his lawyers voluntarily delivered his iPhone image to the Government. As with any privilege, see infra at 9–13, voluntary disclosure of confidential information defeats whatever expectation of privacy once existed. See, e.g., Johnson v. Stewart, 854 So. 2d 544, 549-50 (Ala. 2002) (holding that there was no invasion of privacy where Social Security numbers were voluntarily furnished and that a "wrongful-intrusion claim cannot be based upon information voluntarily given to the defendant by the plaintiffs or upon the defendant's receipt of information already known to others"); United States v. Monghur, 588 F.3d 975, 980 (9th Cir. 2009) ("When made to a law enforcement officer, an unequivocal, contemporaneous, and voluntary disclosure that a package or container contains contraband waives any reasonable expectation of privacy in the contents."); United States v. Metro. St. Louis Sewer Dist., 952 F.2d 1040, 1045 (8th Cir. 1992) (holding that the Government's disclosure of draft consent decrees were no longer protected by the Freedom of Information Act's exemption for predecisional draft documents because "[v]oluntary disclosure indicates a diminished expectation of privacy" and thereby acts as a waiver to the exemption (alteration and citation omitted)).

The absence of any reasonable expectation of privacy is all the more evident when, as here, the information is voluntarily disclosed to the Government in a criminal investigation. Under Rule 16, the Government must permit defendants to inspect and copy evidence that is "material to preparing [a] defense" and that "is within the government's possession, custody, or control." Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(E) (emphasis added). Similarly, under Brady, a prosecutor must disclose material "in the Government's possession that is favorable to an accused."

Monroe v. Angelone, 323 F.3d 286, 293 n.5 (4th Cir. 2003) (emphasis added).[2] Given the Government's disclosure obligations, anyone providing information to the Government in a criminal investigation cannot possibly have any reasonable expectation of privacy in that information. And that is true even if the information is provided under the terms of a confidentiality agreement with the Government. The Government cannot contract around its discovery obligations. It must provide criminal defendants with any relevant evidence and any exculpatory information in its possession. Therefore, it should have come as no surprise to Mr. Williams that a copy of the iPhone image that his lawyers produced to the Government was, in turn, produced to Mr. McDonnell in discovery. The Government was obligated to do so and it properly discharged that discovery obligation.

5. Mr. Williams suggests that the Government's supposed "breach" of its agreement with him should somehow make a difference in the Court's analysis. See Williams Mem. at 4, 5, 6. He contends that Mr. McDonnell should not be entitled to private information just because the Government "breached its agreement with him (through no fault of Williams)" and that a "Government error does not justify" Mr. McDonnell invading Mr. Williams' privacy. Id. at 5. As an initial matter, Mr. Williams has not produced a single document substantiating any such agreement. The only relevant document known to Mr. McDonnell is the production letter that accompanied the DVD containing the iPhone image, and that letter does not purport to restrict the Government's use of the DVD in any way. See Ex. A. But even if the Government did breach some unwritten agreement with Mr. Williams, it does not follow that Mr. McDonnell should suffer the consequences.[3] Mr. McDonnell legally obtained a copy of the iPhone image in good faith via the Government's Rule 16 production. If anyone should bear the risk of loss from the Government's alleged breach of an agreement with Mr. Williams, it is Mr. Williams himself. After all, it was Mr. Williams, through his lawyers, who voluntarily disclosed his private information to the Government without implementing any safeguards to protect that information.

[2] The Government could not claim, of course, that Brady does not apply to evidence that it possessed but did not review, since the Government's "willfulness or inadvertence" in failing to disclose Brady material "is inconsequential to [the] Brady analysis." Wolfe v. Clarke, 691 F.3d 410, 423 (4th Cir. 2012).

6. Mr. Williams claims that he did not waive his privacy interest in the contents of his iPhone because he did not actually "disclose" those contents. See Williams Mem. at 5–6. According to Mr. Williams, his counsel provided the information in an "illegible electronic format" that was nothing more than "electronic gibberish." Id. at 5. But Mr. Williams' argument makes no sense. If the information were truly illegible, then the Government could not have used it, which would have defeated the purpose of the production. The information was obviously produced so that it could be accessed. Indeed, if the information is inaccessible, then Mr. McDonnell will be unable to use it as well—an obvious point that Mr. Williams would have raised if it were true.[4]

Instead, Mr. Williams argues that the information was provided "with the understanding that the Government would never convert the contents into viewable format." Id. But this "understanding" is nowhere reflected in the letter accompanying the production of the DVD. See

[3] It is not clear from Mr. Williams' account whether the Government's supposed "breach" is related to his overall cooperation agreement with the Government. But regardless, whatever agreement Mr. Williams struck was with the Government, such that he must seek relief from the Government in the context of their ongoing relationship. Mr. McDonnell is not, of course, a party to any such agreements or transactions.

[4] Mr. Williams mentions in passing that the iPhone files were provided in an "encrypted format," see Williams Mem. at 4, 6, but he does not explain what is meant by that ambiguous phrase, nor does the production letter say anything about encryption. To the contrary, all prior representations by the Government and Mr. Williams' counsel have suggested that this data can be accessed in the same way as any electronic file.

Ex. A. And even if the Government inexplicably agreed not to view the contents of the iPhone image and actually followed through on that agreement, that still would not establish that Mr. Williams counsel had not "disclosed" the contents. Counsel admitted as much in a letter to the Government requesting the immediate return of the DVD, writing that "[t]his letter serves to rectify the disclosure error." See Ex. B (emphasis added).

Now, Mr. Williams argues that there never was a "disclosure error." His apparent change of heart is based on his view that a confidence is not "disclosed" unless the recipient learns the "gist" of the information. See Williams Mem. at 5–6 (citing cases). But none of the cases that Mr. Williams relies upon actually hold that the recipient must learn the gist of the disclosed information. They only hold that a disclosure occurs when the recipient learns the information. See Navajo Nation v. Peabody Holding Co., 255 F.R.D. 37, 48 (D.D.C. 2009) (noting that a "document will be considered disclosed by a plaintiff when the 'defendant has learned the "gist" of the documents'[] contents'"); Chubb Integrated Sys. Ltd. v. Nat'l Bank of Wash., 103 F.R.D. 52, 63 (D.D.C. 1984) ("We will deem a document 'disclosed' where defendant has learned the 'gist' of the document's contents."). In other words, learning the "gist" of the information is a sufficient but not necessary condition for "disclosure." Otherwise, the cases cited by Mr. Williams could not be squared with the many decisions holding that a confidence can be breached whether or not the recipient views or relies upon the disclosed information. See, e.g., Sidari v. Orleans Cnty., No. 95-CV-7250, 2000 WL 33407343, at *8 (W.D.N.Y Oct. 3, 2000) ("[T]he Court finds that any attorney-client privilege was waived when plaintiffs' counsel turned the tape [privileged communications] over to the F.B.I., even if no one at the F.B.I. actually reviewed the tape."); United States ex rel. Mayman v. Martin Marietta Corp., 886 F Supp. 1243, 1250 (D. Md. 1995) ("The case law indicates that a disclosure occurs when a party voluntarily breaches the confidentiality of its communication with counsel. That confidentiality is breached whether or not the recipient relies upon the disclosed information.").

Here, the disclosure occurred, whether or not the Government actually viewed the contents of the iPhone image because Mr. Williams' lawyers gave the Government possession, custody, and control of the image without any safeguards to prevent the Government from viewing it and without promptly seeking its return. Therefore, this situation is nothing like a "limited disclosure resulting from glancing at a document in an open file drawer during a discovery inspection." Scott v. Glickman, 199 F.R.D. 174, 180 (E.D.N.C. 2001). To the contrary, the magnitude of the disclosure is confirmed by the fact that the Government had exclusive possession of the iPhone image and was able to copy and produce it to Mr. McDonnell without Mr. Williams' knowledge. See id. (finding that "disclosure was complete" when "counsel surrendered the entire box of uncounted documents to opposing counsel to inspect and copy outside the presence of plaintiff's attorneys," and as a result, "defendants were placed in the position of being able to copy the document as many times as desired [and to] digest and analyze it[s] contents," among other things (emphasis added)). Given this string of events, Mr. Williams cannot seriously claim that the image of his iPhone was not actually "disclosed" in the first place.

Because Mr. Williams has no recognized statutory or common law right to the non-privileged information that his counsel voluntarily disclosed and that Mr. McDonnell now lawfully possesses, Mr. Williams' motion must fail insofar as it seeks the return of that information from Mr. McDonnell.

II. Mr. Williams Has Waived Whatever Privileges Once Existed Over Any Of The Information In Mr. McDonnell's Lawful Possession.

The only conceivable interests that Mr. Williams could have retained in the information lawfully possessed by Mr. McDonnell are his attorney-client privilege, attorney work product privilege, and marital communications privilege. But Mr. Williams waived each of these privileges (and any others) the moment his lawyers voluntarily turned over the image of his iPhone to the Government. Importantly, he does not actually contest the fact that he produced the image voluntarily—i.e., not inadvertently. That alone should conclusively establish that he waived any otherwise-applicable privileges since, as explained supra at 7–9, his voluntary production of the iPhone image to the Government was a complete "disclosure" that breached whatever privileges then existed. But even if the disclosure can be characterized as inadvertent, simple inadvertence would defeat any privilege claim here.

1. Mr. Williams waived any attorney-client privilege over communications in the iPhone image when, through his lawyers, he willingly handed the image over to the Government in response to a subpoena. He cannot carry his burden to show "the absence of any waiver," United States v. Bolander, 722 F.3d 199, 222 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 549 (2013), particularly given that the privilege "is to be strictly confined within the narrowest possible limits consistent with the logic of its principle." In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 727 F.2d 1352, 1355 (4th Cir. 1984) (citation omitted).

Voluntary disclosure of a privileged communication to a third party waives privilege over that communication. See Hawkins v. Stables, 148 F.3d 379, 384 n.4 (4th Cir. 1998) ("As a general rule, implied waiver occurs when the party claiming the privilege has made any disclosure of a confidential communication to any individual who is not embraced by the privilege."). Mr. Williams does not dispute that he handed over the image voluntarily. See 2

Paul R. Rice, Attorney-Client Privilege in the United States § 9:71 (2d ed. 2010) ("Certainly, if a party discloses a privileged communication intentionally, hoping to reap benefits from the disclosure, his disclosure will not be considered inadvertent."). Instead, he contends that his production of the image was somehow not a "disclosure" that breached any of his privileges. As explained above, however, see supra at 7–9, Mr. Williams disclosed the image when he put it in the Government's possession, custody, and control, regardless of what the Government subsequently did with it. See id. § 9:28 ("How the recipient used the disclosed communication and information is irrelevant to whether a waiver has occurred.").

Mr. Williams' alleged agreement with the Government—even if actually substantiated—cannot preserve any privileges because a waiver "occurs even if the third party agrees to keep the documents confidential, and even if the third party is a government body." Hoffman v. Balt. Police Dep't, 379 F. Supp. 2d 778, 785 (D. Md. 2005); LaBelle v. Philip Morris Inc., No. 2-98-3235-23, 2000 WL 33957169, at *4 (D.S.C. Oct. 23, 2000) (reading Fourth Circuit case law as consistent with the principle that confidentiality agreements will not prevent waiver); Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Rep. of Phil., 951 F.2d 1414, 1427 (3d Cir. 1991) ("[U]nder traditional waiver doctrine a voluntary disclosure to a third party waives the attorney-client privilege even if the third party agrees not to disclose the communications to anyone else.") (footnote omitted). For the same reason, Mr. Williams' unilateral reservation of privilege in his production letter has no effect: a "statement purporting to reserve a claim of privilege cannot be given effect when it is followed by statements or conduct which, in fact and in law, constitute a waiver of such privilege." Malco Mfg. Co. v. Elco Corp., 307 F. Supp. 1177, 1179 (E.D. Pa. 1969).

Finally, even if Mr. Williams could somehow characterize his voluntary disclosure as inadvertent, the privilege is still gone. Under Federal Rule of Evidence 502(b), inadvertent disclosures will waive privilege unless "the holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure" and "promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error." See also Maxtena, Inc. v. Marks, 289 F.R.D. 427, 444 (D. Md. 2012) ("The party seeking the protection of Rule 502(b) bears the burden of proving that each of its elements have been met."). In this case, putting the entire image in the Government's possession, custody, and control is not a "reasonable step"—particularly not when the Government has independent obligations under Rule 16 and Brady that it may not waive by agreement with Mr. Williams.

2. Mr. Williams also waived the work-product protection over any documents in his iPhone image because their disclosure to the Government substantially increased the risk that the documents would fall into the hands of an adversary (if somehow the Government itself did not constitute an "adversary" at the time of disclosure).

The Fourth Circuit holds that the work-product protection is waived when its invoker "substantially and freely increased the possibility of disclosure to, and use by, anyone the [recipient] desired." In re Doe, 662 F.2d 1073, 1082 (4th Cir. 1981); Green v. Sauder Mouldings, Inc., 223 F.R.D. 304, 307 (E.D. Va. 2004) ("Waiver of the privilege occurs when materials that are otherwise protected work-product are disclosed to someone with interests adverse to the party asserting the privilege.") (citing Doe, 662 F.2d at 1081). Given the course of events here, it would be hard to argue that disclosure to the Government did not substantially increase the chances of the image falling into an adversary's hands. See Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 951 F.2d at 1429 ("When a party discloses protected materials to a government agency investigating allegations against it, it uses those materials to forestall prosecution (if the charges are unfounded) or to obtain lenient treatment (in the case of well-founded allegations). These objectives, however rational, are foreign to the objectives underlying the work-product doctrine.").

And again, characterizing the disclosure as inadvertent does not negate waiver. The Fourth Circuit has held that "inadvertent disclosures of privileged documents or information to a third party" waives work-product protection when "disclosed to someone with interests adverse to the party asserting the privilege." Green, 223 F.R.D. at 307 (citing Doe, 662 F.2d at 1081, and In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 727 F.2d 1352, 1356 (4th Cir. 1984)).

3. Mr. Williams' voluntary disclosure of the image waived the marital communications privilege as well: "[T]o be covered by the privilege, a communication between spouses must be confidential; 'voluntary disclosure' of a communication waives the privilege." United States v. Hamilton, 701 F.3d 404, 407 (4th Cir. 2012) (quoting Wolfle v. United States, 291 U.S. 7, 14–15 (1934)), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 1838 (2013).

Once again, characterizing the disclosure as inadvertent would not negate waiver. The marital communications privilege is waived whenever the underlying confidentiality is destroyed, meaning that even an inadvertent disclosure will waive the privilege. See, e.g., Zimmerman v. State, 750 S.W.2d 194, 201 (Tex. Crim. App. 1988) (invoking "the almost universally accepted rule that statements of one spouse to another are admissible when overheard by a third person even without the knowledge or consent of the spouses"); Anderson v. State, 992 P.2d 409, 417 (Okla. Crim. App. 1999) (same); State v. Szemple, 640 A.2d 817, 824 (N.J. 1994) (same); State v. Myers, 640 P.2d 1245, 1248 (Kan. 1982) (same).

III. The Equities Weigh In Favor Of Mr. McDonnell.

Unable to identify any legal right to the information in Mr. McDonnell's rightful possession, Mr. Williams resorts to freefloating appeals to equity. But he can give no reason why equity demands that this Court strip Mr. McDonnell of lawfully obtained information that is likely to aid in his defense.

Despite his claim that he "is simply a witness in this case," Williams Mem. at 4, Mr. Williams is far from a hapless bystander who innocently chanced upon a crime. The Government's indictment of Mr. McDonnell alleges that Mr. Williams was the central player in a conspiracy to corrupt the machinery of Virginia's government for his personal gain. He is not an ordinary witness but, rather, is an unindicted co-conspirator. Mr. Williams has obtained immunity in exchange for delivering testimony and evidence against Mr. McDonnell—including, presumably, the delivery of the iPhone contents to the Government. Equity does not favor Mr. Williams' belated scramble to get that information back from his alleged co-conspirator now that he has his deal. Nor is there any reason in equity that Mr. McDonnell should be barred from examining information that was tendered as part of his own prosecution. And as explained, Mr. McDonnell is now in lawful possession of that information, which he innocently obtained.

Even if Mr. McDonnell did not already possess the image, he would be entitled to possession under Rule 16, Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), and Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972), because Mr. Williams put the iPhone image in the Government's possession. There is no question that Mr. Williams' iPhone will contain extensive information that would be vital in guiding and performing the defense's investigation—text messages with the defendants and others, communications with other government officials, communications between Mr. Williams and numerous other trial witnesses in this case, communications that give insight into other potential misconduct by Williams (including potential tax and securities fraud), evidence that would enable the defense to investigate additional as-yet-unknown conspiracies involving Mr. Williams (akin to his conspiracy with Ms. Sutherland) and as-yet-unknown co-conspirators, etc. The list of relevant evidence likely on the phone is extensive, and whatever the limits on the defense's ability to compel the production of evidence under Rule 17, that Rule imposes no constraints on the defense's ability to investigate the charges using evidence that it lawfully possesses and that it is entitled to receive from the Government. That simply reinforces the inequity of ordering Mr. McDonnell to destroy this property despite his obtaining it through entirely proper and lawful means.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Mr. Williams has not carried his burden of showing why Mr. McDonnell should be ordered to return or destroy the imaged copy of the iPhone that he lawfully possesses. Mr. McDonnell respectfully requests that the Court deny Mr. Williams motion. Mr. McDonnell also requests a hearing if necessary to assist the Court.

RE: Jonnie R. Williams Sr. – JWS009 Production

Dear Mr. Dry:

On behalf of my client, Jonnie R. Williams Sr., I request the immediate return of the cover letter and DVD entitled "JWS009 Production" and bates-numbered JWS009000001 that were produced to your office on June 24, 2013, in connection with the grand jury investigation pending in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia (the "production"). I also request that you either return to me or destroy any copies of the production that may have been created while the production was in your possession.

The production contains communications and information protected by the attorney-client privilege or attorney work product doctrine. This letter serves to rectify the disclosure error. Information contained within the production that is responsive to the grand jury subpoenas but not privileged, or otherwise protected, has been disclosed to you in other productions.

Please contact me at (804) 775-4340 to arrange for the return of the production.

Sincerely,

Howard C. Vick Jr.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF RETURNING PRIVATE INFORMATION

The iPhone files are Jonnie Williams' property. This Court has previously ruled that the Government has no right to them. The McDonnells received the files only by errant transfer from the Government (which did not realize at the time they still existed on its servers). Williams has no interest in preventing the McDonnells from any degree of criminal discovery to which the law entitles them, including the 137 relevant files they have long possessed. Williams does have an equitable interest in preventing the McDonnells from rooting through 6,200 files of his personal contacts, passwords, photographs of his family and friends, and text messages with his children in order to dig for irrelevant but potentially embarrassing tidbits.

The McDonnells' opposition to Williams' motion first asserts legal ownership over Williams' private files based solely on possession (ignoring that the Government, from whom they received the files, has already been stripped of them by this Court). It then ignores Williams' agreement with the Government, which never authorized any Government officer to review the content of the iPhone files. Finally, the McDonnells claim the equities favor them because Williams may be an "unindicted co-conspirator" and because rank speculation suggests some defense-useful information may possibly be buried somewhere in the 6,200 irrelevant files.

1. Simple possession of Williams' iPhone files is not ownership of them.

The McDonnells first contend that because they received the iPhone files "lawfully"—that is, apparently without committing any crime—they have a right to keep those files, period. Opp. 2. Incredibly, their position is that Williams "has no legally enforceable right" to his own pictures of his wife and grandchildren, text-message exchanges with his daughter, lists of contacts he compiled, and his computer passwords. Id. That theory cannot stand.

Simple "lawful" receipt of items does not equal legal ownership. If it did, far fewer people would use coat checks, valets, and safety deposit boxes at banks. For one apt example, when a man takes a photograph of his wife and orders it printed and mailed to him, if the printing service misdelivers that photograph, it does not become the property of the accidental recipient who "lawfully" receives it. Nor would it be well received if the accidental recipient said, "I'll just keep a copy." Compare Opp. 4 with March 13 Order (ordering the return of "any copies" of the iPhone in the Government's possession). Similarly, a person who innocently receives a stolen document may have acted "lawfully," but when the original owner appears and demands its return, his obligation is to return the document. Refusing to return a file that is not yours is improper—and contrary to the McDonnells' assertions, a file does not become "yours" just because you are holding it. It particularly does not become "yours" when the person who gave it to you—like the Government here—had no right to possess it at that time anyway.

Nor can the McDonnells hide behind the fact that the only "tangible property" involved is the original DVD sent to the Government, which the McDonnells do not possess. Opp. 4. Personal property includes electronic files and documents, no different from paper ones. E.g., Thyroff v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 864 N.E.2d 1272, 1278 (N.Y. 2007) (holding that "electronic records that were stored on a computer" were property subject to conversion because "a document stored on a computer hard drive has the same value as a paper document kept in a file cabinet"); Va. Code § 18.2-152.8 (adding "computer data" including "intangible" or "readable by humans or by a computer" to categories of "personal property" that can be stolen).

2. The McDonnells ignore that the agreement did not permit the Government to review the iPhone files, and it never did.

Next, the McDonnells' arguments about waiver refuse to accept the basic facts here. The cornerstone of the McDonnells' argument is their incorrect idea that Williams simply handed over his iPhone image for normal copying and review by the Government, without restriction. Opp. 3 ("the letter accompanying the production placed no limits on what information the Government could access"); Opp. 7 ("The information was obviously produced so that it could be accessed."); Opp. 7 (claiming that Williams "voluntarily disclosed his private information to the Government without implementing any safeguards to protect that information"). Under that theory, the files properly belonged to the Government, which in turn properly provided them to the McDonnells. That is the foundation of the McDonnells' urging that Williams surrendered any ongoing right to the files.

But the undisputed agreement between Williams and the Government crumbles that foundation. In the Government's own words, Williams "agreed to allow the Government to access the forensic image of the iPhone, but such access was limited to the specific images of the Governor posing with the Rolex, for the limited purpose of attempting to extract any additional metadata." U.S.A.O. March 10 Letter to Asbill, Brownlee, and Burck, at 2 (also attached to Williams' Mar. 12 filing as Ex. 1). Consistent with that agreement, the U.S. Attorney's Office never reviewed the iPhone files, ordered the FBI not to do so either, and instructed the FBI to delete any copy that it may have made before it understood the deal. Id. Moreover, in addition to trusting the Government, Williams did "implemen[t] safeguards" to protect the iPhone files, including adding password protection and sending his counsel to personally supervise the sole occasion on which the Government was authorized to open the image for the agreed metadata search.[1]

Thus, the McDonnells' arguments about waiver all fall apart. Williams never granted any Government officer the right to view the contents of his iPhone beyond the metadata around a single photograph (two images of the same picture)—and his counsel supervised even that examination. No one in the Government knows the contents of the iPhone or ever had any right to, which was always Williams' express understanding. That makes this case distinguishable from the sole unpublished case the McDonnells cite that finds waiver even when no one saw the released information: Sidari v. Orleans Cnty., 2000 WL 33407343 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 3, 2000). Opp. 8. But see Chubb Integrated Systems Ltd v. Nat'l Bank of Wash., 103 F.R.D. 52, 63 (D.D.C. 1984) ("[T]he mere fact that defendants had an opportunity to open a file drawer cannot constitute a 'disclosure' of privileged information."). Williams did not surrender any privacy or protection by sharing the iPhone image in an illegible electronic format, for the sole agreed purpose of allowing the Government to run a metadata search around a single photograph, after which the Government agreed to, and attempted to, delete the image without reviewing it.

3. Equities strongly favor Williams.

Finally, the equities strongly favor Williams and his family and friends. First, this Court seemed to recognize Williams' position merited equitable relief by ordering it against the Government. March 13, 2014 Order (directing the Government "to return to Williams any copies of the forensic image of Williams's iPhone in its possession" and "to seek the return of said forensic image from any third parties"). The fact that the Government has already been ordered to yield the files cuts against the McDonnells—who received them only through the Government—being able to keep them.

[1] Williams is uncertain of the exact current condition or "encryption" of the iPhone files because they were wrongly added to the FBI's BIDMAS server and only from there sent to the McDonnells. When Williams provided the files to the Government, they were password protected and in a format that was unreviewable without a certain program or tool.

Second, tellingly the McDonnells cannot come up with any explanation of how the iPhone contents "will greatly aid" their defense. Opp. 1. They list "text messages with the defendants"—which they already have been given. Opp. 14. They add possible "communications with other government officials and numerous other trial witnesses"—which it appears they could easily obtain under Rule 17(c) and which they have in fact already requested, at least in part. Opp. 14. Beyond that, the McDonnells have nothing but rank speculation about "other potential misconduct by Williams," "additional as-yet-unknown conspiracies," and "as-yet-unknown co-conspirators." Opp. 14-15. Essentially the McDonnells guess the iPhone might be a fertile fishing ground. Cf. United States v. Caro, 597 F.3d 608, 620 (4th Cir. 2010) (refusing to allow a criminal defendant discovery when the defendant "could only speculate as to what the requested information would have shown"). But as the McDonnells themselves admitted last week, a criminal defendant needs to identify information "with specificity" in order to win a right to take it from a witness. Mem. in Support of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas, 3:14-cr-12, Doc. 211, at 4. Williams is a witness and this is a fishing expedition. Caro, 597 F.3d at 620 (refusing to allow a defendant to "cas[t] a wide net that betokens a fishing expedition").

Third, the McDonnells' argument about Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), and Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972) holds no water. The Government has represented to this Court and to the McDonnells that "no Government personnel" reviewed "any information from the forensic image of Mr. Williams' iPhone." U.S.A.O. March 10 Letter to Asbill, Brownlee, and Burck, at 4. Nor does the Government now possess that information. The McDonnells have no authority suggesting that information known to no one in the Government is Brady or Giglio material.

Finally, this Court has said that it will "deal" later "with any attempt to use wrongfully obtained and/or illegally retained information/evidence." June 4 Order. But that inequitable and unlawful "use" will begin as soon as the defense begins calling every person on Williams' contact list, scrutinizing every family photograph, delving into the lives of his family members, and so on. For himself and the sake of his family and friends who have nothing to do with this criminal matter, Williams respectfully asks this Court to order the return of his iPhone image.

MOTION FOR PARTIAL UNSEALING OF THE RECORD

Robert F McDonnell respectfully requests that this Court unseal, with respect to him, the record of all prior sealed proceedings pertaining to Jonnie R. Williams, Sr.'s iPhone to which Mr. McDonnell has not been a party, including but not limited to: any and all orders entered by this Court that have not previously been unsealed, any and all filings made by Mr. Williams and the Government pertaining to this matter, the transcripts of any hearings before this Court, and the relevant docket entries.

Mr. McDonnell intends to file an appeal of this Court's order directing him to return or destroy all copies in his possession of an image of Mr. Williams' iPhone. See Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (filed today). Access to a complete record of the prior proceedings relating to the iPhone is essential to Mr. McDonnell's ability to fully and fairly litigate his appeal. Without access to the record, for example, Mr. McDonnell will remain unable to evaluate the accuracy of, and effectively contest as appropriate, the representations Mr. Williams has made about his alleged agreement with the Government.[1]

[1] Mr. Williams maintains that he had an "express understanding" with the Government before he produced the iPhone image that the Government would limit its review and use of the information it contained. Reply in Support of Returning Private Information at 4. This claim, however, is not referred to in either the letter accompanying the production of the image to the Government on June 24, 2013, see Robert F McDonnell's Sealed Mem. in Opp'n to Jonnie

Questions such as this are crucial to the merits of Mr. Williams' motion. Mr. McDonnell should not have to rely on Mr. Williams' account of the relevant factual and procedural history as he pursues his appeal.

The public interest in accurate and fair resolution of litigation will be served if both Mr. McDonnell and the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit have unfettered access to the relevant portions of the record of proceedings in this Court. See United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 709 (1974) ("The need to develop all relevant facts in the adversary system is both fundamental and comprehensive. The ends of criminal justice would be defeated if judgments were to be founded on a partial or speculative presentation of the facts."). Mr. McDonnell therefore respectfully requests that this Court unseal, with respect to him, the relevant portions of the record of this proceeding.

A, or the September 24, 2013 letter Mr. Williams' counsel sent to the Government requesting return of the iPhone image, see Opp'n, Ex. B. The Government's account of the relevant events does not reference the existence of any explicit agreement to place restrictions on its review of the iPhone until September 2013—after Mr. Williams' counsel had sent its letter requesting return of the image—when the Government states that counsel for Mr. Williams "agreed to allow the Government access to the forensic image of the iPhone, but such access was limited to [certain] specific images." MOTION TO STAY ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

Robert F McDonnell respectfully requests that this Court stay its order directing him to return or destroy all copies in his possession of an image of an iPhone belonging to Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. Mr. McDonnell will be filing an immediate appeal of this Court's Order. The Fourth Circuit has jurisdiction to hear that appeal, and in the situation presented here, a stay pending appeal is justified on the merits.

I. The Fourth Circuit Has Jurisdiction To Hear Mr. McDonnell's Appeal

Courts of appeals have jurisdiction over "appeals from all final decisions of the district courts of the United States," 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and this Court's order is the final resolution of the proceeding in which Mr. Williams has sought the return of information he disclosed to the Government during the grand jury investigation. While situations analogous to this one are rare, courts have exercised jurisdiction over appeals from orders disposing of a witness's motion for access to or return of evidence provided to a grand jury. In In re Grand Jury, 490 F.3d 978 (D.C. Cir. 2007), for example, the D.C. Circuit found that it had jurisdiction under § 1291 to consider a witness's appeal from a district court order denying her access to the transcript of her prior grand jury testimony. The court noted that although the grand jury proceedings were ongoing, "the district court's order terminates a separate proceeding pending before the grand jury court," and review was therefore appropriate. Id. at 981 (quoting Douglas Oil Co. v. Petrol Stops Northwest, 441 U.S. 211, 233 (1979) (Rehnquist, J., concurring). And in United States v. Calandra, both the Sixth Circuit, 465 F.2d 1218 (6th Cir. 1972), and the Supreme Court, 414 U.S. 338 (1974), reviewed on the merits the government's appeal from a district court order directing it to return improperly seized property to a grand jury witness. Moreover, courts have consistently held that orders resolving ancillary disputes over the disclosure of grand jury documents to third parties are final and appealable under 28 U.S.C. § 1291. See, e.g., Illinois v. Abbott & Assocs., 460 U.S. 557, 654 n.9 (1983); Douglas Oil Co., 441 U.S. at 233 (Rehnquist, J., concurring); In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 800 F.2d 1293, 1298 n.4 (4th Cir. 1986); In re Sells, 719 F.2d 985, 988 (9th Cir. 1983).

Here, the grand jury proceedings have concluded, so there is no risk of interference with the investigation. See In re Grand Jury, 490 F.3d at 981. This Court's order "conclusively resolved the only issue in [the] independent judicial proceeding" addressing Mr. Williams' motion for return or destruction of his iPhone. In re Sells, 719 F.2d at 988. And there is no other forum in which adequate appellate review can be had. See In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 649 F.2d 387, 388 (6th Cir. 1981) ("The decision whether or not an order is final for purposes of appeal depends on whether or not another method of obtaining review exists."); United States v. Sobotka, 623 F.2d 764, 766 (2d Cir. 1980) (finding jurisdiction proper under § 1291 where no other court could determine whether the district court abused its discretion in releasing grand jury minutes to third party). Mr. Williams is not a party to the criminal case against Mr. McDonnell and would not be a party to any eventual appeal from a judgment in that case. Mr. McDonnell will therefore have no other opportunity to seek review of this Court's order adjudicating a dispute between Mr. Williams and Mr. McDonnell and to obtain a final determination of his rights regarding the information in the iPhone image that binds all parties to the dispute.

II. Mr. McDonnell Is Entitled To A Stay Pending Appeal Of This Court's Order

Four interrelated factors determine whether a stay pending appeal is appropriate:

> (1) whether the stay applicant has made a strong showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) whether the applicant will be irreparably injured absent a stay; (3) whether issuance of the stay will substantially injure the other parties interested in the proceeding; and (4) where the public interest lies.

Project Vote/Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 275 F.R.D. 473, 474 (E.D. Va. 2011) (quoting Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776 (1987)). Mr. McDonnell satisfies these requirements.

First, Mr. McDonnell has made a sufficiently strong showing on the merits to justify granting a stay. Where an issue is one of first impression—as this one is—"[b]ecause the Fourth Circuit may resolve the issue differently," a losing party will often nevertheless have "demonstrated a 'substantial case on the merits.'" Miller v. Brown, 465 F. Supp. 2d 584, 596 (E.D. Va. 2007) (quoting Hilton, 481 U.S. at 778). "A stay may therefore be appropriate if the other factors weigh in [the party's] favor." Id.

In this unusual situation, Mr. Williams has relied on untested arguments that have no direct support in existing statutory or common law. See, e.g., Falwell v. Penthouse International, Ltd., 521 F. Supp. 1204, 1206 (W.D. Va. 1981) ("Virginia recognizes no right of privacy other than" a single statutory cause of action applicable where a person's name or image has been misappropriated for commercial use (emphasis added)); WJLA-TV v. Levin, 264 Va. 140, 160 n.5 (2002) (same (citing Falwell, 521 F. Supp. 1204)). This Court's decision in his favor therefore establishes a novel rule that touches on at least two areas of substantial importance: privacy rights and a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to develop and present a defense. Mr. McDonnell therefore has a "substantial case on the merits" justifying a stay provided that the other factors weigh in his favor, as they decisively do.

Second, Mr. McDonnell will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of a stay. Mr. McDonnell's criminal trial is scheduled to begin at the end of July. His trial preparations are ongoing. Notwithstanding Mr. Williams' unfounded assertions to the contrary, see Reply at 5, there is a strong likelihood that the iPhone image will provide information that assists Mr. McDonnell in investigating and otherwise preparing his defense. Mr. Williams is the Government's star witness and an unindicted co-conspirator, and the Government's case turns upon his credibility. Review of the contents of the iPhone is highly likely to either yield or lead Mr. McDonnell to the discovery of relevant and admissible impeachment evidence. If a stay is not granted, however, Mr. McDonnell will be deprived of this information and will lose his opportunity to present a full defense, as the Sixth Amendment contemplates. This harm cannot be rectified by a favorable decision on appeal on the eve of trial or after it has begun, when the time for investigation will have passed.[1]

Third, issuance of a stay will not substantially injure the other parties interested in this proceeding. Mr. McDonnell and the defense team have not reviewed the contents of the iPhone image and will not do so while appeal is pending. Mr. Williams is not deprived of the use of any of the information in the iPhone, all of which he independently possesses. His only interest is in preventing Mr. McDonnell from accessing the contents of the iPhone image, and this interest will be fully protected if a stay is granted. The Government has taken no position in this matter and has already returned the copy of the iPhone in its possession. Its interests will thus not be affected if Mr. McDonnell retains a sequestered copy of the iPhone pending appeal.

[1] Mr. McDonnell plans to seek expedited review in the Fourth Circuit. A stay will simply preserve the status quo while that appeal is pending.

Finally, the public interest favors a stay. There is a strong public interest in the integrity of criminal proceedings. See, e.g., United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 709 (1974) ("The need to develop all relevant facts in the adversary system is both fundamental and comprehensive. The ends of criminal justice would be defeated if judgments were to be founded on a partial or speculative presentation of the facts."); United States v. Davis, 767 F.2d 1025, 1037 (2d Cir. 1985) ("[T]he United States ha[s] a strong national interest in safeguarding the integrity of its criminal process.") To deprive a criminal defendant of the opportunity to develop and present a defense harms this interest. And no public interest will be harmed by a stay; as explained above, Mr. McDonnell will not review or disclose the contents of the iPhone while appeal is pending, so from the perspective of other parties and the public at large there is no appreciable difference between granting a stay and compelling the return of the iPhone image now.

III. Conclusion

In sum, the Hilton factors unanimously favor the granting of a stay while Governor McDonnell pursues an immediate appeal. For the foregoing reasons, Governor McDonnell respectfully requests that this Court grant a stay.

Re: Inadvertent Possible Production of a Forensic Image of an iPhone
Belonging to Jonnie Williams, Sr., and Containing Privileged Materials
United States v. Robert and Maureen McDonnell, No. 3:14cr12 (E.D. Va.)

Dear Counsel,

We write to provide notice and a factual chronology related to the inadvertent possible production of a copy of a forensic image of an iPhone belonging to Jonnie Williams, Sr., that included privileged materials. We are providing this information to you pursuant to the Protective Order entered by the Court on February 6, 2014, and we consider the information included herein to be governed by the terms of that Protective Order.

Before June 24, 2013, McGuireWoods had produced to us all material from Mr. Williams's iPhone that McGuireWoods determined was responsive to the grand jury subpoena served on Mr. Williams and not privileged or otherwise being produced by another third party (e.g., Star Scientific). We subsequently requested that McGuireWoods produce a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone to us to allow the Government to attempt to obtain metadata and other electronic information about certain specific pictures on Mr. Williams's iPhone of Mr. McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch, which pictures had already been produced to us. See

JWS0060000134, JWS0060000135 (previously produced to you and associated with FBI Tracking #1A167). Pursuant to that request, on or about June 24, 2013, we received a DVD from counsel for Jonnie Williams, Sr., that contained a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone. See Exh. 1 (Ltr. From A. McCray to M. Dry (June 24, 2013)).

Thereafter, on or about September 24, 2013, McGuireWoods sent us the attached letter requesting the return of the forensic image previously provided. McGuireWoods explained that the forensic image included communications and information protected by the attorney-client privilege or attorney work product doctrine, as well as that all information within the forensic image that was responsive to the grand jury subpoena had been disclosed to us in other productions. See Exh. 2 (Ltr. From T. Vick to M. Dry (Sept. 24, 2013)) (previously produced to you and associated with FBI Tracking #1A381).

Upon receipt of the September 24 letter from McGuireWoods, we determined that no Government personnel had reviewed, processed, or analyzed the information from the forensic image, either for the reason it was requested (i.e., to attempt to retrieve metadata or other electronic information related to certain images from Mr. Williams's iPhone that had previously been produced to us) or otherwise. We then instructed the FBI personnel in possession of the original DVD not to access the forensic image and to set it aside for return to McGuireWoods. We also instructed the FBI to remove any part of that forensic image that may have been present in the FBI's BIDMAS database.

McGuireWoods agreed to allow the Government access to the forensic image of the iPhone, but such access was limited to the specific images of the Governor posing with the Rolex, for the limited purpose of attempting to extract any additional metadata or other electronic information as originally contemplated. On or about September 30, 2013, in order to ensure that the Government did not view any potentially privileged material on the forensic image and that the access was limited as agreed, a McGuireWoods attorney personally observed the FBI tech personnel's extraction and copying of the specific images. The information that FBI tech personnel extracted and a copy of the September 24 letter from McGuireWoods were placed in the FBI file and have previously been produced to you, both in raw form and in Relativity-compatible format, through FBI Tracking #1A381. After extracting that information, we returned the original DVD with the forensic image to McGuireWoods.

As we prepared to reprocess the materials produced to us by third parties in a Relativity-compatible format, we learned on or about February 24, 2014, that after FBI-BIDMAS personnel were instructed to remove any part of the iPhone forensic image from BIDMAS, they did so by administratively blocking access to the FBI Tracking # associated with the original forensic image. Accordingly, we learned that on February 17, 2014, when FBI-BIDMAS personnel provided you in Production #3 with servers that contained a copy of the BIDMAS database and the administrative privileges necessary to use it, we may have inadvertently given you servers through which access to the entire forensic image containing privileged information might be possible.

In addition, on or about February 24, 2014, we learned that the FBI's Computer Analysis Response Team ("CART") had inadvertently retained a copy of the forensic image after the original DVD was returned to McGuireWoods. We have confirmed, however, that no one on CART, nor any other Government personnel, have reviewed, processed, or analyzed any information from that forensic image, other than the information already produced in FBI Tracking #1A381.

That same day, we contacted McGuireWoods to alert them of the Government's inadvertent retention of the forensic image, and requested that they provide us with a privilege log for the materials within the forensic image that they believe to be protected by the attorney-client privilege. McGuireWoods reiterated that all of the information that they determined was responsive to the Government's subpoenas had been produced and informed us that the forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone contained attorney-client privileged materials, as well as a significant amount of irrelevant, personal materials that are not discoverable but implicated Mr. Williams's privacy interest.

In subsequent discussions, we explained to McGuireWoods that we could not make any determination regarding the discoverability of the materials since we had not reviewed the forensic image. We further explained that regardless of whether the non-privileged materials contained on the forensic image were legally discoverable, in an abundance of caution and to be consistent in how we have treated evidence obtained from other third parties in this case, we intended to disclose to you all non-privileged materials obtained from third parties during our investigation. Accordingly, we again requested that McGuireWoods provide us with a privilege log for the materials within the forensic image that they believe to be privileged. We also requested a clean copy of the image with all privileged materials removed, so that we could produce it to you and begin our own review of the image.

McGuireWoods stated that they would consider our request, but on March 7 informed us that they disagreed with our intention to disclose the entire, non-privileged image to you. Their primary concern is that the iPhone image apparently contains a significant amount of irrelevant, personal materials that are not discoverable, as well as materials that are protected by the marital privilege. McGuireWoods has refused to provide us with a privilege log or clean copy of the image and informed us that they intend to file a motion with the Court early this week (of March 10) asking the Court to order the Government to return any copies of the forensic image of the iPhone. McGuireWoods has further informed us that they will be prepared to comply promptly with any final order from the Court regarding production of any materials included within the forensic image.

In light of the possible inadvertent production of privileged materials, and McGuireWoods's intention to seek legal relief, we ask that you not review the copy of the complete iPhone forensic image that we believe to be included on the BIDMAS servers provided to you until this matter is resolved. McGuireWoods also has requested that you return the BIDMAS servers to the Government. Should you return the BIDMAS servers to us, we will instruct FBI-BIDMAS personnel to delete any information contained on them without accessing it. We note that the protective order entered in this case provides that "[t]he disclosure or provision of documents or materials by the parties to each other shall not operate as a waiver of any privilege or protection that could or may be asserted by any third-party holder of any such privilege or protection." Doc. No. 46 ¶ 2.

In closing, we summarize the situation as follows: (1) no Government personnel have reviewed, processed, or analyzed any information from the forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone, other than the information already produced in FBI Tracking #1A381; (2) we anticipate that McGuireWoods will seek relief from the Court this week; (3) should McGuireWoods fail to seek relief from the Court this week, the Government will institute taint team procedures in order to identify and segregate privileged materials (attorney-client and marital) from the forensic image; (4) unless the Court orders otherwise, the Government intends to produce to you all of the non-privileged materials, regardless of Mr. Williams's privacy interests or the materials' lack of relevancy to this case.

Sincerely,

Dana J. Boente

SEALED ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion for Limited Unsealing & Return of Private Information ("Motion") filed by Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. ("Williams").

On June 24, 2013, pursuant to an agreement with the Government, Williams produced a forensic image of his iPhone for the limited purpose of allowing the Government to perform a single search of the iPhone's metadata. The Government acknowledges the existence of this agreement, and the iPhone image was accompanied by a letter expressly reserving "any privileges or rights" in the confidentiality of the iPhone image. The iPhone image was produced to the Government in a format that was not human-readable, but would allow search and copying of metadata associated with the iPhone's files.

These facts make plain that Williams produced the iPhone image with a reasonable expectation that the privacy and confidentiality of all information accessible from the forensic image—with the exception of the results of the intended metadata search—would be maintained by the Government.[1] The Governr[illegible]vas not authorized to, and in fact did not, access the iPhone image for any other purpose. [illegible]vertheless, the Government subsequently provided the iPhone image in its entirety to Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell. The parties have not made clear in what format the iPhone image was provided to the McDonnells; however, if it is accessible in, or converted to, human-readable format, the McDonnells will obtain access to more than six thousand private and confidential files. These files include family photos, personal contact information, and private conversations that were never disclosed to the Government.

[1] Consistent with this expectation, the materials produced to the Government on June 24, 2013 were labeled "Confidential Treatment Requested," and the accompanying letter requested confidential treatment of the production, and any subsequently-created notes or memoranda referring to the production, pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e).

Williams has moved the Court to exercise its inherent equitable power to prevent the McDonnells from gaining access to these private and confidential files, and the McDonnells have offered no persuasive counterargument. Although the McDonnells received the iPhone image passively, they cannot have any greater right or interest in the iPhone image than inured to the Government; and as already explained, the Government's right and interest in the iPhone image was limited to the results of a single metadata search. The Court finds that Williams's privacy interests will be irreparably harmed and no adequate remedy at law will exist if this Motion is denied and the McDonnells access the full contents of the iPhone image. Cf. Gilliam v. Foster, 75 F.3d 881, 903-04 (4th Cir. 1996). Further, to the extent that the iPhone image was produced in conjunction with the grand jury's investigation, the Court notes that it has inherent supervisory power over grand jury proceedings, including the authority to remedy any violations of the secrecy of the grand jury. Finn v. Schiller, 72 F.3d 1182, 1190-91 (4th Cir. 1996). Under this precedent, the Court finds that the requested equitable relief is warranted.

For the foregoing reasons, the Motion is GRANTED. Robert F. McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, and their counsel are hereby ORDERED to return to Williams's counsel, all copies of the forensic image of Williams's iPhone, in their possession or produced to any third party, within twenty-four hours of receipt of this Sealed Order. Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, and their counsel are further ORDERED to abstain from accessing the iPhone image.

JONNIE R. WILLIAMS SR.'S RESPONSE CONSENTING TO PARTIAL UNSEALING AND OPPOSING A STAY

I.

Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. consents to partial unsealing, limited to the records of this proceeding relevant to this iPhone issue and limited to Robert F McDonnell (and Maureen, if she so requests). Mr. Williams notes that any material unsealed for this limited purpose remains sealed by this Court for purposes of Fourth Circuit rules. Relevant docket entries begin with Mr. Williams' Motion to Order Return of Private Information, filed March 12, 2014.

II.

Mr. Williams opposes a stay. Mr. McDonnell cannot satisfy the Hilton factors and cannot justify holding onto Mr. Williams' private information while chasing Fourth Circuit review. In particular, Mr. McDonnell is not "likely to succeed on the merits." Nor will he be "irreparably injured absent a stay," and cannot show "public interest" in a stay either. Project Vote/Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 275 F.R.D. 473, 474 (E.D. Va. 2011) (quoting Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776 (1987)). If this Court denies a stay and allows its June 18 Order to take effect, Mr. Williams' counsel will retain and preserve the iPhone image pending the conclusion of appeals in this case.

First, Mr. McDonnell has not made "a sufficiently strong showing on the merits to justify a stay." June 18 Motion for Stay, at 3. Doubts about whether appellate jurisdiction exists at all here pose a threshold stumbling block that occupies one-third of Mr. McDonnell's motion. Under Mr. McDonnell's theory this Court's June 18 order jeopardizes his constitutional rights as a criminal defendant, such as "the opportunity to present a full defense, as the Sixth Amendment contemplates." Motion at 4. That means Mr. McDonnell can raise this issue in a post-trial appeal by which time the Government would naturally be positioned to defend this Court's June 18 order. Nor do the cases Mr. McDonnell relies upon appear to have been brought by criminal defendants with upcoming trials and thus a built-in appellate opportunity.

Even beyond appellate jurisdiction, Mr. McDonnell does not have a strong merits argument. This case asked this Court to decide whether a person who comes to possess someone else's private, personal property through a Government error must return it, or instead whether he has the right to re-format and rifle through it for his own purposes. Efforts to recast this sealed opinion as a groundbreaking constitutional case are off base. Criminal defendants have no constitutional right to dig through irrelevant personal files of witnesses, and vague references to the Sixth Amendment do not change that. The Government had no right to, and never did, review the iPhone's contents. Mr. McDonnell has no right to do so either.

This Court's equitable solution—that just as the Government returned the image, so too must the McDonnells—was on-target and well within its discretion. Solis v. Malkani, 638 F.3d 269, 274 (4th Cir. 2011) ("We review a district court's award of equitable relief for abuse of discretion."). Findings of fact about Mr. Williams' agreement with the Government, his expectations, and what the Government meant to do, and did, with the iPhone image also support this Court's exercise of equitable powers. Id. (fact findings reviewed only for clear error).

Second, there is no irreparable harm in allowing this Court's June 18 Order to take effect. Mr. McDonnell has promised not to review the contents of the image while appeal is pending. Motion at 4, 5. Given that Mr. McDonnell has already agreed not to examine the iPhone image, there is no reason for him to keep it pending appeal. Mr. Williams, on the other hand, is the rightful owner of his iPhone contents, and twice this Court has ordered their return. March 13 Order (return from the Government, completed March 14), June 18 Order (return from the McDonnells). Mr. Williams' counsel will hold and preserve the iPhone image until appeals end.

For the same reasons, the third and fourth Hilton factors do not favor a stay either. Mr. Williams respectfully asks this Court to deny the stay.

Date: June 19, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

JONNIE R. WILLIAMS SR.

REPLY OF INTERVENOR ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE OPPOSITION OF JONNIE R. WILLIAMS, SR. TO HIS MOTION TO STAY ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR RETURN OF PRIVATE INFORMATION

The Government has taken no position on Mr. McDonnell's application for a stay Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. opposes the stay on the grounds that the Fourth Circuit lacks jurisdiction to hear this appeal and that the Hilton factors do not favor a stay. See Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776 (1987). These contentions are without merit.

Mr.Williams' contends that the Fourth Circuit lacks jurisdiction because Mr. McDonnell has a "built-in opportunity" to have his appeal heard after judgment is entered in his criminal case. Jonnie R. Williams Sr. s Response Consenting to Partial Unsealing and Opposing a Stay ("JW Opp'n") at 2. That is wrong. As Mr. McDonnell has explained, because Mr. Williams is not a party to the criminal case, he would not be bound by any resolution of the instant dispute that an appellate court reviewing final judgment might offer. Mr. McDonnell's criminal appeal (assuming he takes one) is therefore not an adequate forum to obtain a final determination of the parties' rights. That Mr. McDonnell—who is not the original movant here—also happens to be the defendant in the criminal prosecution that was underway when Mr. Williams and the Government initiated this separate miscellaneous action is, for the purpose of the Fourth Circuit's jurisdiction, irrelevant.[1] This case is in all salient respects the same as In re Grand Jury, 490 F.3d 978 (D.C. Cir. 2007), in which a witness sought access to grand jury materials pertaining to her.

Nor are Mr. Williams' arguments concerning the standard for obtaining a stay convincing. Despite the fact that Mr. Williams still has not identified a single case, statute, or other authority indicating that there are any limitations whatsoever on the ability of a lawful possessor of non-privileged information to review it, he denies that this Court's order decided a novel legal question. In such a situation, "[b]ecause the Fourth Circuit may resolve the issue differently," a losing party will often nevertheless have "demonstrated a 'substantial case on the merits.'" Miller v. Brown, 465 F Supp. 2d 584, 596 (E.D. Va. 2007) (quoting Hilton, 481 U.S. at 778).

Mr. Williams' arguments on the question of irreparable harm are also unavailing. He states that there is "no reason" for Mr. McDonnell to retain possession of information pending appeal, while Mr. Williams is the "rightful owner of his iPhone contents." JW Opp'n at 3. But this Court's order did not find that Mr. McDonnell's possession of the iPhone was unlawful; rather, it ordered equitable relief to prevent Mr. McDonnell from accessing the iPhone's files to the detriment of Mr. Williams' asserted privacy interest. Mr. McDonnell has a possessory interest in the contents of the iPhone; so does Mr. Williams. At present, both parties retain copies. Denial of a stay will lead to Mr. McDonnell's being deprived of his possessory interest, while granting a stay simply preserves the status quo in all respects and protects Mr. Williams insofar as Mr. McDonnell will not access the files on the image. After all, the only interest Mr. Williams has asserted is an "equitable privacy interest" in preventing Mr. McDonnell and his counsel from reviewing information they lawfully possess—an interest that is fully protected by their commitment not to review the data until the appeal is resolved. There is thus no reason to disturb the status quo pending appellate review of this novel legal question.

[1] Mr. McDonnell's rights as a criminal defendant are, however, relevant for understanding the full weight of Mr. McDonnell's interest the information he lawfully possesses—an interest that it is Mr. Williams' burden to overcome.

For the foregoing reasons and those stated in his original Motion, Governor McDonnell respectfully requests that this Court grant a stay.

FILED UNDER SEAL

SEALED ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two Motions for Partial Unsealing of the Record and two Motions to Stay filed by Robert F. McDonnell on June 18, 2014, and by Maureen G. McDonnell on June 19, 2014, as an intervenors in this matter.

On June 24, 2013, Jonnie Williams, Sr. ("Williams") provided a forensic copy of his iPhone to the United States Attorney. The United States Attorney, in error, turned this information over to counsel for Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell (collectively, "McDonnells"). Upon learning of this error, Williams moved the Court order the return or destruction of the iPhone information. The Court granted this request on March 13, 2014, and ordered the United States Attorney to seek the return of the iPhone information from the McDonnells. The United States Attorney sought the return of the iPhone information; however, counsel for the McDonnells refused to return the iPhone information.

As a result of the McDonnell's refusal, Williams moved the Court on May 19, 2014 to direct the McDonnells' legal team to return the iPhone information. Simultaneously, in their pending criminal action, the McDonnells sought clarification of the Court's Order of March 13, 2014. The Court denied Williams's request because the McDonnells had not received notice of Williams's May 19 motion and had no opportunity to respond.

On June 4, 2014, Williams again moved the Court to direct the McDonnells' legal team to return the iPhone information and requested partial unsealing of the record as to the McDonnells. The Court granted the request for partial unsealing, and the McDonnells responded to Williams's substantive argument for the return of the iPhone information. After Williams's June 4, 2014 motion was fully briefed, the Court granted Williams's request on June 18, 2014. The Order of June 18, 2014 directed the McDonnells and their counsel to return the iPhone information to Williams and to refrain from accessing said information.

The McDonnells now move the Court for partial unsealing of the record in preparation for an expedited appeal to the Fourth Circuit. They also request a stay of the Court's Order of June 18, 2014 pending appeal.

Because they are unopposed, the Motions for Partial Unsealing of the Record are GRANTED as to the records of this proceeding relevant to the issue of Williams's iPhone information. Unsealing shall apply only to Robert F. McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, and their counsel. All of the material unsealed as limited above will remain sealed for the purposes of Fourth Circuit rules. For the reasons that follow, the Motions to Stay are DENIED.

In determining whether a stay pending appeal is appropriate, courts look to four factors: "(1) whether the stay applicant has made a strong showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) whether the applicant will be irreparably injured absent a stay; (3) whether issuance of the stay will substantially injure the other parties interested in the proceeding; and (4) where the public interest lies." Hilton v. Braunskill, 482 U.S. 770, 776 (1987) (citations omitted). These factors "contemplate individualized judgments in each case." Id. at 777.

The first Hilton factor looks to whether the stay applicants have made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits. The McDonnells have not. When given the opportunity to explain why they have a right to keep the private property and information of a potential government witness, the best the McDonnells can provide is some nebulous right to investigate the witness, which they in turn suggest implicates a Sixth Amendment right. The McDonnells make no claim that there is relevant or material information in the iPhone. Of course, they cannot because they are not in a position to make such a claim.

What the McDonnells do claim is an absolute right to access all of the information in Williams's iPhone and to thereafter decide what information might be helpful or beneficial to their interests. This is a classic fishing expedition for which the Court finds no support whatsoever. Apparently, in the McDonnells' world, it does not matter that the iPhone information likely includes information that is not relevant, material, or otherwise discoverable. Privileged information, irrelevant personal and confidential information, credit information, and medical information are just a few of the obvious types of information that may be stored in a smart phone. Would the McDonnells have any chance of success if they came to the Court requesting the right to all of the information contained in every government witness's smart phone? Obviously, no lawyer would make such a request. The fact that a witness is an important or even critical witness does not change the analysis. Similarly, the fortuitous event—fortuitous for the McDonnells—of the United States Attorney's erroneous provision of the iPhone information to the McDonnells does not change the fundamental fact that the McDonnells are not entitled to fish through the entirety of Williams's iPhone hoping to find something helpful to their cause.

The McDonnells have failed to make a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits. In fact, the Court finds it unlikely that they will prevail on appeal. Accordingly, the first Hilton factor weighs in favor of denying the Motions to Stay.

The second and third Hilton factors assess the balance of hardship between the interested parties in granting or denying a stay. The McDonnells will not be irreparably injured absent a stay. If the McDounellls are convinced that their rights as criminal defendants have been violated by the Court's Order of June 18, 2014, they can raise the issue on direct appeal post trial. As long as the McDonnells and their counsel do not access the iPhone information, issuance of a stay would not substantially injure Williams. Accordingly, the second Hilton factor weighs in favor of denying the Motions to Stay.

The fourth Hilton factor looks to where the public interest lies. There is no public interest in granting criminal defendants an unfettered right to rummage through the smart phone information of potential government witnesses. Accordingly, the fourth Hilton factor weighs in favor of denying the Motions to Stay.

On balance, the McDonnells have failed to demonstrate that a stay is warranted under the Hilton factors. Accordingly, the Motions to Stay are DENIED. Nevertheless, the Court will AMEND its Order of June 18, 2014 as follows: Robert F. McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, and their counsel are ORDERED to return to the Court, all copies of the forensic image of Williams's iPhone, in their possession or produced to any third party, by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, June 20, 2014. The Court will retain the iPhone information until the case of United States v. Robert F. McDonnell, et al., is resolved via trial or appellate exhaustion. In all other respects, the Order of June 18, 2014 remains in effect.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to Robert F. McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, and all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

OFFICIAL COURT REPORTER

P-R-O-C-E-E-D-I-N-G-S

THE CLERK: Case Number 3:14CR12: United States of America versus Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G McDonnell. The United States is represented by Michael Dry, Richard Cooke, David Harbach, Jessica Aber, and Ryan Faulconer Robert F McDonnell is represented by John Brownlee, Timothy Taylor, Henry Asbill, and James Burnham. Maureen G McDonnell is represented by William Burck and Kevin Chu Are counsel ready to proceed?

MR DRY: The United States is ready to proceed

MR ASBILL: Mr McDonnell is ready to proceed

MR BURCK: Ms McDonnell is ready to proceed

THE COURT: All right I think the only thing that we have left to discuss is this what's titled as a Motion to Remedy the Government's Interference And frankly, the reason why I left this on hearing is, it is novel I couldn't find any case anywhere that came anywhere near it or supports what the defendants are requesting So I thought I would give you an opportunity to make your case So let me hear from you.

MR. ASBILL: Your Honor, my colleague, Mr Burnham, will argue the motion for the defense

THE COURT: All right Mr Burnham?

MR. BURNHAM: Thank you very much, Judge Spencer, for having us in today to talk to you about our motion. It is novel. And we think the reason that it is novel is because the facts are novel.

So as the Court knows, the government filed a motion to intervene and to stay discovery in a civil case a few doors down from this courtroom just one week after indicting my client. The government did that to stay discovery. When the government filed that motion, I'd like to share with the Court what they said. The first thing they said was that "The civil discovery process, if allowed to continue, will reveal information about key witnesses and documents to which the criminal defendants are not entitled."

Now, I would submit that that gets it exactly wrong. There is no information to which the criminal defendants are not entitled other than privileged information or things that are non-discoverable. There are certain tools that the criminal law gives to criminal defendants to use the legal process to obtain information. But there are no limits on what information we are allowed to get provided other people are willing to voluntarily share it with us.

Second, the government said that "This would enable the criminal defendants to use the civil discovery to circumvent the limitations on criminal discovery and thus prejudice the government's criminal prosecution."

Now, I would submit that that is making the same mistake as the prior sentence It makes a second mistake, though, which is the assumption that we are somehow going to be able or we would otherwise be able to use the civil case as some sort of affirmative discovery weapon against the government or anyone else My client and his wife are not parties to the civil case The government is not a party to the civil case Neither side of this proceeding is a party to the civil case So nobody in this proceeding would be able to use the tools of civil procedure to do anything The plaintiffs in the civil case are not people that are working for us They are not associates of ours They are not our stalking horse They are independent third parties in the world.

Then the last thing the government said is that "Disclosure of such information would compromise the public's right to a fair trial in this criminal action " Now, I think that is the most extraordinary of the statements the government made Because it is hard for me to understand how having more evidence about the facts and circumstances of the government's allegations available to the parties could possibly prejudice the public's right to a fair trial The Supreme Court has long held, and in fact in the UNITED STATES v NIXON it did hold that criminal proceedings are not supposed to be based on speculative or partial presentations of the facts So I do not understand how the public's right could be impaired by that

Now, turning to the actual legal claim we bring, the Court is absolutely right that it is a novel claim. We have not found any cases addressing it one way or the other I also note that the government has professed some difficulty in understanding our claim, so I'd like to make clear what we are saying There is a long-standing rule that is very well established that the government is not permitted to gratuitously interfere with the defense's investigation of its allegations The most familiar and well-known application of this rule is the longstanding prohibition against prosecutors discouraging witnesses from talking to defense counsel Nobody disputes, I don't think, that that rule exists and that that rule applies Indeed, Judge Novak reiterated that rule a month and a half ago at the hearing to reconsider some of the conditions of bond release for my client and his wife So that rule is very well established

I think that rule is the rule to look at in thinking about this problem. Because in this case, you have a very similar thing You have the prosecution going out into the world and attempting to stop third parties from obtaining exculpatory evidence or sharing exculpatory evidence with us or doing other things that it can do to make it more difficult for us to go investigate this case on our own outside the courtroom.

And I think that leads to a second critical point. The government has sought to cast this as some sort of objection on our part to the actions of Judge Gibney or Judge Anderson or the civil plaintiffs or the civil defendants or all of these people other than the prosecution And that's not right Judge Gibney absolutely has discretion over how to manage his civil docket, and he is welcome to stay discovery within that discretion whenever he would like and we would never have any basis to complain Similarly, civil litigants are welcome to abandon their lawsuit, press their lawsuit, seek to depose Mr Williams, not depose Mr Williams, do whatever they choose, and we have no basis to complain. But what we are entitled to is not having the prosecution out there trying to stand in the way and convince people not to engage in discovery, not to talk to us And I think what kind of confirms the point is there would be no question that the government had violated my client's rights if they had gone to the plaintiff's lawyers and said, "Hey, don't share this discovery with the McDonnell defense team. Please don't give them anything We think it would be bad It might help them defend the charges, it might undermine our witness" or whatever That would unquestionably be a violation of his constitutional rights I would submit that is the same thing

Just to make the point completely clear, the violation was complete the moment they intervened and filed the stay motion What happened after that might go to remedy and it might be relevant to what this Court does to deal with the problem. But that's when the violation was complete, just like the violation is complete when the prosecution tells a witness not to talk to us, regardless of what the witness subsequently does

So I think the rule is simple. I think the rule is clear And I think it is fully applicable here

THE COURT: Well, the base rule is simple and clear Obviously, the government can't say to a witness, "Don't talk to the defendant " But what we have here is a completely different thing Nobody is telling any witness that they can't talk to you Nobody is saying that there are documents that some witness has that they can't give to you if they wanted to give them to you. What they are saying is that a civil proceeding will not proceed, there won't be depositions, there won't be a creation of evidence that might, and I emphasize might, that might be of some value to the defense

What you are trying to stop is a far cry from the prosecutor who in the one case that you all cited says, "Don't talk to the defendants " Well, obviously, that's different ,That's very easy to deal with But this, when the government goes to a court of competent jurisdiction, a judge who has the authority, listens to the merits, listens to what they have to say, and then makes a decision, "I am going to stay this case," what do you want me to do about that? What kind of remedy can I bring to that situation?

MR BURNHAM: Certainly, Your Honor So I think the first thing is that there is nothing, certainly there is nothing this Court can do to effect, nothing this Court should do to change how Judge Gibney manages his civil docket We are not challenging that decision and not asking this Court to do anything that relates to that decision.

THE COURT: But what would have come out, and again, we have done a lot of this prospective presumption, you know, things that might happen, that may happen It's difficult to deal with that But as I read your papers, what I am getting is that, "Okay, we want these things because it would have come out if there had not been this stay " And that, to me, is just dancing through fantasyland.

MR. BURNHAM: Certainly, Judge Spencer So let me try to maybe make the point a different way We don't know what many witnesses are going to say about what happened in the government's allegations There might be people who have very tangential knowledge of those allegations, that have nothing useful to say at all But we have the right to go ask those people what they know Certainly, we have no idea what civil discovery could have uncovered in that case --

THE COURT: So the fact that there is a civil case doesn't stop you from asking them what they know

MR. BURNHAM: Absolutely right, Judge Spencer But there is no question that when the government intervenes in the civil case and says that continuing discovery will undermine the public's interest in a fair trial, that that is a way of the government telling the plaintiff's lawyers and the defense lawyers and everybody else that they don't want people sharing information with us

THE COURT: Now I have to read their minds I have to understand that they would understand it in a way that says, "That means I can't talk to the defendants "

MR. BURNHAM: I have two points, Your Honor That is the fair reading of what they have done But second, the same principle that keeps the government from telling witnesses not to talk to us, what that principle means is that the government is not permitted to go out into the world and do things to gratuitously block our investigation, and, going into civil cases all over the place There's two in the Eastern District of Virginia There may be others And shutting down discovery solely so that discovery does not uncover evidence that might be useful to us, I mean, you are right that we are assuming that there could be information that's useful to us that could come out, but the government assumed the same thing That's the reason the government wanted to stay discovery It says at the very first sentence I read, that the discovery, quote, "will reveal information about key witnesses and documents to which the criminal defendants are not entitled "

So no one knows what will happen And it could be that had the government not intervened, nothing would have come out, although I would note that discovery in that case was due to be complete by July 9th until the government got involved. And the plaintiffs probably would have deposed Mr Williams, probably would have sent requests for interrogatories and all sorts of other things that it has been a big benefit to Star Scientific and Mr Williams to not have to respond to

But I guess I would just say the point is, the principle that we are relying on is the principle that the prosecution shouldn't be out doing things that make it more difficult for us to obtain evidence Maybe there is no evidence Maybe the witness we want to talk to doesn't know anything But that doesn't mean the government is entitled to interfere with that witness or our access to that witness or interfere with a separate proceeding that might reveal --

THE COURT: Again, I don't see where there is any interference with your access to the witness

MR. BURNHAM: Again, no, certainly, Judge Spencer, it is not a direct violation of the rule So we are just analogizing to that principle, because I think the principle that animates the rule providing access to witnesses is that the defense is free or entitled to be free from government obstruction of the defense's investigation But yes, I mean, to be candid, we have found no case in which a court has ruled on this issue But that I think is just further evidence of how extraordinary the government's conduct is The government cited a lot of cases in their stay motion. I think there were about 20 Not a single case involved a situation where the criminal defendants were not parties to the civil action Not one The government, for example, in its stay motion, the government calls these parallel proceedings But these are not parallel proceedings The civil suit was filed a year ago The civil suit is against the government's witness that the government might want to call in this case and his former company, and seeks to bring claims where the plaintiffs say the company and that witness committed securities fraud by misrepresenting the degree to which Johns Hopkins was endorsing research studies

THE COURT: It sounds like it would have been a very fine argument before Judge Gibney, if somebody was opposed to the stay and Judge Gibney wanted to listen to that But I don't see how it impacts this case I just don't see it

MR BURNHAM: If I may, just one more point in response to your last comment I think, I completely understand the Court's intuition about that, and where the Court is coming from. But I would submit that the rights that we are seeking to vindicate here are Mr McDonnell's rights as a criminal defendant in this proceeding in front of this Court against these prosecutors They are not -- his rights are not -- he doesn't have any legal rights in the civil case All he has is a right in this criminal case to not have these criminal prosecutors doing things that make it harder for him to build a defense And all we are asking this Court to do is order the prosecution in this case to stop interfering with our investigation in this case We are not asking this Court to enter orders in any other case or somehow sit as an appellate tribunal over other judges That's why we couldn't and shouldn't have had to go to Judge Gibney and try to make arguments there, because we are not involved in that suit That's the whole reason why we submit this violates our constitutional rights Unless the Court has any other questions, I'll shut up Thank you, Judge Spencer

THE COURT: Thank you. Government?

MR COOKE: Thank you, Your Honor I have three main points that I wanted to make in response The first is that neither the government's stay motion nor the orders issued by Judge Gibney or Judge Anderson placed any limitation on what the McDonnells might do in gathering information. So cases about the Sixth Amendment's compulsory process right, like VALENZUELA-BERNAL, where the government was deporting witnesses, or MOUSSAOUI, where the government was holding enemy combatants beyond the government's reach, really aren't applicable here because in this criminal case the McDonnells have the full right to compulsory process and subpoenaing any witness they want for the trial

The second point is that the McDonnells are not challenging the merits of Judge Gibney's or Judge

Anderson's stay rulings, and instead saying that the constitutional violation is that the government requested a stay In the government's view, that really turns due process on its head. Because what they are saying is that the violation is that the government asked a court for relief They could have intervened. They could have opposed the government's arguments But their point seems to be that the fact of the government asking a court for relief, this is not like, say, some type of discovery practice that would take place outside the court's review and then it would later be reviewed by a court This was where the court, a court itself, in the exercise of its discretion, looked at the issues, understanding fully that the government was seeking a stay because of this criminal case, and made a ruling

The third point I wanted to touch on is that, as I understand one of the core points of the McDonnells's here is that, a statement they make toward the end of the reply brief but the government doesn't explain it, because how could it, why staying third party civil actions to thwart the emergence of potentially exculpatory evidence promotes the just enforcement of the laws Building on that, they've got an analogy here to situations where the government instructs witnesses not to talk to the defendant To be clear, we have not instructed witnesses not to talk to the defendants And the civil litigation is not analogous to that situation, because a civil deposition is compulsory process

The shoe here could easily be on the other foot You could easily have a defendant in the McDonnells's position who is saying, you know, "I've been noticed for a deposition," and it is actually not that far-fetched to imagine it happening in this case, "because of the allegations in the civil litigation " And the defendant in that situation would want a stay And where the civil litigants were saying, you know, "It is a brief delay, it is seven months, we don't object," I would be hard pressed to see why the government would have a complaint in that situation about having that stay of the civil litigation because the defendant didn't want to have a deposition of him or a key witness And the key here is that those depositions and that civil process is compulsory in a way that the criminal rules don't provide pretrial

And we have said that, you know, as Judge Novak ruled in this case, the witnesses are free to talk to the parties if they want to or if they don't And in the government's motion for the stay, we said specifically, this is at Page 7 of our motion to Judge Gibney, which the McDonnells have attached to their pleading, it says, we said, "Federal criminal practice allows a witness the full choice over whether to speak with any of the parties or their representatives prior to testifying in a criminal case That basic protection is unavailable to the same witness in a civil case Discovery in criminal cases is narrowly circumscribed for important reasons entirely independent of any generalized policy of restricting the flow of information to defendants "

So essentially, the government's position here is, look, the witnesses in this case are entitled to the same kinds of benefits that the McDonnells themselves would have in resisting a compulsory deposition or other compulsory civil process in advance of the criminal trial, which is moving expeditiously And as courts have recognized over and over again, the priority is given to the public interest in the criminal proceeding

THE COURT: All right Thank you. Any rebuttal?

MR. BURNHAM: Very briefly Just a few very quick points, Judge Spencer First, I think it is important to note that the witnesses or the potential witnesses who are involved in the civil case aren't the ones who sought the stay There is no question that if Mr Williams had sought to stay discovery and had made an argument about how this criminal case could impact his civil rights, then that would be something that we would have no cause to complain about But it wasn't Mr Williams, it wasn't Star, and it wasn't the plaintiffs It was the government

And that, I think, leads to my next point, which is that certainly if Mr McDonnell was going to be deposed, he would have the ability to seek to stop the deposition or not depending on what he wanted to do I have no idea what we would do in that situation But that doesn't mean that the government has the ability to go and interfere with civil discovery itself, because the government does not have a Fifth and Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial And the government does not have a Fifth and Sixth Amendment right to unfettered access to witnesses The government has many, many powers and many, many rights and many things it can do in a criminal case Unlike a criminal defendant, it does not have the right to not have anyone interfering with this investigation at any time

So I think those are critical points The other point that I think distinguishes much of what the government has said in support of its actions is simply that Mr McDonnell is not a party to the civil case He is not utilizing the Rules of Civil Procedure or seeking to do anything; to give compulsory process, to depose Mr Williams, or anything else And so the fact that civil plaintiffs might, and if they do that evidence might benefit us, does not somehow mean that the government has an interest in protecting the Rules of Criminal Procedure that justifies its interference in the civil case

So I would just close by saying, you know, this is an important case It is a complicated case There's a lot of evidence in this case And we need to be able to develop that evidence in order to defend our client And we have, I believe, a settled constitutional right to develop that evidence free from interference from the government Thank you again, Judge Spencer, for hearing us on this motion

THE COURT: All right The motion to remedy the government's interference will be denied I see no support in the law for what the defendant is asking for And I learned a long time ago, I'm not in the business of creating new law I'm not the Fourth Circuit or the Supreme Court So I'm not about to do that

While I have you all here, just for the sanctity of the trees, all the paper that you guys are submitting, we need to stop this You all need to get together and negotiate on this GIGLIO and JENCKS, when is an appropriate time to get that done I expect the government to be reasonable, and that that will get done in good time But defendants have been essentially operating on the assumption and urging on the Court to operate on the assumption that the government is going to do wrong

I regret the STEVENS case because every white-collar case I've gotten since that, that's all they talk about "Look what they did, the horrible things they did in the STEVENS case; and therefore, the Justice Department is going to send these people in who are going to ruin their lives and careers by doing stupid things, too " I don't make that assumption. Those kind of vituperative recriminations are not going to help anybody What you need to do is get going, start negotiating and get going with this case I know this case is important Every case is important It is not particularly complex I disagree with that It has a level of complexity, but we certainly have seen more complex cases come this way All right, get to it Thank you all very much.

THE CLERK: Case Number 3:14CR12: United States of America versus Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G McDonnell The United States is represented by Michael Dry, Jessica Aber, David Harbach, Ryan Faulconer, and Richard Cooke Robert F McDonnell is represented by Henry Asbill, James Burnham, Noel Francisco, Ryan Newman, and Tim Taylor Maureen G McDonnell is represented by William Burck and Kevin Chu Are counsel ready to proceed

MR. DRY: The United States is ready to proceed.

MR. ASBILL: Mr McDonnell is ready to proceed.

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, Ms McDonnell is ready to proceed

THE COURT: All right We are here on defendants' motions to sever and motion to dismiss We will proceed in any manner that you deem appropriate

MR FRANCISCO: Your Honor, Noel Francisco for Robert McDonnell If it pleases the Court, we would like to begin with the motion to dismiss and the related motion for disclosure of certain grand jury materials

THE COURT: All right

MR. FRANCISCO: Judge Spencer, may it please the Court: Even if every allegation in the indictment is true, Mr McDonnell did not violate the federal bribery laws The indictment does not allege that Mr McDonnell exercised any government power in favor of Mr Williams or his company Nor does it allege that Mr McDonnell asked any other government official to exercise government power in favor of Mr Williams or his company Instead, even assuming that the allegations are true, the most that the indictment alleges is that Mr McDonnell provided Mr Williams with access to other government officials so that Mr Williams could attempt to persuade them to his cause But providing access unaccompanied by an actual exercise or promise to exercise actual government power is not an official act under the federal bribery laws Because if it were, virtually every elected official in America would be subject to a criminal bribery prosecution when they explicitly trade campaign contributions for preferred access That is not and has never been the law

Now, the government disagrees with our position It asserts that a public official takes, and here I'm quoting from Page 23 of their brief, "official action when he orders a subordinate to take a meeting, attends an event at a state facility, and directs a cabinet member to arrange a meeting " It emphasizes, and again I'm quoting from its brief, this time at Page 24, that "Directing a subordinate to take a meeting is a quintessential part of an executive's job and no reasonable definition of official action should exclude such conduct "

Under that understanding of the law, if an elected official says to his campaign donors, "In exchange for a $10,000 campaign contribution you can have a private dinner with me and participate in roundtable discussions with me and my staff," that elected official when engaging in that kind of commonplace practice has committed a crime

This position, Your Honor, cannot be correct, and no Court has ever adopted it To the contrary, every Court that has even remotely addressed this issue has rejected the government's position Your Honor, one of the key cases that the government relies on is the RING case out of Washington, D C involving Kevin Ring, who was an aid to Jack Abramoff I have the jury instructions or an excerpt from the jury instructions from that case May I hand Your Honor a copy? We also have copies for the government

Your Honor, this is the excerpt of the jury instructions relating to the definition of official act And if you turn to the final page, which is labeled Page 39 at the top, and the highlighting, of course, is ours And in Line 17 through 21 of that final page labeled 39 at the top, it reads, quote, and this is Judge Huvelle instructing the jury on the meaning of official act "Mere favoritism, as evidenced by a public official's willingness to take a lobbyist's telephone call or to meet with a lobbyist, is not an official act In addition, sharing information with the lobbyist or helping to develop a lobbying strategy does not constitute an official act "

This is precisely the opposite of the position that the government advocates here. And it reflects the fact that a meeting alone, just like providing lobbying advice alone, just like providing access alone, unaccompanied by actual governmental power, is not and has never been understood to be an official act under the bribery laws

Here, there is no allegation that Mr McDonnell asked any government official to do anything other than to take a meeting or attend a reception. Those, however, are not official acts, and therefore, the indictment fails to allege that critical element of a federal bribery prosecution. And that's in a nutshell why we believe Counts One through Eleven of the indictment should be dismissed.

Your Honor, I'd like to talk a little bit more in detail about the meaning of official act, then turn to a little bit more detail on why the allegations in the indictment, even if true, don't allege an official act And finally, I'd like to address some of the government's key counter arguments I am of course happy to take those in any order that the Court prefers or answer any questions the Court may have

THE COURT: You can go ahead in any order you prefer

MR. FRANCISCO: Thank you, Your Honor Beginning with the meaning of the phrase "official act" as that term is used in the federal bribery laws I'd like to begin by clarifying what our motion to dismiss is about and what it is not about, because I think the government's briefing in this creates a little bit of confusion on that score

First of all, our motion is not about whether settled practices can constitute official acts The Fourth Circuit in JEFFERSON held that settled practices can constitute official acts, but only if those settled practices otherwise meet the definition of official act So what we are focusing on here is the meaning of official act, and what alleged conduct has to do to qualify as an official act regardless of whether it does or does not reflect a settled practice

The other thing that our motion is not about is whether the government must show that a specific payment correlates to a specific official act The Fourth Circuit held in JENNINGS that the government doesn't need to engage in that one-to-one type of correlation But what the Fourth Circuit in JENNINGS also made clear was that it is incumbent upon the government to allege and ultimately prove that the defendant committed what would constitute a, quote/unquote, official act And on this score, I think it is important to read a short excerpt from the JENNINGS opinion where the Court made this quite clear This is at Page 1014 of the JENNINGS opinion, where it said, quote: Bribery requires the intent to effect an exchange of money or gifts for specific official action or inaction But each payment need not be correlated with a specific official act Rather, it is sufficient to show that the payer intended each payment to induce the official to adopt a specific course of action

So JENNINGS couldn't be more clear that even though the government need not allege a one-to-one correlation between a payment and an act, it does have to allege conduct that, if true, qualifies as an official act under the federal bribery laws Which leads me to what this motion is about It focuses is on a discrete yet critically important legal question: The meaning of the phrase "official act" as used in the federal bribery laws and whether the allegations in the indictment, even assuming that those allegations are true, set forth conduct that would qualify as an official act And Your Honor, the indictment does not set forth factual allegations that, even if true, would qualify as an official act

As we explain in great detail in our briefs, every Court that has addressed this issue, directly or indirectly, has rejected the government's position, including in the SUN-DIAMOND case, the VALDES case out of the D C Circuit, and the RABBITT case out of the Eighth Circuit I'm not going to launch into a detailed discussion of those cases That's fully set forth in our briefs But I would like to focus on three critical points that emerge from that case law

The first is that the Supreme Court in SUN-DIAMOND said that merely giving a speech, including a speech on official government policy -- the example that the Supreme Court used was the President's speech to farmers on U S agricultural policy -- merely giving a speech on official government policy is not an official act under the federal bribery laws And the reason it is not an official act under the federal bribery laws is because a speech standing alone does not constitute an exercise of actual government power, the regulatory power of the state to create or bind the rights of its citizens

It is just a speech

Second point: The Eighth Circuit's decision in RABBITT stands for the proposition, as the Eighth Circuit has made crystal clear and as no other Court has ever disputed, being that "An official's promise," here I'm quoting from the Eighth Circuit's decision, LOFTUS, describing RABBITT, "An official's promise only to introduce someone to influential persons," and then it continues, "and not to use his official position to influence those persons," the Eighth Circuit held, "is not an official act " In other words, merely introducing someone to influential persons, merely facilitating access, unaccompanied by an actual exercise of government power, is not an official act

And the third point that emerges from this case law, Your Honor, is that no case, none, has ever held that a public official commits an official act under the federal bribery laws when he merely facilitates access to decision makers unaccompanied by any actual exercise of government power And this last point is critical, Your Honor Because none of the government's cases support its position. All rather involve government officials who either themselves exercised government power in favor of the bribe payer or asked another government official to exercise government power in favor of the bribe payer

None of them involve what we have here, which is at best simply arranging access for a third party to himself attempt to convince government decision makers to act in his favor

The RING case is a very good example, the one we started with. That's a case where the defendant paid a Department of Justice attorney to seek expedited review of a visa application, clearly seeking an exercise of official government power: the review and processing of a Visa application. The JEFFERSON case is another good example, one that the government heavily relies on in its brief In the JEFFERSON case, Congressman Jefferson himself urged Export-Import Bank officials to provide financing to the alleged bribe payer, federal financing

In the JEFFERSON case, Congressman Jefferson himself secured a letter of endorsement from another Congressman to the Department of the Army asking that a government military contract be awarded to the bribe payer And in the JEFFERSON case, Congressman Jefferson himself urged Nigerian government officials to award government contracts to the bribe payer in exchange for the payments In all of these examples, Congressman Jefferson himself used his position to urge other government officials to exercise actual government power in favor of the bribe payer in exchange for payment We have nothing like that here The government's other cases are all of a piece, I'll just tick through them quickly, because it illustrates in our view the very weakness of the government's position

The JENNINGS decision out of the Fourth Circuit, the public official in question steered government contracts to the bribe payer in exchange for money The GANIM case out of the Second Circuit, the Mayor of Bridgeport awarded government contracts to the bribe payer in exchange for money In the DIMORA case out of the Sixth Circuit, the defendant, a county legislator, cast legislative votes, steered public contracts, and awarded government jobs to the bribe payer in exchange for money And the ROSEN case out of the Second Circuit involved a legislator who sought legislation, quote, to restore millions of dollars in funding, end quote, which funding would have been benefited the bribe payer

Every one of these cases involved public officials who either themselves exercised actual government power, the regulatory power of the state in favor of the bribe payer in exchange for money None of them involved simply providing a third party with access to decision makers so that that third party could attempt to persuade the decision makers to his cause But that is all that we have here, Your Honor And these, these cases that I have just ticked through, are the government's very best cases in support of its position, the cases upon which its position,almost exclusively relies

So what we have is, every case that either directly or indirectly addresses the issue, including SUN-DIAMOND, VALDES, RABBITT, all of those cases, RING, reject the government's position The cases that they cite in their favor are completely inapposite because all of them involved actual exercises of government power, unlike this case

So now, Your Honor, I'd like to turn to a review of the allegations in this case and explain why they are completely different from any other case in the Federal Reports and the cases that the government relies on and why those allegations, assuming that they are true, do not set forth a violation of the federal bribery laws

Here again, there is no allegation that Mr McDonnell asked anyone to do anything other than to attend meetings and receptions He never himself exercised government power for Mr Williams, nor did he ask someone else to, nor did he promise to do the same

The alleged acts here basically fall into three buckets The first bucket involved allegations that Mr McDonnell arranged meetings between Virginia government officials and Mr Williams and his company It alleges two such meetings: one where Mr McDonnell asked the Secretary of Health to send a staff member to attend a meeting with Ms McDonnell and Mr Williams, and one where Mr McDonnell asked the Secretary of Administration to reach out to Star Scientific to discuss Anatabloc Completely missing from those allegations, Your Honor, is any allegation that Mr McDonnell asked the Secretary of Health, the Secretary of Health staff member, or the Secretary of Administration to do anything other than to meet with Mr. Williams and Star Scientific company officials There is no allegation that he asked them to exercise any government power in favor of Mr Williams and his company He simply asked them to take a meeting

But as the Court said in RING, Judge Huvelle said in RING in her jury instructions, "Merely taking a meeting does not constitute an official act under the federal bribery laws " And the reason is that a meeting alone, like a speech alone, like attending a reception alone, does not involve an exercise or a promise to exercise government power, the regulatory power of the state

The second bucket of allegations involve receptions that were hosted at the Governor's Mansion. And there are basically two there: the Mansion reception, the Mansion lunch at which, according to the indictment, Star Scientific's new product was quote/unquote launched; and a healthcare leaders' reception held at the Mansion that as far as we can tell did not directly relate to Star Scientific or Anatabloc at all. But regardless, again, what is completely missing from the allegations in the indictment is any assertion that Mr. McDonnell asked any attendee of that reception or anyone else to exercise any government power in favor of Mr Williams or his company At most, he invited Mr Williams to a reception at which other influential persons would be present so Mr Williams could himself plead his cause to those decision makers. But again, providing that kind of access unaccompanied by an actual exercise of government power does not constitute an official act under the federal bribery laws

The final bucket of allegations involve alleged contacts between Mr McDonnell and other office of government officials And as far as we can tell from the indictment, this basically involves one e-mail that Mr McDonnell sent to his in-house lawyer, Jasen Eige, asking Mr Eige to, quote/unquote, see me about Anatabloc Again, Your Honor, completely missing from that allegation or any other allegation in the indictment is that Mr McDonnell asked Mr Eige to do anything other than to, quote/unquote, see him about Anatabloc It does not allege that Mr McDonnell asked Mr Eige to exercise power in favor of Mr Williams It doesn't allege that Mr McDonnell asked Mr Eige to ask anyone else to exercise power in favor of Mr Williams It simply asks a staff member to see him about an issue That is not an official act under the federal bribery laws

The bottom line, Your Honor, is here that the government does not allege any conduct on the part of Mr McDonnell that, even if true, would rise to the level of an official act because it does not allege that Mr McDonnell himself promised to exercise power or asked anyone else to exercise power in favor of Mr Williams And therefore, that critical element of a federal bribery prosecution and indictment is completely missing from this case

I would now like to just address a few of the government's key counter arguments

Its principal argument is that even if we are right on the law, that is no basis for a motion to dismiss That's their argument, that under the motion to dismiss standard, even if we are right on the legal standard, you should not dismiss this case With all due respect, that's plainly wrong As the Fourth Circuit said in the THOMAS case and the Tenth Circuit said in the POPE case, the Tenth Circuit's decision actually well illustrates the principle that the Fourth Circuit and other courts also follow Quote: A court may always ask whether the allegations in the indictment, if true, are sufficient to establish a violation of the charged offense, and to dismiss the indictment if its allegations fail that standard End quote

Here, Your Honor, the Fourth Circuit has routinely dismissed or affirmed the dismissal of indictments where, accepting the factual allegations in the indictment as true, they do not state an offense, a violation of federal law And the cases are cited in our briefs But I would direct the Court to the decisions in UNITED STATES v GOOD, 326 F 3d 589; UNITED STATES v BOETTCHER, 780 F 2d 435; and UNITED STATES v WALTERS, 359 F 3d 340 All of these cases reflect the proposition that if, assuming that the facts in the indictment as alleged are true, they do not rise to the level of a federal crime, it is appropriate to dismiss the indictment

Here, Your Honor, we are not contesting the allegations set forth in the indictment at this time If and when we ever have to do that we most certainly will vigorously contest those allegations But for purposes of this motion, we are not contesting those factual allegations Nor are we contesting whether the government has sufficient evidence to prove those allegations Again, if and when we have to, we will vigorously contest the government's evidence But for purposes of this motion, we are assuming that the government has evidence to prove the factual allegations set forth in the indictment

Rather, what we are asserting is that, even assuming that those factual allegations are true, and even assuming that the government has sufficient evidence to prove those factual allegations, those allegations do not set forth conduct on the part of Mr McDonnell that rises to the level of an official act under the federal bribery laws And if we are right, then under the Fourth Circuit's decision in THOMAS, the Tenth Circuit's decision in POPE, and the other cases we have discussed, this Court should dismiss Counts One through Eleven of the indictment

The government's second principal argument is to rely on the Fourth Circuit's decision in the JEFFERSON case, asserting that JEFFERSON is essentially factually analogous to this case Nothing could be further from the truth As we discussed, Congressman Jefferson promised to exercise or ask others to exercise actual government power in favor of the bribe payer in exchange for payments He himself asked Export-Import Bank officials to award federal government financing to the bribe payer He himself through another Congressman asked the United States military to award an Army contract to the alleged bribe payer in exchange for payments And he himself asked Nigerian government officials to award Nigerian government contracts to the bribe payer in exchange for payments All involved Mr Jefferson himself either exercising government power or asking others to exercise government power on behalf of the federal bribe payer No such allegation here

The third principal line of argument by the government is that Mr Williams' goal in this overall scheme was to have the Tobacco Commission provide funding for research studies provided by the University of Virginia and the Virginia Commonwealth University With all due respect, Your Honor, even assuming that that does accurately reflect Mr Williams' goal in this overall scheme, it is irrelevant Because the government still is required to allege that Mr McDonnell himself promised to commit an official act in furtherance of that scheme But there is no allegation that Mr McDonnell promised to commit an official act in furtherance of that scheme, because the government does not allege any conduct that could rise to the level of an official act

Go back, for example, to Judge Huvelle's jury instruction in the RING case, where she says that sharing information with a lobbyist or helping to develop lobbying strategy does not constitute an official act A government official may well coordinate with somebody to create a lobbying strategy saying, you know, "I know those officials; if you really want to convince them, you ought to do X, Y, and Z " That would not be an official act That's why the government can't simply say that Mr Williams' goal was to get this funding or get these studies and rest its case there It has to allege that Mr McDonnell promised to engage in conduct that would qualify as an official act in furtherance of that scheme So it has to allege that Mr McDonnell promised to either himself exercise government power in favor or in pursuance of that scheme, or ask someone else to exercise government power in pursuance of that scheme But again, here, even accepting the allegations in the indictment as true, the most that they allege is that Mr McDonnell agreed to set up meetings and receptions that would give Mr Williams access to other government officials so that Mr Williams could plead his cause Completely missing is any allegation that Mr McDonnell himself promised to exercise the official power of the state or ask any other official to exercise the official power of the state in favor of Mr Williams or his company

And my final point on this score, Your Honor, and I actually believe this is a very important one, is that at best, at best, the meaning of the phrase "official act" as used in the federal bribery laws is unclear I don't believe that it can plausibly be maintained that under the Hobbs Act and the Honest Services Fraud statute the conduct that the indictment alleges clearly and unambiguously qualifies as an official act under the federal bribery laws, given that every case that has even touched upon this issue directly or indirectly undercuts the government's position, including the RING case, and given that every case that the government cites in its favor involves a completely separate set of facts that in fact did involve the actual exercise of government power

And given that at best, the statutes here are ambiguous, under well-established canons of construction like the Rule of Lenity and the other rules we discuss in our briefs, constitutional avoidance, the federalism canons, under all of these canons, that ambiguity has to be construed in favor of the criminal defendant Under that narrow construction there is simply no way that this indictment alleges facts that, even assuming them to be true, would rise to the level of an official act under the federal bribery laws

Judge Spencer, the bottom line here is that the government is required to allege and prove that Mr McDonnell committed an official act Here it has not done so, because there is no allegation that Mr McDonnell himself exercised or promised to exercise actual government power in favor of Mr Williams, the regulatory power of the state, nor is there any allegation that he asked any other government official to do so Instead, at most, this indictment alleges that Mr McDonnell arranged meetings and receptions at which Mr Williams would have access to other government officials so Mr Williams could plead his cause

But access, unaccompanied by an actual exercise or promise to exercise actual government power, cannot possibly constitute an official act under the federal bribery laws Access is not corruption, as the Supreme Court has reminded us in its recent campaign finance cases Because if it were, every government elected official who exchanges campaign contributions for access would be guilty of a crime And in the campaign contribution sphere, let there be no question, the quid pro quo is explicit Elected officials say to their donors, and you can often see it on the donation card, "In exchange for X number of dollars you can attend the reception. If you give more, you can have a private meeting with the Governor If you give more, perhaps you can have a private meeting with the Governor and his staff and participate in roundtable discussions " Explicit quid pro quos of campaign contributions for access

If the government's theory is correct, then every one of these elected officials is subject to a federal bribery prosecution save only for prosecutorial discretion That can't possibly be the law, and the government's claim that this case does not involve campaign contributions does not possibly remove the dramatic implications that adopting its position, which no Court has ever done, would cause to the law of federal bribery and the power it would imbue on federal prosecutors throughout the country

So the bottom line here is that because this indictment does not allege facts that, if true, rise the level of an official act under the federal bribery laws, Counts One through Eleven of the indictment should be dismissed

At a minimum we believe the Court should allow review of the grand jury transcripts to determine whether the government erroneously instructed the grand jury on this critical element of federal bribery law, because if it in fact did misinstruct the grand jury, and there is good reason to believe it did given the explicit position that the government has adopted in its briefs here, that would be a separate and independent basis for dismissing the indictment as the District Court held in the UNITED

STATES v STEVENS case cited in our briefs

Your Honor, may I consult with my colleagues?

THE COURT: Sure

MR. FRANCISCO: Your Honor, unless the Court has questions, I have nothing further at this time, but would appreciate the opportunity to respond to the government's argument

THE COURT: Thank you very much Counsel for Ms McDonnell?

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor Your Honor, may it please the Court, I can be very brief on this point Ms McDonnell's position is that if the charges, the corruption charges as to Mr McDonnell are dismissed pursuant to the arguments made by counsel, that the charges should also be dismissed and must be dismissed as to Ms McDonnell We don't believe there is really a dispute on that point with the government based on our read of the brief that they submitted in opposition Because they have acknowledged they are not charging Ms McDonnell in her personal or individual capacity, they are not alleging she has an honest services duty to the State of Virginia, and that she has a public office So given that concession, as we read it, we don't believe we need to take it any further, beyond what the counsel for the Governor has said on this point

THE COURT: All right

MR. BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you Government?

MR COOKE: Good morning, Your Honor Ryan Faulconer for the United States Your Honor, the defense has said in this case that upholding the indictment here would criminalize politics as we know it But to be clear, the only thing that this indictment says is a crime is a Governor and his wife lining their pockets with more than $150,000 in exchange for official actions to help a businessman sell his product, while concealing all of it from the voters and the citizens of Virginia And the reason to start there, Your Honor, is because the standard that you have to apply here is no different than the standard that you have applied in countless other cases

Whether or not the indictment is deficient here raises three questions for Your Honor First, does the indictment contain the elements of the charges that are alleged Second, does it fairly apprise the defendants of the charges against them. And third, does it enable them to plead double jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution The defense hasn't even raised an argument as to the third, and Your Honor already ruled on the second when you rejected their motion for a Bill of Particulars So all we are talking about here today is whether or not the indictment contains the elements of the charges that are alleged. And the only element that we are talking about here today is whether or not the indictment alleges as part of the quid pro quo agreement that there was an exchange of things of value in exchange for an official action. And the indictment does allege that there is an agreement to exchange things of value for official actions It does it at Paragraph 22 and it does it at Paragraph 111(c) Those allegations alleging that the defendants agreed to exchange official actions for things of value are sufficient That's game over on this motion, Your Honor

So what exactly are the defendants arguing here? When you look at their actual arguments, what they are arguing to Your Honor is essentially one of two different types of arguments Either a jury argument about whether or not the acts here, whether or not the evidence here is sufficient to be an official action, or a legal argument about whether or not the jury instructions should be one particular phrase or another particular phrase And how do you know that that's what they are doing, Your Honor? Well, when you look at the standard, they have acknowledged and they pay lip service to, well, we have to accept that all the allegations in the indictment are true But then when they describe the indictment's allegations or when they describe the evidence in this case, they only go halfway So for example, if you look at Paragraph 111 (c)(i), well, the defense says again and again, well, this is a case about arranging meetings, merely arranging meetings But the allegation in Paragraph 111(c)(i) is not simply arranging meetings The indictment is arranging meetings for JW and Virginia government officials who are subordinates of the Governor, quote, to discuss and promote Anatabloc. The next paragraph, 111(c)(ii), is not merely hosting events The allegation continues on in the second half, the half that the defense tries to ignore, says hosting and attending events, quote, to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of Anatabine and to promote Star Scientific's products to doctors for referral to their patients

Even when you go back to the general allegation at Paragraph 22 of the indictment, again, it is not just performing actions in the abstract, Your Honor It is performing actions, quote, on an as-needed basis as opportunities arose to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Anatabloc So what matters here is is the context in which a particular meeting or particular event or any particular action by a government official, the context in which that occurs

Then when you go to the way the defense describes the facts here, that brings it up yet again, that they are simply having a factual argument in front of Your Honor now when really the time to do that is in front of the jury So for example, they say it is not a governmental benefit They said it is not an exercise of governmental power But Your Honor, that's not the way that the government reads the indictment's allegations here A superior public official directing a subordinate whether or not to take a meeting or not, that is an exercise of governmental power Hosting an event on public property for the purpose of helping a particular business or another particular business, that is an exercise of governmental power And certainly, whether or not it was a governmental benefit, whether or not the actions that were taken were a benefit using the government to the individual that wanted that benefit is a factual one Whether or not Star Scientific and Mr Williams thought that those things were of benefit to them is a factual question to be decided by the jury, not a question on a motion to dismiss

So when you look at some of the ways that they characterize some of the officials acts that are alleged here, and again we don't even have to prove that an official act actually occurred, only that one was promised, but when you look at the ones that are alleged here and the way they describe them, for example, the defense says, "Mr ,McDonnell hosting a privately funded lunch event in his then home does not exercise the sovereign power of Virginia " That may be their argument but that's a factual argument, not a legal one Whether or not hosting an event on public property to benefit a particular business constitutes official action or not, that's a jury argument, not a legal one

Your Honor, they characterize the e-mail that set up the meeting that then deputy of the Secretary of Health and Human Services then showed up at a meeting the next morning on less than 12 hours' notice, they describe that factual scenario and then say nothing happened, "This really wasn't that big of a deal," is essentially what they are saying But the question of what the meaning or importance was or whether or not there was a benefit or exercise of governmental power, that's a factual question for the jury to decide

So when you look at the cases we have cited, of course the facts are different in the cases we have cited than the facts in any particular case That's frankly the point, Your Honor Because when you look at JEFFERSON and when you look at RING, what they are saying is that a meeting or a phone call or a letter or a trip can be official action in a particular set of circumstances So for example, in JEFFERSON, you had meetings and you had letters being written And it wasn't that a meeting or a letter is and is not official action categorically, it is whether or not they were in the particular context Similarly in RING, what you had is you had an e-mail being sent and a follow up with a phone call That's the action that we are actually talking about And yes, the context was the context of a visa application But the context here of Mr Williams wanting to have state university researchers conduct studies on his product or the context of wanting to use the state government to help further his product, that's the context in which a meeting or a speech or an event can be official action; not that it necessarily always is, but that it can be depending on the context

And so when they bring up the jury instructions in RING, Your Honor, again, I think it sort of proves our point in the sense that they are trying to say, Your Honor, "This is what the jury instruction should be " We can have that argument at the charge conference But whether or not one jury instruction or another jury instruction should be given given isn't a question for a motion to dismiss But even looking at the jury instructions they handed you, they said the jury instructions also say "official act" includes the exercise of both formal official influence such as a legislator's vote on legislation, an informal official influence such as a legislator's behind-the-scenes influence on other public officials in the legislative or executive branches

Your Honor, that is pretty much similar instruction to what was given in JEFFERSON But the point there is that courts time and time again have rejected arguments by defendants like these ones to categorically exclude a range of conduct from official actions

So time and time again, you see public officials come in and say, "Well, it should only be voting" or "it should only be something that's limited in duty" or "it has to be providing a contract to somebody " That's the only thing that can be an official act The courts say no, it depends on the context

I think, what's important on this, Your Honor, is that the defense in their reply brief essentially acknowledges that they are seeking a categorical exception for all meetings and all speeches by public officials They say that SUN-DIAMOND held that mere speeches or public appearances are never official acts Your Honor, the fact that they introduced the word "mere" before saying "mere speeches or public appearances" simply begs the question what's the difference between a mere speech and a speech that's more? And the difference is the context in which the speech happens So they go on to mischaracterize our argument, is that merely appearing at an event, meeting with a supporter, deciding whether to meet with a supporter, or asking a subordinate to meet with a supporter are all official acts that can support a federal bribery indictment Our argument isn't that they always are It is that they can be in context

So for example, a particular speech or particular meeting may not be an official act But when you put it in context it most certainly is For example, no one would argue that the President giving the State of the Union address is not an official act or that hosting the G-8 Summit is not an official act The question about whether or not a meeting or an event constitutes an official act depends upon on the circumstances surrounding that particular conduct Just as similarly, if a prosecutor were to sell the decision of whether to meet with a supervisor about whether or not to charge a case to a defense counsel, that would surely be an official act But the question is the context in which that meeting occurs And the context in which the meetings and the events and the other acts alleged occurred in this case is a context that would satisfy the definition of official act

And Your Honor, the defense points to a series of cases where courts have decided what are called pure questions of statutory construction and say, "Well, in some cases there is a pure question question of law, and the parties say, 'We all agree on the facts, and so you can go ahead and dismiss the case here because everybody agrees on the pertinent facts '" But that's a different question than whether or not the indictment charges the elements of the offense The cases that they point to are cases and circumstances such as the kidnapping statute categorically does not apply to parents of a child, and everybody agrees that this person is the parent of the child. So Your Honor, if that is the law that we are agreeing on, that it doesn't apply to parents, you can decide this right now Or another example is whether or not a particular statute applies to a U S person, whether they are a citizen or legal permanent resident That's a clear-cut question of statutory construction where the parties agree on the underlying facts

But here, Your Honor, we don't agree on the underlying facts We do not agree on whether or not it was a governmental benefit to host an event designed to help Mr Williams' business We do not agree on whether or not it was an exercise of governmental power to direct a subordinate to take a meeting to benefit Mr Williams

And we do not agree about whether or not it was an exercise of governmental power to allow Mr Williams to invite 25 people to an event at the Governor's Mansion that other people weren't necessarily getting to invite people to Whether or not those actions are governmental benefit or whether or not they exercise governmental power depends on the circumstances alleged

And Your Honor, the defense has said time and time again that this case would criminalize politics as we know it But when you look at UNITED STATES v RING, I think there is one particular helpful quote there that the Court should keep in mind Campaign contribution cases implicate First Amendment concerns And in RING, the D C Circuit said that "The First Amendment interest in giving hockey tickets to public officials is, at least compared to the interests in contributing to political campaigns, de minimis " Certainly, Your Honor, the interest in a politician lining their pockets with hundreds of thousands of dollars, vacations, Rolex, Ferrari, everything else that we have here, that certainly does not implicate First Amendment interests

Your Honor, unless you have additional questions, our pleading on the grand jury communications motion, we think, speaks for itself The defense didn't meet the standard, the high threshold that they have of satisfying the heavy burden to overcome the presumption of grand jury secrecy But unless Your Honor has additional questions --

THE COURT: I had one question I would ask you to comment on, the classification of these transactions, possibly, as donations A part of your brief indicated that there is a substantial difference between what we are talking about here and what was discussed in those campaign finance cases There was some mention briefly by your opponent before he sat down setting up that disagreement And I want you to comment on it because I'm sure he will when he gets back up.

MR. FAULCONER: Certainly, Your Honor None of the alleged quid in this case, none of the things of value, were campaign contributions or even purported campaign contributions It was the classic sort of non-campaign contribution graft that you have in bribery cases It was cash, loans, gifts, payments Nothing that was ever disclosed, nothing that was ever alleged to even be a campaign contribution And so, Your Honor, in those cases, I think what's important to remember is that what the Supreme Court, the context in which they made the statements that they did about ingratiation and access followed a discussion of the type of case they were talking about, right

So you have the Supreme Court saying, "Well, in some contexts you have an independent expenditure being spent on behalf of somebody but no coordination whatsoever; the politician doesn't even know the person, it is not even a campaign contribution, it is less than that " Or you have a context in which there is aggregate campaign contributions being contributed to other people, so again not even a direct campaign contribution And then the government raises the point in those cases, "Well, there is a potential appearance of corruption in those cases, there is a concern that there might be corruption, because there is a correlation between the access that's there, the ingratiation that might be present, and then the independent expenditures "

But then the Supreme Court says, "Ingratiation and access in any event are not corruption " They don't mean ingratiation and access are never present when there is corruption Of course, Your Honor, when there is corruption there's going to be ingratiation and access that comes along with it It is the difference between the necessity of that and the sufficiency of it Because in those cases, it is not a matter of whether or not access or ingratiation can never be present when there is corruption. The question is whether or not in those particular circumstances ingratiation and access might be present in the same context

But in those cases, Your Honor, it also goes on, the Supreme Court saying, "Classic quid pro quo corruption amounts to dollars for political favors." So each side can take a quote out of that case and say, "This is our case " Certainly everybody would agree that at a minimum the actions here were political favors We are not saying, Your Honor, that quid pro quo corruption jury instructions should simply say dollars for political favors and end there The question is whether or not it is a decision or action on a question matter and cause in controversy, which is whether or not the action or decision is furthering those particular matters or causes When you have situations where JEFFERSON says the matter and cause can be as broad as African trade issues, certainly the matter or cause of promoting Jonnie Williams' business or the matter or cause of helping him use the state government to help sell his product can be a sufficient matter or cause in context to constitute an official act

THE COURT: All right Thank you very much

MR FAULCONER: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Rebuttal on this issue?

MR. FRANCISCO: Thank you, Your Honor Let me address the issue that Your Honor just raised about the campaign contribution context The Supreme Court's recent First Amendment jurisprudence explicitly contrasts access and ingratiation on the one hand to dollars for favors on the other What it makes quite clear is that access and ingratiation does not constitute dollars for favors And that's why the government cannot cite a single case where, a single successful bribery prosecution where trading campaign contributions or money or anything else in exchange for access constitutes a violation of the federal bribery laws And in fact, the Eighth Circuit has squarely rejected that position in the RABBITT case when it said that merely introducing someone to influential persons without attempting to convince those influential persons to exercise power and favor of the alleged bribe maker does not qualify as an official act

In terms of the law as it distinguishes between bribery in the campaign context and bribery in the non-campaign context, in the Fourth Circuit, at least, there is no such distinction. In the HAIRSTON case, 46 F 3d 361, the Fourth Circuit made clear that the same quid pro quo standard applies in both contexts That being said, there is a debate out there as to whether in the campaign context there has to be more of an explicit quid pro quo It has to be more explicit than I'm giving this money in exchange for that access or that governmental power as we would argue But the problem is that in the campaign context it is often extraordinarily explicit We saw a recent example where the current Governor explicitly offered in exchange for $100,000 in campaign contributions "a private sit-down dinner with me and my family," "a private roundtable discussion with me and my staff " There is no question that it is an explicit quid pro quo of campaign donations in exchange for access

Again, if you look at most cards, as Your Honor probably has the benefit of not receiving these anymore because of your position, but others of us do, and what those cards say is, "If you donate $1,000 you get this amount of access If you donate $10,000, you get more access " And it proceeds up the chain. So the issue on which there is division amongst the courts is utterly irrelevant here because in most campaign contexts, the quid pro quo is express and explicit Campaign cash in exchange for access So if you accept the government's position, those offers are in fact violations of the federal bribery laws And the only thing that stands between those elected officials and the dock is prosecutorial discretion

There is a reason why they can't cite a single case that even comes close to standing for that proposition. Because it is truly breathtaking, and no

Court has ever even suggested that that would be the law

Your Honor, I would also like to address the government's argument that context matters Well, I agree that context matters And the way that context matters is that in exchange for donations or cash or whatever, the meeting or the reception has to involve an exercise of actual government power It can't simply be related to official government business Take, for example, SUN-DIAMOND The example that SUN-DIAMOND uses as not an official governmental action is a speech by the President on U S agricultural policy delivered to farmers That is what the Supreme Court says is not official action

In the VALDES case, the D.C Circuit decision, the D C Circuit en banc held that a police officer conducting searches of a police database in exchange for money was not official action under the federal bribery laws Well, what makes searching a police database and giving a speech on official policy to farmers not official action? The only thing that makes it not official action is because neither of those examples involve an exercise of the regulatory power of the state It is not whether Mr Williams perceived he did or did not get a benefit from attending a reception or having access to a meeting I can guarantee you that every political donor believes they are getting a benefit from the preferred access that comes with campaign contributions What matters is whether what the donor or gift giver is getting is an exercise of official government power, the regulatory power of the state, as set forth in every single one of the cases that the government cites Where access and ingratiation, unaccompanied by an actual exercise of government power in favor of the bribe giver, the regulatory power of the state, if they are not coupled together, then a meeting or a speech or giving lobbying advice or providing access does not rise to the level of official government act

I think the State of the Union Address was an interesting example The reason why the President's State of the Union Address can constitute official government action is because if you actually listen to the President's speech, what he is often doing is directing his cabinet officials to exercise power In the recent State of the Union Address, President Obama made clear that he was directing various agencies and departments to issue executive orders that would bind the rights or create rights in government contractors with respect to the minimum wage So yes, when the President gives a speech or when the President holds a meeting, or when the Governor gives a speech or the Governor holds a meeting or facilitates a meeting at which he is directing other governmental officials to engage in actual government power, then those meetings and those speeches can constitute official government action

But we don't have anything like that in the indictment All that we have are meetings and receptions unaccompanied by any promise to exercise government power or any promise to ask anyone else to exercise government power And that, Your Honor, is what we mean when we say "mere meetings" and "mere speeches," meetings and speeches unaccompanied by either any exercise of government power or request that another official exercise government power It doesn't matter whether or not Mr Williams thought he benefitted from these meetings What matters is whether Mr McDonnell directed any official within the government to do something, to exercise an official decision, an official regulatory decision, the regulatory power of the state to the benefit of Mr Williams and his company And there is absolutely no allegation of that anywhere here in this indictment That's why the government cannot cite a single case in support of its broad theory and why every case that even tangentially touches upon the issue, whether it is SUN-DIAMOND, whether it's RING, whether it's VALDES, or whether it's the RABBITT decision out of the Eighth Circuit, either directly contradicts or severely undercuts the government's position

I'd like to also address their argument about the standard for granting a motion to dismiss. They quite simply have misstated the standard. What the courts have made clear is that assuming that the facts alleged in the indictment are true, you need to look at the essential statement of facts and ask whether the essential statement of facts alleges a crime under the federal criminal laws So the three cases we cite, one of them involved kidnapping by a parent And what the Court did was it looked at the indictment The indictment alleged all of the elements of the crime It apprised the defendant of what was being charged And it made it abundantly clear what was needed or not needed to prevent double jeopardy from attaching

But what the Court said was that "If I look at the face of this indictment and I look at the law, I can tell that the things that are alleged in this indictment do not set forth a criminal offense " It is insufficient for the government simply to say, "We allege an official act " That's no different than simply parroting the statute, the statutory element And the Supreme Court, for example, in the HOOKER case, has made clear that simply parroting the statute, simply reciting the elements, is not enough You need to set forth sufficient facts, the sufficient factual allegations, to meet, assuming that they are accurate, each element of the indictment And one critical element of federal bribery law is that the defendant have agreed to perform or asked someone else to perform an official act

Here, if you accept all of the allegations in the indictment as true, the government never asserts that Mr McDonnell himself did anything, or asked anyone else to do anything that involved an exercise of actual government power The government says that he agreed to generally promote Anatabloc Well, that kind of vague allegation does not say what he agreed to do to promote Anatabloc Again, I would go back to the RING jury instructions where Judge Huvelle accurately set forth the law "Providing lobbying advice," as Judge Huvelle instructed, "even on a matter of official government policy," I'm not sure why there would be lobbying advice on anything else, "providing lobbying advice does not constitute an official act " Why? Because it doesn't exercise the actual regulatory power of the state So generically promoting, asserting at a high level of generality that promoting a product can't save the government from having to allege that Mr McDonnell agreed to engage in conduct to promote the product that would itself qualify as an official act

If, for example, Mr McDonnell simply agreed to promote it by saying, "Hey, you know, you ought to go talk to this lawyer in town who happens to be very good in dealing with the Tobacco Commission and that guy could give you great advice on how to deal with the Tobacco Commission," that would arguably be promoting Anatabloc But there is no way that that is an official act And the reason why is because it is not accompanied by an exercise or a promise to exercise the regulatory power of the state And every single decision that they cite, every single one they cite in their favor, involved a bribe receiver who promised to either himself exercise the regulatory power of the state or asked someone else to exercise the regulatory power of the state There is no allegation in this indictment that is even remotely comparable to that

The government truly would be treading new ground here with this broad prosecution There is no difference between the quo when it comes to campaign contributions and the quo otherwise, and if it is a quo to facilitate access in exchange for gifts, it is a prohibited quo to facilitate access in exchange for campaign contributions That truly would enormously empower the federal prosecutors to prosecute virtually any elected official in this country They would be saved only by exercises of prosecutorial discretion

We would respectfully urge that the Court reject that broad understanding of the law and dismiss Counts One through Eleven of the indictment Your Honor, if I may consult with my colleagues?

THE COURT: Sure

MR. FRANCISCO: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Thank you Do you all want to be heard on this severance issue?

MR. ASBILL: Yes, Your Honor Thank you, Your Honor Henry Asbill on behalf of Mr McDonnell Just to recap the state of the current record: Obviously, the Court has rejected our application to file ex parte affidavits from myself and from counsel for Ms McDonnell setting forth in more explicit detail what the testimony from each of them would be, particularly if there were a separate trial And the Court has refused to hold off a decision in this matter in terms of severance until closer to the trial, approximately fourteen days in advance of the trial And we we have asked for that relief as well so that we could more safely, without revealing trial strategy prematurely, give the Court more detail than exists in the affidavits that we have now filed under seal for appellate purposes

But that said, even with those applications or even with those Declarations, excuse me, not being in the record at this particular point in terms of the arguments we have today, I still think that we are entitled to severance based on the existing record I know the Court and the government have expressed concern about this sword versus shield argument, and suggested that Mr McDonnell bases his argument for severance in part on the marital communications privilege, asserting essentially that since he cannot disclose those privileges without his wife's consent, that he is using that as a sword. And we are also being accused of using her reluctance to disclose those communications as a shield But obviously, we do not control her decision to refuse to disclose marital privilege or to block any effort by the Governor to assert marital privilege So we are not using the sword and the shield We are using the sword, Ms McDonnell is using the shield And again, we do not control that

But we cannot file those affidavits without compromising and waiving marital privilege If we disclose it to anyone except for the Court, we waive marital privilege And we cannot disclose Mr McDonnell's affidavit -- Ms McDonnell's affidavit because that would prematurely give the government access to confidential trial strategy that is protected by the Sixth Amendment So that's where we are at this particular point Let's go to the existing record in terms of what is before the Court

We have alleged that Ms McDonnell has highly exculpatory and material information that she could provide in the defense of her husband And she has indicated that she will not take the stand in her own defense in a joint trial, and that she will block her husband from disclosing privileged marital communications in a joint trial; whereas, if she were separated, she would testify on his behalf and she would not attempt to block any marital communications We have not asked, the parties have not asked that Mr McDonnell's trial go first or Mr McDonnell's trial go second. We leave that up to the government We are not making any such request in terms of prioritizing the two trials if they were to be separated. But if the trials are jointly held, my client will be deprived of very material exculpatory information that there is no other source from which he can produce that

Now, I understand what the PARODI case, there are two key cases that the Court I'm sure has looked at, PARODI and SHUFORD We think this situation is much more analogous to the SHUFORD case than it is to the facts of the PARODI case But in any event, the PARODI case sets forth a number of tests that appear in the Fourth Circuit to govern these types of situations in terms of the analysis of the severance argument And we think that we can meet all of the PARODI tests even without accessing the Declarations that have now been filed ex parte under seal

The first is whether or not there is a bona fide need in Mr McDonnell's case for his wife's testimony I think if you look at the indictment itself, and certainly if you look at that in connection with any of the Rule 16 materials that have been produced thus far, it is absolutely clear that Ms McDonnell had, number one, much greater contact with Jonnie Williams than her husband did; and number two, that a lot of that contact was between her and Mr Williams alone, without Mr McDonnell or to our knowledge any other witnesses being present So she has information about the relationship and what happened, what was said, what was done, et cetera, that only she on behalf of the defense can testify to

Now, the government, as you well know, has given Mr Williams immunity in exchange for his testimony He is adverse to us obviously in this case The defense is not going to call him as a witness to try to prove Mr McDonnell's defense So that leaves Ms McDonnell as the only percipient defense witness who can corroborate Mr McDonnell's defense, which essentially is that he was never a participant or a member of any conspiracy to commit any criminal acts, much less political corruption acts, and that at all times, he operated in good faith in all of his conduct

Now, the only person again that can dispute what Mr Williams might say about his private conversations with Ms McDonnell is Ms McDonnell And we do not have access to her

Now, this case is going to turn down, it is going to turn into a credibility dispute at bottom, I'm sure, between Mr Williams and Mr McDonnell And we need to corroborate, we want to corroborate, we have a right to corroborate my client with respect to who is the more credible person, who is the only credible person in that debate over credibility If Mr Williams says something that we believe is untrue, I've got two ways of dealing with that One is putting my client on the stand, but I also could deal with it by putting other witnesses on the stand to contradict what Mr Williams has said And the only person I have available to do that is Ms McDonnell

Now, I think the SHUFORD case in the Fourth Circuit at 454 F 2d 772 makes clear that in a case where the guilt or innocence of the defendant hinges in large measure on the outcome of a credibility dispute, severance ought to be granted to ensure that that information can be put before the jury in the case And in SHUFORD, the denial of a severance was reversed by the Fourth Circuit because the denying the severance so tipped the scales against the defendant that he failed to receive a fair trial And the Fourth Circuit also said that a verdict based so heavily on less than the fully-available testimony where the missing testimony could with relative ease have been procured should not stand Obviously, the simple answer here in terms of procurement is to give us separate trials

Now, the substance in detail of Ms McDonnell's testimony is something that I can't go into without violating marital privilege or unsealing these affidavits But in any event, we know that it would or we are alleging that it would rebut many of the government's allegations that my client and his wife were acting in concert with Mr Williams and conspiring together to do so And her testimony would directly rebut the government's allegations that my client agreed or promised to use his office to improperly promote Star products, and it would rebut the government's allegations that she solicited certain items from Mr Williams, and it would rebut the government's allegations that her husband took steps to conceal the alleged scheme

reasonable probability that Ms McDonnell will testify for her husband if she has a separate trial? We make that representation. Her counsel makes that representation We intend to call her She intends to testify if she is separated. That's what the state of the record is at this point The SHUFORD case requires that there be a reasonable probability, not a guarantee, A, that we will call her, or B, that if we do, she will come forward and testify There only has to be a reasonable probability, not a guarantee And we can't guarantee that There is no way that we can guarantee what's going to happen two months from now in someone's life, that someone will be available; even if they are physically available, is somebody emotionally available, for example, or medically available? I don't know the answer to that question. And I can't guarantee anything except to tell you what my present intention is and to tell you what according to Mr Burck his client's present intention is

The government then questions this Why would Ms McDonnell be willing to testify in a severed trial but not in a joint trial? There is a very easy and simple answer to that question. It is because Ms McDonnell is additionally alone charged with obstruction. And for that reason, she has different strategic interests in a joint trial or a trial of this matter than her husband does, who is not charged with those obstruction offenses And to the extent she were to testify in a joint trial, and if she did do that and admit that, for example, she had communications with Mr Williams, irrelevant in this case, which she did not share with her husband, omitted to share with her husband, or alternatively she had communications or discussions with Mr Williams that she misled her husband about, then the very fact of that kind of testimony being presented in a trial in which she is also a defendant charged with obstruction would be detrimental to her defense

So there is a very logical reason why in a joint trial she does not want to testify and wants to block marital privilege, whereas in a severed trial, where she doesn't take the stand, she is not as concerned about those particular problems and she is willing to help vindicate the truth about what occurred in this matter if she is given a separate trial

What about the remaining PARODI factors and do they weigh in favor of severance? One of the factors is whether or not the government has impeachment evidence against Ms McDonnell that were she to testify by virtue of a severed trial, and come in and testify for her husband, they can impeach her credibility They have never laid out the evidence of what that impeachment would be Presumably, Jonnie Williams is the source of contrary information But we don't know the details of that But in any event, whatever impeachment they have, I don't think, is going to be necessarily outcome-determinative or that significant in terms of the way this shapes up for the Governor's argument, because obviously, we are contending that there are omissions and possible things that are misleading that occurred between this couple with respect to Jonnie Williams to begin with

The next factor the government focuses on is judicial economy It is not clear to me, I've been in many trials where people have been severed, and often, the government's claim of judicial economy is overstated and overblown Trailing defendants often have the charges against them dismissed. Trailing defendants often plead if cases are severed. So it is by no means clear that a severance itself will necessarily result in a replication of a five or six-week trial that would occur for a single defendant

But regardless, let's assume that's true, let's assume that's true and that judicial economy would be adversely impacted by separate trials Well, the bottom line is that judicial economy does not trump my client's Sixth Amendment right to present a defense and to have a fair trial If a fair trial requires severance, even at the expense of judicial economy, so be it

Now, what specifically can I share with you without getting into the details of the affidavit about again the exculpatory nature of the testimony were it to be available to us in a severed trial? And we have suggested looking at the allegations in the indictment, which Ms McDonnell would help us contest A, was there a conspiratorial agreement involving her husband? That, we say, she would help us defend against The details of the shopping trip to New York that is outlined in the indictment That she would help us defends against The personal loan of $50,000 to Ms McDonnell, can she help explain that in an exculpatory way for her husband? We suggest that she will The wedding gift to the daughter, Caitlin McDonnell, same The Rolex watch that was given to the Governor by her, the same And Ms McDonnell's transactions in the Star Scientific stock, again, the same She can testify about those transactions, those discussions with Mr Williams, put those into context in a way that is beneficial to my client and it may very well be beneficial to her, too, but that's not the point The point is that she has a right not to take the stand in her own defense if she thinks it is detrimental to her regardless of what she might say, regardless of the content of her testimony There is also a demeanor component to her testimony if she does not wish to take the stand in her trial, period.

To protect against my client's Sixth Amendment rights and to preserve the marital communications privilege, again, we say this case should be severed We have cited the CARONA case, which we think is directly on point. I understand the Court thinks it is not an explicit-enough opinion to give you as much guidance or helpful guidance as you would like But in any event, I think that the parallels in terms of the interests are very clear there And in that case, the Court, in order to assure itself that there was a factual information that supported severance, chose to accept the ex parte Declarations In any event, these are the principal arguments and the principal cases upon which we rely

In closing, I just want to say that every case for severance, this case and every single other one I've ever come across, is fact-specific And when it relates to credibility and the elusive quality of credibility, and that really is the debate in the case, and the distinctions in terms of credibility between Jonnie Williams and Bob M[illegible]nell are juxtaposed, the jury, in my view, and I hope in the Court's, should have access to all of the relevant and material evidence bearing on that issue of my client's credibility versus Mr Williams' credibility And if the jury is deprived of that information, in my view, Mr McDonnell will not get a fair trial Thank you very much, Your Honor

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, I can be brief on this as well We stand by counsel for Mr McDonnell's statements today and also in the brief which we joined. Ms McDonnell, as is set forth in my Declaration on her behalf, which is currently under seal and submitted ex parte, does have the current intention to testify on behalf of her husband if the trials were severed And she does have the current intention to waive the marital privilege if the trials are severed Her fundamental concern, as counsel to Mr McDonnell has put very well, is that there are other charges in this case against Ms McDonnell, specifically, obstruction of justice charges, which we believe she would be very much prejudiced with respect to if she were to testify in a joint trial about the matters that she has information with respect to concerning discussions between herself and her husband as well as between herself and Mr Jonnie Williams

So Your Honor, we again have the current intention, we can't, again, promise in two or three months' time there won't be a change in circumstance, but we foresee no reason why there would be a change in circumstance at this point that she would not be available and be willing to testify at a severed trial Thank you

THE COURT: All right Thank you Government?

MR DRY: Thank you, Your Honor Good morning In order to avoid the strong presumption in favor of joint trials, the defendants must show that the denial of the severance would result in a miscarriage of justice They failed to make the showing in this case.

The defendants have filed 84 pages of briefing related to their severance motion and provided the Court with nothing more than vague and conclusory assertions regarding the necessity of severance In their reply brief to the government's opposition to the ex parte filings, which is Docket 136, even they admitted that their legal pleadings merely provide, quote, an unadorned summary of the evidence But they now ask this Court to sever the trials based solely on that unadorned summary

Perhaps the strongest evidence that severance is not necessary in this case for them to get a fair trial is the fact that Mr McDonnell has refused to file the Declaration setting forth what Ms McDonnell would testify to Those Declarations do not contain marital-privileged communications But they still refused to file those with this Court

And that's a strategic decision in which they have basically told the Court, "Look, we really think Ms McDonnell is necessary for our defense We cannot get a fair trial without her coming up and hitting that witness stand in a separate trial But, you know, even though all we've got is vague and conclusory assertions, and there is a high likelihood we are going to lose this severance motion, our trial strategy is so important that we would rather risk that than actually saying what Ms McDonnell would hit the stand and say "

The defendants fail under this record to meet all four of the factors in PARODI As for the factors of bona fide need, substance of the testimony, exculpatory nature, we have no idea, Your Honor Basically, all they have done is put, by my count, about 11 sentences of very vague assertions and say, "This justifies severance " Mr Asbill, when he was up here, he was talking about the seven areas that Ms McDonnell would testify about That's from Page 19 in their brief But those aren't the seven areas Ms McDonnell would testify about Those are the seven areas that Mr McDonnell supposedly would testify about Because those are contained in the Asbill Declaration, which Mr Asbill was free to file without any fear of marital privilege, but decided not to

But even those show that the testimony isn't necessary First of all, they are basically blanket denials of the conspiracy Blanket denials are akin to a not guilty plea That doesn't get to the heart of the matter That doesn't show the Court, "Hey, that is really specific exculpatory evidence "

As far as what the denials Mr Asbill talked about, the conspiratorial agreement, vague, New York shopping trip, that's only part of the quid that's alleged in this case, Your Honor The $50,000 loan to Ms McDonnell, our understanding is that they only dispute the timing of that The wedding gift to the defendants' daughter, there is a witness that sits there -- I'm sorry, there is an e-mail in which Mr McDonnell himself is thanking Mr Williams for that The Star stock? The indictment sets forth lots of allegations about the Star stock and Mr McDonnell himself thanking Mr Williams -- congratulating Mr Williams on the stock price So we have no idea under this record exactly what they are talking about or how it would be exculpatory

As for the factor that there is a reasonable probability that Ms McDonnell would actually testify, Ms McDonnell's counsel has basically said it is likely that she would testify, that that's her present intention But still, Your Honor, it is inexplicable on this record on why she would do this Now, the latest supposition that came out in the reply brief, and now through Mr Burck here is, "Well, she is really worried about the obstruction charges." But their defense, Ms McDonnell's defense, is that "I can't be guilty because my husband can't be guilty " Those are the most serious charges in the indictment And now they are saying, "Well, this stuff would make us -- make Ms McDonnell look bad on the obstruction " But that's kind of incongruous, right? Because if you are a jury sitting there, aren't you going to be less likely to convict Ms McDonnell for obstructing something that's not even a crime? I mean, what sense does that make?

They also say, "Well, she doesn't want to be cross-examined in her own trial " But let's be clear about this If this Court severs the trial and Mr McDonnell is tried first, Ms McDonnell is going to be cross-examined regarding the same scope of cross-examination as she would be as if she testified in a joint trial And all of that testimony could be used against her We'll just put an agent on the stand and have them read the transcript, question and answer, question and answer So is the concern really well, just the theater of it, it is going to be less impactful? If that's the concern, that's not really a motivating factor for invoking your Fifth Amendment rights and risking your husband's conviction, which by the way would also risk your conviction It doesn't make any sense

Mr McDonnell's counsel started out by saying in their opening brief that they wanted the option of calling Ms McDonnell When the government pointed out, "Hey, that doesn't sound like it cuts it here," then it changed to, "Well, we have the present intention of calling her " And then most recently, as things stand now, "We intend on calling her " But if Ms McDonnell's testimony were truly critical to the defense, you would think that they wouldn't qualify it so heavily They would say things like "It is impossible for us to get a fair trial without Ms McDonnell, and we can think of very few or almost no situations in which we wouldn't call her, but if these things happen, then maybe we wouldn't " But as it stands now, "Our present intention is to call her," doesn't give the government and it shouldn't give this Court any assurance that her testimony is actually probable

Even assuming that the defendants in this case met each of the four PARODI factors, which they have not, the other considerations weigh in favor of the government as well First of all, the significance of the testimony Again, we have no idea really what they are claiming she would testify to The extent of the prejudice? We have no idea There's speculative allegations of prejudice, but at the end of the day, we are in the same position we were, Your Honor, when they filed their first brief and the government came to you and said, "Your Honor, we need to know more, we can't even respond to that " Nothing has changed That's exactly where we are today.

Judicial economy: In their opening brief, they are like, "Well, it could actually result in less trial days " I think they have come off of that But at the end of the day, the government agrees that if judicial economy was the only thing, and they had proven that Mr McDonnell could not get a fair trial but for severance, and it would be a miscarriage of justice to deny the severance, of course judicial economy would give way But they have made no such showing And in PARODI, PARODI made it clear that the consideration of judicial economy goes up in importance as the defendants' showing regarding the necessity of severance goes down

Now, the likelihood of impeachment: I was somewhat befuddled when Mr Asbill said that we failed to lay out how we would impeach Ms McDonnell's testimony Well, there is a very simple answer for that How could we? We have no idea what she would testify to under this record. But just under the facts as you have them, Ms McDonnell's testimony would be highly susceptible to impeachment First of all, she would be testifying for her husband Second of all, she would be testifying for her husband and she would have every incentive to exculpate him because that would inure to her benefit Third of all, she has been alleged to have obstructed justice, and as put forth in the indictment, she did it by writing after-the-fact notes to make it look like the deal was something different than it was Even their argument is, "Well, if she testified, she would look bad," which seems to suggest that she is impeachable

Now, they make a lot about SHUFORD, which predated PARODI by quite a bit And SHUFORD is distinguishable As an initial matter, in SHUFORD, both the moving defendant and the co-defendant according to the Fourth Circuit's opinion at 454 F 2d 778, quote, indicated quite clearly to the trial judge end quote that the co-defendant, quote, would testify if granted severance

Here, we simply don't have that level of assurance, Your Honor I don't know what, I can't understand the rationale for why they are saying, "Well, she will testify here but not here Yes, she has incentives on this point but not on this point "

But more to the point on SHUFORD, and PARODI actually, PARODI analyzed SHUFORD and it was equally applicable here It said in SHUFORD the issue centered on one simple fact, the instruction issue centered on one simple fact: The instructions given by the defendant to his employee for the bill of a single charge made against one individual on a single day That's not what this case is about This case is a multi-year conspiracy with multiple bribes being paid in exchange for an agreement to perform multiple acts If this was about a single meeting, and basically it was Mr McDonnell, Ms McDonnell, and Jonnie Williams at a single meeting, and Mr McDonnell's -- Mr Williams hit the stand and said, "This is what Mr McDonnell said to me," Mr McDonnell hit the stand and said, "This is what I said to Mr Williams," and the only other person that could say, "Yeah, at that single meeting, Mr McDonnell is right," well, maybe you would have an argument But that's not what is happening here Mr McDonnell had several meetings -- had several interactions with Mr McDonnell (sic) alone There were e-mails between just the two of them, multiple phone calls just between the two of them. There is no way that Ms McDonnell could hit the stand and exculpate Mr McDonnell on all of that So it is not like her testimony is absolutely essential for Mr McDonnell to get a fair trial

Your Honor, at the end of the day, the defense cannot argue that Ms McDonnell's testimony is absolutely necessary for a fair trial And at the same time say, "Our trial strategy is so important, we are willing to risk not having separate trials by not filing her Declaration." It doesn't make sense For those reasons, the Court should deny the motion to sever

THE COURT: All right Mr Asbill, brief rebuttal?

MR. ASBILL: Thank you, Your Honor I'll try to keep it brief To begin with, Ms McDonnell doesn't have to exculpate Mr McDonnell on every single thing that Mr Williams says in order for her testimony to be critical to his defense She just has to help exculpate him on enough things for the jury to conclude that there is a reasonable doubt in this case

Mr Dry further suggests that these Declarations don't say anything about marital privileges, and I'm making a representation to the Court that my Declaration contains marital-privileged information, which I cannot disclose to the Court without Ms McDonnell's and her attorney's consent

Her Declaration, that Mr Burck, actually, Mr Burck's Declaration for her, talks about trial strategy materials that we also cannot disclose unless there is consent here from both parties Mr Dry suggests that he would like to know more I understand he would like to know more And if it is necessary, I'm willing to tell him more But not three months in advance of the trial It is a very interesting juxtaposition Via the negotiation between the parties and now ordered by the Court, most of the relevant discovery information in this case, the critical discovery information, is not going to come to the defense until the middle of June But yet, they want our trial strategy information now That's not fair

I understand he thinks he is operating in the dark, and I'm doing the best I can here in terms of trying to preserve trial strategy, trying to preserve marital privilege, and trying to offer affidavits for the Court's review that will solidify and put in more context and be more explicit about trying to buttress our argument But I am hamstrung here in terms of trying to protect Sixth Amendment rights and trying to protect marital privilege, et cetera, and trying to do it in a fashion that doesn't adversely impact either defendant in an untimely way

With respect to the commitment to calling Ms McDonnell: I can't be more explicit than what I have said We intend to call her, she intends to step forward if she is called. Whether or not that situation ever changes, I can't predict the future I'm giving you straight-up the best I can at this particular moment in time in the life of this case about what the parties' intentions are, and those are genuine intentions And I'm representing that to the Court as an Officer of the Court And I think with that, I'll conclude, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Anything else?

MR. BURCK: No, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you

All right, let me explain to you what I'm going to do I'm going to resolve these issues, starting with severance and the motion to dismiss, swiftly And when I say swiftly, I mean tomorrow And get these larger issues off the board And just so you will know, I'm going to do this in a memorandum or order that will be close to bottom line And the reason for that is, obviously, I have to make certain assessments in order to come to conclusions on this motion to dismiss and motion to sever, and I don't want to do that in a more effusive way because it may prejudice the parties So what I will do is have kind of a bottom line, short form memo to give you the answer so you will know And then, of course, later on I'll do a complete memorandum of explanation

And we are going to have a flurry of activity, because on some of these other outstanding motions, I just held off on those until we dealt with this So those will be coming down swiftly as well The information about voir dire, all of those things, I'm going to make clear right away because now if in fact we are going forward, we have to get in serious preparation mode So just so you will know and be on the watch, these things will be coming down very, very swiftly Mr Asbill, you had something else?

MR. ASBILL: Yes, Your Honor I understand what you said I didn't know whether you wanted to hear argument of any kind on the voir dire requests that we have made

THE COURT: I think you all briefed it well I understand what it is that you want And I think I can resolve that without really any additional information But if you have something you just want to say

MR. ASBILL: Well, if you have any questions about the things we have suggested or why even if they are unusual that they might be appropriate in this case --

THE COURT: I understand I have had similar requests before But I think I'm able to resolve it

MR. ASBILL: I just want to emphasize, we are not looking for special treatment; we are looking for fair treatment under the unique facts and circumstances of this case That's what we are saying I just want to report to the Court that Mr Dry and I have been talking about a questionnaire, trying to get together on a joint questionnaire to the maximum extent possible, and we have exchanged drafts And tomorrow we are going to be discussing our respective drafts and trying to cooperate as much as we possibly can on that And obviously, your ultimate decisions on how the voir dire is going to go forward may impact the language in some of the instructions on our questionnaire

THE COURT: That's why I'm going to do it swiftly I will give you all a deadline on when to file your proposed questions for the questionnaire I intend to send out a questionnaire, obviously

MR. ASBILL: We will have that to you by the 29th I think that was on the schedule and that's what we anticipated doing

THE COURT: Right And then if you all get together and if it is a joint request, the better But if not, then I would have you all respond to each other's proposed questionnaire questions And then what happens is, I will draft the questionnaire, share it with you If what you have requested has not been a part of the questionnaire, then I've rejected it You have a record. Or if I fashion it differently, you will be able to see it and so your objections are clear But we need to get those out so we can get a deadline for the folks to get them in. All right?

MR ASBILL: Will those be mailed or are you going to do it in Court?

THE COURT: You want me to give you the whole thing now

MR ASBILL: Just part, Your Honor

THE COURT: I can tell you, they are going to be mailed. Our folks live in Mecklenburg and Stafford County and Emporia I'm not bringing them here to sit down and do this questionnaire I know you made that request, but it is not happening

MR ASBILL: We will adjust the questionnaire accordingly knowing that fact

THE COURT: All right Thank you all very much

MR. DRY: The United States is ready

MR. BROWNLEE: Mr McDonnell is ready to proceed.

MR. HAUSS: Ms McDonnell is ready to proceed

THE COURT: All right The way we will do this, the proponent of the witness, put the witness on and we will explore the witness's expertise and try to understand what he wants to say and his basis for it The government will have an opportunity to voir dire

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor May it please the Court, my name is John Brownlee I represent Bob McDonnell I think this is the first time I have had an opportunity to directly appear in front of Your Honor I want to tell you I greatly appreciate your time today, and it is a privilege to be here

If I can, Your Honor, I'd like to start with just a little bit of context and then call the witness to the stand, just so the Court has the context for this witness and what we understand to be part of some of the benefits that have flowed from the United States to the government's principal witness

THE COURT: That's not very helpful to me What I need to do is hear from the witness I understand. I read your papers I understand what you are about here and I just need to assess this witness

MR BROWNLEE: Very well, Your Honor Thank you We are prepared to proceed Mr White?

PETER H WHITE,

called as a witness by and on behalf of Defendant Robert F McDonnell, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Good afternoon, sir

A Good afternoon

Q Would you please state your name for the Court and spell your first and last name for the court reporter?

A Peter H White Common spelling, P-E-T-E-R, White, W-H-I-T-E

Q Mr White, have you been retained by Bob McDonnell to serve as an expert witness in this matter?

A Yes

Q All right And where are you currently employed, sir?

A I'm a partner at the law firm Schulte Roth & Zabel LLP in Washington, D C

Q How long have you been a licensed attorney?

A I've been a licensed attorney since 1992

Q Where were you admitted to practice law?

A In Virginia Since then I've been admitted in the District of Columbia and to a number of other District Courts, including this one, and Circuit Courts

THE COURT: Did you say '92 or '82?

THE WITNESS: 1992

THE COURT: All right

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Talk a little bit about your educational background. Where did you go to undergrad?

A I graduated from the University of Notre Dame with honors in 1985

Q And did you then attend law school?

A I did I attended the University of Virginia, graduated there in 1989

Q While at the University of Virginia Law School, did you receive any honors, sir?

A Yes I was selected to be on the Editorial Board of the Law Review for my second year My third year I was selected to be on the Managing Board of the Law Review, and graduated Order of the Coif

Q Thank you At your law firm in Washington, what type of law -- describe your practice for the Court

A My practice consists of a mix of white-collar matters and related civil matters, some of which are purely civil, some of which are regulatory matters brought by civil enforcement agencies So I do a lot of SEC enforcement matters and other federal regulatory enforcement defense But it is all defense-side litigation I also have a portion of my practice that focuses on purely civil litigation, usually class action litigation

Q How long have you worked at the law firm?

A Five years

Q And before you went to Schulte Roth, did you practice at other law firms?

A Yes I was at Hunton & Williams as a partner from 1999 through 2004, and then spent a year at Crowell & Moring in D.C , and then after that, my practice group moved to Mayer Brown in D.C.

Q What are the total number of years you have been in private practice?

A Fifteen.

Q Okay Now, before you did that, did you work in the government?

A Yes I should say fifteen years since I left the government I was, in private practice for a few years before that here in Richmond

Q Okay Tell the Court a little bit about your government experience

A Sure In 1992 -- I'm sorry, Your Honor, I was mistaken It was 1991 when I became a member of the Bar It was early 1991 In 1992 I went to the U S Attorney's Office in the District of Columbia I was there from April of 1992 to October of 1997 And then I went to the Eastern District of Virginia in the Alexandria Division from 1997 until late 1999

Q Can you give the Court an estimate of how many jury trials you have been either lead counsel or co-counsel on?

A I've been lead counsel in over 80, mostly in the D.C. U S Attorney's Office, but several in private practice and several in this district

Q Okay And if you through in the bench trials, how many would it be?

A Well, in D C there are a lot of bench trials, especially in misdemeanor court So it would be in the hundreds of bench trials But significant bench trials as well, probably 20

Q Now, prior to your going to the United States

Attorney's Office, what did you do professionally?

A I was -- so I graduated law school in 1989, came to clerk in this Court for Judge Williams, Richard L. Williams, 1989 to 1990, and then joined Hunton & Williams as an associate and was there until 1992, when I went to the U S Attorney's Office in D C.

Q While you were an Assistant U S Attorney, did you receive any awards?

A I did I received a Director's Award. I also received Sustained Superior Performance Awards and that sort of thing

Q Is it fair to say that you have been recognized as a leading litigator as a private practice attorney?

A Well, the lists that come out say so I'll leave that to other people to decide

Q Fair enough With regard to securities enforcement, with regard to class action securities and your practice in private practice, have you given speeches or did you routinely speak on subjects involving your practice as described to the Court?

A I routinely speak on panels at Bar Associations and client presentations and that sort of thing several times a year, almost always on securities enforcement, securities litigation, or white-collar criminal matters

Q It is fair to say you have also published articles in this same general area?

A I publish articles, I usually publish a couple a year on various white-collar or securities enforcement class action litigation topics

Q Let me turn your attention to your personal experience in handling securities class action lawsuits Can you inform the Court about how many you have personally handled or worked on personally in private practice?

A I haven't thought to add them all up, but it is very frequent that white-collar cases have securities class actions that go with them if there are publicly traded companies involved. It would be easily over a dozen I've been involved in either representing the publicly traded company or executives who have been sued or involved in the lawsuit

Q Okay Your law firm, as the group that you are in within your firm, they handle these similar types of cases, other partners in your firm; is that correct?

A Right My firm has a litigation group with 19 partners, and we probably do more securities class action litigation than just about anything else, fraud-related, civil litigation more than anything else

Q Is it fair so to say that very routinely, I think you said bi-weekly, you said you have partners meetings where you discuss their cases and your cases as well and you consult on various matters?

A That's been the case At Schulte Roth, twice a month we will have a partners meeting and talk about the cases that are going on. Interesting developments, tough challenges in those cases and that sort of thing It is very much a team effort

Q Very well I'd now like to shift to your experience with the type of stay motions that have been filed by the United States in two civil lawsuits in the Eastern District of Virginia that are the subject of your proposed testimony Can you let the Court know how many times or the instances in which while in private practice you have had direct involvement with these similar types of stays?

A Direct involvement, probably about a half dozen times People in my group as a whole have been involved in it a number of times It is not a frequent occurrence, but it is not uncommon And actually, because I was one of the first ones to be involved in one, I've gotten involved with other partners to help them deal with motions for stays when they have come up in their cases

Q Okay Let's turn to the proposed opinion for this matter for the Court Can you just give -- maybe the best way to start, if I can, is give the Court kind of a summary of what, subject to his order, you propose opining on with regard to the government's stay requests in these two civil cases

A As I understand it, what's allowed by your order, Your Honor, is potentially testimony about the benefit that may have flowed to the defendant from the government intervention in getting stays of civil litigation. So what I would propose to testify about that would be looking at it from a defense perspective, both for the individual and for the company, of which he is a significant stockholder, what are the benefits that accrue to that defendant and to that company from the fact of a stay And I can go through those if you like

Q When you say "the defendant," I want to make sure it is clear, you are talking about the defendant in the two civil cases, specifically, a gentleman by the name of Mr Jonnie Williams; is that correct?

A As I understand it, Mr Williams is going to be a witness here and he has an immunity deal with the United States And also, so that the benefits I will be talking about will be to the civil defendants, not to the criminal defendant here, because I understand there is no overlap between the criminal defendants here and the civil defendants there

Q Okay Now, let me, since we have kind of laid that out, let me touch base on a couple things for the process of forming your opinions One of the questions that the Court had in its order was methodology I'd like you to give the Court a sense of your methodology that will form the basis of your opinion, and then I want to talk about that a little bit So what is the methodology you would use or you have used to form the basis of your opinion with regard to the potential benefits that have flowed from the government's motion to stay the two civil cases to its witness, Mr Williams?

A What I did, Your Honor, was I approached it as I would approach it if I were being retained by the defense in those cases So the first thing I did was look at all the pleadings that have been filed in those civil cases, with particular focus on the complaints, because that's where the allegations are, and thought through, based on my experience, if I were representing individual or company or both, would I want a stay of that litigation for the benefit of my client, and then what benefits would flow from that So that was -- the methodology was very similar to what I would do in assessing a case as if I were hired by them, which I have been, to do that sort of case

Q Okay So with regard to the materials that you reviewed as part of this process, I think you mentioned the complaint; is that correct?

A Yes I only reviewed the -- I think there were final amended complaints in both cases I didn't review all the prior iterations, but the pending complaint at the time

Q Okay Did you have an opportunity to review the motions for stay and the orders from the government and the orders that were actually entered?

A Yes I reviewed the government's motions for intervention and their motion for a stay and the memoranda in support of both of those And the Court's orders, of course, on the motions for stay and motions for intervention.

Q Okay Now, let us walk through a little bit, if I can, the actual, your implementation of this methodology for these two civil cases First, I guess I answered my first question. How many cases were there that you looked at?

A There are two that I looked at, that I am aware of One is a securities class action that was filed here in the Richmond Division of the Eastern District of Virginia The other is a derivative action that was filed in the Alexandria Division.

Q All right And based on that review, what did you learn about the shareholder and securities litigation from your review of those documents?

A Well, they are in some ways very typical securities class action and derivative litigation for the sort of thing that I do, in that they involve allegations of fraudulent conduct by insiders at the company Those are the types of securities class actions and derivative cases that I have been involved in So what I did was review the type of allegations that were there, think about how one would defend that, think about what would be required to defend that, think about what sort of pleadings would be coming, what sort of discovery would be coming, what sort of process would occur in the time period leading up to potential disposition points, at motion to dismiss and summary judgment and ultimately trial

Q Okay And based on your review, is at least one of the defendants in each of the cases Mr Jonnie Williams?

A From the complaints I saw, Mr Williams is a named defendant in both cases

Q And his company, former company, Star Scientific?

A Star Scientific is the named defendant in both cases In the derivative case it is a nominal defendant because the lawsuit is filed on behalf of the company, so it is a nominal defendant only in that case

Q Now, you testified that you had a chance to review the stays that were requested; is that correct?

A I reviewed the papers in support of the motions for stay, yes

Q Okay And who requested those stays; do you know?

A The stays were requested by the United States, by the prosecutors who are handling this criminal case

Q Okay. And can you give the Court just briefly your understanding of the purpose for the stays as articulated by the United States?

A From those pleadings, they asked for stays so that the civil discovery process would not overtake the criminal discovery process, which, as the Court is well aware, is much more limited than civil discovery So as I understand their position in those pleadings, they didn't want civil discovery to go forward, which would allow access to more information than what was available in the criminal case

Q Okay Now, let us shift now to the effects of the stay And you have discussed your methodology, and now I want to kind of get what flowed from that methodology So is it fair to say that based upon your experience and knowledge and training that the filing of the stay, the request for the stay and the granting of the stay, did in fact benefit the defendants in those civil cases?

A Yes, definitely

Q Can you explain to the Court your understanding of what those benefits were and the extent of those benefits?

A There are two primary benefits One of them is the stays, as I understand it, are in effect at least through the end of this trial, and perhaps longer Whenever you are a civil defendant, it is all about money You are being sued for money If you have to pay money, later is always better than earlier There is that benefit There is an immediate cost that comes with defending these lawsuits They are extremely expensive to litigate because they tend to be very wide-ranging Factual discovery is very extensive inside your own camp, and then you have the actual discovery with your opponent as well Those type of expenses can be crippling sometimes for a company depending on their situation The other large benefit -- that's one category of benefits, not having to pay now and potentially not having to pay at all later depending on what happens in the interim.

The second category of benefits is one of the things that I find that boards of directors and clients in this space really worry the most about is uncertainty And litigating a case like that with a related criminal proceeding going on, where a defendant is going to be a critical witness, as I understand it, in that criminal proceeding, would add a layer of uncertainty that would be very difficult to manage if you are actively in civil discovery So I, if I were the lawyer for the defendants in that case, would be very much in favor of a stay because that uncertainty will be eliminated by the time it comes time for active litigation of that case and depositions and so on.

Q Let me talk a little bit about the legal fees or, as you talked about, defending one of these lawsuits Have you had an opportunity in your own experience to try to get a sense of -- let's talk about between the initiation of the lawsuit and through summary judgment, about how much that potentially could cost the defendants in defending just one of those cases?

A I have I have defended those and I've been co-counsel with other firms who have defended those

Q Okay And what is that, your best guess as to what that cost would be up through summary judgment?

A The cost to get through motions to dismiss, class certification, fact discovery, and summary judgment, is easily in the seven figures, even with the trimmest staffing you could give, to get through that point in the case And it very frequently is in the mid-seven figures So if I were to budget, say, the securities class action, which had a discovery schedule that ran through about now and a trial scheduled for September, my budget for discovery would be somewhere, probably three to five million dollars

Q Okay And is it fair to say that the derivative suit, you said there were two, but the derivative tends to trail, so the focus is on the --

A In my experience, a derivative suit tends to trail the securities class action because it in another way is derivative of that action The two would not require probably vigorous parallel track defenses, so my advice to the company or to anybody in this situation would be your main focus has to be the securities class action, because if we prevail in that you are going to be fine in the derivative case

Q Let me talk about Mr Williams It is your understanding that Mr Williams is the largest shareholder of the company; is that correct?

A That's what I understand

Q And as the largest shareholder of the company, when these benefits as you describe flow to the company from not having to defend these lawsuits, at least for a period of time, does that impact, is there a benefit that flows to the shareholder as well?

A Certainly, whenever the company doesn't have to spend a certain amount of money or have its people distracted by a lawsuit that requires their time and attention, it is a benefit to that company, and therefore, a benefit to its shareholders They are the equity holders So whatever benefits the company would benefit them.

There is an additional benefit to Mr Williams directly, as he is a defendant in both of those cases, in that he is not going to be subject to a civil deposition, which typically a much broader range of topics are available, and rules He won't be subject to that prior to his criminal testimony So there is a significant benefit to him there as well in that the criminal testimony will come first, and that baseline will be known at the time the defense of his deposition, say, in the civil case occurs

Q Now, are you aware, Mr White, that in one of the cases there was a Scheduling Order entered that would have had discovery cutoff of July 7th of this year? So earlier this week?

A I saw that, yes

Q Okay And if that had been followed, which it traditionally is in this -- in the Eastern District of Virginia, fair to say that Mr Williams would have been subjected to a civil deposition; is that correct?

A Certainly

Q Okay You touched on it a little bit, but why wouldn't Mr Williams want to face that civil deposition in light of the fact that he is also a witness for the government in a criminal case; what would be the benefit to him by being able to avoid that?

A As his civil lawyer, I would advise him the fewer times you have to testify about anything, the better off you are The criminal case, it appears, is going to occur no matter what As his civil lawyer, I would want to have that testimony as a baseline before he testified in the civil case Because whenever someone is testifying multiple times, you run a risk that they will say something inconsistent, and that can cause problems for you in litigating the case So I would want that baseline set, if I was his lawyer, before I had to defend his deposition and actively defend the civil case

Q If you were the company's lawyer, would you want that deposition stayed as well?

A Definitely so

Q Okay Now, at the time the motion was filed and the stay was granted, is it your understanding that Mr Williams was the subject of a securities violation investigation by the U S Attorney's Office?

A At the time it was filed, it is my understanding that he was

Q Okay And as part of some of the documents you reviewed for your testimony here today, you now understand that he has received full transactional immunity for all of that security violation investigation; is that correct?

A I did see a letter signed by the U S Attorney's

Office and the Public Integrity Section that gave him transactional immunity for, it appears, for any securities violations, yes

Q Okay Now, let me talk a little bit about some of your experience, because I want to make sure the Court understands that your testimony would be in the context of your experience in other matters With regard to the harm that could have inured to Mr Williams in having to -- in being subjected to a civil deposition prior to testifying for the United States, have you seen that in other cases before, where individuals have been kind of damaged in a civil deposition prior to testifying?

A It has happened Certainly, I've seen, I haven't personally been involved in a case where -- I take that back I have been involved in a case where someone was deposed civilly prior to being part of a criminal trial And it certainly makes it more difficult for whoever is putting that person on in the criminal trial, be it the prosecution or defense I have also seen cases where witnesses have avoided civil deposition at the request of the United States, as they did here, where I felt that that definitely inured to the benefit of the United States and of that defendant

Q Okay And just to wrap this part of this up, and I appreciate the Court's time today, with regard to the company, is it your experience that many times with these civil types of securities cases, class action cases, that members of the board and some of the executives, they, too, must retain counsel?

A It is frequently the case when there are allegations of misconduct by individuals that their company and those individuals will need separate counsel. That, of course, from the company's perspective, ratchets up the legal fees, because you've got potentially multiple law firms in a case like this that would have to be involved representing the different stakeholders

Q And so that is another benefit by stay that would go to the company by allowing it to delay the case indefinitely

A Benefit to the company, not to Mr Williams, but a benefit to the company not having to potentially pay for other law firms in addition to the one it hires

Q As the largest single shareholder of Star, when benefits flow to the company, what's your opinion as to how those benefits would flow to him as well?

A Anything that benefits the company certainly benefits its shareholders

Q Let me just touch on a couple last points with regard to the permanency of this You understand that this is a temporary stay pending resolution of the pending criminal case before Judge Spencer And I believe in the government's papers, they noted that they anticipated that this would be a delay of about eight months What has been your experience in handling these securities litigations of that delay and how that can in fact affect a case, perhaps permanently?

A Well, a couple of things First off, it is difficult to tell when these things are going to end I think every one that I have ever been involved in has lasted longer than anyone expected it to I'm not saying that's going to happen here or that I don't take the government at its word, but it always tends somehow to be longer than expected. And there's a lot of benefits that can occur in the interim. I've been in cases where the law has had a favorable turn or witnesses' recollections have failed. This is a relatively short delay So that, it seems to me, is unlikely here if it stays at eight months But I have had cases that were delayed several years, and that becomes a real challenge

Q In your previous testimony you talked about these risk factors and the fact that there is a delay, whether it is eight months or longer, those benefits that flow to your client as you did your methodology are permanent; is that correct?

A Yes I mean, not having to face defending the civil lawsuits with a criminal proceeding out there, that is a huge piece of uncertainty in the middle of your civil lawsuit, that's resolved, whether it is eight months or eight years before you start litigating it And that, to me, as I view these things, is a huge benefit to anyone defending that sort of lawsuit, taking out that level of uncertainty

Q Okay, thank you

MR. BROWNLEE: Your Honor, at this time we would ultimately ask that he be permitted, be classified as an expert in these fields and be permitted to testify We recognize the government may have some questions. We appreciate your time

THE COURT: Thank you very much Government?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR DRY:

Q Good afternoon, Mr White

A Good afternoon, Mr Dry

Q Mr White, I just want to confirm exactly what opinion you are testifying to And it sounded to me like your testimony is going to be limited to two primary benefits; is that accurate?

A Well, my testimony is going to be whatever Judge Spencer allows me to testify to So --

Q Let's do it this way Your proposed testimony

A As I understand what's at issue here today, yes

Q The first one is that whenever civil defendants, when there is ever a lawsuit, as a civil defendant you want delay because discovery can be very expensive, correct?

A No, I wouldn't say that. There are many times when civil defendants want an active trial schedule and want it resolved. This would not be one of those cases, in my opinion

Q In your opinion

A So with this type of case, yes, there is a benefit to delay.

Q And what kind of cases would someone want to go ahead and go through the discovery process?

A Oh, in a case, for example, where there are intellectual property rights at risk and there are potential corporate life and death type issues, many times the defendant will want to have that go forward as quickly as possible

Q Okay And on that point, I think you said that it was -- it could be very expensive. You said it could be very expensive, the discovery itself, correct?

A That could have been what I said It wouldn't surprise me if I said that But let me tell you, it would be very expensive

Q It would be.

A The discovery process in this case would be very expensive, yes

Q You put some figures out there I think you said three to five million dollars

A Yes That's my -- that's what I would budget the legal fees and expenses to be through summary judgment for defending these cases

Q Does that depend on jurisdiction?

A It can, sure In this jurisdiction, it moves quickly, so it tends to be a little bit less in that regard But it also tends to be very stacked. If it is moving quickly, you've got a lot of things going at once because you have class certification, you have experts you need for that, experts for trial, you have your fact witnesses, and all of that is going to be happening at the same time So it does matter based on jurisdiction, and a shorter schedule does make it less expensive, but the steps in the litigation are exactly the same almost no matter where it is filed.

Q When you are talking about this jurisdiction, you are basing that on your experience in litigating these kinds of matters in this jurisdiction?

A I've not litigated a securities class action in the Eastern District of Virginia I've litigated a lot of matters in the Eastern District of Virginia, so it is based on that experience and the experience of others who I've been partners with who have done securities class action cases in the Eastern District of Virginia

Q We will get to the methodology in a second, but let's go to the second primary benefit Walk me through this uncertainty opinion you want to give Just briefly tell me exactly what you mean

A It is the exact flipside of what you wanted in getting a stay What you wanted in getting a stay was not to have a deposition before he testifies, because that adds a level of uncertainty to your process I understand exactly why you would want that as a lawyer On the flipside, the civil defendant doesn't want to -- it wants to have certainty before that case goes forward So it is the same; it is the flipside of the same reason. What you want, and what I've found that boards of directors and executives want, is they want to eliminate as much of the uncertainty around litigation as they can, because it is a foreign thing for them. And if you can eliminate the uncertainty of what will ultimately happen in the criminal case, what will happen in the testimony that's given in that case by a critical defendant in the other case, if that happens before, it is much easier to manage what the process is

Q So you are saying that there is no instance that you can think of in which a company would want the criminal case to go after the civil case because they wouldn't have to have their CEO under oath in a federal criminal matter before the civil case was litigated?

A I'm not sure I'm following you there

Q It sounds to me like what you are saying is, look, they don't want certainty, right?

A They don't want uncertainty

Q They don't want uncertainty Sorry In this case, they would want the criminal matter to go first so that they don't have the uncertainty of what their CEO is going to say before he is civilly deposed

A I think I'm following you. If I am following you correctly, yes

Q Okay You can think of no other situations in which they would want the civil matter to be litigated before the criminal one

A I can't imagine a circumstance in which someone would want this civil matter to be litigated before this criminal matter

Q I'm asking generally, sir

A If I think about cases other than this, is there ever a circumstance in which you would want the civil case to go first? Certainly there would be If you have a different situation Let's say I am representing, and this has happened to me several times, I am representing an executive with a publicly traded company, and that person is under a criminal investigation, and there is a criminal indictment going on at the same time there is a civil securities class action going on, I as the criminal defendant would want the civil discovery to go forward not because I want my client deposed, because I don't want my client deposed What I want is all the other depositions and all the other discovery, that you rightly point out in your motion is broader than what you get in a criminal case. So yes, the answer to your question is yes, there are circumstances

But here, you don't have identity between the defendant in the criminal case and the defendant in the civil case The only time I can think that it would be an advantage is when you had identity between the criminal defendant and the civil defendant

Q Let me -- how many times have you been qualified to testify as an expert?

A Never

Q Okay From your experience as an attorney, are you aware of any attorney in a criminal case that has testified as an expert about the values of civil stays?

A Am I aware of any attorney in a criminal case -- I know I heard of someone being retained for that before, but I don't believe they testified So I don't know that that's happened.

Q Okay And you are not basing any of your opinions on any kind of scientific method, right?

A Well, I don't know, if you consider the practice of law scientific, then yes If you consider it not, then no

Q Are you basing your opinions on a scientific method, in other words, a real scientific method in which you collect data and then you analyze the data, it is subject to peer review studies, that kind of scientific method?

A It depends on what you consider the practice of law I've been doing it for 25 years The practice of law, there has been a lot of data collected over the last 25 years That all informs my opinion. Does that make it scientific? Maybe not in the sense you are talking about where there's columns of numbers But are there columns of numbers in what I consider the expense of it would be? Absolutely

Q Let's do it this way How many peer-reviewed articles have you written in which you have opined about the value of civil stay discoveries in criminal matters?

A I don't think there are peer-reviewed articles in our line of work, Mr Dry

Q Okay Now, so let's talk about your methodology a little bit You reviewed, I believe you said that you reviewed the civil complaints?

A Yes, sir

Q In those two cases

A Right

Q And can you tell me which two cases those are, what the names are?

A Well, I think they have consolidated case names which aren't terribly meaningful I would have to look at the captions to see But the one was filed, the securities class action was the one filed here in the Richmond Division, that I believe is assigned to Judge Gibney, and the other is the derivative action filed in the Alexandria Division assigned to Judge Trenga

Q Do you know any plaintiff's name after reviewing all this stuff?

A I don't remember the lead plaintiff's name Frankly, they are not the most relevant party to the lawsuit

Q You reviewed the government's motions to intervene and stay the discovery?

A I did.

Q You reviewed the courts's orders that stayed the discovery?

A Yes

Q And just because the government moves to intervene doesn't mean that the Court has to grant the intervention motion, right?

A Absolutely not, although they typically win. You have a lot better chance of winning if you are a defendant, a stay, if the government intervenes in my experience by far

Q Is your opinion about the value of the government's intervention or the value of the actual stay itself?

A I suppose it would be both If you want a stay, and as I said, I believe anyone would defending these cases, there would be value to the government helping you to get the stay that some people may not understand, but that is definitely the case in my experience by far That's a huge game changer for getting the stay And there is also value from having the stay for a period of time, whoever moves for it

Q Okay You were a prosecutor for seven years?

A Seven-and-a-half, yes

Q I believe in the pleadings, part of the basis for your opinion is experience as a prosecutor; is that right?

A Not particularly on this point, but on the other aspects of what I was going to be testifying to which have already been eliminated by the Court Yes

Q You were in the D.C U S Attorney's Office from 1992 through 1999?

A 1997

Q I'm sorry 1997 You weren't involved in any of these kinds of securities fraud, derivative actions, anything like that while you were a prosecutor in D C , right?

A Probably 80 percent of my time in Superior Court doing drugs and guns and that kind of cases, homicides

Q Fair enough. And in fact, you didn't do any white-collar prosecutions while you were in D C , right?

A Not a single one

Q Okay You were a prosecutor in EDVA from 1997 through 1999?

A Yes, sir

Q During that time, you prosecuted drug and gun cases almost exclusively, right?

A No, I did, I initially was in the Narcotics Section, and I certainly did, obviously, mostly drugs and guns and murders and RICO cases when I was there But at the end, I'm not sure for how long, six months or a year maybe, I was in the Major Crimes Section, which involved white-collar cases as well

Q Okay Exactly which white-collar cases?

A Well, some of them, most of them were grand jury matters that never became public, so I'm not actually at liberty to say

Q Okay So were any of those involving securities fraud?

A Yes, one of them did. It did not ultimately get charged.

Q It never got charged?

A No I never tried a white-collar case while I was with the government, if that's your question, Mr Dry I investigated some I never indicted one Some were indicted subsequently after I left

Q How much of your current work is criminal versus civil?

A It varies, obviously I would say at least 75 percent is criminal and related criminal matters, probably 80 percent -- related civil matters So most of the civil work I do is related to criminal investigations, so similar to this situation in some ways, but usually it is the case where the criminal defendant and civil defendant are the same entity or person

Q And when you say -- I apologize, I should have distinguished this When I say civil, I'm not talking SEC I'm talking pure civil

A Okay

Q So what percentage of your representation is pure civil, not regulatory, not SEC, pure civil?

A Sure I would say that runs between 25 and 4 percent depending on the time

Q Okay And in those matters, do you normally represent individuals or companies?

A Both. It is a mix

Q What percentage of your practice is representing individual versus companies?

A Half and half, I'd say

Q Okay

A By the way, on the pure civil stuff, it is almost all companies So the percentage that is purely civil not related to any criminal matter, that's not all companies But in the civil cases that are civil classes, for example, that are related to criminal investigations, many times that's individuals Is that helpful?

Q Okay When you are hired to represent individuals, how do those -- how are you typically hired? Does somebody call you in the phone book?

A That doesn't happen very often, but it happens some It typically isn't the best clients, but that's okay It does happen some

Q How do you typically get these retained?

A I actually wonder about that a fair amount It kind of keeps coming, usually from other people that you know who have been satisfied with your work, or from people who have seen you speak. I've been hired that way many times

People who have read things you have written.

Q Are you ever referred to by other attorneys?

A Definitely Other attorneys are a big part of my referral network, Both for institutions and for individuals

Q In fact, with individuals it is typical for one attorney or one law firm to represent the company, right?

A Sure

Q And then refer to other attorneys the individual executive clients

A Because of potential conflicts of interest, certainly that does happen I've gotten a number of cases that way, yes

Q And have you ever -- I'm sorry, I think you said you were retained in this matter Are you being paid for your testimony?

A Yes

Q And what is the hourly rate that you are charging?

A I would have to look back at the retainer I think it is $940 an hour, my standard hourly rate

Q And how much time have you put into this matter?

A I would have to look back and see, Mr Dry I'd hate to give you a figure that's wrong

Q Ballpark.

A Before today, six hours, seven hours maybe

Q Six or seven hours And that was comprised of reviewing the pleadings we have talked about earlier?

A And a few other pleadings, and obviously the indictment here and the pleadings regarding the potential expert testimony here

Q So when you say "a few other pleadings," any other pleadings related to what we are talking about today?

A The only ones that are potentially related is there was some PSLRA stay pleadings filed in the derivative action, which is a different kind of stay, of course, but there were some orders dealing with that in connection with the stay that you requested. So I reviewed those as well I also reviewed whatever answers were filed by the company and by Mr Williams, I believe

Q Did you review all the other complaints? There's five other lawsuits out there Did you review those?

A I did not I only reviewed the two consolidated, I believe they were characterized as consolidated complaints If there are other lawsuits out there, Mr Dry, I don't know anything about those

Q If there were other lawsuits and discovery was going forward on those, that would change the benefit analysis, right?

A It certainly could, yes

Q Because if there is discovery going on in other lawsuits, basically, the financial benefit of responding in discovery in this lawsuit diminishes, right?

A I don't know that it would diminish, because you would still have the same -- once this lawsuit gets going it is going to have its own required life If some of those other lawsuits resolved issues that are at issue in this lawsuit, that could make a difference

Q Let's talk about documentary discovery You said that's a huge expense, right? I think you testified to that

A Sure In a lawsuit like this, it can be very, very expensive

Q So if there is another lawsuit and they are producing documents in that lawsuit, it is going to be less expensive for the second lawsuit, right?

A You would certainly try to capitalize on that But again, it would depend on what the issues are in that lawsuit and whether you get the same scope of discovery, which is almost never the case But certainly that could minimize the second lawsuit

Q Have you ever been referred clients by the law firm Jones Day?

A By Jones Day? One I can think of

Q How about Holland & Knight?

A I compete with both of those firms very frequently

I think this is the first thing I've ever been referred by Holland & Knight, which really isn't a representation

Q How about Quinn Emanuel?

A I've never been referred anything by Quinn Emanuel

Q Let's talk a little bit about your representation of publicly traded companies When you are retained to represent publicly traded companies, who normally pays your bills?

A The company Always

Q The company always pays your bills

A In my experience, yes

Q And when you are hired to represent individuals, individual executives at publicly traded companies, who typically pays your bills?

A Typically, the company, although that can vary Sometimes, as a matter of fact, I've been involved with litigation with companies about whether they were required to advance legal fees in cases similar to this

Q But typically it is the company, right?

A Typically it is the company Not always

Q Well, what percentage?

A Of my cases where I represent an individual, is it paid for by the company?

Q Yes

MR. BROWNLEE: I object I think we are way outside the direct examination

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Probably I've never thought about it, Mr Dry, so it is a bit of a guess, but I would say 75, 80 percent

BY MR. DRY:

Q Okay And when you are representing -- you have represented individuals that were executives of publicly traded companies in civil securities litigation; is that true or false?

A That's true, yes

Q Okay. And when you are representing those individuals, how much of the discovery cost do those individuals typically bear?

A You mean compared to the company itself?

Q Yes

A The company itself has the lion's share of that But it is not inexpensive to represent individuals as well, because if I can explain, the company has control typically of most of the documents if not all of them, so the company bears the lion's share of that But if you are representing an individual, you have to have access to all of the -- and you have to know all the documents that that individual is involved with that are relevant to the claims against that individual So it is not cheap to represent an individual, even if you are not the one producing the documents

Q I'm sorry, I asked the question poorly Okay, in a civil lawsuit, when you are producing discovery to the other side, that's expensive, right?

A Sure Yes

Q And if you are a publicly traded company, you are typically going to bear that cost, correct?

A Yes

Q The individual executives typically are not going to bear that cost

A That's right

Q Not directly

Q I'm sorry, not directly?

A If they are a large shareholder, indirectly, anything that affects the company affects them. But they are not directly taking that cost of most document discovery, I agree

Q Of most document discovery So when you are saying it is really expensive to represent an individual, you are not talking about the cost of discovery, right?

A Well, discovery includes depositions Yes, I am. By the way, you not only have to be at your client's deposition; you have to be at all of the depositions of people relevant to your client It can be very expensive to represent an individual, yes

Q But the individuals aren't paying your bills, right?

A Typically, no

Q Okay

A Typically, the company is

Q Let's talk about that a little bit Don't many companies have D&O policies, director and officer liability policies?

A Many do, yes Most do, as a matter of fact

Q In fact, 98 percent of all publicly traded companies have D&O policies, right?

A It should be a hundred I don't know what the other two percent is doing

Q Absolutely, I agree with you A D&O policy, I'm not an expert on this, so maybe you can educate me, a D&O policy basically provides that insurance so that litigation expenses are actually paid for by an insurance company rather than the company itself for the executives of the company; is that right?

A Well, in my experience, that varies That's the concept But typically, what we are talking about is fraud cases, and many times in fraud cases, if fraud allegations are proven, there is a clawback provision, even if they are advanced, that the insurance company can get those back. So there's substantial expense risk even if it is covered up front by the insurance company when you've got fraud allegations Moreover, in many of these cases, the potential liability far exceeds the director and officer liability limits

Q Understood But as a general matter, D&O policies provide coverage to companies for the payment of legal fees, including discovery, correct?

A As a general matter, that's one of the things they can cover I know in my experience, corporate executives and boards of directors, even in places where they feel they have sufficient D&O insurance, are very concerned about the expenses of these cases It is not anything close to a zero sum game Because they've got continuing relationships with their carriers and their loss experience is relevant to dealing with those people on a going forward basis

Q What's a typical D&O policy limit for a publicly traded company?

A Oh, that varies widely Mr Dry, I have to say, I'm not an expert on that

Q Are we talking a hundred thousand dollars?

A I would guess it is higher than that, but I'm not an expert in that I don't do insurance work.

Q You're not an expert in how D&O policies could have affected the payment of discovery costs in this case?

A I mean, I know how that works, but without knowing what the limits of the policy are, I really wouldn't be able to tell you much about it I know that even in -- I've represented publicly traded companies that have policies, that have liability policies in the hundreds of millions of dollars And I know even in those cases, they are very concerned about the expenses that are incurred in dealing with securities class actions like this I don't pretend to be an expert on D&O policies, but I do know in my experience that whether or not someone has a D&O policy, the cost of defending a lawsuit like this would be a very significant matter for an executive team and a Board of Directors.

Q Have you reviewed any publicly available documents that could have informed your judgment about whether Star Scientific was picking up the tab for these litigation costs?

A Have I reviewed their public filings or anything like that? No I only reviewed the complaint, obviously, which names them.

Q I'm handing the witness Government Exhibit 3 Do you recognize what this is, sir?

A Form 10-Q for Star Scientific. That's an SEC, Securities and Exchange Commission-filed quarterly document, the 10-Q.

Q I want to show you this because it goes to the point that you made a second ago that companies, you know, have insurance but they still remain concerned, right?

A Okay

Q Page 22 of the document, sir

A Sure Okay, I'm there

Q Second paragraph. Could you read, starting with, in the middle of it, about the fifth line, "We also expect to continue to incur legal expenses "

A Okay Do you want me to read that out loud?

Q I would

A "We also expect to continue to incur legal expenses and related cash demands in connection with the civil actions and other matters discussed under Part II-Legal Proceedings of this report, and such expenses and cash demands relating to those matters may be material "

Q Then the next line, sir After that one you can stop.

A "We expect that much of the cost related to the ongoing securities class action and derivative actions discussed in Part II of this report will be covered by insurance but cannot provide any assurances with respect to the outcome of the pending actions or action yet to arise, including that such claims will not exceed the limits of our insurance policies "

Q Doesn't that sound like Star Scientific is actually insured for the litigation discovery expenses at least; they are just saying outcome-wise, we can't say, we might lose a lot of money but we are not going to incur litigation costs?

A It sounds like something they are really very worried about; it is material to the company or they wouldn't put it in the 10-Q. As far as insurance, they say explicitly, I believe, that they believe that the ongoing costs will be covered by insurance Of course, the ongoing costs will be less during this time period because they are not actually defending them.

Q I'm glad you brought that up. Did you look at the docket in these two matters?

A I did

Q Okay In your opinion, I think you said that it was a stay of litigation Is it actually a stay of litigation or is it a stay of discovery?

A I would have to look at the actual language Because in one of the two, Mr Dry, there was, the one that had the PSLRA stay, there was a motion to dismiss that was already filed. That was litigated and even argued And then ultimately, the last order I saw was an order holding that in abeyance after argument, which I believe was in late February

Q So there's still things going on in the cases, correct?

A I don't think,there are right now It has been a while since I looked at the docket sheet But certainly not the level of activity that there would have been without the stay Nothing close

Q And the government didn't ask to stay the cases; it asked to stay the discovery, correct?

A Yes I think that's right

MR DRY: Just a moment, Your Honor, please.

THE COURT: Sure

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

BY MR. DRY:

Q I think you testified about the benefit to Mr Williams of delaying his deposition. That's a benefit to him, correct?

A I think it definitely is, yes

Q But you acknowledge that Mr Williams is going to testify in open court, right, in the criminal case?

A I guess that's your decision, Mr Dry But that's my understanding of what will happen, yes

Q Okay And so isn't it true that the plaintiffs themselves are going to be able to get the transcript of that and use that against Mr Williams at a subsequent deposition?

A Definitely

Q And so you are saying that despite all of that, in your expert opinion; that Mr Williams is benefitting from the deposition being delayed until after he testifies in this federal criminal case

A Definitely

Q And you can think of no situations in which Mr Williams would rather be deposed first and then testify later?

A I can't get inside his head I can't think of a reason, as a lawyer for people who face situations like he does now, that I would advise that course of action

Q Why?

A Because I think there is a much greater benefit to having a criminal case out of the way first

Q Why?

A Because you have the authority to prosecute him for perjury or for false statement if there are contradictions between the two, and if he goes to the civil discovery first, he runs the risk of upsetting the United States Attorney And upsetting the United States Attorney is a problem for someone who is a defendant

Q But he would risk being prosecuted for perjury if he lied at a subsequent deposition, right?

A He would. It has almost never happened, though

Q Okay So as a benefit, this is all about the timing of the deposition, right? Can you put a value on that?

A It is partly about the timing Let me explain that a little bit further In this situation, and this is a situation I deal with all the time, where you've got civil and criminal exposure, it is always the case that the thing you are most concerned about as a lawyer for either the company or the individual is the criminal exposure That's the primary thing you are concerned about So having that resolved first is always to the benefit, in my mind, of the defendant

Q But hasn't it already been resolved in the immunity agreement with the exception of the perjury?

A My understanding is that the immunity agreement for securities fraud did not occur until recently

Q Really? Would that have changed your opinion?

A If he was immune from securities fraud earlier?

Q Yes

A It would be a relevant factor My understanding was at the time the stay was in place, I saw a transactional immunity agreement, but it dealt only with Hobbs Act public corruption-type charges and that would not have covered other securities fraud allegations that are covered in the securities class action

Q I got you So does the stay have a continuing benefit to him other than the potential perjury thing? In other words, is the benefit only from the time of, you know, the stay to, when he was immunized for the securities fraud?

A Try that again I'm not sure I followed you.

Q It sounds to me like you are saying, "Hey, look, time is important here and there is this theoretical perjury thing, but if my client was really facing securities fraud investigation, I would want him to delay his deposition," right? That's basically what you said

A That's all true, yes

Q Okay And it sounds like you said that the timing of when he was immunized would matter

A It would matter potentially I mean, what I would want if I was representing a defendant in that situation is exactly what Mr Williams got, which is transactional immunity for securities fraud.

Q But my question is, now that he has had transactional immunity, does that mean that the benefits that you are talking about in this hypothetical, that those have been extinguished?

A Now I understand what you are saying I'm sorry I don't think so, although they are less

Q How much less?

A Well, they are less -- here is the extent to which they are less I still think in this circumstance that his primary focus should be on, I as his lawyer would be advising him, his primary focus is to keep you guys happy That's just the fact That's the primary driver in any case like this

Q When you were a prosecutor, what did that mean, sir?

A What did that mean when I was a prosecutor?

Q When you were a prosecutor, what did it mean for a witness to keep you happy?

A I didn't do these kind of cases But in any case, I think it means for that person to tell the truth, be available to them, be primarily focused on that and not distracted by other cases

Q But the number one thing is for them to tell the truth. That's how to keep prosecutors happy?

A That's how they kept me happy I can't talk for anybody else I don't suspect anyone has any different opinion I'm not casting aspersions at all, Mr Dry You have a stellar reputation. All I can talk about is my own perspective

Q Let's go on You talk about that Williams is -- you think he is the largest shareholder?

A That's what I have been told. Although my source of knowledge about that is the allegation in the civil complaint, and those are known to be incorrect at times

Q So let me just get this right Basically, your first opinion is that Mr Williams benefited from the government's intervention and request for the stay of discovery, right?

A Yes

Q And that part of that benefit was delaying discovery, correct?

A Yes

Q And that the reason that that's valuable is because discovery is very expensive

A Part of the reason, yes

Q But you have acknowledged that individuals don't typically pay the cost of the company's discovery obligation, right?

A The company typically does, yes

THE COURT: It is not helpful for you to summarize, Mr Dry I heard it all

MR. DRY: Very good, sir One moment, Your Honor

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

Two more minutes

THE COURT: Go ahead

BY MR. DRY:

Q You talked about the fraud allegations can vitiate a director and officer liability policy, correct?

A They can Obviously, it depends on the particular terms, but yes

Q That typically happens --

A By the way, it is not an allegation, it is a finding by a competent tribunal of fraud

Q Absolutely. So if there are parallel proceedings going on until somebody has been found either criminally guilty or been found to have committed fraud in a courtroom, the D&O policy is still on the hook, right?

A Typically, yes And that finding can be by agreement, Plea Agreement, or even the settlement agreement, but typically it is by an ultimate finding by a tribunal after a trial or something like that

MR DRY: Thank you very much

THE COURT: Go ahead. I had a couple questions so let me do those so you will have them.

BY THE COURT:

Q Now, what I am interested in, obviously, is your methodology getting toward quantification of benefit And so you gave this figure, three to five million. And I think I was with you, I'm understanding you, that based on your experience and how you approach these kinds of cases, understand, I've tried dozens of security litigations, so we can talk the same language, but what I am getting now is, this is what it would cost, right? You understand there is a difference between the cost and the benefit

A Yes

Q So I'm trying to understand your benefit analysis Because if we just look at, well, who is paying, maybe the company is paying, maybe the individual pays some, maybe the insurance pays some, all of that has some impact on benefit And similarly, you say whatever affects the company affects the stockholder That's obvious But, of course, the extent of your ownership or equity ownership indicates the extent of the benefit And here are, there's some question about that as well So I want to understand how these things are playing out in your mind as you come to this figure Because the benefit of sequence of testimony, that's a different thing But this business with quantifying a value of a benefit to Mr Williams, I think, is possible I just want to understand how these things are playing out in your head.

A I think, Your Honor, that it is possible to quantify it, but frankly, it is more of a common sense analysis Let me explain what I mean by that You could quantify it by the following methodology If you took that it was going to be three to five million to get through summary judgment and another three to five million to get through trial, and that those costs are delayed, you can do a very simple time value of money analysis on that $10 million or

$6 million being expended nine months later or ten months later as opposed to ten months earlier There is a time value to money That would be a simple mathematical way to give a quantitative benefit to the company

In my experience, though, companies don't look at this issue exactly that way They are certainly a aware of the time value of money, but the value of the stay is far greater than that time value of money

Q But you understand that now we get into something that is very difficult to reduce to expert testimony The companies feel a way about something and each company has a different view of it, I would imagine So I understand what you are saying, but you make it tougher

A Well, I could tell you that there is some mathematical formula you can apply to this to get the right answer and number, but I frankly think that that would be -- that would do some violence to the way I think people actually think about this

Q But what you are saying, and I accept this, is it has value, and I accept this, there is value, significant value, you can't say how much.

A Right I wouldn't put it a dollar figure on it But that's not uncommon, at least in my experience in experts who have testified in cases where it is not, even whether they are talking about value where it is not a dollar figure necessarily that's attributed to it If you think about doctors who testify, you know, there are doctors testify as experts all the time And their opinion is based on their experience, and it is not a quantifiable analysis, necessarily It is there is some aspects which are purely scientific, some aspects which have some art involved, and that happens with some frequency

So I'd like to tell the Court this is worth worth $572,342 46 But that's kind of ridiculous and that's really not the way people think about it There are certain things that have value They may have value in ways that an ordinary jury person wouldn't understand I think I could help explain that, whether you find it helpful or not I'm not really a stakeholder here, frankly, so I don't have a real interest one way or the other about whether the testimony is allowed. But that's what I think could be helpful, is explaining the value of those things, even though I don't think you can put a dollar figure on what it was worth the day that the government decided to intervene Because part of that analysis as well, Your Honor, is how much more likely does it make it that the case will be stayed if the government intervenes In my experience, a great deal more likely But as you know, assessing the value of a potential judgment by a judge on a motion that's going to be filed is a fool's errand to try to get that down to a number But it certainly has value

THE COURT: All right Go ahead.

MR. BROWNLEE: We have nothing further

THE COURT: All right

MR. BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you, sir You may stand down

(Witness stood aside)

Okay, I'll hear brief argument

MR BROWNLEE: Very briefly, Your Honor We believe that Mr White should be permitted to testify on this narrow point that the Court has addressed in its order Mr White is clearly an expert in this field going back to his academic record, professional record, both in government and out

With regard to the colloquy here today between the Court and the witness and others, I think it is clear that this was a benefit to this witness who will testify for the government It is a benefit that's not apparent on any document on its face, that he got a benefit It is a significant benefit I believe that is the evidence and the testimony here today And that really goes to the weight, but not in our view to its admissibility I think government counsel in their examination today, cross-examination today, brought out points, but those points in our view only go to the weight, to the significance of the value, but we believe it is important, Your Honor, particularly in a case like this, where the benefits to this witness are not so clear There is no Plea Agreement, there is no substantial assistance motion, none of the things that this Court sees every day here None of that is going to be here So we believe on this one particular issue, that this expert is important to be able to let the jury and inform the jury and help guide them as to the benefits that this witness has received from the government's action, and they can make a judgment from there as to his credibility Thank you very much, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right, thank you Government?

MR. DRY: Your Honor, this testimony should not be admitted. First of all, the inferential links that Mr White is reaching to in order to justify some finding that in his opinion Mr Williams got a benefit is a long, long strand that can be broken in four different places from what I can tell But that does affect the reliability of his opinion, sir And the mere fact that he can get up there and say, "Well, in my opinion, my method is, I thought about this, and I think if I was advising Mr Williams, I think that would be a good thing for him," that doesn't make this testimony admissible

They can cross-examine Mr Williams about it If the Court does admit this testimony, what's going to happen is we are going to be involved in a sideshow where the government is going to have to put on evidence about the insurance that the company has, then we are going to have to talk about D&O policies At the end of the day, it is going to be a lot about nothing So for those reasons, the government asks the Court to exclude it

THE COURT: All right Thank you all very much I will briefly take this under advisement I'll try to let you know something very, very quickly Thank you again.

THE CLERK: Case Number 3:14CR12: United States of America versus Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G McDonnell The United States is represented by Michael Dry, David Harbach, Jessica Aber, and Ryan Faulconer Robert F McDonnell is represented by John Brownlee, Henry Asbill, and Daniel Small Maureen G McDonnell is represented by William Burck and Jaime Wisegarver Are counsel ready to proceed?

MR DRY: The United States is ready

MR ASBILL: Defense is ready

MR BURCK: Defense is ready

THE COURT: All right Let's hear from the government first on this government's motion to exclude irrelevant and misleading evidence of materiality of false statements as charged in Counts Twelve and Thirteen

MR. FAULCONER: Thank you, Your Honor Ryan Faulconer for the United States Your Honor, this evidence should be excluded at trial for the same reason that Your Honor already excluded the evidence, the expert opinion testimony that was proposed from Allen Kosowsky on this same subject Testimony from lenders about the materiality of the false statements that are alleged in this case is no more relevant and no less misleading than the evidence from an expert opining that those false statements were not material would have been

The purpose of 1014 is to focus on the defendants' intent, on whether or not the defendant had the intent of influencing the bank Your Honor, the exception that the defense proposes to this Court's prior rulings that materiality evidence is irrelevant would swallow the rule

Essentially, what would happen if you have the defense's rule here, Your Honor, is that evidence of materiality would be allowed in any case If a single lender's opinion as to materiality is circumstantial evidence of what a defendant thinks, regardless of whether or not a defendant has ever had a conversation with that lender, regardless of whether or not a defendant was ever made aware of that opinion before making the false statement, then in every single 1014 case that a court has, that evidence from a lender that "I don't think this is material, I don't think this would have made a difference," that would come in in every single case And what's important is that that's not just a rule that would help the government in this case, it is a rule that would most often hurt defendants because it would mean in a 1014 case, what you would have is the government being able to say, "Look at all the losses that were caused, look how material this was," on a statement where that's not relevant, where that's not one of the elements So some of the cases out there talk about it is not relevant for the government to put that evidence in , And it is no more relevant for the defense to put it in, unless there is a tie to the defendants' state of mind

Your Honor, there has been a little bit of discussion in the briefing about PHILLIPS, the Seventh Circuit case One thing to point out there is that PHILLIPS says it can be relevant in the circumstances of that case But ELLIOTT, this Court's own opinion in ELLIOTT, said that materiality is not relevant So you have one case out there saying it is relevant, another case out there saying it is not relevant Neither one means, ELLIOTT didn't mean, Your Honor, that it is never relevant And PHILLIPS doesn't mean that it is always relevant But the way you bring those two cases together and bring all the cases together here is to focus on the defendants' state of mind and whether or not the evidence of materiality was known to the defendant at the time that the alleged false statement was made And at the end of the day, that's really where 403 comes in That's where this motion ultimately stops, even if there is some argument that a lender's abstract opinion as to materiality somehow bears on the defendants' state of mind Because at the point at which you start being able to call witness after witness after witness saying, "Yes, even though the defendant was told that they had to be truthful, even though the defendant was told that this would influence us, we didn't really mean it, and even though we didn't say anything like that, we are going to opine now after the fact that it really was all okay at the time " That's classic 403 evidence, and just as misleading from a lender as it would have been from Mr Kosowsky Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you Defendant?

MR. ASBILL: Good morning, Your Honor Henry Asbill for the defense Briefly, Your Honor, I think just one simple point I want to make about this motion Objective materiality is inferential proof of my client's subjective intent I think that's very obvious here Why would my client knowingly submit something on a financial application that he thought -- I mean, if he thought that the particular item is immaterial both to himself and the bank, then it inferentially proves his lack of intent with respect to trying to deceive the bank. The government argues, "Well, it is not an element of the offense " Of course it is not an element of the offense We don't intend to argue that materiality is an element of the offense Motive is not an element of the offense in a murder case That doesn't make motive irrelevant to the defense or offense of the case That's the point here

I know that the government thinks that this is going to confuse the jury With all due respect to the folks in this courtroom, in my experience, the jury collectively if not individually is the smartest guy in the room. And I don't think they are going to be confused at all, particularly given the instructions that you are going to give them on this issue Nor do we intend to call numerous witnesses about this issue And I appreciate Mr Faulconer's concern for future defendants whose defense lawyers, I'm sure, will do their job and represent their clients as they see fit without his help But this is a very simple proposition here: that the materiality or lack thereof of the items that they are arguing are false on the applications, in context, help defend our case And that's why we want to get this evidence in. Thank you, sir

THE COURT: All right Let's move on to the defense motion to exclude evidence relating to the statements of economic interest

MR. BROWNLEE: Good morning, Your Honor May it please the Court, John Brownlee on behalf of Mr McDonnell

Your Honor, in the papers the government has indicated that it plans to use how Mr McDonnell and members of his staff prepared and submitted his Virginia Statement of Economic Interest form to show that he was somehow deceptive or he was attempting to conceal his relationship with Mr Williams In those same papers, they also claim that they do not intend to show or even mention that he violated Virginia law with regard to those same very disclosures We believe that the two positions cannot live at once in the same case We believe they are inconsistent, they cannot be reconciled, and we ask that any references or evidence with regard to the Statement of Economic Interest be excluded.

Our primary reason, Your Honor, is that we don't believe it is relevant; and if it is permitted, we believe it would not become a mini-trial, it would become the trial in this case As the Court will soon learn, the government's evidence with regard to an agreement of the corruption that's the true allegation in the government's case between Mr McDonnell and Mr Williams simply does not exist There is no e-mail, letter, recording, anything So what we have, and we anticipate the evidence will be, is Mr Williams himself will take to the stand and testify there was some agreement

The problem with that, as the Court well knows, he has received two immunity agreements and his believability will be severely challenged So I think what the government is now trying to do is to come in and say, "Well, if it wasn't a corrupt relationship, then why was he trying to hide it?" The way they intend to prove that he was trying to hide it was that he didn't fill out and he and his staff didn't fill out this Statement of Economic Interest form properly So for instance, they will allege that gifts that his wife received were not disclosed Well, the form makes clear that family members, you don't have to disclose those I will note that there was some confusion within the Governor's Office about whether or not Ms McDonnell had to disclose that There were training sessions, there were back and forths So it is not something that is very clear; and in fact, the whole staff found it to be confusing

There are also allegations of golf games that were not disclosed. They are going to claim that he didn't disclose some golf matches because he was trying to hide the relationship, despite the fact that he was publicly playing, his name was on receipts The fact of the form where you don't have to disclose gifts from personal friends, as they say, for reasons clearly unrelated to public position, that is not defined anywhere And since the government hasn't noticed an expert, I just don't know where that evidence is going to come to show that he had an obligation to disclose, which they must show in order to try to prove their concealment case

The same with loans to companies Again, Mr Williams loaned it to a company that former Governor McDonnell owned with his younger sister In order to make that relevant, they are going to have to establish that he had an obligation to report it It went to a company, the monies were used by the company And again, we are going to have to now, with a little bit of burden shifting, the burden will be now on the defendant to show that he did in fact comply with these Virginia rules

Lastly, with regard to the stock, this is a form, I don't know how familiar the Court is with the Statement of Economic Interest, it is a form that was created by politicians for politicians And in this form, if you buy a stock in January and sell it before the end of the year, you don't have to disclose it Now, the federal form that I am familiar with, the Court is and most of the people in the room here are, there is a section for transactions But in the Virginia form you don't have to. So the government is going to try to prove concealment with legally following the rules of this particular form

So there is also a culture around this form, that if this were to be injected in the trial, we think we are entitled to show and how it was formed The former Governor was one, and he had to fill out a form. But he had an entire staff that assisted him. And how things got on the form, why they got on the form, why they may not have gotten on the form, will become relevant if in fact they are trying to use this form to show concealment

Then finally, Your Honor, is enforcement This is a Virginia law This is a Virginia form. And there is one person who is actually charged with enforcing that statute, and that's the Commonwealth's Attorney here for the City of Richmond. And the manner in which he views the form and the law, we think, could potentially become relevant as to how the jury could evaluate concealment What I mean by that is, recently, the former Attorney General of Virginia was investigated by the Commonwealth's Attorney because he did not put gifts and stock from Mr Williams' company on his form. So Mr Cuccinelli took gifts from Mr Williams, he also owned Mr Williams' stock, and he didn't put it on his form. So he was investigated by the Commonwealth's Attorney And I want to quote from the Commonwealth's Attorney's opinion just very briefly, Your Honor, because he said this He said: "Although one cannot help but question whether repeated omissions of gifts from Williams are coincidence or a pattern reflecting intent to conceal, the disclosure of several other gifts and benefits from Williams in his original statements suggest that the Attorney General was not attempting to conceal the relationship " End quote

So Mr McDonnell put many things on his forms and disclosures from Mr Williams and his companies So under that standard of review for concealment by the state official who actually enforces it, we believe that could potentially be relevant for the jury to try to assess whether or not Mr McDonnell was concealing it.

With all those factors, Your Honor, we just believe that would become a sideshow to a federal corruption If they want to try to prove he tried to conceal the relationship, they can do that with evidence. They can talk with called witnesses But we believe getting into this form would be inappropriate. Thank you so much, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you Government?

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor Good morning, Your Honor David Harbach for the government Judge, I think I'd like to start with the relevance question. And I'm not going to belabor this too much, because I think the government's theory of admissibility of this evidence is quite clear from our papers: the consciousness of guilt evidence that appears, and the necessity of the government's having to prove a scheme to defraud in connection with the honest services charges

I will as a brief aside say that to the extent that Mr Brownlee suggested otherwise, the government's briefing is crystal clear on the four specific reasons why we think the SOEI evidence is relevant here And among them is not that Ms McDonnell accepted gifts that didn't show up on the form. Among the reasons we articulated for the Court, the only one that involves Ms McDonnell is her deliberate unloading of Star stock on dates flanking the dates that the SOEIs were due And the reason that that's important is because the SOEI is quite clear that to the extent that immediate family members own securities valued at in excess of $10,000, they must be reported

So as we explained in our brief, this evidence is being offered to show consciousness of guilt Mr Brownlee talked about concealment evidence like it was some far-flung theory that was really unusual Well, it is not What is unusual is the corruption case where there is a recording between the briber and the bribe recipient articulating the quid pro quo That's a rare corruption case It is not unusual at all for the government to be in the position of using concealment evidence to prove either a public official or a bribe payer's state of mind. That's true in a corruption case, that's true in any criminal case where intent matters

And so that's the first reason that it is relevant

The second reason it is relevant, and perhaps even more importantly it is elemental here: The government has to prove a scheme to defraud in connection with the honest services charges Connected with that is, among the elements we are going to have to prove is there was an intent to defraud. So the defendants' state of mind is plainly in issue as an element of the case

Now, in their reply, the defense has attacked the government several times for saying, "Well, the defendants are accused of quid pro quo bribery, exchanging official acts for things of value. They haven't been accused of failing to disclose things on their SOEI " And that's true, but only as far as it goes That argument falls apart when you remember what I just said a moment ago: that honest services fraud requires proof of a scheme to defraud More precisely, not only does it require the government to prove an intent to defraud; it also requires the government to prove a material misrepresentation as part of the scheme And so the misrepresentations that are involved on the form here are plainly relevant for that purpose, and indeed, the indictment alleges all of the conduct that's at issue on this motion as part of the scheme to defraud

The Court has already ruled that, in the context of the motion to strike surplusage, that Ms McDonnell's stock swaps are probative of concealment and potentially intent to defraud As we point out in our papers, so much more so are the things that Mr McDonnell received and failed to disclose, namely, the golf and the gift for the daughter's wedding So that's all I'm going to say about our theory of relevance unless Your Honor has any questions about that

Okay, so what's left is the 403 analysis And again, here, we have seen it in the briefs and also we heard it this morning from Mr Brownlee They have hammered us for being allegedly inconsistent They attack us for saying on the one hand that we don't intend to argue that Mr McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws; but on the other hand, that we are saying we intend to prove that he deliberately omitted stuff from the form. It is true, of course, that the government will have to show that Mr McDonnell had a duty to disclose But in our view, the form is self-contained for that In other words, the form plus testimony from a staffer or two of the naked fact that he was required to file it annually is all that will be necessary to establish those legal requirements There will be no discussion -- Mr Dry will yank my chain if I misstate this -- but I don't think there's going to be any discussion from any witness explicitly about Virginia ethics laws The government doesn't intend to introduce any ethical code or offer any expert testimony about the punishment that follows under state law for violating such an ethical code And all those things were present in the TERRY case they rely on so much None of that is present here This is not TERRY, not even close

In their opening brief, Mr McDonnell expressed concern about the government, quoting from Page 5, the government's argument that he deliberately violated Virginia ethics laws Well, in our response we made it quite clear that we have no intention of doing that In their brief and from Mr Brownlee this morning is basically, "Well, of course they do How can they not argue that?" The answer is simple We are in 403 land here And assessing whether evidence is unfairly prejudicial in the first instance, or whether the unfair prejudice if any associated with that evidence, how that balances with respect to probative value, in that calculus, how something is presented to the jury matters There is a big difference between arguing on the one hand that something should have been disclosed or that a transaction was done in a certain way to avoid having to report it -- with, by the way, maybe a limiting instruction explaining the reason why the government is offering the evidence, and if they wanted it, the reasons that the jury should be prohibited from considering that evidence -- there is a big difference between that on the one hand and on the other hand a government lawyer trumpeting to the jury that the Governor of Virginia violated the state's ethics laws We are nowhere near Box 2 We don't intend to do that. The question again is whether the evidence offered here is unfairly prejudicial such that the jurors are at risk of behaving irrationally or based on emotion instead of the facts and the instructions from Your Honor This just isn't the type of evidence that poses that risk, especially in light of what we just said.

So when the risk of that unfair prejudice is so minimal and so slight in light of how the government intends to present this evidence, when it is compared to the probative value of what really is as close to paradigmatic evidence of consciousness of guilt as you can get, not to mention what I said earlier, that it is an elemental requirement, the balancing here isn't even close The 403 probative value, unfair prejudice balance, easily tips in favor of admission

One last mention of 403, which was mentioned in the papers and here this morning, is this jury confusion argument The government would respectfully submit, Your

Honor, that this argument is just meritless As Your Honor has already recognized, this form is not complicated, and does not require an expert to decipher The assessment of whether the instructions on the form required Mr McDonnell to disclose a $15,000 check from Mr Williams, or the golf from Mr Williams, are not hard. As I said earlier, it is also not hard to see that the form says that "If a member of your immediate family holds stock with a value in excess of ten grand, you should put it down." Nor is it difficult to understand the reason that the government is offering the evidence; that he is not disclosing his dealings with Mr Williams is evidence of his intent to defraud or consciousness of guilt It is not complicated It is not confusing And that element of 403 provides no basis for its exclusion

We didn't hear a lot about it this morning in argument, but if it is all right with Your Honor I'd like to briefly mention the 404(b) evidence because it is part of the same papers Is that all right?

MR HARBACH: This evidence is mainline 404(b) evidence And when faced with that, when faced with the fact that this evidence is classic evidence of intent and absence of mistake, Mr McDonnell makes a big deal in his reply that he is not charged with failure to disclose

True But like Mr Asbill said not ten minutes ago, the fact that it is not an element doesn't mean that it is not relevant For the reasons that have already been discussed, it doesn't make it any less relevant or less meaningful to the theory As the Fourth Circuit made clear in QUEEN, it need not be elemental They said it must be relevant to an issue, such as an element of the offense But in any event, here again the government is going to be required to prove a material misrepresentation in connection with the honest services fraud scheme And so intent to defraud is squarely in issue And therefore, absence of mistake, intent, and lack of accident, in the words of the rule, in Mr McDonnell's omitting gifts from Jonnie Williams is just as squarely in issue

And so what makes the evidence about the Kiawah Island trip especially so compelling, I think, would be denominated the reliability factor in QUEEN Here, as we laid out in our papers, the evidence will show that Mr McDonnell's own handwriting on these documents makes it crystal clear what his intent was in striking the Goodwin trip to Kiawah. There is no ambiguity about it He struck it as a gift from a personal friend when the evidence in the government's view will plainly show that it wasn't And as pointed out in our brief, that's exactly what happened with Jonnie Williams In QUEEN, the Fourth Circuit said, quote, "The more similar a prior act is to the act being proved, the more relevant it becomes " It is the identical,calculus: Do I need to report? Can I get away with not reporting this because X is a personal friend? It was true with the Goodwin trip, it could be very well true with respect to the Jonnie Williams gifts So it illustrates how powerfully relevant the evidence is here

Finally on the 404(b) side, unfair prejudice, again, this is not the type of evidence that risks of jury becoming emotionally inflamed. True, it is an expensive trip. True, it is a luxury trip. As I don't need to remind the Court, there's going to be plenty of evidence of expensive trips and vacations from Mr Williams that will surely be a part of the record. So the notion that because the vacation from Mr Goodwin was expensive or extravagant is unfairly prejudicial somehow should not carry a lot of weight in context

Finally, of course, that's not the import of how the government intends to argue it The argument is not, "Folks, doesn't this show you how greedy Mr McDonnell was?" Not at all Rather, it is, "Doesn't this show you how Mr McDonnell knew exactly what he was doing when he omitted Mr Williams' gifts?" That's why we are offering it and that's why it is admissible It is classic 404(b)

That's all I have, Your Honor, unless you have any questions

THE COURT: Thank you very much Rebuttal?

MR. BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor Just very briefly I think Mr Harbach's description here explains exactly why our concerns are that they are now going to take this federal corruption trial and turn it into a trial about whether or not Mr McDonnell filled out his statements right It is not concealment, it is not concealment if he had no obligation to report it So the government wants to come up here and say, "This is concealment and that's concealment and this should have been on the form." Well, again, it is not concealment if it didn't need to be on the form. And our view is, if that's their position, we necessarily have to get all into the form and try to decide what's appropriate, what should have been on there and what should not have been on there

On the 404(b), this is, by the government's own acknowledgement, a non-quid pro quo arrangement It was a gift that was legal to accept in Virginia The former Governor made a judgment about whether it should be on his form. In order for them to be able to tie that, we now have to get into should it have been on the form. And the question is, was this gentleman a personal friend. Under Virginia law, as I understand it, again, there is no definition of this, Your Honor It is in the eye of the beholder The way that the politicians in the General Assembly wrote this, it is literally in their discretion. And there has been no enforcement of this statute on this point ever And so now the federal government is going to come in here and try to convince the jury about who people's personal friends are We just think those issues are completely collateral and irrelevant to whether or not this former Governor corrupted his office in exchange for gifts and loans from Mr Williams

At the end of the day, Your Honor, we just believe that to bring this in would require us to -- and Mr Harbach talked about a couple of staffers can talk about it Well, we don't know if these people are experts We have no idea what their opinion is They have noticed no expert to come in here and say, "Here is the law and here is how it is done " We are really on our own to try to establish what are the standards and why in fact the former Governor followed them. With that we ask it be excluded. Thank you very much

THE COURT: All right, thank you Let's move now to the DAUBERT hearing

MR. SMALL: Good morning, Your Honor Dan Small for the defense With the Court's permission, we would call Allen Kosowsky to the stand.

ALLEN KOSOWSKY,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the defendants having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. SMALL: Your Honor, with the Court's indulgence, may I place before the witness three documents, two of which are in the record and the other I can provide to counsel The two that are in the record are the two complaints that were stayed. If I could place those in front of the witness

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SMALL: The other is the Star Scientific Form 10-Q publicly filed for the period ending March 31st, 2014 I can provide the government's counsel with a copy as well And we will come back to these

And Your Honor, there are two DAUBERT issues for this witness I'm going to try to take them briefly one at a time, if that's all right with the Court

THE COURT: That's fine

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR SMALL:

Q Sir, would you give us a little bit of your background? What's your educational background?

A I have a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, granted in June of 1969, from American

International College in Springfield, Massachusetts, with a major in accounting and a minor in finance I have taken some courses at the University of Connecticut toward an MBA, which I did not complete I was admitted into the Wharton Fellows Program, part of the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School of Business, and I completed the Wharton Fellows Program in Executive Education some years ago I am a licensed Certified Public Accountant in Connecticut and have been continuously since July of 1971

MR. SMALL: Your Honor, Mr Kosowsky's resume has been filed with the Court I do have an extra courtesy copy if the Court would like one, if that would be convenient I'll provide one to counsel as well

(Documents proffered to Court and counsel)

BY MR SMALL:

Q Sir, how are you employed?

A I presently own my own CPA firm, J Allen Kosowsky CPA, PC

Q What do you do in that capacity?

A My firm, for the last number of years, has focused on forensic accounting, tax matters, valuation matters, and commercial and other litigation as an expert witness

Q Just briefly, when you say forensic accounting, what do you mean by that?

A Forensic accounting as it has come to be known over the years is basically becoming an investigatory accountant In my particular case, most of my work has been in assisting counsel generally in what is known as a Kovel relationship, K-O-V-E-L for the court reporter, where I would be retained by counsel to assist them when they are defending someone who might be accused of a financial crime

Q I'm going to come back to some of your other board experience when we get to the second issue. But in your resume on Page 3, there are a number of accreditations and certifications and licenses I'm not going to ask you about all of them. But if I could just touch on two First of all, there is a reference here to Personal Financial Specialist with the AICPA. First of all, what is the AICPA?

A AICPA is the acronym for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the national organization that CPAs belong to.

Q And what is a Personal Financial Specialist?

A Personal Financial Specialist is a credential offered by the AICPA to those of us who pursue that particular practice segment

Q And what is the purpose of that or the nature of that credential?

A The nature of that credential is to give to the public hopefully the confidence that the individual assisting them in a consulting capacity has gone through a requisite credentialing process with the governing organization of the AICPA, and that pays attention to the current developments by way of continuing education Is otherwise offering services of a specialist nature

Q What does a Personal Financial Specialist focus on?

A In general terms in my experience over the years, it has been to assist an individual or a couple in evaluating their financial circumstances, or narrowly in connection with estate planning That's usually one of the first areas that folks look at But more importantly in this day and age, to also look at things like retirement planning, planning for disability in the case of perhaps a spouse or a child that might have a special need, and to take the totality of the individual's or couple's financial affairs and put them together in a plan

Q Okay And as part of that, do you look at issues of soundness?

A Of course

Q What do we mean when we say, in your world, when you say soundness?

A Soundness is the equivalent of looking at the net worth of an individual or a couple It is a financial net worth, hopefully positive

Q How do you look at that? Just briefly, what is the methodology for examining that?

A The methodology for that is very specific It is look at each and every aspect of their assets, checking accounts, savings accounts, CD's, securities owned, retirement assets, however they may be owned or vested, real estate owned and its appraised value, other personal property that might be something that would need to be appraised at fair market value The idea being to go through each and every asset category of a material nature to determine what the total assets might be at a fair market value. And then on the other side of the balance sheet, look at the liabilities and determine the difference, what is the difference between the assets and liabilities, resulting in hopefully a net worth

Q I'm going to skip over a number of these other certifications, but just ask you briefly about one other It says Certified Valuation Analyst What is a Certified Valuation Analyst?

A A Certified Valuation Analyst, the acronym, Certified Valuation Analyst, CVA, is a credential that's offered by the National Association of Certified Valuation Analysts

Q And what is the point of that? First of all, how do you achieve that certification? What's that process?

A The process for achieving that certification is to go through a training process At the time that I did it, it was an in-person 40-hour one-week seminar, intensive, and thereafter completing an examination offering references and experience in the area of business valuation

Q What sort of work does a Certified Valuation Analyst do?

A Well, as it has come to develop over the years, the Certified Valuation Analyst can be called upon in a variety of settings Ordinarily, once again, called upon to, for example, value a privately-held corporation and interest in it for, usually for estate and gift tax purposes or other financial planning purposes But as it has developed, it is also to value intangible property, patents, know-how, a variety of other trademarks, for example, that might be on the balance sheet of a company with very little value in a historical cost setting, but otherwise something that might be worth a lot more money So it would be valuing those sorts of intangible assets In addition, a CVA, in this capacity that I have served in, would be to value, for example, the good will that is on the balance sheet of a publicly traded company The accounting rules require that good will be evaluated each and every year to see if it is impaired. And that requires the valuation of that particular business unit to determine whether the stated book value, good will amount, should be left on the books or written off

Q Let me, Mr Kosowsky, skip ahead a little more and ask you, have you been qualified to testify as an expert in state or federal court before?

A Yes, I have

Q Can you give us a just rough estimate of how many times that had occurred?

A Oh, goodness, Attorney Small, I've been doing this a very long time I struggle with that It is more than 25 times, I'm sure.

Q All right And just so we are clear, you understand that I work for the law firm of Holland & Knight Have you ever been retained by the Holland & Knight law firm before?

A No

Q Mr Asbill and others work for the law firm of Jones Day Have you ever been retained by the law firm of Jones Day before?

A No, I have not

Q And I guess it came up in the last DAUBERT hearing, so would you tell us your billable rate for this case, sir?

A My general billable rate is $575 an hour I have offered a courtesy to Governor McDonnell and I believe it is approximately $400 an hour and a discount of 20 percent on any of my staff

Q Why did you render that discount?

A Well, when I looked at Governor McDonnell's long public service, I felt that, you know, as a professional matter, it was something that I could offer.

Q Okay Now, in addition to the certifications and CPA and other training, are there other accepted standards or basic documents for valuating a business or an individual?

A Yes, sir

Q And are you familiar with IRS Revenue Ruling 59-60?

A Yes, I am.

Q What is 59-60?

A Revenue Ruling 59-60, Your Honor, is the bedrock ruling offered by the Internal Revenue Service in 1959 putting forth methodology for valuing business interests That's the beginning of the valuation standard, if you will It has been adopted in many, many tribunals in cases, including Tax Court, as you might expect And has served as the gold standard, if you will, for how to go about approaching a valuation of a business or a business interest It has been extended, you know, just as the economy has changed, to include things like intangible assets and the like over time

Q And although 59-60 is specifically focused on businesses, are those same methodologies used in valuing an individual?

A Yes And you would find, I believe, that if you looked at the NACVA and probably the American Institute standards, they embody the many categories that are listed in Revenue Ruling 59-60 as things that one as an evaluator would look at in arriving at a valuation conclusion

Q And by NACVA standards, are you referring to the professional standards of the National Association of Certified Valuators and Analysts?

A Yes

Q And is there also an IRS procedural manual that goes along or actually follows up on 59-60 on business valuation?

A Yes

MR. SMALL: Your Honor, the Internal Revenue Manual, which is what the agents would use, offers its own cookbook, if you will, of the methodologies to be employed in valuing business interests, which if you compare that to Revenue Ruling 59-60, you would see that they are quite similar

BY MR. SMALL:

Q As a general matter, have you followed those methodologies in your work in this case?

A Yes I've been guided by them, yes

Q And again, just very briefly, am I correct that there are essentially three different approaches to viewing soundness?

A Well, speaking of soundness, I think you are talking about valuation?

Q Yes.

A Well, there are three general approaches to valuing a business There is the asset approach, which, Your Honor, would be the simple subtraction of the fair market value of someone's assets, subtracting the liabilities from that to arrive at a net value There is the income approach, which is to take and look at the income earning capacity of an enterprise or an individual, or the income earning capacity attributed to an intangible asset: a patent, a royalty stream, something like that, an author with book royalties or so forth. And then there is the market approach And the market approach would be to seek out comparable transactions that would have taken place in a way that could be compared to the subject being valued Simple example is, when you are looking at valuing a company that's publicly traded, you would look at its competitors and see what its market metrics might be, or its price to earnings ratio as compared to your subject company, what might be its price to sales, what might be its price to book value or price to a term called EBITDA, E-B-I-T-D-A. Earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization.

So you would take those three approaches, Your Honor, evaluate them individually, determine what the values might be for each of the three approaches, and then in the judgment of the analyst, perhaps, choose one over the other or weight them on some particular basis

Q And in this case, in looking at the financial soundness of former Governor McDonnell and of MoBo, the real estate venture, which of those three approaches have you used?

A My principle evidence for purposes of the case at hand has been to look very specifically at the asset approach, Your Honor, looking at the assets and liabilities of Mr and Ms McDonnell, as well as the MoBo, M-O-B-O, as the company is known to be, the partnership between the Governor and his sister Maureen, as well as some other business interests that he had in other partnerships

Q What documents did you review in pursuit of this methodology?

A At the present time, Your Honor, I have reviewed bank statements for the Governor and his wife I can't recall the exact periods of time, but a significant number of them, many, many pages The credit card records of the Governor, because that's an important aspect of this particular case The tax returns of the Governor The tax returns of MoBo, and these would be going back over several years The bank loan applications that were -- that were tendered in connection with the refinancing of properties of MoBo as well as the Governor's personal residence. A series of, extensive series of e-mails between the Governor and a representative of Pentagon Federal Credit Union Documents pertaining to the Governor's serving as the executor of his father's estate and the ultimate settlement of the estate with the distribution to the heirs I'm sure I'm forgetting something

Well, in addition, I have also looked at public documents pertaining to Star Scientific, Rock Creek Pharmaceutical Those would include a review of the 10-Ks that have recently been filed, the 10-Q most recently for the March 31st, 2014 quarter ended I've looked at 8-K files for Rock Creek. I have looked at the, as many of the so-called Forms 13-D, which would indicate Mr Jonnie Williams' interest as a more than five percent shareholder of Rock Creek A number of Forms 4 that had been filed with respect to Mr Williams and his share ownership in Star Scientific, now known as Rock Creek Mr Williams' tax returns, gift tax returns for a number of years

Q Some of those matters relating to Mr Williams relate primarily to the second issue, the stay issue But as to both issues, is there anything that you have requested or felt you needed that you have not been provided?

A No, not at all

Q And let me, if I may provide the witness, Your Honor, I have a copy for the Court and counsel as well, the second supplemental notice of intent And going to the third page -- fourth page, rather, there is a listing there of bases for this methodology of six items Do you have that in front of you?

A I do

Q And do those provide an overview of the bases for your analysis in this case?

A Yes, sir

Q And going through them just briefly, first one relates to the completed financial statements that show a positive net worth If you can just summarize your findings based on your review of those documents

A Yes When you get to what is the, what appeared to be the most accurate financial statement, there is a positive net worth for Mr and Ms McDonnell, the Governor and Ms McDonnell

Q And I'm not going to do all of these, sir You have already testified that these provide the basis But Number 3, Mr McDonnell had access to a portion of the proceeds of his father's estate, which was considerable He also had the right to significant executor's fees What do you mean by that, sir?

A Well, in my interview of Governor McDonnell, Your Honor, I asked about the estate of his late father, and the Governor had told me, as would be customary, that he would have been entitled to a an executor's fee for prosecuting that particular estate to its finality He waived that and just divvied up the assets with his siblings as a result

Q And then just briefly, Number 4, it refers to Mr McDonnell and his sister taken together What did you mean by that, sir?

A Well, we were referring here to MoBo, the partnership, the real estate partnership And the real estate partnership had various loans that were taken over a series of years And the loans were made based upon the credit standing of both the Governor and his sister, Maureen McDonnell Their joint individual -- their individual cash flows aggregated jointly, their assets, personal assets that would support a second line of a recovery for a bank in the event of a default, as well as the underlying appraisals on the property and the loans that were ultimately taken.

Q And so these six items accurately describe in part your methodology for viewing and analyzing the soundness of both Governor McDonnell and MoBo; is that correct?

A Yes In general, right

Q Let me ask about a couple, just briefly, a couple of issues that are not on that list You are aware that on one of the MoBo accounts with TowneBank, there were a number of late fees; is that correct?

A That's right

Q During a period of 2009 to 2012, correct?

A Yes

Q Did you investigate those late fees on that account?

A I did.

Q What did you find, sir?

A I found that they were nominal They were, you know, $25 or $30 here or there

Q Even if there are more, did that have an impact on your analysis of soundness?

A Well, it did in the sense, Attorney Small, that if there is a late fee, you want to understand why In my interview once again with Governor McDonnell, and also other information that came to my attention, it appeared that there were these winter temporary cash flow issues which a rental of real estate property might have, and then I also understood that his sister, Maureen McDonnell's, husband, Michael Uncapher, was charged with managing the property and didn't do such a good job, so that some of these late fees were assessed because there just wasn't enough money available at the time But money ultimately was put in to satisfy the debts

Q I'm sorry, let me break that down just a little bit Did you determine how many days TowneBank waits before they assess a late fee?

A I went back and looked and I think it was about eight or nine days

Q Is that, on the scale of banks, is that short, long?

A Well, I'm usually accustomed to, you know, 15 or more days, but it just seemed to be aggressive

Q Regardless of the eight or nine days, did MoBo, and based upon your review, ever miss a payment?

A To my knowledge, MoBo was never delinquent

Q And by delinquent, you mean more than 30 days

A That's right

Q So somewhere between the eight or nine and 30, every payment was made, correct?

A Yes

Q And so did that have an impact on your view of the soundness, the financial soundness of MoBo?

A Sure

Q What was that?

A Well, they were able to ultimately meet their debts as they were coming due In that compressed time frame of the winter, that was an an issue

Q One other issue I want to touch on, are you aware that MoBo received loans from various individuals?

A Yes

Q And did you investigate those loans and their impact on financial soundness?

A Yes

Q What did you determine?

A I determined that over the history of MoBo, MoBo had borrowed money from a Mr McDonald to fund some of its cash shortfall issues on a temporary basis It had borrowed from a Dr Davies, I think it is Davies or Davis And similarly, those loans were ultimately repaid with interest and the like And in addition, had borrowed money from Mr Jonnie Williams

Q Okay And so what impact if any did that have on your view of the financial soundness?

A Well, it demonstrated that the partnership had at least external access to credit, private as it may be, and the partners made a choice they didn't want to put their own money in it, which is sort of typical of small businesses, you know; return on other people's money is kind of the, what most people try to achieve

Q Okay All right And I understand that there is more work to be done before trial, but did you come to a preliminary opinion as to the soundness of the Governor's financial state?

A As I previously stated, I did

Q What is that?

A I found that I thought that his financial condition was sound He had a positive net worth. He had cash flow from his position as Governor and prior as Attorney General, among other sources of funds

MR SMALL: That's all I have on soundness Does the Court wish me to stop and allow the government to cross-examine on this issue or go forward to the second issue?

THE COURT: Go ahead with the second issue

MR. SMALL: Thank you

BY MR SMALL:

Q Let me go back to your -- you understand there is a second issue here relating to the stays that the government sought and received on two civil cases against Mr Williams

A Yes

Q All right And in that light, let me go back to your resume for a moment, if I might Because it discusses your experience starting on Page 2, your board leadership experience I take it you have been involved on the boards of various commercial ventures

A Yes, I have

Q What companies, have you been involved with?

A Well, there are five public companies that I have been on the board of, publicly traded companies that I have been on the boards of directors of, starting with Shelton Bancorp, Webster Bank in Waterbury, Connecticut, On2 Technologies, Thor Industries, and Naugatuck Valley Corporation I presently serve on the boards of Thor Industries and Naugatuck Valley Corporation.

Q In addition to your service on boards, are you also specifically on the audit committees of some of those entities?

A Yes

Q Which ones, sir?

A I'm presently on the audit committee of Thor Industries and Naugatuck Valley Corporation.

Q Just briefly, what is Thor Industries?

A Thor Industries is the largest domestic manufacturer of recreational vehicles in the United States based in Elkhart, Indiana

Q And so when you say largest, give us a number for the size of the company

A Reaching back to publicly available information, in excess of $33 billion a year in sales

Q Okay And what is your role on the audit committee there?

A I'm the independent financial expert as designated in the SEC filings

Q All right And Naugatuck Valley Corporation, what is that, sir?

A Naugatuck Valley Corporation is the holding company for a community bank, Naugatuck Valley Savings & Loan It is an approximately $500 million institution in the area that I live in.

Q And what is your role on the audit committee of the bank?

A Once again, I'm serving as the independent financial expert And you know, in the context of today's regulatory environment, the work on the audit committee is extensive

Q And in those positions, are you involved in assessing risk and the impact of litigation?

A Yes

Q And are you involved in determining the company's value and going concern value?

A Oh, sure

Q And going concern is a term of art Tell us what that means

A Well, going concern, which happily does not apply to either Thor or Naugatuck Valley, is an accounting and auditing issue When a company reaches a point where it has had a history of continued losses or current large losses, the accountants, and in my experience we would do this, we would look at the ability of the entity to continue as a so-called going concern And under the accounting rules, the test for saying that a company could continue as a going concern is that it should be able to get through one more operating cycle, which is defined generally as one fiscal or calendar year It is a very -- when a company reaches that point, you are on the watch list for sure

Q And when you analyze risk or analyze litigation impact, are you always able to put an exact dollar figure on it?

A No As a matter of fact, the requirements today for putting reserves on balance sheets are very judgmental, and require a judgment as to the amount of reserve that should be put on based upon the facts as they are known at that moment in time. And they are usually adjusted from time to time as facts change

Q With regards to this issue, the stay issue, have you reviewed the two civil complaints?

A Yes, I've read them.

Q Earlier, you started to list, and forgive me if I interrupted you, you started to list a number of other documents that you have read with regards to this portion of your analysis

A That's right

Q What are the most important documents that you have read in those regards?

A Well, I was looking very critically at the March 31st, 2014 10-Q of Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals as it was filed, as well as looking at its 10-K that had been filed for the year ended December 31st, 2013

Q Am I correct that the March 31st, 2014 10-Q covers the period during which this stay was requested and entered?

A That's my understanding, yes

Q And just briefly, the two cases, because I may refer to them, the two cases that are in front of you, the first is, am I correct, a shareholder derivative complaint The lead defendant, to give us some ease in referring to the case, is a fellow named Skillman, so that's the Skillman case

Q And Mr Williams is an individual defendant named in that case, correct?

A Yes

Q And that case was, consolidated amended complaint was filed on January 13th of this year; am I correct?

A I just would have to look

Q Look on the next-to-last page of the complaint

A That's where I'm going January 13th, 2014

Q And the stay was requested and entered just 16 days later, on January 29th, 2014

A I think that's approximately correct

Q And the other, the second suit is a federal securities lawsuit The lead plaintiff, just so we can refer to the case, is a woman named Nancy Lopes, I hope I'm pronouncing that correctly, L-O-P-E-S for the court reporter Am I correct?

A L-O-P-E-S, right

Q Mr Williams is an individual named defendant in that case, correct?

A That's my recollection, yes

Q That case was actually filed last year and the motion to dismiss the case, according to the 10-Q, was denied on January 7th of this year, correct?

A I believe that's the case, yes I would have to go back.

Q Again, the stay was requested just two or three weeks after the motion to dismiss was denied, correct?

A That's right

Q Now, I'm not going to go into the civil cases at great length, but what's your understanding of the essence of those two complaints?

A Well, I'm summarizing based upon my reading, so this is just my impression There are a number of securities fraud violations that are brought forth, including misuse of related party transactions in connection with certain warrant and other capital infusions that took place There are misleading statements that were made in connection with the promotion of the underlying substance that Star Scientific, Rock Creek, was developing, Anatabloc, if I'm speaking correctly

Q Anatabloc

A Anatabloc I'm sorry

Q And what is the stated goal, what does the case say was the goal of those false and misleading statements?

A Well, once again, this is my impression of it after reading it, so you can take that as such, it is that the statements were done in a way to promote the stock valuation so that the stock valuation would appear to be higher from time to time

Q And also to keep the company going, essentially, correct?

A Well, that's right, because the company has lost a considerable amount of money over the years It has been in a situation of raising capital from time to time So obviously, the higher the stock price, the lower the amount of dilution that a shareholder existing would suffer

Q And by keeping the company going, the complaint alleges that Mr Williams and others received a variety, we will get into specifics, but a number of different benefits as a result of that, correct?

A That's right

Q And the complaint specifically asks for restitution presumably of those specific benefits, correct?

A I believe that's right

Q And one count, for example, in the Skillman case, Count One is a breach of fiduciary duty, specifically for unnecessary expenses Is that correct? At Paragraph 70 of the first case?

A Just one moment, please Yes

Q All right In addition to restitution, we will come back to those issues in a moment, the defense of these two cases, based upon your experience with the various companies you have been on the board of and on the audit committee of, what impact would the defense of these two cases have had just generally on any company?

A Well, the obvious, I mean, the cost of defense, whether it is covered by directors and officers liability insurance or some other insurance, is clearly a cost

There is a management cost of the time that has to be devoted to the discovery process, the deposition process, among other things That takes away from the ability to run the business and go forward with the business plan

Q Is it fair to say, based on your experience in these two cases, based on the timing of the stay as we referenced, these cases were just beginning that discovery and deposition process?

A That seemed to be the case from my experience

Q The real expenses were in the immediate future, not in the immediate past

A Presumably, there would be an order of discovery and, you know, off they would go

Q Despite that, does the 10-Q and other documents reference the extraordinary legal expenses that Star Scientific was paying?

A Yes, it did

Q And do you recall the numbers that the 10-Q was using?

A I think that the 10-Q referenced a figure of something in excess of $6 million.

Q $6 9 million?

A Sounds right, yes

Q And that, of course, is for not only these two cases, but also the investigation, the securities investigation that the government had been undertaking of Star, correct?

A I believe that's the totality of all of their litigation and investigation exposure

Q Keeping that and going forward, based on your experience, would Star incur expenses along that same magnitude going forward, in the millions of dollars?

A I don't know I couldn't hazard a specific figure But my own experience as an expert in litigation and seeing what my bills are, never mind what the other bills are, it is very expensive for sure

Q So let's then focus specifically on Star Scientific Your understanding is that Star Scientific changed its name to Rock Creek; is that correct?

A Yes

Q So if I use, if I use the term Star Scientific, you will understand that it is interchangeable with Rock Creek?

A Right

Q And so the 10-Q for, you said you examined the 10-Q for Rock Creek for the period during which this stay was granted; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Let me walk through that with you just briefly Going to Page 4 of the 10-Q, that's a balance sheet, correct?

A Yes, Page 4, it is titled "The Condensed Consolidated Balance Sheets as of March 31st, 2014, Unaudited "

MR. SMALL: I've forgotten who I've given what Did I give the Court a copy of the 10-Q?

THE COURT: No

(Document proffered to Court)

BY MR SMALL:

Q Page 4 is the balance sheet, correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Towards the bottom of page four, it gives the figure for the total net equity of the company as of that date; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And that's essentially $9 9 million.

A Yes $9,975,000 is the stockholders equity as of March 31st, 2014, Your Honor

Q And the next page, Page 5, is the Statement of Operations, correct?

A Yes

Q And that gives the total again or loss just for that quarter, correct?

A That's correct

Q And the net loss for that quarter is how much?

A $9,830,000

Q Am I correct that you have a company with a net worth of $9 9 million, and just in that one quarter they lost $9 8 million?

A That's what it says

Q If that pattern continues, in your experience, what happens?

A Well, it is rather evident You know, if you look at the composition of the balance sheet, they had $8,379,000 in cash at the end of March, you know If their burn rate was such that it was continuing at that nine million or so dollar rate, they would be out of cash and have to find other resources

Q If accountants preparing a 10-Q are concerned about the legitimacy of the going concern, what do they do in your experience?

A Well, what they do is they recognize the fragile nature by adding language in the 10-Q to speak what I spoke about earlier, that the judgment is that the company has enough resources to get through one more operating cycle, one calendar period, one fiscal year

Q If you turn to Page 8 of the 10-Q, do you find that language at Page 8? I believe at the bottom?

A Yes I'm sorry, I was just on the wrong -- the pagination isn't apparent That's where it says, "The company believes it has sufficient funds to operate through the first quarter of 2015 Depending on market conditions and the price of its common stock, the company may decide to seek additional funds before that time There can be no assurance that the company will be successful in obtaining such funding at commercially-reasonable terms "

Q Based upon your experience and expertise, that statement made in March of this year, what's the significance of that statement? Or made as of March of this year, I should say.

A It is putting the reader on notice, the investor on notice that this is a fragile financial situation, that additional funds are likely to be needed, assuming the burn rates existent at that time

Q And given the fragile and precarious situation of the company, given what you have talked about about the likely expense of litigation, and based upon your expertise and experience, what was the commercial effect of the stay?

A Well, if you didn't have to spend the money at that point in time and it was delayed, it is, to use a term, it is giving the company a chance to live another day; as it says, go out to seek additional financing given its circumstances

Q And if the stay allows the company to live another day, I take it the stay also allows people who are receiving things of value as a result of that to continue to benefit

A Well, sure To the extent that the company has resources and can continue to meet its obligations, then of course, you know, that stream of cash would continue to flow

Q And let me just briefly go through a few of those issues with you, sir Both complaints allege that one of the motives for the false and misleading actions was to either inflate or at least maintain the value of shares of Star Scientific, correct?

A That's my recollection

Q And in that Mr Williams and others benefited by the value of the shares being maintained, correct?

A One would expect

Q And to the extent the stay allows this to remain a going concern, that would have the same impact It would continue to maintain the value of those shares

A It preserves the status quo

Q What impact does that have on Mr Williams?

A I think it has significant impact

Q How is that?

A Mr Williams owned 9 3 percent of the company based upon a proxy that was filed for the year ended December of 2013

THE COURT: Let me ask you a question You said it preserves the status quo Why wouldn't the stock go down? You've got a 10-Q that describes a very shaky company Why wouldn't it go down?

THE WITNESS: It did It was trading at $ 59 a share last Friday.

THE COURT: So --

THE WITNESS: So there you go.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

BY MR SMALL:

Q But if the company had to incur millions of dollars of additional expense, what might have happened?

A It could conceivably go lower or zero

Q And the second issue that the complaint raises in terms of Mr Williams and others benefitting by continuing the company as a going concern related to payments to Mr Williams, correct?

A That's my recollection, yes

Q And the first category involved direct compensation to Mr Williams; is that correct?

A Right

Q In the year 2011, based upon your review of the documents, had the company been operating at a profit or a loss?

A Loss

Q For how many years?

A Oh, I think since its inception, was what the 10-K said

Q For at least ten years the company had been operating at a loss, correct?

A I believe that's right

Q And specifically, in 2011, did the company operate at a loss?

A I believe it did, yes

Q How much, do you remember?

A 37 million

Q And despite operating at a $37 million loss, what was Mr Williams' compensation in 2011?

A The allegation in the complaint was that it was something in excess of nine million

Q Now, by 2014, Mr Williams was no longer -- I'm sorry, the complaint alleges that the false and misleading statements allowed him to maintain those high levels of compensation, correct?

A Yes

Q And the complaint is seeking restitution, as I said before, I think.

A That's what it says

Q Now, by the time of the stay, am I correct, Mr Williams was no longer receiving a fixed salary; is that correct?

A That's right

Q But he was receiving other very direct benefits, correct?

A Yes

Q What kinds of benefits did you find?

A In reading the proxy, Your Honor, he was entitled to, what I could find immediately, was at least four categories of benefits, three of which would be considered perquisites One was the payment of an automobile allowance of some $65,000 a year The second was payment of insurance premiums of something in excess of $50,000 per year

Q Can I just interrupt, that's life insurance?

A Life insurance, yes

Q The company is paying Mr Williams over $55,000 in premiums just on life insurance?

A That's what it means

Q All right

A And last of all, approximately $28,000 for club benefits So the aggregate, Your Honor, is about $148,000 of cash payments for his benefit The fourth category was to continued use of his jet that he was chartering

Q When you say that, in other words, Mr Williams owns a company that owns a jet, correct?

A That's my understanding, right

Q And Mr Williams' company that owns the jet charters that jet to Star Scientific?

A I've seen that, yes

Q Which he is also the primary shareholder of, correct?

A A large shareholder of, yes

Q And so those four benefits continued, were allowed to continue to the extent that the company remains a going concern, correct?

A Right

Q And in addition to that, the company remains a going concern, and there is a stay on the litigation Are there any other benefits that Mr Williams, in your expertise, received?

A Well, I think that there potentially is the benefit that Mr Williams might be able to sell some of his stock even at these depressed prices

Q Is there a specific rule that covers that?

A I think that goes into Rule 144, and that would require a legal analysis But there are some very complicated, formulaic percentages of amount of stock that an individual in his capacity would be allowed to sell

Q It would allow him to get additional money out of Star Scientific or out of his investment, correct?

A It wouldn't be out of Star Scientific It would be out of selling the stock.

Q If there were not a stay, based on your experience and expertise, would he be able still to sell under Rule 144?

A That would call for a legal conclusion. But in my business experience, if the stay weren't there, at least in my direct experience in public companies, counsel, General Counsel would say, "Nobody is buying or selling a single share while we have these kinds of things going on " Locked out is something that has happened to me from time to time

Q So in each of these ways, were you able to conclude or analyze this matter in terms of benefits Mr Williams received or would likely have received based upon the stay?

A That's what I have seen so far

MR. SMALL: Nothing further, Your Honor Thank you.

THE COURT: Government?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Good morning, Mr Kosowsky

A Good morning

Q My name is David Harbach I'm one of the lawyers representing the government I'd like to start my examination of you, please, with just confirming the materials that you reviewed and relied on, in particular for your opinions that you rendered in the second half of your testimony about the value of the government's intervention and stay in these civil suits Okay?

A Sure

Q So I believe you said that, I was trying to take notes on the catalog that counsel asked you about, but if I could ask you to please focus your attention on the materials that you reviewed in connection with your opinion on this subject alone You mentioned the 10-Q and you mentioned some other financial forms that the company is required to file You mentioned Form 4's Can you tell me what else you looked at? The complaints, right?

A Yes, Attorney Just to kind of go back through memory and try to recite it again, I mean clearly the March 31st 10-Q, the 10-K for the year ended 2013, the 10-K amendment that was filed I looked at a number of 8-K items, and I have a subscription to EDGAR Online, EDGAR Pro, so I didn't print all of them out, but there were quite a number of 8-K filings that I looked at There were Forms 4 that had been furnished to me before by counsel, it is my recollection for Mr Williams

Q What about on the litigation side, apart from the complaints? What terms did you review in connection with any of the lawsuits, in particular, the two that the stays?

A No, I did not

Q You mentioned,a moment ago, I should say a little while ago, that your hourly rate was $575; is that right?

A Yes

Q And you mentioned the courtesy that you extended to Mr McDonnell My question for you is, what percentage of your clients in your business actually end up paying the full $575 an hour full freight?

A Well, it is very hard to put a percentage on that, Attorney, because ultimately when I judge the billing it is myself and everyone else in my practice, and I customarily make reductions for efficiency and other things So it is hard to say I don't really -- there is rarely a case that is just me alone

Q Understood.

A It is very hard to say that the full realization is there

Q When you said a moment ago that customarily you do reductions, does that mean that more often than not you might give a discount or reduce your rate?

A Well, it is not so much a matter of giving a discount or reducing my rate It is me judging the fairness of the bill, given the efficiency, the time expended. I look at it from a commercial point of view

A I couldn't break that down

Q You couldn't?

A No To me, it is a combined task. It is all the knowledge that I have accumulated to date I couldn't break it out

Q Do you think that half and half is even approximately right, or could you even say that?

A I don't think I could even say that

Q Could you say which task you spent more time on?

A Well, initially, the first task was judging and doing a forensic analysis of the McDonnells' financial affairs, so that's where it originally started, sure

Q My question was whether you can tell me which task you spent more time on as between assessing the value of the government's stay or the value -- excuse me, the condition of the McDonnells' finances

MR SMALL: This may be interesting cross-examination, but I'm not sure it has to do with methodology

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q How many times have you been retained by a criminal defendant, sir?

A Oh, once again, I'm looking back over a long period of time, but I would say it is at least a hundred.

Q Incidentally, on this subject, you also mentioned among the materials that you reviewed, you mentioned an interview with Mr ,McDonnell

A Yes

Q When was that?

A A couple of months ago

Q How many times did you interview with him?

A I've interviewed Mr McDonnell at least twice, once extensively

Q At least twice You think it may have been more than that?

A I think it might have been, yes

Q Were these meetings in person or over the phone?

A They were over the phone Video.

Q Video conference?

A Video conference in one case

Q Did you take any notes of your interviews with Mr McDonnell?

A I'm sure I did.

Q And did you rely on those notes in formulating your opinions?

A I would have to go back and look at them, Attorney, but you know, everything that comes to my attention I consider I would have to go back and look and see if there was something he said back then that I made note of to really answer your question with specificity But you know, in the context of what I do, I try to take it all into account somehow

Q Understood. All I'm asking you is to confirm for me, if you recall, whether you took into account the information that Mr McDonnell provided you in those interviews in formulating your opinions

A I would have done that, yes

Q Did you?

A I did, sure

Q You mentioned that you read the complaints in the two civil suits in which the government has moved to intervene and stay discovery I'm right about that, correct?

A Yes, you are

Q And let me ask you: In connection with your board service and also your experience serving in various capacities for corporations, do you know what pre-judgment interest is?

A Yes

Q And you are aware, are you not, that both of the complaints at issue here seek interest as part of the damages in that litigation?

A I don't recall that specifically, but it wouldn't surprise me that they would be looking for that remedy

Q All right And to the extent that there are any gains or benefits to the company, say, associated with their litigation costs, you testified about that, right?

A Yes

Q Would you not agree with me that to the extent that there are any gains associated with deferring litigation costs, that those might be offset by at least, to some degree, by pre-judgment interest in the event of a recovery at the end of the civil litigation?

A That's a possibility Way into the future Sure

Q Now, you have read, have you not, the notices that the defense has provided to the government concerning the bases of your testimony?

A Yes, sir

Q You reviewed them before they were provided to the government, correct?

A I reviewed them with them as they were completing them. I don't remember if I saw a final copy before they were filed

Q And did you also review the brief that the defendants wrote, at least the portion of the brief that discusses your opinions and the basis for them?

A Yes, I did.

Q Now, I recall that when you were discussing your experience with counsel, you mentioned that you had some experience in assessing risk and the impact of litigation.

Do you recall that testimony?

A Yes, I do

Q You would agree with me, would you not, that you are not holding yourself out to be an expert on litigation risk, are you?

A No

Q And indeed, you are not an expert on litigation risk

A As --

MR SMALL: Objection, Your Honor I'm not sure what we are talking about between the litigation risk

THE COURT: Overruled. He can ask him.

THE WITNESS: Maybe you could just refine that a little bit

BY MR HARBACH:

Q I understood you to say on direct examination that you had some experience with, quoting as best I could write it down, assessing risk and impact of litigation Does that sound like something you said on direct?

A Yes

Q That's what I am talking about

A Yes, sitting as a corporate board member, sitting as a consultant, sitting as a participant in a lot of litigation, I have had many, many deliberations with clients, directly with other colleagues, to try to assess the risk of litigation and try to assess what a reasonable and fair settlement might be

Q And in doing so, you consult with lawyers in that task, do you not?

A Absolutely

Q Because you are not a lawyer

A That's right

Q But here, you didn't do any consulting with Mr White; you just read his testimony, right?

A That's right

Q I believe you also testified in connection with your experience in assessing risk and impact of litigation that you could not put an exact dollar figure on the value of the government's intervention and stay in this case; am I right about that?

A I think that's -- yeah, that's fair

Q I believe you also said, in explaining yourself, that it requires judgment based on a given set of facts

A That's right

Q And I would like to talk a little bit about the 10-Q now that you have testified some about When did you review this document? And for the record, I'm talking about the 10-Q that was filed on May 12th of 2014 Is that the document you have in front of you, sir?

A Yes

Q When did you review that?

A I looked at this within the last few weeks I just don't specifically remember when I -- I have been incredibly busy over the last month-and-a-half or so, so I just don't specifically remember But sometime in the last month More intensively over the last week

Q How intensively have you reviewed this since Mr White testified?

A Well, I've read it a couple times since he has testified, sure

Q I believe you were asked by counsel about a figure of some $6 9 million that you testified the 10-Q reported as legal fees Do you recall that testimony?

A I think I do, yes

Q You would agree with me, would you not, that the figure encompasses costs and expenses of the company beyond the two lawsuits that the government -- in which the government moved to intervene and stay Right?

A Yes That's right To be fair, there were a number of investigations on other matters So there's a lot of expense that they are burdened with for a variety of matters

Q In addition to the investigation, there was an internal investigation that Star was working on that comprised a portion of that expense, did it not?

A I believe that's right, yes

Q And in addition to that, besides the two lawsuits for which you have reviewed the complaints, there are other lawsuits out there, right?

A That's what the disclosures in the Q and the K say, yes

Q You are aware, are you not, that the government, the federal government, has not moved to intervene and stay the discovery in any suits other than the two, the complaints which we have been talking about today

A That's my understanding

Q If memory serves in connection with this testimony surrounding the 10-Q, I wrote down that you said something about not being able to hazard a specific figure, but it is very expensive Do you recall that testimony? I think it was as pertains to discovery and litigation costs

A Oh, okay Yes

Q All right Am I right that your testimony as you sit here today is that you could not hazard a specific figure as to the amount of money -- excuse me, as to the amount of the benefit that accrued to Mr Williams as a result of the government's having moved to intervene and stay in the civil suits?

A In terms of a specific amount, there is insufficient data to tease that out, of that $6 9 million number, for example

Q There is insufficient data or you have just reviewed insufficient data?

A I think both'

Q Okay You are aware, are you not, that having read the brief that counsel filed concerning your testimony as an expert, that counsel have represented that your testimony, quote, will be limited to quantifying the value of the financial benefits the government has conferred on Mr Williams and Star Scientific, end quote You are aware of that, aren't you?

A Yes, I am.

Q You would agree with me that you have told me twice now that you could not provide an exact figure, and indeed, you could not hazard a specific figure to affix to that benefit; isn't that true?

A Well, that's partly true There are, as I testified earlier, there are certain specific elements that we have identified But to go beyond that, sir, with an estimate of the cost of discovery and other expert costs in connection with those two cases that were stayed, I don't know -- I don't have data with respect to the D&O policy and when that limit is hit and how that might work

Q Excuse me for interrupting, but if I could talk about D&O for one second. That would surely impact your analysis, wouldn't it?

A Well, it certainly would

Q How so?

A Well, given just my own experience with D&O policies, I don't know what their limit would be, but it would seem to me that with the number of cases they have, the amount of money they are spending, it is certainly possible that they could hit their limits given the complexity of the matters before them.

Q Indeed, and to the extent there is D&O coverage for the directors and officers liability coverage, that would surely impact any effort to quantify the amount of benefit that accrued to Mr Williams as a result of the government's intervening and staying these lawsuits; isn't that true?

A That is true, as well with the proviso that if a finding of fraud, at least in my experience, if fraud is found, sometimes the D&O carriers say, "Fine, we advanced the money, but we have a finding of fraud. We want all of our money back It is your nickel " That could happen

Q Understood. I understood your testimony further to be that you haven't taken that issue, meaning D&O insurance, into account in formulating your opinions

A I've recognized it as an issue, but I don't have specific data to be able to, you know, to put the pencil to it

Q You also talked during your direct testimony about, at a section when counsel was asking you about the commercial effect of the stay You testified, I believe, that it was giving the company the chance to live another day Do you recall testifying to that effect?

A I do.

Q That's your opinion about the commercial effect of the stay, that it gave the company a chance to live another day?

A I think that's a fair inference to be drawn from it, that --

Q Well, excuse me for interrupting, I'm not asking for an inference, sir I'm asking you to state your opinion And I understood you to say on direct examination that your opinion about the commercial effect of the stay was that it was giving the company a chance to live another day I'm confirming that that's where you are

A That's exactly where I am.

Q Very good. Do you mean by saying that, now I am in inference land, okay, do you mean to say by that that if the government had not intervened and moved to stay, that Star would have ceased as a going concern; is that your opinion?

A It is not my opinion that it would have ceased at that moment in time. But it is my view, based upon what I have read, that the continued hemorrhaging of cash would require them, and the footnote, if they include it, puts the reader on notice that sometime within that one-year period they would have to be raising more capital or finding more resources or else their ability to continue as a going concern was in doubt

Q Absolutely But you understand that the issue before the Court now is the degree to which the government's having moved to intervene and stay these two civil lawsuits was a benefit to Mr Williams And on that score, you would agree with me, would you not, that number one, there were other lawsuits that the government didn't move to stay We have already established that, right?

A Yes, we have

Q Star remains a going concern despite that, does it not?

A With the proviso of the footnote It is costing them money to defend those lawsuits that's eroding its ability to continue

Q Of course You recall also Judge Spencer's question to you about the fact that you testified that Star's value continued to decline, and once I believe you said $ 59; isn't that right?

A I think that's what it was last Friday, yes

Q That's despite the government having having moved to intervene and stay these two civil lawsuits; isn't that true?

A That's a fact That's the number

Q You testified to some degree about Star, the company, operating at a loss I believe you said since 2011 Have I got that right?

A At least since 2011

Q At least since 2011 I believe you said in response to one of counsel's questions that in 2011, correct me if I am wrong about this on the date, that Mr Williams' compensation was in excess of $9 million; do you recall that testimony?

A I believe that's what is alleged in the complaint, yes

Q Which is my next question. Did you do any further investigation to confirm what Mr Williams' compensation was other than looking at the allegation in the complaint?

A I read a couple of the prior proxies that I believe recited some of those numbers, yes

Q And was the result of your investigation a confirmation that the allegation in the complaint is correct or incorrect?

A I wasn't looking to verify its accuracy or not I was just looking at what his compensation had been.

Q And I guess all I'm asking you is whether you remember that where you came out from that other analysis was in the ballpark of $9 million or not, or if you remember

A I just don't recall specifically as I sit here

Q Couple other points on this subject I believe you testified also that there might have been other benefits that accrued to Mr Williams as a result of the stay In particular, you mentioned that Mr Williams might have been able to sell certain Star stock. Do you recall that testimony?

A Right

Q And I believe you said that that would require a separate legal analysis, correct?

A Yes

Q And not being a lawyer, you don't really know whether Mr Williams would have been able to take advantage of that benefit or not, do you?

A I don't know It is a question I would have asked, whether he could or couldn't

Q Fair enough And my question to you, sir, is whether you are able to make that determination on your own

A Oh, no I can't make that on my own.

Q Similarly, there was another benefit that you mentioned of -- I can't read my own handwriting, I'm afraid. I'm going to have to move on I apologize

I think this is the last subject on the valuation of the stay Am I correct that you have not assessed the litigation advantages or risks specific to the allegations in the complaint as compared to the allegations in the indictment, have you?

A No, I haven't made that comparison, no

Q Have you read the indictment, sir?

A Oh, yes

Q You haven't thought about, for example, what it might mean for certain allegations in the civil suits for Mr Williams to testify in a certain way in the federal criminal trial You have not considered that, have you?

A Beyond the scope of my assignment

Q It is not part of your opinion, is it?

A No

MR. HARBACH: Can I have one second, please?

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Mr Kosowsky, you have testified at least a couple times this morning in answer to my questions about information that you lacked or that you didn't have Having insufficient data, I think you called it, in order to render an opinion. My question for you is, let's pretend that you did have everything you needed in order to attempt to quantify the amount of benefit that there would be to Mr Williams for the government's having moved to intervene and stay these two lawsuits Can you tell me what your methodology would be?

A Sure This would be, to me, a process of valuing the company with and without the effects of the stay, having had the benefit of all that information It is somewhat analogous to calculating the value of a covenant not to compete, where you make a judgment as to whether someone leaves and what would be the cost to the company of that or the harm, which is usually something that's used to determine a claim that might be made against someone, you know, who left and competed So to me, it is that sort of methodology and valuation that one could apply

Q Anything else you want to tell the Court about the methodology for that?

A Just that it is very standard, Your Honor

BY THE COURT:

Q Let me ask you a question: To somehow value a stay, isn't time an important variable, how long the stay is? Three months versus three years?

A Yes, Your Honor, the length of the stay is very important I think it can have an effect on momentum, obviously

Q And we are not talking about termination of litigation We are talking about cessation of litigation. That means that these expenses, for instance, the reserves, those will tend to stay on the books until this was resolved; is that right?

A Well, not necessarily If you haven't reached a point in the litigation where you can accurately determine what the cost might be to the company of the bad conduct, you wouldn't book that reserve until you knew that from an accounting point of view You might have some internal estimates and you might have some guidelines, but the moment that you would book it is when you said, "Yeah, there is a liability and the liability is going to be in the range of X to Y " That's when you would put it on the books, if I'm answering your question

THE COURT: All right Anything else?

MR HARBACH: I was going to turn to the other topic if it is all right with the Court

THE COURT: All right Let's take a break The court reporter needs a break 15 minutes

(Recess taken from 11:04 a.m. to 11:22 a m.)

THE COURT: All right

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Hello again, Mr Kosowsky

A Hi

Q We are going to change subjects now to the first area you testified about this morning, which was the condition of the McDonnells' finances; okay?

A Yes, sir

Q I'd like to start by trying to quickly recap the materials that you reviewed to make sure I haven't missed anything, okay?

A Okay

Q I won't ask you to do it from memory I'll give you as best I can from my notes I have that you reviewed bank statements, credit card statements, tax returns of Mr McDonnell, tax returns of MoBo, bank loan applications, an extensive series of e-mails with personnel from Pentagon Federal Credit Union, and then you also mentioned the interview you did, the interviews you did of Mr McDonnell Is there anything else for this topic that you reviewed that I have forgotten?

A I'm just trying to think based upon my recollection. Well, their connection with the tax return preparation of the McDonnells, personal returns as well as MoBo returns, there was a lot of information that I reviewed, detail information

Q Backup information for the tax returns?

A Backup for the individual tax returns as well as the MoBo tax returns, or communications with their tax preparer, and I'm sure I'm forgetting something There has been a lot of information, sir

Q Okay And then I want to confirm something I think I heard you say on direct: that at least as far as this task is concerned, you had everything you needed

A Yes, I think that's fair.

Q Okay Now, I'd like to do something similar to what counsel did with you earlier this morning, which is to refer to the second supplemental notice that the defense provided And do you still have a copy of it, sir? Page four is what I am interested in

A Yes, I have it, sir

Q Okay This is the same list of six reasons for your conclusion that counsel went through with you earlier today, okay?

A Yes

Q Am I right that as far as they pertain to your opinions, this list of reasons is, as best as you can tell, correct and complete?

A Yes That's to the best of my recollection and knowledge, yes

Q All right So let's walk through them now The first one is the one that talks about the completed financial statements that the McDonnells submitted to the Pentagon Federal Credit Union show that they have a positive net worth I'd like to focus on that one just for a second, okay?

MR. HARBACH: And Your Honor, I provided to counsel one exhibit May I please tender it to the Court?

THE COURT: Sure

(Document proffered to Court)

MR HARBACH: I was going to give one to the witness, Judge

THE COURT: All right

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Have you seen this document before, Mr Kosowsky?

A I may have I've seen a number that look like this I would have to go back and confirm it, but I'll take your representation

Q You would agree with me that this is a uniform residential loan application And if you would turn to the third page of the exhibit, it is signed apparently by the McDonnells on February 1st of 2013 Do you see that there, sir?

A Yes

Q And my question is, is this not the financial statement that the McDonnells submitted to PenFed that you relied on?

MR. SMALL: Objection, Your Honor We specifically asked to go into the various loan applications with this expert, and that's one that the government opposed it and the Court denied it Now this is an earlier draft The government is well aware of that And if we want to go into it as an expert, I'll start all over and put him on as an expert. But the government, to have opposed talking about this document and the other documents, and the Court granted the government's motion to oppose it, now he wants to talk about this early draft? I don't see what that has to do with methodology of the opinions he has given here

MR. HARBACH: I was just going to say, I can assure the Court, I think I understand counsel's concern and my point with this is quite limited.

THE COURT: Well, limited or not, this is not something that you relied on?

THE WITNESS: It may very well have been one of many in the process, Your Honor I can't tell from --

MR. HARBACH: It was among the documents produced by the defense as a document he relied on.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained

MR. HARBACH: Very good, Your Honor

BY MR HARBACH:

Q You would agree with me would you not, sir, that with respect to the first reason that's listed there, discerning that the completed financial statements, whatever they are, show that the McDonnells had a positive net worth, that's just a matter of looking at a block on the financial statement for assets, looking at a block on the financial statement for liabilities, and summing the two?

A Well, that's the ultimate end result, just like any balance sheet Sure

Q That's right.

A But I don't know what your point is

Q My point is that if I understand it correctly, one of the reasons for your opinion is just what the financial statements that the McDonnells filled out show Isn't that true?

A Well, it is partly true, but it is also true that I looked at the underlying documentation to support the entries on the financial statement to assess its reliability So, you know, I tried to pick it apart to, you know, not just rely on a single set of statistics

Q Okay Let's look at the second sentence of the first reason in the second supplemental notice It says, "That PenFed approved their loan application indicates in and of itself that the McDonnells' financial condition was sound " Do you see that there?

A I do

Q You would agree with me that, at most, that means that Pentagon Federal Credit Union thought that the McDonnells' finances were sound enough to extend them a loan

A Right And in the safety and soundness of any financial institution in this day and age, of which I'm intimately aware, you have to take that into whole context You can't just rely singly on one item, you know, where there might be other effects on the individual's financial affairs that could come to bear. You could have the risk, like Mr Williams with all of these lawsuits, that you would have to try to judge as to whether you want to lend money to somebody that has that kind of risk

Q Of course My point here is that this reason that's listed in the second supplemental notice is really just you adopting Pentagon Federal Credit Union's conclusion, isn't it?

A Well, I'm agreeing with their conclusion in that respect Adopting, agreeing I mean, it is, to me, they went through the process, the loan was approved. That's my view

Q That's right And the fact that the loan was approved is what this reason really means You are relying on PenFed's approval of the loan to inform your judgment about whether their finances were sound; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q The next reason: "That Mr McDonnell had access to considerable liquid assets such that he could meet his financial obligations as they became due " Tell me what "considerable" means

A Well, taken in the context of meeting his financial obligations, which at that time were generally his personal intentions, his credit card payments as they came due, and whatever cash calls he might have for supporting his investments I mean, considerable, there was enough.

Q There was enough That's what it means

A Sure

Q Did you perform an analysis over a span of time of Mr McDonnell's assets on a given day versus his liabilities on a given day or month?

A Yes On an annual basis at least

Q On an annual basis?

A Right

Q In other words, did you perform an analysis on a month-to-month basis about whether Mr McDonnell had adequate assets to meet his financial obligations?

A No, I saw no need to get to that level of granularity

Q It was sufficient for your opinion to proceed at the annual level

A Generally speaking, yes

Q You would agree with me that part of the analysis of whether Mr McDonnell had access to considerable liquid assets implicates the concept of additional loans, right?

A Not necessarily

Q Okay Well then, what other asset access is encompassed by that phrase?

A Well, he had his retirement plans that he could take payments from if he wished.

Q Anything else?

A My recollection is that there were distributions that were made from time to time from one of the real estate ventures that came with some level of regularity. As well as his own, the regular ebb and flow of his own cash flow

Q In the assessment that you did earlier that you testified about a couple moments ago that you said was on an annual basis from which you concluded that he had considerable assets such that Mr McDonnell could meet his financial obligations, do you mean to say that part of that analysis included some hypothesis about him liquidating retirement assets?

A It is not actually a hypothesis He actually did take a distribution in one year

Q Do you recall how much that was?

A Something in excess of $10,000

Q And do you recall the purpose for the liquidation of that piece of assets?

A Not to my recollection, no

Q Any other occasions besides that ten grand that you recall where that occurred?

A Not that I remember

Q Back to my initial question about loans Do I understand you to say that in this reason number two here, namely, Mr McDonnell's access to considerable liquid assets, do I understand you to say that you are not taking into account his ability to obtain loans at least for this reason?

A No, I am taking that into account as yet another reason, because as history showed in connection with MoBo, there were individual, and I previously testified, there were other loans that were taken from individuals, his father, Dr Davies, and ultimately Mr Williams, from time to time to meet the obligations and needs of MoBo

Q Earlier when you testified that you performed an analysis on an annualized basis of Mr McDonnell's ability to meet his financial obligations and his liquid assets in comparison to that, did you prepare any reports reflecting your findings?

A No --

THE COURT: Wait a minute Before you go on, let me make sure I understand your answer to this last question about whether or not you are considering the ability to get loans in coming to your number two . rationale Or is it someplace else in here?

THE WITNESS: No, it is included in that, Your Honor, to the extent that he had the sources, he actually had the following sources: He had his retirement plan, he had his own cash accounts, he had distributions from partnerships He had, if he needed, in analyzing his credit cards, he had available credit that he could take from his credit cards to meet his financial needs, as well as the, you know, from time to time the borrowings on the real estate ventures from other than financial institutions Those would just be a summary of what I would look at to say does he have resources "Considerable liquid resources" would encompass those sorts of things.

THE COURT: Normally you don't think of creating liabilities as being liquid assets

THE WITNESS: Agreed. Agreed But it is a resource in that respect

THE COURT: All right Go ahead

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Let's move on to the third reason You state that

"Mr McDonnell had access to a portion of the proceeds of his father's estate, which was considerable He also had a right to significant executor's fees " You would agree with me that you don't need to be an expert to understand that, do you, sir?

A That's just a matter of he had access to money or he didn't, isn't it?

MR. SMALL: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled. That's a valid question.

THE WITNESS: To answer your question, I think that this goes to the idea that he had other resources coming to him.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q I understand All I'm asking is, the fact that he had access to some proceeds from his dad's estate or that he had the right to significant executor's fees, my question is, would you not agree with me that you don't need to be an expert to understand that? That's just some money that was available to him or it wasn't

A I suppose not in that context

Q Look at the fourth reason, please It says: "Taken together, Mr McDonnell and his sister as the two partners in MoBo had sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the obligations of the partnership."

Now, you testified, did you not, that part of your methodology for valuing business interests was, I believe what you mentioned was IRS 59-60?

A Yes, Revenue Ruling 59-60, right

Q You describe that as the gold standard for doing business valuation; is that right?

A Yes, that's right

Q Your lawyer -- excuse me, not your lawyer, counsel for Mr McDonnell inquired of you on direct whether you followed IRS 59-60 in doing your analysis, and your answer was that you were guided by it Do you recall that testimony?

A That's right

Q Do you mean to say that you didn't follow IRS 59-60?

A I wasn't engaged to do a valuation to follow it in its entirety But I think that it is a good illustration of methodology that one would use as a valuator or as a forensic accountant to analyze the situation such as this I offered it as an aid to the Court

Q I understand I want to make sure I understand what you just said a moment ago. Did you say that it was not part of your task to value the assets of MoBo as a business?

A That's right

Q Okay Looking at Number 4, can you explain to me how you could analyze whether Mr. McDonnell and his sister had sufficient assets to meet the obligations of the business if you did not conduct an analysis of the assets of the business?

A Well, but I did conduct an analysis of the assets of MoBo I just didn't appraise the real estate because I'm not a real estate appraiser. But I did look at all of MoBo's financial records over several years, including its tax returns, QuickBooks records, the notes and the like from the tax preparer as to a variety of the detailed things that he did. I looked at Maureen McDonnell's, his sister's, tax returns, W-2's, a variety of financial statements that she had provided in connection with the MoBo financings, to look at the totality of the Governor's and his sister's financial affairs

Q This Reason Number 4 says: "Sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the obligations of the partnership " Can you help me understand whether that's indexed to time at all? In other words, was that true 100 percent of the time, at certain key dates? What was the timing of your analysis to know on that?

A I went back and looked, to the best of my recollection, I was looking at records that go back, searching my memory, but I think at least as far back as 2006 or 2007 So this process went through the financial crisis And I just want to be sure that everyone understands that financing a vacation property after the financial crisis is not exactly an easy thing to do So I was looking at this in the context of how they were running the partnership, how they were meeting its obligations, and doing their refinancing from time to time I mean, it spanned several years' worth of review I wasn't really isolating on any particular moment in time I was formulating it based on the total time period.

Q I understand. And that really gets to the question of what "sufficient" means That's what I am trying to understand Were there occasions during the time period when they did not have sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the partnership's obligations?

A There were moments in time, for example, when they had late fees, when they had to go and have a cash call on the partners to put in cash to meet its obligations So that's a bit of a chicken and an egg problem. You might say, "Gee, we don't have enough money in the bank account to make the mortgage payment; send me $5,000 so we can make it " If you tested it at that specific moment and looked at the bank account, the answer would probably be no But if you knew the partners were coming up with the money to do it, then the answer would be yes

Q I understand exactly what you mean with the chicken or egg I want to make sure I understand your opinion When you say "sufficient," what you mean to say is that they could have gone out and gotten additional money at any particular point in time sufficient to cover the partnership's obligations Is that what you are saying?

A What I'm saying is they had a variety of ways of getting the resources that they need to pay the bills of the partnership, make the improvements and do whatever needed to be done by way of their own resources, loans, or otherwise

Q I thank the Court for its patience This is the last question on this one Is there any time during the time period that you analyzed where you would say that Mr McDonnell and his sister did not have sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the obligations of the partnership, at any time?

A I don't recall seeing that, but I don't recall looking at it from that specific point of view

Q Looking at Number 5, this one says, "Mr McDonnell actively took steps to minimize his credit card debt by obtaining the lowest credit card interest rates " My first question is, would you not agree with me that on balance, it is much more important to minimize the credit card debt itself than the interest rate?

A Oh, sure If you can get away with no debt, that's better

Q In other words, I'm going to be clear, I'm not talking about Mr or Ms McDonnell here But hypothetically, if somebody had eight credit cards, five of which were maxed out, it is not going to be much comfort to you that those cards have low interest rates, is it?

A Well, it would if they were maxed out because you wouldn't be increasing the balance or the cash flow needs If you want to maintain the balance, the lower interest rate is a good thing The dollars go farther

Q Indeed, and you would agree with me, also, that you don't need any particular expertise to understand that lower interest rates mean lower monthly payments, right?

A I would say no

Q You don't need a CPA to understand that, do you, sir?

A Probably not

Q Okay The last one, Number 6 This one says: "Mr McDonnell's future earning power was substantial as demonstrated by the multi-million-dollar salaries commanded by retired high-level public officials " You are not an expert on the market for the speaking circuit for retired politicians, are you, sir?

A No, I'm not

Q You have no specialized experience in how salaries or fees or honoraria for such speaking engagements are set, do you?

A No, I don't

Q You just assumed that since other politicians have made a bunch of money, so might Mr McDonnell

A And in my interview with him.

Q And leaving aside for the moment whether that's even right, there is no expertise required to draw that conclusion, is there, sir?

A Probably not

Q All you have to do is dig up examples of big speaking fees for other prominent politicians and say because it worked for them, it might work for Mr McDonnell

A Possibility

MR. HARBACH: Can I have a second, please, Judge?

THE COURT: Sure

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR. HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Just a couple more questions for you, Mr Kosowsky My colleague reminds me that your lawyer testified or elicited on direct examination your view that you still have some work to do related to the McDonnells' finances; do you recall that testimony?

A Yes

Q What work is it that remains to do, sir?

A Well, as is usual and customary in my practice, I will in preparation for my ultimate testimony, if I am allowed to testify, will be to probably go back over everything just to see if my conclusions would remain the same and see if any other information potentially might be needed, that I would inquire and ask for

Q And so going over it to revisit everything, you are not suggesting that you would come up with additional opinions

A I don't think so No

MR. HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Go ahead.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SMALL:

Q Mr Kosowsky, counsel is talking about sufficient assets in MoBo MoBo is an equal partnership, correct?

A 50/50, yes

Q And counsel didn't ask you about the other partner Just quickly, do you have an understanding about the sister, Maureen's, assets?

A Yes

Q She is a successful professional in her own right, correct?

A From what I saw, yes

Q From what you saw, she has an income of approximately what annually?

A Her W-2 for the year 2013, I think, was in excess of a half-million dollars, Your Honor

Q All right So making a $5,000 contribution to, in case they got a late fee, would not have been a problem for her, right?

A I didn't see it as such.

Q In fact, she also has liquid assets Forget about the retirement fund. The sister also has very substantial liquid stock assets, correct?

A That's my recollection.

Q And just very roughly, what was the approximate value of those liquid assets?

A Best of my recollection, Your Honor, I think it might have been approached a million dollars

Q So the notion that between the two of them they couldn't come up with a couple thousand dollars for a mortgage payment would be silly, wouldn't it?

A Well, characterized -- the money was there

Q Okay You were asked about D&O insurance Now, as a major stockholder of Star Scientific, Jonnie Williams would have access to the D&O policy, right?

A Well, he was chairman and CEO. He would have certainly known about it At least at that point in time

Q And so if the government interviewed Jonnie Williams for the seventh or eighth time two weeks ago, they presumably could have asked him, "Gee, can you give us a D&O policy?"

A I mean, that's beyond me I assume so.

Q And you were asked about point number three, where the Governor had the right to significant executor's fees but did not take them. Explain what happened there, if you know

A Well, Your Honor, in discussions with the Governor, he told me that he was entitled to an executor's fee of something in excess of $30,000 for the father's estate, which as I said to you earlier in my testimony, he had waived and just let things go amongst the siblings however they were supposed to go, reconciliations of things that occurred during the lifetime of his father that were reckoned with in the final divvying up of the estate

Q So he was entitled to a significant fee and chose not to take it, correct?

A I would say

Q Did that have an impact on your view of his soundness financially?

A Well, it just said to me that it seemed generous But that's a personal decision that he made Beyond the fact that the statistic is the statistic and he decided not to take the money

Q Lastly, you were asked about whether Star Scientific had taken a reserve for these two cases Do you recall those questions?

A Yes And His Honor had questions about that as well

Q And have you had an opportunity to take a look at the 10-Q, the most recent 10-Q?

A Yes And if you look at it --

Q I direct you to Page 11

A Page 11, the last sentences, Your Honor, in each of the two summaries of the class action lawsuits and shareholder derivative suits, if you read the last sentences, it says, quote: However, at this time it cannot predict the probable outcome of these claims Accordingly, no amounts have been accrued in the consolidated financial statements Which is consistent with what I told you earlier When you get to the point you know what your liability is, you have to book it

Q Once a company, in your experience and expertise, once the company does have to put in a substantial reserve for this kind of litigation, does that have an impact on the stock?

A Well, you know, sure In this particular case, given roughly $10 million of equity left, I mean, if you are talking about a million dollars' potential reserve, that's certainly material, significant, a lot, any way you want to characterize it

Q Both of these cases are here in the Eastern District of Virginia, correct?

A I believe that's right

Q Are you aware that once a case like that, once the motion to dismiss is denied, as it was there, discovery in this district moves very quickly; this is not some far future or would not have been some far future event, correct?

THE COURT: He is a CPA.

THE WITNESS: I don't know.

THE COURT: Don't answer that Anything else?

MR SMALL: No Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you You may stand down, sir

(Witness stood aside)

All right, I'll hear very brief argument if somebody wants to have something to say on this

MR SMALL: Judge, very briefly, Your Honor I think you have heard the evidence, you have seen the pleadings As to the soundness issue, time and again in grand jury testimony we have seen the government ask witnesses about whether the McDonnells were, quote, desperate, close quote, in their finances Clearly, with the intent that that be the motive for the McDonnells going to Jonnie Williams or having to go to Jonnie Williams to get a loan. And that's why the jury needs, if that is the government's position, and it is, the jury needs the assistance of an expert As the Court saw, it will not be long and complicated, very straightforward, to do what experts do, which is to pull together the evidence in a way that is helpful to the jury in assessing whether that is correct Because clearly, it is not And we, on the defense, have a need and a right to be able to demonstrate that to the jury in that fashion So I think that the methodology issues as to soundness are rock solid.

If anything, we had a problem because there is such an enormous amount of standard materials As the witness went through, this is rock solid, bedrock valuation work, well established and well maintained and well executed here So on the soundness issue, I think that's extraordinarily clear

On the stay issue, it is exactly the fact that you can't very simply put a dollar value to it that makes clear the need for expert testimony There are a number of points here, a number of factors that come into play when the government takes an action like they did, in a situation where you are not talking about staying a case involving GM, you are talking about staying a case involving a company that has lost money for ten years in a row, that lost $37 million in 2011, even though it paid Mr Williams over nine million, and a company that is teetering on the verge of going out of existence, and that event would have a number of negative impacts not just on the company, but very directly and specifically on Mr Williams And the notion that in the time period, the quarter during which the government moved to stay these two cases, this company had $9 million in assets and $9 million in losses, tells a story about as dramatically as you can

And again, it is precisely because of the complexity, because there are Rule 144 issues in terms of the sale, because much of Mr Williams' ownership is in the form of options and other complex transactions that a jury will need assistance in understanding, that is exactly why it is not simply a matter of a jury sitting there thinking, "Oh, well, they stayed a case, I guess that must mean something " No lay juror is going to have a clear notion of what an impact that would have on such an unusual situation, of a small company in a precarious situation with a major investor having all kinds of other related party and other transactions that are impacted

And again, we are not talking about lengthy testimony We accomplished it here very efficiently, and we will accomplish it in trial very efficiently But it is absolutely necessary for the jury to evaluate If the government said in a disclosure, "We have given Jonnie Williams money, but we won't tell you how much," no court would abide by that, because the jury has a right to value, to understand what that means Because if the government gave Jonnie Williams $10 for parking, that's different than if they gave him, you know, $100,000 as a witness fee or something I'm just hypothesizing, obviously

The jury has the right and we have the need to show them what is it that Jonnie Williams got And the government's decision to step into those two cases right at the beginning of discovery, right when there would be discovery, there would be depositions, there would be a number of activities, they bear the responsibility for that decision. And we have the need and the right to help the jury understand the implications of that decision and how that decision did in fact benefit Jonnie Williams in ways in which no lay juror is ever going to understand

So we would ask the Court to allow this expert, who is clearly qualified, I think in both of these areas, extraordinarily well qualified in both these areas, to give straight and forward testimony in these areas I thank the Court for its indulgence this morning

THE COURT: Thank you very much. Government?

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor Judge, I'll too try and be brief Just like with the examination, I'll take the two issues in reverse order, starting with the stay

The issue before the Court, forgive me for stating the obvious, is whether this expert can testify to the opinion that he espouses on this subject and whether the methodology that he used is sound and the information that he relied on is sound such that the Court should sanction him as an expert And the answer on both scores, but limited to the first one for now, is undeniably that he is not

I'll remind the Court the same thing I reminded the witness The defense purported to limit until today, purported to limit Mr Kosowsky's testimony on this subject to, quoting again, "quantifying the value of the financial benefits the government has conferred on Mr Williams and Star Scientific " Now, the flaws in his methodology were exposed today on cross-examination. The fact that it was oversimplified, the fact that he didn't take into account directors and officers insurance, the fact that he read nothing in connection with the civil suits other than the complaints, the fact that he didn't take into account the potential substantive disadvantages to Mr Williams, or conversely, advantages to the plaintiffs of Mr Williams testifying first He said at least twice that he had insufficient facts or data in order to render or quantify the amount of the benefit at issue here That's the question before the Court He said he couldn't do it And on the data point, I will note, I think something that -- I will note that the defense not only did not provide to the government the fact that Mr Kosowsky interviewed former Governor McDonnell, they also did not provide the notes that he plainly said that he relied on in forming his opinion. That was all news to us today

Furthermore, there has been no disclosure of Mr Kosowsky's lengthy testimony about the viability and health of Star as a company, its legitimacy as a going concern, its health, the fact whether it was teetering on the edge of bankruptcy None of that stuff was disclosed. If memory serves, Your Honor has already ruled that the witness is not permitted to comment on the benefits to Star flowing from the government's stay and -- motion to intervene and stay, excuse me Bottom line, the defendant shouldn't be allowed to get in the back door what they are not allowed to get in through the front door

..ore generally, the defendants should not be permitted to on the one hand say that they are limiting the expert testimony to quantifying the value of this benefit, that was what they touted as the big advantage to the jury, quantifying it, and then disavow that essentially because both of their witnesses say they can't do it That's not the way this is supposed to work. And Mr Kosowsky, frankly, for the reasons, all the reasons I've explained, at a minimum would not be helpful to the jury in that regard And it is certainly not the type of subject that the Court should deem him to be an expert on for all the reasons we have talked about

On the McDonnells' finances, I think it is probably helpful to return to first principles about what experts are for Rule 702(a) says that the expert's scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will help the trier of fact to understand the evidence or determine a fact in issue In the government's view, Mr Kosowsky's proposed testimony about the McDonnells' finances violates that because it is not helpful to the jury in the meaning that the rule intends We are not saying, of course not, that accounting expertise could not be helpful to a hypothetical jury We are not saying that a CPA like Mr Kosowsky is could never be competent to testify as an expert What we are saying is that the opinion that he is providing here, and the reasons for that opinion, the six of them, are in the main not informed by any accounting expertise Their conclusions are based on things that require no expertise that we went through with him today We are not talking about arcane business ledgers or accounting books and records that a lay jury would need assistance in understanding Mr Kosowsky's reasons for concluding that the McDonnells were in sound financial shape or whatever adjective he chooses to use, at one point it was no more than looking at a loan application to see whether it indicates they have net worth The loan applications are going to come into evidence in all their incarnations in this case, presumably Telling the jury to look at a box and see whether there is a positive number in that box to see whether they had net worth, that doesn't require an expert

The jury, again based on the specific reasons that have been proffered here, could just as well assess them without a separate witness rendering an opinion about it Whether that's, you know, he got money from his dad's estate, he got money as an executor And I don't think I need to say anything about the opinion from the witness today that Mr McDonnell was generous I'll just move on past that

Bottom line, Mr Kosowsky's testimony isn't helpful to the jury; therefore, it violates 702(a) It also violates 702(c), which requires that the testimony be the product of reliable principles and methods Again, based on the reasons that have been proffered here, the government would submit that there is no methodology here other than Mr Kosowsky's naked opinion. And in the words of the Supreme Court in DAUBERT, the knowledge in Rule 702 that is of assistance to a trier of fact is, quoting, connotes more than subjective belief or unsupported speculation And there were several junctures at which the reasons for Mr Kosowsky's opinion did that very thing, whether it is him making assumptions about the type of salary that Mr McDonnell could command on the speaking circuit, or, well, it was a good thing that he made an effort to reduce his interest rates on his credit cards These are just opinions that a jury is amply armed to -- they are assessments that the jury is amply armed to make on their own.

I think that's all I'll say about it, except that I would respectfully ask the Court for a quick ruling on this issue so that the government can take action.

THE COURT: It will be quick. I'll give you the last word.

MR. SMALL: Very briefly, Your Honor Two things One, on the stay, the government can't have it both ways They can't say that because we can't quantify everything, therefore it is not helpful to the jury It doesn't make any sense They are right, there are some things we can quantify We can quantify $55,000 for life insurance policies and all those things that Mr Kosowsky enumerated But it is precisely because, as he said right at the outset, when you are valuing businesses and people and events, you can't always put a precise dollar amount to it But that doesn't change the importance of going through the process and of coming to some conclusions that there is substantial value And so it is exactly that that requires an expert witness, because the jury is not going to be able to wade through by itself without assistance those kinds of considerations

So I think that the government is saying, "Well, because you can only quantify some of it, therefore it is not helpful to the jury " It is helpful to the jury to be able to quantify some of it, but it is even more helpful for the jury for the jury to understand some of those more difficult issues, where of course you can't quantify it You go through any company's 10-Q and there will be lots of things they can't quantify That's the nature of this world that we live in. But that's exactly why we have experts, to help a jury to understand on something that is this important and this central to the case.

As to soundness, I'm somewhat at a loss, I have to say "Because an average juror knows that uranium can be used in a nuclear bomb, therefore, you don't need a nuclear expert " It seems kind of silly Of course you can pick out bits and pieces of a financial analysis that everyone knows or someone could look at It is, with any expert, exactly the process of pulling that together, of making an assessment, that leads to the helpfulness And that's what DAUBERT says Are the facts, is the process one that's accepted? Yes, it is It absolutely is The government puts experts, financial experts, on all the time And they are using financial statements and other things that if you pick it apart and hold it up in isolation, and say, "Oh, you don't need an expert for this," well, of course you don't The expert's function is to pull that together That's exactly the expert's function And to say that it is not expertise because we can pick out a Factor 2 that you don't need an expert for is denying the whole concept that DAUBERT clearly supports And what I did not hear in the government's argument is that they are backing down from this desperation theory and this, you know, the late fee theory "Oh, the late fees showed, you know, that they were in financial trouble " They asked that of the bank people So if they are not backing down from that theory, which is clearly false, we have the right and the need to call a witness to help the jury understand why it is false and why it is without any basis Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right, this is what I am going to do We are going to make a concerted effort to resolve all of these issues by tomorrow, as quickly as I can, because everybody needs to know what we are doing going forward So that's how I'll spend my afternoon I'll leave it there Thank you all very much. I appreciate it.

Are there any jurors present in the courtroom whose name I did not call?

Would the jurors please stand, raise your right hand, and respond to the oath by saying, "I will " Will the defendants please stand.

(Venire Sworn.)

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, you are present this morning to be involved in the resolution of a criminal case brought by the United States against the defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell

Let me preface my preview of the case by stating what should be obvious, but what is many times not fully understood by citizens such as yourselves The jury is a vital and indispensable institution to the administration of justice here in America Indeed, the founders of this country thought that the right of a person accused of a crime to be tried by a jury representing average folk from the community that appears was so important that they provided for it in the Constitution. And in a very real sense, your presence here today and your participation in this jury selection process is part of a long and honored tradition involving hundreds of thousands of Americans over the years

Now, we who have made our careers and crafted our livelihoods and dedicated ourselves to service in the courtrooms of this nation have long since come to realize that along with the benefits of citizenship and liberty come burdens and responsibilities I say this at the outset because we want you to know we understand that jury selection can sometimes be tedious and that jury service can disrupt your daily lives This case in all likelihood will last for several weeks I certainly will do my best to see that the case moves expeditiously and efficiently towards a final resolution.

With the exception of service in the Armed Forces and voting, there is no other duty of citizenship more important than jury service. And that's why when we need you, we insist on your involvement.

Now, as I told you earlier, this is a criminal case A grand jury has indicted Mr McDonnell charging him with one count of conspiracy to commit honest services fraud, three counts of use of interstate wires to further a scheme of honest services fraud, one count of conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right, six counts of obtaining property under color of official right, and two counts of making a false statement to a financial institution.

A grand jury has indicted Ms McDonnell charging her with one count of conspiracy to commit honest services fraud, three counts of use of interstate wires to further a scheme of honest,services fraud, one count of conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right, six counts of obtaining property under color of official right, one count of making a false statement to a financial institution, and one count of obstruction of an official proceeding, to wit: a grand jury investigation.

Mr McDonnell and Ms McDonnell have pled not guilty to each of these charges In every criminal case, it is the government, the United States, that has the burden of proving the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt And this burden applies to each and every charge brought against the defendants.

Indeed, the defendants are presumed innocent of the charges This presumption remains with them unless and until the government proves his or her guilt beyond a reasonable doubt This is a standard that I will explain to you in greater detail later

Mr McDonnell is represented by Mr Henry Asbill and his associates of the Washington, D.C. office of the law firm of Jones Day Also representing Mr McDonnell is Mr John L. Brownlee of the Washington, D.C office of the law firm of Holland & Knight

Mr Asbill, would you please stand and introduce yourself to the jury venire and introduce the other folk from your firm?

MR. ASBILL: Thank you, Your Honor My name is Henry Asbill With me today are my colleagues, James Burnham, Victoria Taraktchian. I think that's it for today

THE COURT: All right Mr Brownlee, would you do the same, introduce yourself and associates from your firm, as well as your client?

MR. BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. My name is John Brownlee It is an honor for me to be here today to represent Bob McDonnell With me today, my law partner Dan Small, associates Chris Iaquinto and Elizabeth Jochum. Thank you very much. Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Just have your clients stand up Introduce your client as well

MR. BROWNLEE: This is Robert McDonnell

THE COURT: All right

MR. BROWNLEE: Thank you, Judge.

THE COURT: And Ms. McDonnell is represented by Mr William Burck of the law firm of Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan. Mr Burck, would you stand and introduce yourself as well as the other folk at your table and your client?

MR. BURCK: Yes, Your Honor, thank you very much. Good morning My name is Bill Burck. I'm with Quinn Emanuel I represent Ms McDonnell With me is my law partner, Stephen Hauss, and associate, Heather Martin. Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right, thank you. Mr Dry, would you please stand and introduce yourself to the jury, providing your name and organizational affiliation and then introduce the other folk at your table?

MR. DRY: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. My name is Mike Dry I'm with the U.S Attorney's Office in Richmond. With me is Dave Harbach, one of my fellow prosecutors, Jessica Aber, U S. Attorney's Office in Richmond, Ryan Faulconer with the U S Attorney's Office, Agent Tyler Kennedy, paralegals Laura Taylor and Bennett Starnes.

THE COURT: All right, thank you. I'm about to ask the assembled jury panel a series of questions Although each question is propounded to you as a group, you are each to consider the question as it relates to you individually and respond accordingly

Now, I'm going to frame these questions so that normally, ordinarily, the response that we would expect is no. And if your response is no, you don't have to do anything You remain seated and remain silent and your lack of movement and lack of noise will indicate the response no. If, however, your answer is anything other than no: yes, maybe, it is possible, it might be, any answer that comes to mind other than no, we want you to stand up, and then give us your name And after that, give us your response to the question.

Now, we don't want you to hesitate, we don't want you to be shy or intimidated by the occasion or the setting It is important that you answer these questions openly and honestly This is the only way that we can be certain that at the end of the process, we will have a jury that can be fair and impartial as it relates to all of the parties in this case

Now, some of these questions will duplicate questions you answered on the questionnaire that you received earlier And the reason for that is, we need a current answer to some of those questions And secondly, we may need to question you more closely regarding responses to those questions.

Now, the first question I have: Are any of you related by blood or marriage or know in any way Mr McDonnell's counsel, and I hope I have this right, Mr Henry Asbill, Mr James Burnham, and Ms Hilary Perkins; am I missing anybody?

MR. ASBILL: She is not in court today, Judge

THE COURT: All right So I called everybody who is here

MR. ASBILL: Yes, sir

THE COURT: All right Then Mr John Brownlee, Daniel Small, and Christopher Iaquinto. All right, anybody related to them, know them in any way?

Are any of you related by blood or marriage or know in any way Ms McDonnell's lawyers, William Burck, Stephen Hauss, and I think I'm missing one --

MR. BURCK: Heather Martin, Your Honor

THE COURT: Heather Martin. Any of you know or are you related to any of these individuals?

As far as you know, have you or any member of your family ever been represented by either of these law firms, Jones Day out of D C and Holland & Knight, this is their D.C office Any of you or any business owned by you, any interest that you had represented by either of these law firms?

Have you or any member of your family ever been represented by any of these individual lawyers for Mr McDonnell or Ms McDonnell?

Are any of you related by blood or marriage to, first of all, Mr Robert F McDonnell?

Are any of you related by blood or marriage to Ms Maureen G. McDonnell?

Do you or any member of your family know personally, and I'm not talking about by reputation or media representation, any of you or any member of your family know personally first of all Robert F McDonnell?

And then Ms Maureen McDonnell Oh, we have a hand. Sir, would you just come to the aisle and come up here? Counsel approach.

(At Bench.)

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0303)

THE COURT:  All right, Mr , how is it that you know him?

THE JUROR: I do not know Mr McDonnell personally, but I have met him on a number of occasions as outlined in my questionnaire, at political functions In addition, some additional information, I did have a chance to encounter him about a month-and-a-half ago at an event in which a friend of mine asked to have a picture taken with him. And I obliged and took the picture and there were some greeting words and a handshake at that time Those were the only events It has all been political events that I have ever met Mr McDonnell

THE COURT: Is there anything about the previous events, and this last event, that would prevent you from being fair to both sides in this matter?

THE JUROR: No, sir But I just thought since that happened since my questionnaire, I wanted to be sure that that was out

THE COURT: All right Thank you very much. Thank you. You can have a seat

(In Open Court)

Are any of you related by blood or marriage to any of the prosecutors: Michael Dry, Ryan Faulconer, Jessica Aber, and David Harbach?

(The jury panel exited the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right All of the jurors are out of the courtroom I had a -- just a couple things I've got a letter here from one of the jurors, she's 0421, and she was making a late request to be excused And it basically relates to her duties as a caregiver to her extremely ill father And she outlined what the deal was and gave me a letter documenting the illness So I would certainly be open to releasing her Anybody got any particular objections?

MR ASBILL: No

MR DRY: None from the United States, Your Honor

MR BURCK: No, Your Honor

THE COURT: And I've got a few more that I don't want to discuss right now, but I just want to alert you There were -- as I went through this over the weekend yesterday, there were like three names that popped out I thought maybe we could scrub One is  (Juror Number 0184) She's 0184 She indicated that she had formed an opinion, a negative one, which -- and doubted her ability to be fair So you all take a look at that one We'll talk about it more

Then there was  (Juror Number 0196) I think it is And he indicated he had formed an opinion, albeit a general one, about all politicians, but he did indicate the formation of an opinion

And then --  (Juror Number 0196) was 0196

And then this  (Juror Number 0160) She indicated she had formed an opinion and then at another place, she indicated she thought she might not be able to be fair, but she never articulated her opinion So I think we need to talk to her I just want to alert you to these And I just -- I don't know how I missed that, but I went through everything yesterday and just found these in the questionnaires

MR ASBILL: Judge, with respect to the first two, we would ask that they be excused for cause

THE COURT: All right Any problem with that?

MR DRY: Judge, we'd like all three excused for cause, if we're going to excuse the first two

THE COURT: Okay

MR ASBILL: We don't object to all three being excused

MR BURCK: No, Your Honor

THE COURT: I think that's the safest way to go All right

MR DRY: Judge, there was one additional one, Juror 218,  (Juror Number 0218), who I believe on question number 97 said that she shouldn't serve either

THE COURT: All right I'll take a look in a second Give me that name again, Mr Dry

MR DRY: This is Juror Number 218

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0218)

All right Yeah, I flagged her, Number 97 She says she has -- when asked "is there any reason that you believe you should not sit as a juror in this case," she said yes, and then she relates some connection that her sister-in-law has to a politician I think we -- I think we need to inquire more about that one

MR ASBILL: We agree, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right So we'll do that I'll make a note

MR DRY: Your Honor, one housekeeping matter

THE COURT: Sure

MR DRY: We may have been overly ambitious, but we have a couple witnesses that are ready to go And it doesn't look like they'll be joining us today so we'd like to release them I just want to make sure that there's no chance we're getting to them

THE COURT: You must have been hallucinating

MR DRY: Very well Just didn't want to be unprepared, Your Honor

THE COURT: I appreciate that

But we'll be back at 2 We've got some -- you know, quite a ways to go to get to the jury My hope was that we would get at least to opening statements, but that's looking even more shaky as we go But witnesses, I have serious doubt

MR BURCK: Your Honor, just one other housekeeping point And we may have missed it, but I'm not sure that the Court inquired of the jury as to whether or not Quinn Emanuel, have they had any interaction with Quinn Emanuel as attorneys So I was just -- I know Jones Day and Holland & Knight were mentioned, but I just thought as a --

THE COURT: Right

MR BURCK: It's a small point

THE COURT: Yeah Quinn Emanuel, I'll ask them about that

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

THE JUROR: I have a daughter getting married in October and I just didn't want to miss it

THE COURT: Well, I tell you, the deal with that is, I can't even imagine we would be in this case in October And if we are, I will be insane by then So I don't think that's going to happen.

THE JUROR: I just wanted to make sure

THE COURT: You know, if by some -- if something horrible happened and we ended up clashing with that wedding in October, we have an alternate We are not going to let that happen. Yes, sir?

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 368) I just want to let you know, I do actually have some difficulties, like a few learning disabilities that keep me from remembering certain aspects And sometimes I have a hard time focusing

THE JUROR: Once a day

THE COURT: Morning or night?

THE JUROR: Night

THE COURT: Any lethargy on one hand, or fidgety kind of behavior?

THE JUROR: More so fidgety, I would say I definitely tend to get fidgety at times

THE COURT: Well, this is going to require a lot of sitting around and focusing And you know yourself better than anybody else. This will be for weeks Do you think you will be able to do that?

THE JUROR: To be honest, Your Honor, I couldn't tell you. It is definitely not a guarantee I probably would find myself, you know, pretty fidgety

THE COURT: Well, I'm leaning toward excusing you. Anybody with any problem?

(All counsel indicated in the negative.)

THE COURT: Mr Douglas, you may be excused.

THE JUROR: Thank you. I appreciate it

THE COURT: All right, that's it for now We will be back in a minute

Two of the products that may be discussed in this case are Anatabloc, which is a dietary supplement produced by Star Scientific, and CigRx, a smoking cessation product produced by Star Scientific as well Have you or a family member or close friend ever used Anatabloc or CigRx?

All right Does counsel for either side have any additional voir dire questions? I'll hear you at the bench

Okay  (Juror Number 0364)

THE JUROR: Right here

THE COURT: Okay We just have a message for you

All right Just give her that note

All right Let's hear from you all

(At Bench)

MR ASBILL: Judge, I've given them a copy Here are the general questions that I thought about

MR DRY: Judge, can we be heard on this? Mr Asbill has raised the issue of pretrial publicity in this case and he's at least expressed to me his opinion that if the Court does not ask each and every person that ever heard about this

The government doesn't believe that that is the case However, in an abundance of caution, at least for those individuals that have said that they have very closely or somewhat closely followed the case, it might be advisable for us to do some limited inquiry or bring them up or something so that there's no issue on the record, unless Mr Asbill has changed his position on this

THE COURT: Well, I mean, I appreciate his position, but that's not the Court's position Look, they answered the questionnaire closely, and then they went on to answer questions that without giving us some pause or not If it didn't, then what I would do with these questions is try to determine if anything has happened since the questionnaires I mean, I will ask the question so that we can see if there are -- anybody responds to, you know, having discussions or anything that happened

MR DRY: Let me be clear That's satisfactory to the government Mr Asbill --

THE COURT: Mr Asbill can speak for himself But if that's his position, that's fine But in terms of what I'm going to do here, I'm not going to do what you suggest I'm just not going to do it

MR ASBILL: Well, Judge, the reason I'm asking for much more inquiry with respect to pretrial publicity is this For example, one of the jurors said that she hadn't followed the case at all, and so -- she said barely at all, and then we checked after that, all the resources that she said had said things about the case So there's some confusion It's very subjective, number one

Number two, if anybody sees a news article or watches one program that really makes an impact, the fact that they haven't watched it multiple times or seen a lot of publicity about it, that can't make an indifference if they have an indelible impression from one source That is a problem A lot of these people have expressed -- have not come forward when you asked the general question about is there any reason why you could not be fair We have a list of folks that we think should be stricken for cause, some of which -- for example, classic example is, 0154 followed the case very closely, expressed an opinion there are no honest politicians and governor should have known And that person did not answer the question about do you have any bias or problems that would impact your ability to be fair

So -- and my position is that if somebody is exposed to pretrial publicity, they have to be individually voir dired, and I have a list of questions I'd like to give to the Court that I think they should be asked

THE COURT: Okay Well, you can provide the questions It's the other way around to strike for cause those people without asking questions If we think they are -- well, what you're -- I mean, what is -- this is what you're going to have to do You re going to have to identify specifically the people that you think should be struck for cause, and the Court will make an assessment of that based on information that we have I'm not asking these questions I'm not going to do it

As I say, I'll do something in my invention All right Anything else?

MR DRY: No, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Thank you You all can have a seat

MR HARBACH: Just a reminder about the Quinn Emanuel question

THE COURT: I'm sorry About the Quinn Emanuel question Sure

(In Open Court)

THE COURT: I asked you all earlier about any connections to the law firms representing Mr McDonnell and I did not ask you about the law firm representing Ms McDonnell, Quinn Emanuel

So let me ask you those same questions As far as you know, have you or any member of your family ever been represented by the law firm of Quinn Emanuel in Washington, D C ?

And as far as you know, have you or any member of your family ever been represented by any of these lawyers individually who are representing Ms McDonnell?

All right Obviously, this case has generated a lot of media interest and there have been quite a few newspaper articles, radio and television media items relating to this case and the parties involved And I'm sure that most of you have read in the newspaper or seen on television or heard on the radio, at least once, some of these media items or news stories So the first thing I want you to do is if you have read, heard or seen something in the media, I want you to stand up for me,

please

All right I've got a couple questions for -- obviously, this is going to take a while Now, let me ask you this general question I may have some questions for you at the bench Based on what you have heard or read or seen relating to this case, if you are, in your mind, able to put aside whatever it is that you've heard, listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides, then I want you to sit down All right

All right Mr Asbill, would you please -- would you all come here?

(At Bench)

THE COURT: All right If you've got a list of specific folks, because I'm satisfied with these -- the responses, but if you got specific folks who we need to look at specific responses, let me know

MR ASBILL: Can I just make a record on this question, this particular question?

THE COURT: Sure

MR ASBILL: I understood that everybody said they could be put aside I can't trust the credibility of that without a further inquiry and I can't make any judgments or arguments to you without any further inquiry Specifically people who have expressed opinion about the case, 455,  (Juror Number 0455)

THE COURT: Okay Wait a minute Let me get my list out here You said 455?

MR ASBILL: 455,  (Juror Number 0455) Indicated on question 86 she has expressed an opinion about the case

THE COURT: Question 86 Okay

MR ASBILL: 187,  (Juror Number 0187) Indicates in question 84 that he has followed the case very closely from multiple news sources

THE COURT: Just give me the number again

MR ASBILL: 086 -- excuse me I'm sorry 0187

THE COURT: 0187

MR ASBILL: Right, and then question 84 and question 86, followed the case very closely, multiple news sources and has formed an opinion of guilt

THE COURT: Well, I'll take a look, but I went through these things with a fine-tooth comb and he didn't even register on my list, but okay I'll take a look  (Juror Number 0187)

MR ASBILL: All right 0200,  (Juror Number 0200)

THE COURT: 0200? Okay And what was the number on Ms  (Juror Number 0455) again?

MR ASBILL: 0455

Okay Now, 0200 What's her name?

MR ASBILL:  (Juror Number 0200)

THE COURT: Okay She discussed it with her husband

MR ASBILL: Well, has received news from multiple sources and then has expressed, in question 86, extreme negative opinions or conclusions about the defendants

THE COURT: Okay All right Next

MR ASBILL: 220, 0220,  (Juror Number 0220) Questions 85 and 86 Multiple news sources Formed opinion Reached conclusion about guilt They both should know gift limits

THE COURT: Okay I will do that Next

MR ASBILL: 452 is  (Juror Number 0452) Question 85, multiple news sources And 86, formed an opinion, morally and ethically wrong

THE COURT: 0452 Okay I have that one too I actually have that one too All right

MR ASBILL: 0229, Ms  (Juror Number 0229), who is at the AG's Office I'm not sure what the opinion is, but what I want to raise with you about the publicity is that she apparently has discussed the indictment with her students and they have conducted some sort of a mock trial about the case

THE COURT: Okay VCU class Discussed the indictment

MR ASBILL: I thought it said something about mock

154,  (Juror Number 0154) That's the one following the case That's the one I talked about before has followed the case before, expressed the opinion there are no honest politicians The governor should have known

THE COURT: The governor should know the limit on gifts Okay

MR ASBILL: 0190,  (Juror Number 0154) I'm sure he can follow your instructions He followed the case very closely Multiple news sources Had discussions about the case and people have expressed and formed opinions in his discussions He's also an active democratic campaign person

MR DRY: Are we talking about pretrial publicity or --

MR ASBILL: Well, I want to go for further --

THE COURT: I'll just limit it right now to pretrial publicity

MR DRY: Okay

THE COURT: Those are the ones that were most problematic

All right We'll bring them up here

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0455) If you would come up to the bench for us, please

(At Bench)

THE COURT: Just come up Just one second

THE JUROR: Okay

MR DRY: Judge, we have the questionnaire right here On 86 it was no

THE COURT: Mr Asbill?

MR ASBILL: I'm just going to take a look for a second Sorry

THE COURT: Okay I didn't see anything

I'm sorry, ma'am We thought there was something on your questionnaire So you can have a seat

THE JUROR: Thank you

(In Open Court)

THE COURT: Okay  (Juror Number 0187) Number 84

(At Bench)

MR DRY: Here's the full question there, sir 84 is the last page or right there

THE COURT: Okay Mr  (Juror Number 0187) Let me ask you, you indicated that you followed the case very closely and we just want to explore that a little bit

THE JUROR: Explain it to you? Oh, well, I followed it ever since'it hit the paper because, I mean, I stay up on news and stuff that goes on, the news

THE COURT: Okay

THE JUROR: And I may -- I read whatever -- the paper all the time

THE COURT: Okay Have you formed any opinion about the guilt or innocence of these folks?

THE JUROR: Well, it's kind of hard to point an opinion now and tell you how the trial has been bearing on because it's been known that some things in the paper can't be true I give you my opinion It's an opinion You can't believe everything people say You have to sit around and judge for your own self because the news can influence you to go do different things So what I do, I have my own opinions on it That's why I told them I didn't know if he was guilty or not until I hear all the evidence

THE COURT: That's good enough for me You can have a seat

THE JUROR: All right

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0200)

(At Bench)

MR DRY: Thank you, sir Would you like this one?

THE COURT: ·Makes it easy for me

THE JUROR: Yes, sir

THE COURT: Okay, Ms  (Juror Number 0200) Let's see Okay, Ms  (Juror Number 0200) You indicated that you had a discussion about what you had heard about the case with your husband

THE JUROR: Uh-huh

THE COURT: Obviously, that's natural There's nothing wrong with that

THE JUROR: Right

THE COURT: We just wanted to explore the nature of that conversation Did you all -- did you or your husband have some opinion about the guilt or innocence of the people charged?

THE JUROR: No, not exactly He usually brings it up before I do because he's really into watching CNN and everything So he like brought up the situation But I don't remember ever saying one way or the another whether they were guilty or not guilty

THE COURT: Based on everything you've heard, even the discussions with your husband, you still feel that you would be able to be fair to both sides in this case?

THE JUROR: Yes, sir

THE COURT: Okay Thank you

All right Thank you

THE JUROR: Uh-huh

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0220)

(At Bench)

THE COURT: Come on up here

MR DRY: It's fine, ma'am Come up there There you go

THE COURT: We just wanted to explore with you a little closer something you put in the questionnaire And I'll just read it here It says "I" -- I can't read the second word -- "thought that they should know the limits of the law related to gifts "

Now --

THE JUROR: That was just my thought I don't know if it's -- if it's evidence or, you know, there's evidence to that effect

THE COURT: Okay And you expressed this to your husband; is that --

THE JUROR: No

THE COURT: It's just your thought?

THE JUROR: No It's just my thought

THE COURT: And is that a thought based on what you heard on the news?

THE JUROR: On the news And I have not watched any news or read anything since

THE COURT: Since this?

THE JUROR: Since receiving the summons, right

THE COURT: Okay Now, I want you to search your heart and your mind As you stand here now, do you feel that you can be fair and impartial to both sides, put aside anything that you --

THE JUROR: Yes, because the evidence has to be given here

THE COURT: Okay All right Thank you

THE JUROR: Uh-huh

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0452)

(At Bench)

THE JUROR: Yes, sir

THE COURT: Yes, ma'am We just wanted to explore with you a little closer something you said in your questionnaire

THE JUROR: Okay

THE COURT: You indicated that you had conversations with friends and co-workers and your opinion, maybe not technically something in the law, but ethically wrong But that's what you heard in the newspaper and discussions with friends

THE JUROR: Basically that I don't know whether -- the rule of law I don't know whether laws were broken That's what this is about I do feel like they knew that they were doing something that wasn't quite right, and that was my opinion

THE COURT: Okay And that's your opinion today?

THE JUROR: I'm willing to give them -- I mean, I'm willing to listen to everything Like I said, I know that the rule of law -- I don't know what it is, and that is what this case is based on

THE COURT: Okay All right You can have a seat

THE JUROR: Thank you

THE COURT: Ms  (Juror Number 0452) is out I'm taking her out Okay  (Juror Number 0452) is out for cause

MR DRY: Mr Asbill, you don't object?

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0229)

(At Bench)

MR DRY: Judge, this is 87 Discussed it in the classroom at VCU

THE COURT: Come on up, Ms  (Juror Number 0229) How are you doing?

THE JUROR: Fine

THE COURT: We wanted to just explore with you a little bit more something that you put in the questionnaire, and you talked about your class at VCU having a discussion Describe that for me What went on?

THE JUROR: I showed them the indictment, and we were talking about the difference between state and federal jurisdiction and the difference between civil and criminal It was used as an example for them

THE COURT: And was there any exploring with the students for their opinions as to guilt or innocence?

THE JUROR: No No It was just what the indictment said They were undergraduates So I was just illustrating jurisdictions, state versus federal

THE COURT: State versus federal

THE JUROR: Criminal versus -- just criminal

THE COURT: Is there anything about what happened there at VCU and any other media items you might have reviewed that would prevent you from being fair to both sides in this case?

THE JUROR: I don't think so

THE COURT: Okay

THE JUROR: I haven't been listening since I got the summons So --

THE COURT: So you followed the direction of the Court?

THE JUROR: Yes I just covered my ears like that

THE COURT: All right Thank you very much

THE JUROR: Uh-huh

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0154)

(At Bench)

THE COURT: All right Let me see what we have here Okay Ms  (Juror Number 0154), we just wanted to explore with you something that you had in your questionnaire just to see what it was about Question number 86, you had conversation with friends and then you said that -- that you weren't sure -- something -- such a thing as an honest politician and then you -- it sounds like a lament to me, "The governor will not be remembered for whatever good he's done but for what he's accused of " Now, we just want to understand what you were talking about

THE JUROR: Okay What I was talking about was no matter whether he wins, lose or draw, the scandal will be attached to his name and to his term Politicians -- I made a statement about a politician because I think to get to the office, if they have got a smile in one direction to make you believe them, they'll do it They'll smile another direction, they are going to do it In other words, they want your vote so, you know, they are going to cater to you a little bit

THE JUROR: If they want the women's vote, they'll cater to the women That's what I meant by that

THE COURT: Okay All right Thank you You can have a seat

I'm going to take her out Generalized a view that's pretty solid

MR DRY: No objection, Your Honor

MR ASBILL: No objection

(In Open Court)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0190)

(At Bench)

Mr  (Juror Number 0190), we just wanted to question you a little closer about something that you put in your questionnaire This is question number 86 And you put down, "I thought it was wrong if this is true," and you discussed it with family members and co-workers, right?

THE JUROR: (Nodding head)

THE COURT: So just tell us, what did you mean by that?

THE JUROR: Say the question again

THE COURT: It's number 86 And you put, "I thought it was wrong if this is true Talked with family and co-workers about the case "

THE JUROR: I think when I filled it out, I was thinking like actually before I was just selected, like before I heard it on the media So I didn't want to say I was talking to anybody So I think that's why I put that But not as in like if I was selected to, I wouldn't talk to anybody about it

THE COURT: Okay Yeah, yeah You were explaining that you talked with your co-workers and friends before you got the questionnaire?

THE JUROR: Before the questionnaire, yeah

THE COURT: And now I'm trying to explore this other comment, you thought it was wrong if this is true what do you mean by that? If the evidence supports the accusations made, you think it's wrong?

THE JUROR: If the evidence -- can I see the question?

THE COURT: Huh?

THE JUROR: Can I see the question? I'm just trying to -- oh, so what I was saying was that if I thought he would be in the wrong, if the evidence backed up the fact that he did do something wrong So -- that I thought it was wrong if it was true So if I determined that the evidence was true, then I thought that what he did was wrong or what she did

THE COURT: Okay Now, what I need to know from you, sir, is -- and I'm -- you know, as serious as you can be and as honest as you can be, based on what you've heard, based on that previous thoughts in your head, can you be fair to both sides in this case?

THE JUROR: Yes

THE COURT: All right Thank you You can have a seat

Okay I think that's it

MR DRY: Judge, can we have that questionnaire back?

THE COURT: Yeah

MR DRY: Thank you, Judge

THE COURT: Okay Anybody else?

MR ASBILL: Not on publicity

MR DRY: Judge, the only additional question that we would like to do generally to the voir dire is apparently we've heard that there have been several focus groups and mock trials We omitted a question about that on our questionnaire because we were under the impression that nobody was doing any of that If the Court can merely inquire, have you participated in any mock trials, focus groups, surveys, anything like that related to this case, I think that would be appropriate

MR ASBILL: The mock trial question is in the questionnaire

MR DRY: But not the focus group and surveys

MR ASBILL: Focus group is not, absolutely not

THE COURT: All right And it's been a while since the question I'll go ahead and ask that question All right

(In Open Court)

THE COURT: Is there any member on the jury panel who did not fill out their questionnaires themself?

And are the answers that you gave on the questionnaire -- it's been a few weeks -- as far as you know, still correct as you as you placed them on the questionnaire?

Yes, ma'am Just come on up Everybody who's got something that needs to be changed that was incorrect, I'll hear you now

(At Bench)

THE COURT: Come on up Yes, ma'am

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0200) again

THE COURT: All right, Ms  (Juror Number 0200), go ahead

THE JUROR: This Friday my dad is going in for open heart surgery So now I am basically taking over the primary care of my grandmother, taking her to all of her doctors and doing all of her medicines and stuff And dad is going to be out for six to eight weeks and he's not allowed to even drive

THE COURT: Okay Okay Thank you We'll get back to you

THE JUROR: Okay Thank you

THE COURT: Let me see what other hardships we have out there before I make the strike I figured they'd get on a hardship train here I always know

Yes, ma'am Your name again?

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0218)

THE COURT: Okay Okay, Ms  (Juror Number 0218)

THE JUROR: Well, since I filled out the application, I found a job after four years and I don't want to put that in jeopardy

THE COURT: Okay Have you started already?

THE JUROR: Yeah, I started on the 14th, and I'm still in training And it's like part-time so I don't know whether it would be considered -- I know on the questionnaire you said something about permanent employee So I don't know whether this is permanent

THE COURT: No This is something we need to know And you can just have a seat We're going to get back to you in a minute

I've just --'unfortunately, sometimes in this services I have to weigh hardships, and folks have hardships and some of them are kind of tougher than others, but we're going to get back to you in a minute

THE JUROR: Okay Thank you

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0363)

THE COURT:  (Juror Number 0363) Okay

THE JUROR: The only thing change I got married two weeks ago So I was single Now I'm married That's the only thing And the section -- the section above the husband I didn't fill out I think it's something on the application about husband That's all

THE COURT: Okay Thank you for letting us know

MR DRY: That's a heck of a honeymoon

THE COURT: Yeah Well, they can wait

THE JUROR: Your Honor, my name is  (Juror Number 0173) And I'm a small business owner, and at the time that I filled out the questionnaire, I thought that I could handle this But I have taken on a considerable amount of business in the last four to six weeks, and I think it would be detrimental to my family if I was picked for the jury

THE COURT: Okay Why don't you have a seat We'll get back to you in a minute And I'll tell you what's happening These -- this kind of question, people stand up with hardships Everybody in that line is going to have some kind of hardship, what we're doing now I'll just kind of balance it as best I can and we'll get to you We'll get back to you

THE JUROR: Okay Thank you, sir Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: Yes, ma'am

THE JUROR: I'm  (Juror Number 0102)

THE COURT: All right Okay

THE JUROR: I forgot to answer the -- in the question about being a state employee, I forgot to mention that I was an adjunct instructor at VCU I used to be

THE COURT: Okay

THE JUROR: I also didn't think to mention about a cousin of mine that's a real estate agent

THE COURT: A real estate agent Okay

THE JUROR: And there's one other thing I just realized that I forgot to mention, that I had a cousin who was a police officer who's now deceased

THE COURT: Okay

THE JUROR: Yeah

THE COURT: Thank you

THE JUROR: Thank you

THE COURT: Yes, ma'am

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0501) Unfortunately, the only change on the application questionnaire was I was one of 8 people that I was laid off on my job after 17 years of employment But I'm on two-month sabbatical right now so I'm free as a bird

THE COURT: Okay, Ms  (Juror Number 0501) We certainly hope that door of opportunity opens

THE JUROR: One door closes, another one opens

THE COURT: Absolutely

Okay Yes, sir

THE JUROR: Back again, Your Honor  (Juror Number 0012)

THE JUROR: It's a question I remember on there when it asked you about political parties

THE COURT: Uh-huh

THE JUROR: All right Thank you

THE COURT: All right

Yes, ma'am, Ms  (Juror Number 0382)

THE JUROR: I don't know if that's a good thing or a bad thing that you know my name by now But I don't recall and I didn't think of it until it came up earlier about being a victim of a crime Two purse thefts One was 50 years ago for my mom One was 33 years ago for me So I don't know how much bearing that has, but full disclosure

THE COURT: Thank you

THE JUROR: Thank you

THE COURT: Okay So is it public school teaching?

THE JUROR: Yes, sir Chesterfield County

THE COURT: Okay Thank you

THE JUROR: Hi, my name is  (Juror Number 0338) I believe on my form I put that my fiance is an accountant She's actually a data entry clerk for an accounting group I don't know if it makes a difference or not, but I figured I'd get it out here and mention it now So that's it

THE JUROR: My brother gets him up and then I get there and I get his food, but, I mean, he's there all day by himself

THE COURT: So you're all right to sit?

MR ASBILL: I'm not moving that as a strike for cause He says -- in terms of political persuasions, he says he's an anarcho-communist

THE COURT: Okay Let me see

MR DRY: He does say it

THE COURT: Well --

MR ASBILL: We just don't know that

MR DRY: The government doesn't know if political affiliation can be a cause for strike, although we would not object

THE COURT: I don't know how in the hell I missed it Whatever it means, I'm not comfortable with it So let's -- this is 05 -- give me his number again

MR ASBILL: 0050

THE COURT: Okay That -- that request will be granted

THE COURT: No She's -- she hasn't done anything to indicate to me that that's still a problem So that request will be denied

Next

MR ASBILL: Those are all the ones I had right now, Judge

THE COURT: Okay All right

MR DRY: Nothing from the United States

THE COURT: Yeah, we got -- I got those

MR DRY: Okay

THE COURT: We're good

All right We have got a couple of jurors who need to take some child care phone calls, and we are going to have them do that quickly and then we'll get back in and try to finish out this process

(Two jurors exited the courtroom and then reentered)

THE COURT: All right Madam clerk, would you place 12 jurors in the box, please

THE CLERK: As I call the names of the following jurors, please come forward and have a seat in the jury box Juror Number 0432, Juror Number 0186

THE COURT: Let me explain the process that we are about, since a lot of you haven't served before The lawyers have certain limited information about you Obviously, they reviewed the questionnaires that you sent in, they've heard your responses to my questions today, and they have, you know, some very, I would consider, limited information about you And now armed with that very limited universe of information, they will now decide whether or not they want you to sit as a juror in this particular case If they do not want you to sit, they have the opportunity to exercise what we refer to as a peremptory challenge This is a challenge to strike a juror for almost any reason and without explanation to anyone, including me Obviously, they have a limited number of these strikes or challenges

Now, I'm telling you all this because those of you who are in the box, if you are struck, indeed removed from the panel, don't take it personally I mean, they don't know enough about you for it to be a personal decision And then secondly, so that those of you who are seated comfortably in the gallery will understand, it's way too early to be comfortable because you may be up here in a second

THE CLERK: As I call the names of the following jurors, please return to your seat in the courtroom Juror Number 0281, Juror Number 0411, Juror Number 0101, Juror Number 0338, Juror Number 0190, Juror Number 0114, Juror Number 0407, Juror Number 0186

THE COURT: Mr Marshal, make sure we have everybody back in from the restroom before she calls any names

All right

THE CLERK: As I call the names of the following jurors, please return to your seat in the courtroom Juror Number 0227, Juror Number 0112, Juror Number 0348

THE COURT: All right We will seat for alternates

THE CLERK: As I call the names of the following jurors, please stand in the courtroom where you are

Juror Number 0445, Juror Number 0003, Juror Number 0248

THE COURT: And the way this works, each side will get one strike The juror remaining standing is the alternate Government gets one Defense gets one

We are going to do it four times All these puzzled looks

Come on up

(At Bench)

MR ASBILL: Do we have to exercise a strike, though, on these rounds or can we --

THE COURT: No You have to exercise it It's got to be one person

MR ASBILL: Okay So you have to exercise one

And will the following jurors please have a seat Juror Number 0390 and Juror Number 0340

THE COURT: All right Let me quickly thank those of you who remain unchosen As I always say, we're not so naive around here that most of you are celebrating the fact that you are not chosen I understand that But I want you to know that we could not engage in this process and successfully conclude with the jury without everyone's participation It's been a long, tiring day and you all have put in the time and effort with good cheer and I want you to know we appreciate it We obviously realize that we could never do what we do without citizen participation So we thank you very, very much for this day that you've put in And pray for the rest of us We need it

All right You all may be excused And, again, thank you so very, very much

(The jury voir dire panel exited the courtroom)

THE COURT: Okay We just have one more thing to do I'm going to have you sworn in for your participation in this trial If you all will stand, raise your right hand and respond to the clerk's oath by saying "I will "

THE CLERK: Will the defendants please stand

THE COURT: All right

(The jury was sworn)

THE CLERK: Thank you Please be seated

THE COURT: All right Just let me explain to you what normally I would do now is give you preliminary instructions, but obviously, I'm not going to do that at this late hour So what I will do is release you with this caveat You obviously are not to discuss this case with anyone or allow anyone to discuss it with you and please, please do not review any media items Don't read the newspaper or the television or radio or anything about this This, as you'll find from my instructions tomorrow, that we make every effort to see that this case is decided by the evidence presented here in open court and not anything that you hear or see outside of the courthouse or the courtroom

And I'm releasing you now I want you to follow the marshal to the jury room so you get a chance to see your home for the next couple weeks, but also the jury commissioner needs just a minute before you all leave to talk to you

So Mr Marshal, if you would take the jury back this way And you all be blessed We will see you tomorrow Take care of yourself We will back at 10:00 tomorrow Normally we would start at 9 or 9:30 I got some other things to do 10:00 tomorrow

THE JUROR: I have a small business that nobody runs but me

THE COURT: Come on around

THE JUROR: I have a small business that nobody runs but me, and if I'm not there --

THE COURT: So all you had to do is say that All right?

Counsel, come approach

(At Bench)

THE JUROR:  (Juror Number 0386)

THE COURT: Okay And, Ms  (Juror Number 0386) is coming to us now and she's got a small business and she's upset and it's going to cause her hardship, which, of course, is something that we understand

What I don't understand is why you waited until now

THE JUROR: Because I thought you just said disabilities I didn't know that that was a, you know, was considered as a disability

THE CLERK: Day two, Case Number 3:14CR12: United States of America versus Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell The United States is represented by Michael Dry, David Harbach, Jessica Aber, and Ryan Faulconer Robert F McDonnell is represented by John Brownlee, Daniel Small, Henry Asbill, James Burnham, and Christopher Iaquinto Maureen G McDonnell is represented by Heather Martin, William Burck, and Stephen Hauss Are counsel ready to proceed?

MR. DRY: The United States is ready

MR BROWNLEE: Mr McDonnell is ready

MR. BURCK: Ms McDonnell is ready

THE COURT: All right I understand we had some issues before the jury

MR BURNHAM: James Burnham on behalf of Mr McDonnell We just wanted to notify the Court we are withdrawing our 17(c) request as to Ms Fulkerson because we have negotiated something with her counsel Also, I will inform the Court that our understanding is that Ms Fulkerson may testify today, so that request has become somewhat more urgent Also, I had some correspondence from counsel for Star Scientific that he asked that we share with the Court May I offer it?

THE COURT: Sure

MR. BURNHAM: Of course, we are happy to address the merits if you would like, but I'm sure you don't Thank you, Your Honor Mr Asbill has one thing as well

MR ASBILL: Thank you, Your Honor I just wanted to tie up a loose end from yesterday's voir dire and ask that the questions that I asked you to ask about pretrial publicity be made part of the record in this case

THE COURT: Sure

MR. ASBILL: Thank you, sir

THE COURT: All right Let's bring in the jury, please

MR. DRY: I'm not sure about this, but defense counsel has just raised that they believe one of the witnesses might be in the courtroom right now

THE COURT: There is no rule on witnesses until the testimony starts If they want to be in here, that's fine

MR. BURNHAM: Thank you.

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

Mr  (Juror Number 0248), just raise your hand. Okay You should be down with the twelve You were the first alternate I'm trying to see who is in the wrong seat here We need Mr  (Juror Number 0012), Ms  (Juror Number 117), and Ms  (Juror Number

0431) should be on the back row Okay

And before I start with these preliminary instructions: Obviously, we lost a juror yesterday at the eleventh hour That's why Mr  (Juror Number 0248) has to move down to the panel And throughout the course of these proceedings, the alternates -- the jury, you all can sit anywhere you want down here among the twelve, but the alternates will have to be on the back row

Ladies and gentlemen, now that you all have been sworn, it becomes my task to give you some preliminary instructions to guide your participation in this trial

It will be your duty to find from the evidence what the facts are And you and you alone are the judges of the facts You will then have to apply to those facts the law as the Court will give it to you. You must follow that law whether you agree with it or not

Nothing the Court may say or do during the course of the trial is intended to indicate nor should it be taken by you as indicating what your verdict should be That is a matter entirely up to you

The evidence from which you will find the facts will consist of the testimony of witnesses, who will be sworn and have a seat in this witness box over here and testify before you Evidence will also include documents and other things received into the record as exhibits, and any facts the lawyers agree or stipulate to or that the Court might instruct you to find.

Certain things are not evidence, and must not be considered by you I will list them for you now Statements, arguments, and questions by lawyers are not evidence And I want to make that abundantly clear If the lawyer is at the podium and propounds a question to the witness, the question is not evidence It is the answer that the witness gives that is evidence in the case

Objections to questions are not evidence Now, the lawyers have an obligation to their client to make an objection when they believe evidence being offered is improper under the Rules of Evidence You should not be influenced by the objection or by the Court's ruling on it If the objection is sustained, you ignore the question. If it is overruled, then you treat the answer like any other

If you are instructed that some item of evidence is received for a limited purpose only, you must follow that instruction. Testimony that the Court has excluded or told you to disregard is not evidence and must not be considered

Anything you may have seen or heard outside of the courtroom is not evidence and must be disregarded.

You are to decide the case solely on the evidence presented here in open court

Now, there are two kinds of evidence: direct and circumstantial Direct evidence is direct proof of a fact, such as the testimony of an eyewitness Circumstantial evidence is proof of facts from which you may infer or conclude that other facts exist Now, I will give you further instructions on these as well as other matters at the end of the case But have in mind that you may consider both kinds of evidence

It will be up to you to decide which witnesses to believe, which witnesses not to believe, and how much of any witness's testimony to accept or reject. I will give you some guidelines for determining the credibility of witnesses at the end of the case

Now, as I told you earlier, and you certainly know by now, this is a criminal case. There are three basic rules about a criminal case that you have to keep in mind throughout these proceedings First, the defendants, Mr McDonnell and Ms McDonnell, they are presumed innocent until proven guilty The indictment against the defendants brought by the government is only an accusation, nothing more It is not proof of guilt or anything else The defendants, therefore, start out with a clean slate

Second: The burden of proof is on the government until the very end of the case The defendants have no burden to prove their innocence or to present any evidence or to testify And since the defendants have the right to remain silent, the law prohibits you in arriving at your verdict from considering that a defendant may not have testified.

Third: The government must prove the defendants' guilt beyond a reasonable doubt Now, I will give you further instructions on this point later But bear in mind that in this respect, a criminal case is different from a civil case

Now, in this case, the defendants are charged with a number of counts, a multiple-count indictment The offenses alleged in this indictment are as follows: Conspiracy to commit honest services wire fraud, and then honest services wire fraud. That is, conspiracy to commit an offense, and then the commission of that offense The third charge is conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right And then there are several instances alleged in fact of obtaining property under color of official right False statement to a financial institution and obstruction of an official proceeding, to wit: a grand jury

Now, what I am going to do now is give you the statute which undergirds these charges, and the elements that the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt Now, obviously, at the end of the case you will get far deeper and far more of these instructions There will be definitions that I'll explain to you in greater detail But I want you to have some general understanding as we go forward.

Now, first, there is conspiracy to commit honest services fraud. Now, Title 18 U S Code Section 1349 provides in pertinent part: Any person who conspires to commit any offense under this chapter shall be subject to the same penalties as those prescribed for the offense, the commission of which was the object of the conspiracy And then Title 18 U S Code Chapter 63 Section 1343 provides in pertinent part: Whoever, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate commerce any writing, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice shall be guilty of an offense against the United States For purposes of this chapter, the term "scheme or artifice to defraud" includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services That's the statute And believe me, I will explain it to you in much greater detail later

Now, the elements, that's what the government has to prove to make out this offense: To prove a conspiracy as charged in Count One, the government must prove three essential elements beyond a reasonable doubt First, that the conspiracy or agreement or understanding to commit honest services fraud as charged in the indictment was formed, reached, or entered into by two or more persons Second, that at some time during the existence or life of the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding, the defendant you are considering knew the purpose of the agreement And third, that with knowledge of the purpose of the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding, the defendant you are considering then deliberately joined the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding

Honest services fraud I basically explained to you just now under the conspiracy statute So the statute, the part "Whoever having devised or intended to devise any scheme or artifice transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate commerce any writing, signs, signals, pictures or sounds for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice shall be guilty of an offense against the United States," that's the statute Let me give you the elements This is the elements of honest services fraud.

First, the government must show first that the defendant you are considering knowingly devised or participated in a scheme to defraud the public of its right to the honest services of a public official through bribery as charged in each count Second, that the defendant you are considering did knowingly and with an intent to defraud -- did so knowingly and with an intent to defraud Third, that the scheme or artifice to defraud involved a material misrepresentation, false statement, false pretense, or concealment of material fact And fourth, that in advancing or furthering or carrying out the scheme to defraud, the defendants transmitted or caused to be transmitted the writing, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds alleged by means of a wire communication in interstate commerce as charged in each count

The next charge is conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right. Title 18 U S Code Section 1951(a) provides in pertinent part that whoever conspires to in any way or degree obstruct, delay, or affect commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in commerce by extortion is guilty of an offense against the United States Title 18 U S Code Section 1951 (b)(2) provides in pertinent part: The term "extortion" means the obtaining of property from another with his consent under color of official right In addition, Title 18 U S Code Section 1951(b)(3) provides in pertinent part: The term "commerce" means all commerce between any point in any state, territory, possession, or the District of Columbia, and any point outside thereof; all commerce between points within the same state, through any place outside such state, and all other commerce over which the United States has jurisdiction. The elements of this conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right are as follows: The government must prove first that the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding to obtain property under color of official right as charged in the indictment was formed, reached, and entered into by two or more persons; second, that sometime during the existence or life of the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding, the defendants or defendant you are considering knew the purpose of the agreement; and third, that with knowledge of the purpose of the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding, the defendant you are considering then deliberately joined the conspiracy, agreement, or understanding

There are a number of counts, I believe it is Six through Eleven, that charge substantive counts of obtaining property under color of official right There are two counts that charge making a false statement to a financial institution. Mr McDonnell is charged in both of those counts Ms McDonnell is charged in one The statute, Title 18 U S Code Section 1014 provides in pertinent part: Whoever knowingly makes any false statement or report for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of a Federal Credit Union or any banking institution, the accounts of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, upon application, commitment, loan, or a guarantee any change or extension of any of the same by renewal, deferment, or action or otherwise, is guilty of an offense against the United States

The elements, that is, what the government must prove, are as follows: That the charged defendant or defendants made a false statement or report; that the charged defendant or defendants did so for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of a Federal Credit Union or any bank whose deposits are insured by FDIC as charged in Counts Twelve and Thirteen, upon any application, commitment, loan, or guarantee, or any change or extension of any of the same, by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise; and third, that the charged defendant or defendants did so knowingly

Now, the final charge has to do with obstruction of an official proceeding Title 18 U S Code Section

1512(c) provides in pertinent part: Whoever corruptly obstructs, influences, or impedes any official proceeding, or attempts to do so, is guilty of an offense against the United States And Title 18 U S Code Section 1515(a)(1) defines an official proceeding for purposes of 1512 to include a proceeding before a federal grand jury

The elements, what the government must prove to make out this count, are as follows: First, that the defendant obstructed, influenced, or impeded an official proceeding or attempted to do so; and second, that the defendant did so or attempted to do so corruptly That is, voluntarily, deliberately, and for the purpose of improperly obstructing, influencing, or impeding an official proceeding, all while either knowing about an official proceeding, or that the natural and probable effect of the conduct would interfere with an official proceeding

Now, as I said, I will give you detailed instructions on the law at the end of the case And those instructions will control your deliberations and decision And I gave you this preliminary look at the charges and the statute just to help you follow the evidence as it comes in as we go forward.

Now, a few words about your conduct as jurors First, I instruct you that during the trial, you are not to discuss the case with anyone or permit anyone to discuss it with you Until you retire to the jury room at the end of the case to deliberate on your verdict, you simply are not to talk about this case

Now, there has been substantial publicity about this case prior to the beginning of this trial The statements contained in some of the accounts may, of course, not be accurate and may have come from individuals who will not be present in court and who therefore cannot be seen and evaluated by the jury like all of the other witnesses, and will not be examined or cross-examined by either of the parties under oath. Press accounts may also contain opinions instead of facts, and those opinions may not be based on the evidence to be presented here in court You, of course, must lay aside and completely disregard anything you may have read or heard about the case outside of the courtroom, because your verdict must be based solely and exclusively on the evidence presented here in court in accordance with my instructions to you at the close of the case about the law you must apply to the evidence To rely upon anything you see or hear outside of the courtroom in reaching your verdict is a violation of your oath as a juror

Now, going forward, please do not read or listen to anything touching on this case in any way If anyone should try to talk to you about it, bring it to the Court's attention promptly Third, do not try to do any research or make any investigation about this case on your own. And this covers the spectrum. No Internet, no newspaper, no radio, no television, no reaching out into cyberspace to try to get information to aid you. That is a complete no-no, and please don't do it

Finally, do not form any opinion until all of the evidence is in Keep an open mind until you start your deliberations at the end of the case

Now, obviously, we are going to make it possible for you to take notes This is going to be a lengthy case We will give you pads for that purpose as well as pens with this caveat: The notes you are making are for yourself to help you with your recollection of what the evidence was as it came in. These notes are not to be shared with other members of the jury

Now, in a few minutes the trial will begin First, the government will make an opening statement, which is simply an outline to help you understand the evidence as it comes in. Next, the defendants' lawyers may, but does not have but I expect that they will, make an opening statement Opening statement is neither evidence nor arguments The government will then present its witnesses, and counsel for the defendants may cross-examine them. Never forget that there are two defendants in this case: Mr McDonnell and Ms McDonnell And they are to be given separate consideration As you will see, their lawyers will have separate opportunities to examine and to cross-examine Always remember that you are considering two separate defendants

Now, once the government has presented all of its witnesses and has rested, the defendants may, if they wish, present witnesses whom the government may cross-examine After all of the evidence is in, the attorneys will present their closing arguments to summarize and interpret the evidence for you And then finally, the Court will instruct you on the law, the law applicable to this particular case After that, you will retire to begin your deliberations on your verdict

Now, a few words about the logistics of the Court, how we run things around here. Normally, at the end of the Court's day, trial day, which is normally 5:30, I will let you know what time we will convene the following morning It depends Sometimes I have short matters set at 9 or 9:30, and it depends on what I have set on my calendar Also, just by a show of hands, do we have any folks from distance, Spotsylvania, Fredericksburg, Mecklenburg, anybody from distance? Okay, we've got two, three I'll keep that in mind. So we probably won't start any earlier than 9:30 on most days All right?

Now, what we do is we normally take a break of about 15 minutes' duration sometime in the morning, somewhere around 11:30 or thereabouts We normally stop for lunch somewhere around 1 o'clock. And the luncheon recess is of one hour's duration I say somewhere around 1 o'clock because it depends on what we are doing If we had a witness I thought we could finish, we might go to 1:10 or 1:15 If we had a lengthy witness that was about to take the stand at 12:50, we might stop at 12:50 But somewhere around 1 o'clock we will stop for lunch

Then in the afternoon we take another break of 15 minutes' duration And this is somewhere around between 4 and 4:30, somewhere in there, we will take a break and then push on until 5:30

Now, having said that, I don't want anybody to feel captive in the box If you need a break, you just let me know and we will take one It is that simple

All right, government, are you ready to proceed?

MS ABER: Yes, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Let's turn the lectern around

MS ABER: For more than 30 years, the defendant, Robert F McDonnell, has been a public servant

He served in the military, he served as a Delegate, and he served as an Attorney General of Virginia And for the last four years of that service, he was the Governor, the most powerful public official in this state And for every day of those four years, Mr McDonnell was paid by the citizens of Virginia to do a job He got paid a six-figure salary He got a mansion to live in He got a chef, a butler, a security detail, all at taxpayer expense And in return for all of that, he took a duty, a duty to the citizens of this state, this Commonwealth, to provide his honest services, a duty not to sell the power and the influence of his office to the highest bidder And that means, ladies and gentlemen, that he could not accept secret gifts in exchange for official actions that should have just been his job

But in this trial, we will prove that is exactly what he did. During this trial, we will prove to you that Mr and Ms McDonnell conspired to violate this duty of honest services by secretly accepting more than $150,000 of cash, loans, vacations, golf, and luxury goods in exchange for doing what should have just been his job.

You will learn that the defendants accepted those things of value from a man they didn't even know before Mr McDonnell ran for Governor; a man named Jonnie Williams, a vitamin salesman And though the McDonnells didn't know him before, we will prove to you that they learned what Mr Williams wanted pretty fast They learned that Mr Williams wanted the Governor and his office to take official action to help Mr Williams sell his product And we will prove that Mr Williams got just that

You will learn that Mr Williams got to invite state university researchers that he wanted to study his product to an event at the Governor's Mansion designed to encourage those state researchers to do those studies You will learn that Mr McDonnell personally directed one of his subordinates, a high-ranking state health official, to have one of his deputies meet with Mr Williams on less than 12 hours' notice

You will learn that Mr Williams got to invite doctors that he wanted to study his product to an official event at the Governor's Mansion for Virginia healthcare industry leaders, invitations that Mr McDonnell's own cabinet secretary refused to pay for And while Mr McDonnell did each of these things and more, and while his wife helped him, we will prove that virtually nobody knew about the more than $150,000 in cash and loans and vacations and golf and luxury goods that the McDonnells were putting into their own pockets in exchange Mr McDonnell's subordinates, those researchers, the citizens of Virginia, no one knew what was really going on.

Now, members of the jury, as Judge Spencer noted, you are going to hear a lot of evidence over the next few weeks But this is really fundamentally a very simple case And it won't be a short one, but I promise you we are all going to do our very best to respect your time and your summer and streamline this case as much as possible You are going to hear from a lot of witnesses and you are going to see a lot of documents on these screens But because the McDonnells went to great lengths to keep the extent of their relationship with Mr Williams secret, even from people very close to them, there is no single witness who is going to be able to tell you this entire story from soup to nuts

But once you have heard everything and put it all together, the United States will come back and ask you to find the defendants, Robert and Maureen McDonnell, former Governor and First Lady of Virginia, guilty of all counts

Now, part of my job here today, as the Judge said, is to provide you with an overview of the evidence you are going to hear, to provide you with a snapshot of what things will look like at the end It is also part of my job, I promise you, to keep this overview very short and sweet And I'm not going to tell you every piece of evidence that's going to come in I'm just going to sort of hit the highlights, or we would be here for hours And that is not my intention, Judge So I'm going to break this up into three parts First, I'd like to give you a very brief overview of the charges against Mr and Ms McDonnell Second, I'm going to give you an overview of the government's evidence. And third, I will tell you what this case is not about

Now, first, Judge Spencer has given you a brief overview of the charges But in summary, Counts One through Four pertain to honest services wire fraud and Counts Five through Eleven pertain to obtaining money under color of official right Those are corruption charges And you are going to hear, as we said, lots more legalese about what that actually means in plain English. But it really does boil down to one simple question: Did Mr and Ms McDonnell accept things of value from that vitamin salesman, Mr Williams, in exchange for Mr McDonnell using his position as Governor to help Mr Williams' company

Now, I'm going to tell you right up front, let it be known, the government does not have to show an explicit agreement You are not going to hear, definitely not going to hear a recording, see a video of any sort of shady back alley deal in which Mr Williams and Mr McDonnell meet and exchange a paper bag full of cash in exchange for a state contract You are not going to hear it, the law doesn't require it, and it is not a movie Candidly, the defendants, you will hear, are way too sophisticated for that And you are not going to hear that Mr McDonnell helped Mr Williams get legislation or a state job Mr Williams does not, you will hear, under the law, have to get a dime of state money You will learn that those things are not necessary for the defendants to be guilty The law simply requires that Mr McDonnell agreed to take official action on Mr Williams' behalf

Now, the next two counts, Twelve and Thirteen, pertain to bank loans that Mr and Ms McDonnell sought Count Twelve specifically alleges that Mr McDonnell lied on a personal financial statement to TowneBank by stating that his liabilities had a number that did not include the loans that Mr Williams had given to him. And Count Thirteen alleges that both Mr and Ms McDonnell did the same thing on bank applications to Pentagon Federal Credit Union Finally, Count Fourteen alleges that Ms McDonnell obstructed the grand jury investigation of her by trying to claim that those gifts from Mr Williams of designer clothes were really just loans to her

So that takes us to part two, the facts and evidence that you are going to hear in a little more detail Now, this story starts back in 2009 when Mr McDonnell was elected Governor of Virginia He was not a wealthy man. And he was under a lot of financial pressure, because like a lot of people, he bought rental properties in 2007 at the height of the market and they had gone down in value a lot And although Mr McDonnell was the Governor of Virginia, he was feeling the financial strain like a lot of Americans have But, unlike a lot of Americans, as Governor, Mr McDonnell had a lot of wealthy people that wanted to get to know him better And one of those people was a man named Jonnie Williams

Now, Jonnie Williams, who you will hear from, is a wealthy businessman He is the former CEO of a publicly-traded company called Star Scientific, or I'll call it Star Star was headquartered here in Glen Allen, Virginia, and Star manufactured health supplements that come from a compound in the tobacco plant that's called anatabine. Mr Williams had a product, which is basically a vitamin, that he wanted to sell, and he wanted the Governor's help to do so

Now, to be clear, members of the jury, you are going to hear evidence that Mr McDonnell and Mr Williams were not friends, and they met for the first time during

Mr McDonnell's campaign for Governor But even before Mr McDonnell took office, one of the very first times they met, Mr Williams agreed to buy a designer gown for Ms McDonnell to wear to the inauguration, the gubernatorial inauguration. Mr McDonnell's staff put a stop to that, but Ms McDonnell was very upset and told Mr Williams that she would take a rain check. So from the outset, Mr. McDonnell knew that Mr Williams was willing to spend a lot of money on him and his family

Now, why was Mr Williams willing to do that? Well, because he wanted to market Star Scientific's product, which you will hear was called either CigRX or Anatabloc, as a vitamin, and eventually have it become a pharmaceutical or a prescription drug But Mr Williams had two basic problems The first being he had to get the public to accept the vitamin. Think about what like fish oil has become And number two, he needed scientific studies to pave the way for the vitamin to be approved as a drug

Now, Mr Williams, you will hear, thought that the Governor could help him solve those problems by legitimizing, promoting, and obtaining research studies for those products You see, as Governor, you will hear that Mr McDonnell was the most powerful public official in Virginia He had a lot of authority, you will hear, and a lot of influence over the very government officials that Mr Williams needed to get to sign off on his plans

And you will hear that Mr Williams told Mr McDonnell all of this You will learn that in October of 2010, Mr McDonnell flew on Mr Williams' jet back from California to Richmond So they had a couple hours together And you will hear that on that night, Mr Williams explained what he needed. He told Mr McDonnell all about his product, Anatabloc, that he needed scientific testing of Anatabloc Mr McDonnell, you will hear, told Mr Williams that he would set him up with the Secretary of Health, Dr Bill Hazel You will hear from Dr Bill Hazel, too. He, like all cabinet members, worked directly for Mr McDonnell as the Governor So Mr Williams, after this plane ride, got his meeting with Dr Hazel But it did not go well Dr Hazel was skeptical about Mr Williams' claims of the benefits of Anatabloc because they weren't scientifically validated. In other words, "Go get those studies, Mr Williams "

Now, you may remember, as I just said a few moments ago, that Ms McDonnell had told Mr Williams that she would take a rain check on her designer gown And in April of 2011, Ms McDonnell called Mr Williams You will learn that was the very first call between their two cell phones And Ms McDonnell told him that now he could take her shopping in New York City to buy those designer clothes for her daughter, Cailin's, upcoming wedding And then she would make sure that he was seated next to Mr McDonnell at a political event in New York. And when Mr Williams went to New York City and met Ms McDonnell there, he bought her approximately $20,000 of designer clothes And as promised, Mr Williams got to sit at the head table at the event that night next to Mr McDonnell Mr Williams, you will hear, began to understand that buying things for the McDonnells had its benefits

Now, at first blush you might be asking yourselves, designer clothes for another man's wife? And later on you are going to hear evidence that Mr Williams and Ms McDonnell talked on the phone a lot and they exchanged a lot of text messages But make no mistake about it, ladies and gentlemen: You will hear that this was always just a business relationship and nothing more

Now, a few weeks later, the McDonnells invited Mr Williams and his wife, Celeste, over for dinner at the Governor's Mansion. This gave Mr Williams the chance to talk to the Governor about his product and his plans for the future At the dinner, Mr Williams briefly met the McDonnells' daughter, Cailin, who happened to be coming through for the first time Cailin McDonnell's wedding was approximately five weeks away at the first weekend in June of 2011, and the balance on the catering contract for her reception was coming due

Now, who signed that catering contract? Mr McDonnell Who owed the balance and had already made the first two deposits on the catering contract? Mr McDonnell A couple of days after that dinner, Ms McDonnell asked to meet Mr Williams at the Governor's Mansion, and Ms McDonnell told Mr Williams that she and Mr McDonnell needed money She asked for a loan of $50,000 And she told Mr Williams that she would help him with his product if he would help the McDonnells She also told Mr Williams, you will hear, that the McDonnells needed $15,000 to pay the balance of that catering contract for their daughter Cailin's reception

You will hear that Mr Williams agreed to help, but he wanted to speak with the Governor first And you will hear that he did. In that conversation, Mr McDonnell, you will hear, told Mr Williams about their money problems the same way And Mr Williams agreed to provide the $50,000 loan and that no written loan agreement was necessary Mr Williams made good on his promise and on May 23rd, 2011, went to the Mansion and hand-delivered a $50,000 check to Maureen McDonnell and a $15,000 check made out in blank for the wedding catering reception charges And Mr McDonnell knew about it

I'd like to show you an exhibit Now, this is one of many exhibits that you are going to see in trial And this is not the only time you will see this, so don't panic, this will be coming back at you This is an e-mail from Mr McDonnell to Mr Williams dated Saturday, May 28th, 2011 "Thanks so much for all your help with my family Your very generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated as well as the golf round tomorrow for the boys Maureen is excited about the trip to Florida to learn more about the products and to see Celeste Have a restful weekend with your family Thanks "

Let's take this line by line, ladies and gentlemen "Jonnie, thanks so much for all your help with my family " "Your very generous gift to Cailin " The evidence will show, ladies and gentlemen, that Mr Williams was not giving a gift to Cailin. That $15,000 was a gift to Mr McDonnell, who was on the hook by contract to pay for the rest of his daughter's reception. "Golf round tomorrow for the boys " You will hear that the very next day, Mr McDonnell and his sons spent the day at Mr Williams' gated private club, Kinloch Golf Club, which is out in Goochland County Mr Williams wasn't present for that particular golf outing, but the McDonnell family charged $2,380 on his tab.

"Trip to Florida" refers to Mr Williams' company having an event at a research institute in Florida The event was for researchers, Star Scientific investors, and stock analysts Mr Williams had asked if Mr McDonnell could attend the event, but Ms McDonnell went in his place And only a few days after this e-mail, you will hear that Ms McDonnell flew down on Mr Williams' jet and made brief remarks at the event in Florida You will learn that those remarks included offering Star the use of the Governor's Mansion for the official product launch of Anatabloc

On the same day that Ms McDonnell went to Florida, she used $30,000 of Mr Williams' $50,000 loan to buy Star Scientific stock. And the evidence will show also that Mr McDonnell knew about that The McDonnells also used approximately $20,000 to pay down credit card debt

Now, after this Florida event, Mr Williams started to try to get things moving with the scientific studies of Anatabloc at UVA and VCU, University of Virginia, and Virginia Commonwealth University His plans included not only having state universities conduct the research, but also having something called the Virginia Tobacco Commission fund the studies Now, the Tobacco Commission, you will hear, is a state commission that provides economic grants using money from the National Tobacco Settlement The majority of the commissioners on the Tobacco Commission are appointed by the Governor Now, Mr Williams also wanted to use Virginia state employees to voluntarily participate as subjects in clinical studies Based on their conversations and the money and the gifts that Mr Williams had given to the McDonnells, you will hear that Mr Williams believed that Mr McDonnell as Governor would help carry out his plans So he spared no expense Mr Williams invited Mr McDonnell to vacation at his waterfront estate on Smith Mountain Lake, about three hours west of here From July 28th through July 31st, 2011, the McDonnell family, including all their children, spent four days at Mr Williams' estate Neither Mr Williams nor his family were at the estate The McDonnells had it all to themselves Mr McDonnell enjoyed Mr Williams' Ferrari during the vacation and used it for the three-hour drive back to Richmond, back to the Governor's Mansion, on Sunday, July 31st, 2011

This is an e-mail from Maureen McDonnell to Jonnie Williams on July 31st, 2011. It appends an attachment

Now, Mr Williams had wanted to meet with someone from Dr Bill Hazel's office the very next day, Monday, August 1st, to effectuate his plans for Anatabloc While the McDonnells were vacationing at Mr Williams' estate, Mr Williams called Ms McDonnell to confirm that the meeting would take place When Mr McDonnell got back to the Governor's Mansion at the end of the vacation, he e-mailed Dr Hazel at 11:29 p.m. and directed him to have a staff member come to the Mansion the very next Monday morning You can see the e-mail there from Governor@bobmcdonnell com at 11:29 p.m. "Bill, would like to have Keith or Matt attend a short briefing at the Mansion about 10 a.m. with the First Lady on the Star Scientific Anatabloc trials planned, UVA and VCU this weekend " At 6:28 a.m., Dr Hazel responded, "Will do "

The next morning, that Monday, August 1st, Mr Williams showed up at the Governor's Mansion and he got what he wanted. He had a meeting with Ms McDonnell and one of Dr Hazel's deputies You will learn that neither Dr Hazel nor his deputy knew anything about that $65,000 in loans and gifts to date, the golf, the vacation, or that Ferrari ride

Later that same morning, August 1st, you will hear that Mr Williams got something else he wanted Ms McDonnell scheduled on the Mansion calendar, the official Mansion calendar, a lunch with Virginia researchers, a product launch for his Anatabloc at the Governor's Mansion on August 30th, 2011 Mr Williams saw the event at the Mansion as an opportunity to prove to those researchers at UVA and VCU that he had the Governor's support for scientific studies of Anatabloc. Mr Williams was allowed to hand pick the list of invitees of people that he believed would help Star Scientific And on August 30th, 2011, Mr and Ms McDonnell together hosted Mr Williams' event in the dining room of the Governor's Mansion Mr Williams brought over samples of Anatabloc, and he and Ms McDonnell put the samples at each place setting Mr Williams got what he paid for He got an event for Anatabloc at the Governor's Mansion with the Governor attending, and joined by the very researchers that Star was attempting to convince to perform scientific studies Star Scientific even issued a press release announcing this event at the Governor's Mansion. But again, you will learn that none of those state researchers, people who are state employees at universities whose boards the Governor had appointed, knew about the $65,000, the golf, the vacation, and that Ferrari ride

Now, in January of 2012, Mr McDonnell and his sons again played golf at Kinloch, that golf club out in Goochland County, this time racking up almost $1,400 on Mr Williams' tab But in early 2012, the McDonnells also needed more money to keep their vacation properties afloat And who did they turn to? Jonnie Williams And at the same time that Ms McDonnell is asking for more money from Mr Williams, she asked him, "How are things going on those studies at UVA and VCU regarding Anatabloc?" You will hear that Mr Williams told Ms McDonnell they weren't going so well, and the state universities still had not agreed to conduct the studies he wanted So you will hear that Ms McDonnell told Ms Williams that she would talk to the Governor about it And later, Mr Williams, she told Mr Williams that the Governor was upset and wanted the names of those state university officials that he had been dealing with Mr Williams told her that he would forward the names, and he did.

This is the first page of an e-mail from Ms McDonnell to the Governor at the top there, and she cc'd Jasen Eige, the Governor's policy director Looking at the bottom of what's being forwarded here, this is an e-mail to Jonnie Williams, Jr That, not surprisingly, is the son of Jonnie Williams, Sr , who we have been talking about This lower e-mail here contains of names of officials at UVA that Mr Williams needed to convince to do the studies That information was forwarded by Mr Williams, Jr , to Ms McDonnell, and Ms McDonnell, in turn, forwarded that to two of Mr McDonnell's e-mail addresses and copying that policy director, Jasen Eige

Ms McDonnell informed Mr Williams that she had forwarded this information to the Governor, and he believed that the Governor might get something done

Now, Ms McDonnell may have been the one who initially asked for more money from Mr Williams, but to be clear, by mid-February of 2012, the Governor himself was asking for money from Mr Williams Government Exhibit 318, from Mr McDonnell to Jonnie Williams, February 16th, 2012 "Jonnie: Know you have been slammed Do you want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents? Thanks for all your help. Gov "

Now, their original plan, the certificates, was for Mr Williams to give Star Scientific stock certificates to the McDonnells for deposit in their brokerage account, and then the McDonnells could take a loan against the stock certificates Now, six minutes later, after that e-mail we just looked at, you will see that Mr McDonnell e-mailed Mr Eige, "Please see me about Anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA." at 12:02 a m. on February 17th, 2012

Now, think about that, ladies and gentlemen. If you want to know whether Mr Williams was providing money and gifts in exchange for assistance from the Governor to his company, just think about whether Mr McDonnell sending an e-mail to his policy director about Anatabloc issues at UVA and VCU six minutes after he is e-mailing Jonnie Williams to ask for more money

Now, a week after this e-mail, Mr and Ms McDonnell had a conference call with their stockbroker, a man named John Piscitelli The McDonnells informed Mr Piscitelli, you will hear, that they actually had Star Scientific shares that were being held by Star Scientific You will learn during trial that that was not true And what they didn't tell their broker was that these shares were really going to be a loan from Mr Williams

Now, at the same time that the McDonnells are negotiating additional money from Mr Williams, and offering to help with his studies at UVA and VCU, Mr Williams was given the opportunity to have Star be recognized as a healthcare leader in Virginia, a healthcare leader, at an exclusive reception at the Governor's Mansion. Just like the Anatabloc launch event I talked about earlier, Mr Williams got to decide who he wanted to invite to the Governor's Mansion to be identified as healthcare leaders of Virginia, including those researchers affiliated with Star Scientific and doctors that Star was trying to convince to recommend

Anatabloc to their patients

On February 29th, 2012, the same day as the night reception at which Star Scientific invitees are being recognized as healthcare leaders of Virginia, the Governor and Mr Williams, you will hear, had a private meeting in the afternoon in the Governor's Office to discuss ways in which Mr Williams could secretly provide the McDonnells with more money And through it all, that event that night, that reception, no one attending the event knew, other than the defendants and Mr Williams, about the earlier payments of the loan -- excuse me, the earlier payments or the loan that Mr McDonnell was negotiating with Mr Williams In the end, during the week of March, 2012, the first week of March, 2012, Mr Williams simply wrote another $50,000 check And like the other loan, there were no written loan documents

Now, you will hear that Mr Williams wrote that check so the Governor would continue to assist Star Scientific. And it worked Because on March 21st, 2012, Mr McDonnell met with his cabinet secretary who was in charge of the state healthcare plan for Virginia state employees The meeting was about how to reduce healthcare costs in Virginia for those state employees During the meeting, Mr McDonnell pulled out a bottle of Anatabloc from his pocket and said he was taking the product and it helped him. Mr McDonnell, you will hear, then told the cabinet secretary she should meet with those Star Scientific folks t6 discuss Anatabloc.

Now, into the following months past that March, 2012 meeting, the McDonnells continued to need additional money for their beach rental properties And again, who do they turn to for help? Jonnie Williams But this time, Mr McDonnell initiated the loan This is a text message in Government Exhibit 379 from Mr McDonnell to Mr Williams "Jonnie: Per voicemail would like to see if you could extend another 20k loan for this year "

And only 12 minutes after the Governor sent this text message, Mr Williams responded by simply saying, "Done," and asking who to make the check out to Four days later Mr Williams wire transferred another $20,000 to the McDonnells To Mr Williams, this was a business transaction He was paying for the Governor's assistance

Now, I've mentioned throughout this story that the McDonnells did not tell Mr McDonnell's staff or those university researchers what was really going on But we will also prove during this trial, ladies and gentlemen, that the concealment went much deeper than that You will see, you are going to hear about something called a Statement of Economic Interests It is a long name, but it is pretty straightforward. And each year, Mr McDonnell as a state officer had to fill out a financial disclosure form. This form asks a lot of questions, but some of them include personal liabilities, stock ownership more than $10,000, and gifts of more than $50 from people other than personal friends

Now, you may remember that the same day she attended that event in Florida back in 2011, Ms McDonnell bought $30,000 worth of Star Scientific stock If she had still owned that stock by the end of December of 2011, by the end of the year, Mr McDonnell, you will hear, would have had to disclose it on his Statement of Economic Interests

In order to avoid having her husband have to report the stock ownership, you will hear that Ms McDonnell spoke to their broker, John Piscitelli, the man I mentioned earlier, and Mr Piscitelli is going to tell you that Ms McDonnell told him that she wanted to get the stock out of her name by the end of the year to avoid reporting requirements Ms McDonnell sold all of her shares of Star Scientific in the nick of time on December 20th, 2011 But she was anxious to re-purchase them, and on January 20th, 2012, approximately four days after Mr McDonnell filed that Statement of Economic Interests, Ms McDonnell repurchased another 6,600 shares of Star Scientific stock And you will learn that throughout 2012, after they repurchased that stock, Mr McDonnell sent text messages and e-mails to Mr Williams time and time again that Mr McDonnell was following the stock. "Stock looking good," he wrote to Mr Williams But as the year drew to a close, the McDonnells did as they did before They got rid of the stock so they wouldn't have to report it. On December 20th, 2012, you will hear that Ms McDonnell asked her family broker, Mr Piscitelli, to transfer 1,000 shares to each of her five children. She was left with approximately $4,500 of Star Scientific stock, below the $10,000 reporting threshold at the end of the year

But it wasn't just the stock, ladies and gentlemen You will learn that none of the golf from Mr Williams showed up on Mr McDonnell's disclosure forms, the $15,000 from Mr Williams to pay for the wedding catering contract was nowhere to be found, and none of the loans were disclosed in a way that anyone ever could have tied back to Mr Williams You will learn that the only time Mr Williams or his company showed up anywhere on that form was when staffers knew about expenses from two vacations that Mr McDonnell couldn't have hidden if he tried.

So the evidence will show that the disclosure forms were not the only way in which the defendants tried to conceal their relationship with Mr Williams or the only way that they concealed their true financial condition. Now, the McDonnells had bank lines of credit and mortgages on their various properties In October of 2012, Mr McDonnell submitted his personal financial statement as part of required paperwork for a loan on one of his beach house rentals down in Virginia Beach On that personal financial statement, Mr McDonnell understated his liabilities You will see that he did not include any of his loans from Mr Williams So as the calendar turned into 2013, law enforcement were investigating allegations that the chef at the Governor's Mansion was stealing food from the kitchen And as part of that investigation, the Virginia State Police learned about a $15,000 check that Mr Williams had written to the Mansion chef's catering company, because you will hear that the Mansion chef also owned a catering company and that's who was catering Cailin McDonnell's wedding On February 15th, 2013, the Virginia State Police voluntarily interviewed Ms McDonnell in her office During that interview, Ms McDonnell told the investigators that her husband had known Mr Williams for many years and had worked with him at a hospital supply company, when they had not She also said that she had written loan documents from the first $50,000 loan from Mr Williams back in May of 2011, and that she had been making periodic payments on the loan, when she had not

The Virginia State Police agents also asked her questions about the wedding catering and the Anatabloc launch at the Governor's Mansion Now, think about that, ladies and gentlemen: Why would Ms McDonnell say these things to the police if they weren't true? You will hear that after the agents left and Mr McDonnell learned about the interview, he was angry Now, February 15th, the day of that interview, was the Friday before a three-day weekend. Monday was Presidents' Day So February 15th, you will hear, is the day the McDonnells learned that the government is investigating their relationship with Jonnie Williams At this time, this February period, the McDonnells were in the midst of trying to refinance their rental properties Two weeks before the interview, the defendants had submitted a loan application to Pentagon Federal Credit Union This was for, as I said, a refinance of rental property Again, just as before, you will hear that they understated their liabilities, failing to disclose any of the loans from Mr Williams, even though they had received almost, at least $120,000 from Mr Williams to date

And so Monday, February 18th, Presidents' Day, when the banks and the Governor's Office are closed, the

Monday after Ms McDonnell was interviewed by the Virginia State Police and asked about those loans from Mr Williams, then and only then did Mr McDonnell go to his Governor's Office, closed, and fax a revised loan application to Pentagon Federal Credit Union on which he had handwritten in the loans from Mr Williams for the very first time

Think about that Before Mr McDonnell thought anyone would know about the loans from Mr Williams, they are nowhere to be found on his loan applications But when he finds out that law enforcement is asking questions about loans from Mr Williams, all of a sudden corrected loan applications are sent in And not too long after, Ms McDonnell also took her own steps to make things look different than they really were She put all of those designer New York City shopping clothes into a box, she drove them over to Mr Williams' house, and you will hear that they left them there with a note thanking Mr Williams for the loan of those clothes and claiming that they had previously discussed auctioning them off for charity She tried to make it look like Mr Williams had merely loaned her the clothes and that she always intended to return them. You will hear that neither was true

Seven months after learning about this investigation, you will hear that the McDonnells returned all of the money and gifts to Jonnie Williams Mr Williams gave them to the FBI, and you will see them all during this trial

Now, the investigation into that Mansion chef led law enforcement also to begin investigating Mr Jonnie Williams for certain transactions involving Star Scientific stock -- excuse me, involving Star Scientific stock, that's issue one; issue two is an investigation regarding the financial relationship between Mr Williams and the McDonnells You will hear that Mr Williams was questioned by law enforcement about why he loaned all this money to the McDonnells and paid for their daughter's wedding reception Mr Williams at first lied to the investigators and claimed that he was personal friends with the McDonnells and that he never expected anything in return. Mr Williams is going to tell you that he lied.

Now, to be clear, Mr Williams is not going to be here testifying out of the goodness of his own heart He has received immunity from prosecution in exchange for his truthful testimony Mr Williams is going to tell you that what he and the McDonnells were doing was wrong, and that's why they tried to hide it He will tell you that he believed in his product and he thought that making these payments and providing these gifts would help his business He viewed his relationships, you will hear, with the McDonnells as a business deal And at the end of the trial, you will see that it is not just Jonnie Williams' testimony is the evidence Far from it You are going to see e-mails, you are going to see business records, you will hear from other witnesses, you are going to see the timing of these events, and you are going to have your common sense

So those are the basic facts of the case Like I said, it is not everything, but it is plenty for now

So that takes us to the third thing I'd like to tell you this morning while I have your attention, and that is, briefly, what this case is not about This case is not about Mr McDonnell's performance as Governor This is not a case about anyone's personal feelings about Mr McDonnell as Governor, or his policies, or politicians in general, about Congress, about Washington If you hate politicians, it is not about that It doesn't matter if you are an R, a D, or a Z This case is about the actions of Mr and Ms McDonnell that you will hear about in this courtroom.

This case is not about whether a Governor can promote Virginia business Let us be clear: There is nothing wrong with a Governor promoting Virginia businesses or assisting a company in business development You will hear many times I'm sure that Mr McDonnell's campaign slogan was Bob's For Jobs It is what he was supposed to do But just not in exchange for money

And this case is not about politics as usual You will learn that not one penny of those bribes that the McDonnells took was a campaign contribution. This case is not about what Mr Williams may have lawfully donated to campaigns This case is about the McDonnells lining their pockets with secret gifts and cash given to them.

So by the end of this case, ladies and gentlemen, we will prove three things to you beyond a reasonable doubt First, Robert and Maureen McDonnell accepted more than $150,000 in cash, loans, vacations, golf, and luxury goods from Mr Williams Number two: Mr and Ms McDonnell knew what Mr Williams wanted, and they gave it to him. And number three: Mr and Ms McDonnell went to great lengths to hide what they were doing because they were breaking the law

And once the evidence is finished, we will come back to you and ask that you find the defendants, Robert and Maureen McDonnell, guilty of all counts Thank you

THE COURT: All right Defendants in the order you prefer

MR. BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor Your Honor, ladies and gentlemen of the jury: Like you, I was listening very closely to Ms Aber as she explained how the government is going to try to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that my client, Maureen McDonnell, is guilty of accepting bribes in exchange for official acts But she forgot to mention a simple but very important fact about Maureen McDonnell As First Lady of Virginia, she had no power to perform official acts herself and no power to order others to do them for her That's because, as First Lady, she was not a public official of the Commonwealth of Virginia She was not elected to office, she was not an employee of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and she did not receive a salary She had no official duties, no state responsibilities Of course, like any other First Lady of any other state in the Union, like the First Lady of the United States of America herself, Maureen McDonnell was expected to volunteer some of her time to promote Virginia Her businesses, her initiatives, her people. That is all she was, a volunteer Maureen McDonnell is sitting before you today accused of corruption only because of who she is married to This case at bottom is about whether or not Bob McDonnell did anything to corrupt his office

As you heard from Ms Aber, the government wants you to believe that Maureen McDonnell's actions as Bob's wife and as a volunteer are proof that Bob McDonnell corrupted his office, is a corrupt public official Bob

McDonnell is the government's ultimate target in this case You heard a lot about Bob McDonnell, and you heard something about Maureen McDonnell from Ms Aber But he is the ultimate target Maureen McDonnell is sitting here today as the collateral damage

Now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, my name is Bill Burck, and with me at counsel table are Heather Martin and Steve Hauss And we have the great privilege to represent Maureen McDonnell in this case

The government has told you what they expect the evidence will show in this case Their indictment alleges that the McDonnells accepted money and gifts from Jonnie Williams with full knowledge that those gifts were in exchange for official acts from the Governor It alleges a quid pro quo, which is just Latin for "I scratch your back, you scratch mine " So the government must have some unbeatable dead-bang proof of that mutual back scratching, right? Some proof that will leave no real doubt on that score Well, you heard yourself from Ms Aber that you won't see a videotape, you won't hear an audiotape, you won't hear an audio recording You won't read an e-mail, a text, some thing that proves there was a corrupt arrangement between my client and Jonnie Williams

So why does the government believe the McDonnells are corrupt? Well, as you will learn, that's because they believe Jonnie Williams And they want you to believe Jonnie Williams Because without him, there is no evidence in this case against Maureen McDonnell

But the real question is, which Jonnie Williams are you supposed to believe? Because there have been many different versions of Jonnie Williams You know how there are different versions of a cell phone, like the iPhone, and you have Version 4, Version 5, and just when you are getting used to that version they spring another one on you and you have to get rid of that one and they tell you, "Get rid of the old one, buy the knew one, it fixes the bugs " That's what Jonnie Williams' stories are like

You are going to hear that the government didn't think much of the original version of Jonnie Williams Jonnie Williams Version 1 0 The evidence will show that the government and Jonnie fixed the bugs over time, came up with several new versions, each one better and better for the government So what was the original Jonnie Williams, Version 1 0, the one the government doesn't like

The very first time Jonnie Williams spoke to investigators he was essentially cold-called He was at home He was not expecting a visit from law enforcement He didn't know why they were there. He was interviewed all by himself When the investigators asked him about the McDonnells, he had said he made a personal loan to Maureen McDonnell And you will hear that he told the investigators he did not get anything in return for the loan He told them that he never paid her for anything He said the McDonnells were his friends and that Maureen was into wellness and supported his product Before the interview wrapped up, Jonnie Williams went out of his way to emphasize that he did not get anything in return for the loans to the McDonnells He emphasized again that he did not ask for anything and he did not want anything

The original Jonnie Williams, Version 1 0, was a year-and-a-half ago in January of 2013 Then, about six months later, in July of 2013, Jonnie's story changed Let's call it Jonnie Williams Version 2 0 At this second meeting with law enforcement, Jonnie brings not one, not two, but six lawyers with him to meet with investigators Together, Jonnie Williams and his fleet of lawyers all meet up with the same prosecuting team you see here today Now, Jonnie Williams tells the government for the very first time he did have an arrangement with the McDonnells Well, a kinda/sorta arrangement

You see, the evidence will show Jonnie Williams does not say at this meeting that he had an explicit agreement with Maureen or Bob McDonnell Instead, what he tells the government is that he was looking for ways to help Star Scientific, and he believed helping the McDonnells would help the company And he basically believed the McDonnells understood the arrangement That's what he tells them. Ever since that second meeting, 2 0, the bugs in Jonnie Williams' stories have been ironed out Version 3 0 came out in September of last year After that, the McDonnells were indicted in January of this year Version 4 0 came out at the end of May of 2014, of this year, two months ago Version 5 0 a week later Version 6 0, two weeks after that 7 0, a couple weeks after that And less than two weeks ago, right before this trial, comes versions 8 and 9 That's nine different versions in about a year-and-a-half And each and every time it just keeps getting better and better for the government

Just to give you a taste of this, just last month, in Version 5 or Version 6, I can't remember which one it was, but Jonnie tells the government for the very first time, and you heard this from Ms Aber and apparently this will be what Mr Williams testifies to, this is the very first time, last month, he says to the government that Maureen McDonnell actually said the words that she would help him in return for him helping her family out financially The very first time he has ever said that she said those words Before it was a wink and a nod, it was an arrangement, that he understood they understood. But a week or so after he said that about Maureen McDonnell just last month, a week or so later, Jonnie tells the government that actually, Maureen said to him that she and Bob would help him out in exchange for his financial help But this version, of course, is a whole lot better for the government than the sorta/kinda arrangement the government got a year ago in Version 2 0 when Jonnie Williams showed up with his six lawyers Is there an e-mail or a text or a recording to corroborate this? No. It is just Jonnie Williams' word

So what happened? Why did Jonnie's story keep changing? Well, to understand that, you need to go back to that original Jonnie Williams Version 1 0 This is the one where he told the investigators that he never asked for anything from the McDonnells and he never offered -- they never offered anything in return This is back in January of 2013 Back then, the investigators didn't spend a whole lot of time asking Jonnie Williams about the McDonnells No, back then, the investigators were more interested in Jonnie Williams himself They were interested in a bunch of things about Jonnie But in particular, they wanted to know about a secret transaction in which Jonnie Williams gave a friend stock in his company, Star Scientific, and that friend gave him in return $10 million

Now, why was law enforcement interested in that secret transaction? Well, you see, Jonnie Williams, as you heard, was the CEO of Star Scientific And there are federal laws, federal criminal laws, that restrict what a CEO can do with the stock he owns in his own company without telling his investors We have all heard of some of these laws: insider trading, securities fraud. You see, if Jonnie Williams secretly sold stock to a friend without properly disclosing it, that could be a federal crime, which could mean possible jail time and losing $10 million.

So put yourself in Jonnie's shoes back in January of last year Law enforcement had just caught him by surprise in his own home and they were asking a lot of uncomfortable questions about stock transactions that could land him in prison and also deprive him of $10 million. Jonnie Williams had a problem. And yet, the investigators had also asked him about the McDonnells, not as much, but a little bit And it didn't take a rocket scientist to figure out from their questions that they were interested in whether or not Jonnie had given anything to the McDonnells in exchange for the McDonnells helping his company

The evidence will show that that's when Jonnie

Williams came up with the plan that he has executed. You will see, you will hear that he always thought of himself as a big fish. But he knew that Governor Bob McDonnell was a bigger fish, especially to the government. The evidence will show that Jonnie needed a way out of a $10 million problem, and he found his way out through the McDonnells. So again, going back to July 1st, 2013, this is Version 2.0, about six months after he was visited by investigators all by himself, Jonnie shows up with his army of lawyers to meet with the government. He and his lawyers sat down at a table across from the prosecutors. The prosecutors pushed across the table an agreement to Jonnie Williams and his lawyers. The agreement promised that the government would not use anything he told them at that meeting against him in a prosecution. But he could still be prosecuted. But they couldn't use anything he said against him at that meeting.

But that meeting was only about the McDonnells. It wasn't about the stock transaction. The government wasn't interested in asking Jonnie about the $10 million worth of stock fraud or anything else for that matter. They wanted to hear only what Jonnie had to say about the McDonnells. So Jonnie Williams had read the situation right. Now the evidence will show Jonnie tells the government that he did have an arrangement with the

McDonnells This is Version 2 0, the kinda/sorta arrangement

This is what the government wanted to hear Because right after he was done talking with them, that very same day, they gave him something called a full immunity, a transactional immunity agreement So right before the meeting, Jonnie got a promise in writing that they wouldn't use his statements against him if he were prosecuted, but he could still face prosecution. Right after the meeting, the same day, they gave him a much better deal "Don't worry about it, we won't prosecute you so long as you provide information and testimony against the McDonnells " This was a good start for Jonnie Williams But the immunity deal Jonnie got last year did not cover the $10 million stock fraud You will learn that Jonnie Williams couldn't get that deal out of the government just yet But Jonnie Williams, you will see, is patient And Jonnie Williams, you will see, is very smart Jonnie meets with the government again in September of last year, that's Version 3 0 Some of the bugs are then worked out from 2 0, and Jonnie waits The government then indicts Bob and Maureen McDonnell in January of this year, and Jonnie waits He waits until just two months before this trial, and then the evidence will show that Jonnie Williams demanded from the government full immunity for the $10 million problem and all his other financial problems which had been his main concern all along

So who cares what Jonnie wants at this point? He already had his deal What leverage has he got on the government?

As I mentioned earlier, Jonnie could throw in new details to embellish He could say Maureen McDonnell, which she didn't say, "Quid pro quo, Mr Williams " Quid pro quo That's what he is now saying Before it was understanding, arrangement It was then "No, she said this, not just about herself, but also Bob McDonnell " He was able to offer that in exchange But the evidence will show that Jonnie Williams had a bigger ace in the hole than any of that You see, Jonnie Williams knew that the government had already indicted the McDonnells, a point of no return for them. He knew that a trial date was just around the corner, only two months away And he knew the government needed his testimony So Jonnie Williams held out for a better deal than he had gotten a year before when the government had all the leverage

///

The evidence will show that Jonnie Williams knew that his testimony was more valuable right before trial than it was a year ago So he renegotiated his deal And he got full immunity for the ten million dollars for his other financial issues for his participation in this case So why did Jonnie Williams' story change so much from the original Version 1 0? Because he got an out-of-jail free card worth ten million dollars

Now, Jonnie Williams is not the only person who got immunity from the government in this case A woman named Jerri Fulkerson got one too She got hers just last week Who is she? Well, she was Jonnie Williams' personal assistant You'll hear her name a lot in this case In fact, you may even see her on the witness stand later today And you'll see her on the stand as a government witness As the judge said, the government starts first They put on their case It's their burden

You'll hear the government gave her immunity because she would sometimes sign Jonnie's name to documents and then swear under oath that the signature was his, not hers You may be thinking that sounds like Ms Fulkerson forged Jonnie Williams' signature Well, the twist is that we expect Ms Fulkerson will testify that she forged his signatures on these documents at Jonnie Williams' instruction, at his request

So you'll hear that the government decided to seek immunity from Ms Fulkerson in a bit of a hurry before they even knew what documents she may have forged for Jonnie Williams So is Jonnie Williams now in trouble with the government because of the forgery? It's a mystery I guess we'll all find out when Jonnie Williams takes the stand for the government

Let's pause for just a moment on Jerri Fulkerson She worked for Jonnie Williams for years, and she was dedicated and loyal soldier for Jonnie She believed that Jonnie valued her and the work she did for him But the evidence will show that what Jonnie Williams really cared about was using her to get what he wanted even if it got her in trouble I mention this because it provides an important insight into what the evidence will show about who Jonnie Williams is and how he operates

He uses people He manipulates them to promote his own agenda There's no question that Jonnie Williams had an agenda in 2011 and 2012 His agenda was to get access to the Governor of Virginia to promote his company So how did he try to do that? The evidence will show that he found a woman who was close to the Governor He found a woman who was not particularly happy or satisfied in her role and was looking for something new The evidence will show that Jonnie identified a woman who he could manipulate and he duped her into helping him with his agenda

The indictment alleges that the conspiracy in this case began in April of 2011 That month Jonnie takes this woman on a shopping trip in New York and buys her expensive clothing Two months later, Jonnie flies this woman on a private jet to Florida for a special event to learn about Star Scientific's most promising product, Anatabloc

In Florida, Jonnie makes the woman a true believer in the product She is convinced it has genuine health benefits So she goes out and she buys stock in Star Scientific Over the following weeks and months, Jonnie has secret meetings with the woman one-on-one and makes her promises worth tens of thousands of dollars Jonnie flies her on his private jet to various events, all of them to promote his company

And ultimately, Jonnie gets the woman to help him plan a launch event for Anatabloc at the Executive Mansion, all the while, the evidence will show, Jonnie Williams is not telling this woman, "Hey, can you help me out, give me access to the Governor so I can put my product with his good name " No Instead, he's telling her how much he values her, how much he admires and believes in her, how important she is to Star Scientific and crucially to him And she believes him because Jonnie Williams, you will hear, can be a very convincing salesman Unfortunately, for this woman, Jonnie's real motives for all the time and attention he has lavished on her are revealed only too late to help that woman understand what's really going on

Now, you may be thinking I'm talking about my client, Maureen McDonnell, but I'm not I'm talking about a woman named Mary-Shea Sutherland Ms Aber didn't mention Mary-Shea Sutherland in her opening, which is curious, because they interviewed her many times Mary-Shea Sutherland was the First Lady's Chief of Staff We expect she will also be a witness for the government in this case

The evidence will show Jonnie Williams duped Maureen McDonnell in much the same way he duped Mary-Shea Sutherland You see, he lavished time and attention on them both and, yes, gave them things to make them think he was interested in them, but all the while the evidence will show he was really interested only in what he thought they could do for him

Jonnie took both of them shopping in New York and bought both of them expensive clothing Jonnie flew them both to Florida on his private jet to learn about Anatabloc He got Maureen McDonnell and Mary-Shea

Sutherland excited about his company and his product Both immediately bought stock in the company Both became sort of cheerleaders for Anatabloc and started using the product themselves Both flew Jonnie's jet to various Star Scientific events in support of the company and the product Both did things to try to promote Anatabloc

The evidence will show that Maureen McDonnell and Mary-Shea Sutherland were both Jonnie's dupes He used them both in pursuit of his ultimate goal, access to the Governor, and he did it with exploiting their vulnerabilities and without ever letting them in on his true agenda So then why is Mary-Shea Sutherland, we expect a government witness, who has not been accused of any crime, while Maureen McDonnell sits before you accused of public corruption?

Recall something very important Maureen McDonnell was not a public official She was a volunteer You're going to hear that there's exactly one reference to the First Lady of Virginia in the tens of thousands of pages of laws in this Commonwealth She is the honorary chairperson of the Citizens' Advisory Council on Furnishing and Interpreting the Mansion That's it

Maureen McDonnell was a private citizen She was free to take a private job for private sector pay, just like anyone else who doesn't work for the state or federal governments In fact, you will hear evidence that while she was First Lady, Maureen McDonnell was being paid for work she did for a different nutraceutical company Ms Aber refers to nutraceuticals as vitamins They are also known as nutraceuticals And she was being paid for sitting on the board of another company And there is no allegation, none whatsoever, that those private jobs were illegal You will hear evidence that even the government's own investigators concluded very early on that money to Maureen McDonnell was not illegal

Now, the same cannot be said of Mary-Shea Sutherland Yes, she was Chief of Staff for the First Lady, but she was actually hired by and worked for the office of the Governor Mary-Shea Sutherland was a public official of the Commonwealth of Virginia She did receive a government salary As you will hear, she was not free to accept payment for services rendered to Jonnie Williams or anyone else

But the evidence will show that Mary-Shea Sutherland, the government's own witness, was secretly negotiating with Jonnie Williams for a job at the same time she was employed by the Commonwealth as Maureen McDonnell's Chief of Staff, at the time she was a public official The evidence will show that Mary-Shea Sutherland even had a handshake deal with Jonnie for a job, all the while she was working for the Commonwealth In fact, you will hear that Mary-Shea Sutherland was negotiating a written contract with Jonnie Williams and his lawyers to hire her as an event planner for Star Scientific And this was the same time that Mary-Shea Sutherland, you will hear, was the principal person planning the event for Anatabloc at the Executive Mansion in August 2011 This is the same event that the government wants to say Maureen McDonnell corruptly hosted

And you'll learn that all of these negotiations between Mary-Shea Sutherland and Jonnie Williams and his lawyers were concealed from Maureen McDonnell and the Governor You will hear in Mary-Shea Sutherland's own words that Jonnie Williams was insistent that Mary-Shea not tell the governor's office that she was leaving until after the luncheon at the mansion

So Mary-Shea Sutherland was secretly negotiating for a job as an event planner, receiving gifts and being flown around in Jonnie's private jet, all the while receiving a salary from the Commonwealth and planning an event for Jonnie Williams at the Executive Mansion

So why does Maureen McDonnell, a private citizen, stand accused and Mary-Shea Sutherland, a public official, does not? Did the government give Mary-Shea

Sutherland immunity like they did Jonnie Williams and Jerry Fulkerson just last week? Nope Have they cut some kind of secret deal with Mary-Shea Sutherland? Not that we know of Has the government accused her of any wrongdoing whatsoever? No, they have not

To the government, one thing makes all the difference between Maureen McDonnell and Mary-Shea Sutherland Only one is married to Bob McDonnell And you will hear evidence that from very early on, long before Jonnie Williams' Version 1 0 or the various immunity deals, long before Maureen McDonnell was interviewed by law enforcement, which you heard about from Ms Aber, the investigators in this case decided long ago to go after the McDonnells

But we believe the government made a fatal error in charging this case It is the same mistake Jonnie Williams made They thought they could use Maureen McDonnell to get to the Governor Why did the government make that mistake? Well, they knew three things First, they knew Maureen went around the Commonwealth and a few other states talking about the benefits of Anatabloc No surprise there really because Maureen McDonnell, you will hear, talked about a lot of Virginia companies and that was part of her job Second, they knew that Maureen took a loan and certain gifts from Jonnie Williams, and finally, they knew, of course, that Maureen was married to Bob McDonnell

However, the evidence will show that Maureen McDonnell was herself free to take gifts and loans and promote Anatabloc to her heart's content She could even have a job, a salary from Jonnie Williams She was a volunteer She wasn't a public official But not so fast, the government will say She had a bad motive for doing these things She was doing them in cahoots with her husband to sell his office to Jonnie Williams

But here's the reality of what the evidence will show in this case Maureen has a passion, a deeply seeded passion, for nutraceuticals -- again, what Ms Aber describes as vitamins -- that long predates her friendship with Jonnie Williams by decades This passion arose from serious health problems she had when she was a young adult She had a breast cancer scare when she was a teenager, and after that, she changed the way she lived her life and started taking nutraceuticals And she developed, as she saw friends and loved ones, benefit from these vitamins, these nutraceuticals She even had her children take nutraceuticals, including Anatabloc And for 30-plus years Maureen McDonnell has marketed and sold nutraceuticals to supplement her family's income You will hear she was fortunate enough to work in a field in which she actually believed in the product

You will hear from multiple witnesses that Maureen truly believed in the health benefits of nutraceuticals and the promise of Anatabloc You will hear evidence that Maureen bought Star Scientific stock at the very beginning of the supposed conspiracy and she still owns it today, despite everything, despite the fact the stock collapsed

The evidence will show Maureen was not promoting Anatabloc as part of a quid pro quo No You will hear from the government's own witnesses that she was a true believer who, quote, drank the Kool-Aid What Maureen did for Jonnie Williams she did because she believed in his product and his company and him, not as part of some scheme she cooked up with her husband

But there's another problem with the government's story, and this one goes right to the heart of the alleged conspiracy between my client and her husband Now, this entire case has been a source of great embarrassment and anxiety for my client, as you can, no doubt, imagine, but sadly, we have no choice but to push even further to the private lives and private difficulties of my client and her husband because the government has charged the couple as co-conspirators

The government's version of events rests on an important assumption; that Bob McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell must have agreed to sell his office because, well, they are married But at the time of the supposed conspiracy, the McDonnells' marriage had broken down and they were barely on speaking terms They put on a brave face for the public After all, Bob McDonnell was the Governor, and no one wants to make their own marital problems the subject of gossip

But the sad reality is the marriage was not working It hadn't been for some time, and the pressure of life in the Executive Mansion made things worse You're going to see e-mails to those effect You won't have to take my word for it

You will hear evidence that Maureen McDonnell had a difficult time transitioning to her role as First Lady It was never something that she wanted She had never managed a staff before She had lived all of her life out of the spotlight, raising her five kids and managing all of it Now she was in this Executive Mansion and she felt overwhelmed by the expectations of others and she did not think she was up to the task of being the wife of the Governor of Virginia She was deeply uncomfortable and stressed in this new role and she became frustrated and often angry Maureen oftentimes lost her temper with her staff and with her husband

All this was made worse by the extraordinary demands on Bob's time and attention that this job required He regularly worked 15, 16, 17 hours a day and traveled all the time, usually leaving her back at home She felt alone The few times they had any private time together, they spent almost none of it really communicating the way a husband and wife should And it was these feelings of isolation, anger and anxiety that made it so easy for Jonnie Williams to swoop in and fill the void in Maureen's life

Maureen immediately gravitated toward Jonnie He showered her with attention she craved He gave her personal gifts He helped her out financially He listened to her He spent time with her He even shared with her a genuine passion for nutraceuticals, or vitamins as Ms Aber refers to them She admired Jonnie Williams and had affection for him You'll even hear evidence that she had a crush on Jonnie Williams

Jonnie Williams was larger than life to Maureen McDonnell, but unlike the other man in her life, Jonnie paid attention to her He seemed to respect her views on things He seemed to respect her views on things that were very important to both of them

Maureen McDonnell came to genuinely care about Jonnie Williams, and she believed Jonnie Williams genuinely cared about her To Maureen, they were very close friends and Maureen was proud of her friendship with Jonnie Williams

The government said that they hid this relationship Well, Maureen traveled with Jonnie Williams to public events It's part of their evidence of a supposed quid pro quo She went on vacation with Jonnie and their respective spouses Everyone on the staff, you will hear, knew how much Maureen loved hanging out with Jonnie Williams You will hear evidence that Maureen was very protective, some might even say jealous of her relationship with Jonnie Williams She would get prickly when she thought others were encroaching on that friendship or failing to appreciate that Jonnie Williams was her friend first and foremost

You'll hear from witnesses that Jonnie was a frequent visitor to the mansion, that many of these visits were spontaneous, that Maureen and Jonnie usually met privately either upstairs in the mansion or in Maureen's basement office, and we expect you'll hear one government witness describe Jonnie Williams as Maureen's, quote, favorite playmate

To give you an idea of the extent of the relationship, between April 2011 and February 2013, that's the scope of the conspiracy alleged by the government, the evidence will be that Bob McDonnell and Jonnie Williams spoke by phone or text message about 60 times By contrast, during that same period, Maureen and Jonnie shared over 1,200 phone calls and texts, during the same period That averages out to 2 or so calls or texts every day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year And you'll hear that Maureen hid much of what Jonnie Williams gave her from her husband She didn't tell her husband about the clothing that Jonnie bought her in New York She didn't tell Bob about the 50,000-dollar loan from Jonnie until after she started spending the money And three times, three times she hid from her husband her purchase of Star Scientific stock

Maureen McDonnell accepted gifts from Jonnie Williams, who you'll hear from witness after witness, loved to flaunt his wealth because she liked Jonnie Williams quite a bit and she thought he liked her too The evidence will show that Maureen McDonnell and Jonnie Williams had a relationship that some would consider inappropriate for two people who are not married to each other

Maureen McDonnell helped promote Star Scientific and Anatabloc because she believed in them, and as a private citizen, there is nothing illegal about any of that, and as a private citizen, she was free to live her life in whatever way she liked so long as she did not conspire with her husband to corrupt his office

The government will not be able to prove a conspiracy between Maureen and Bob McDonnell because there is no credible evidence that a conspiracy existed because you will hear the very foundation of their marriage was broken long before Jonnie Williams appeared on the scene

Now, before I wrap up, I want to touch briefly on the other charges against my client First, the government claims the McDonnells made a false statement to a bank when they submitted a joint application and did not list the loans from Jonnie Williams The evidence will show that Maureen McDonnell barely had anything whatsoever to do with preparing this loan application, nor will there be any evidence that Maureen actually reviewed the application The evidence will be that Maureen signed a piece of paper that was put in front of her by her husband That's it

The government also alleges that Maureen attempted to obstruct the grand jury investigation when she returned clothing to Jonnie Williams Now, I want to be clear about this You heard from Ms Aber that there was an interview conducted by the Virginia State Police of my client in February of 2013, and they allege that she made some false statements in that interview They do not charge that in this case This case is not about whether or not she told the truth in that interview

You will actually hear, with respect to that interview, that the claims that the police make about what she said in a typed up document about having a written contract, periodic payments are totally contradicted by the handwritten notes that were taken contemporaneously when she was being interviewed by the police and that she never said written contract and she never said periodic payments, that that was false What the police wrote in the typed up notes that Ms Aber referred to was false That's important for me to point out now You'll see it and you'll hear it for yourselves

But that's not what they charge here They are charging something unrelated to that interview They are talking about a handwritten note that Maureen McDonnell sent to Jonnie Williams after this investigation became known to them

As part -- with that handwritten note, she returned some dresses that Jonnie Williams had bought, some of the dresses, for example, that he bought in New York But Maureen McDonnell could not have intended to obstruct the grand jury The evidence will show that when Maureen returned the dresses, she had no idea a grand jury had even started In fact, the evidence will show she was told there was no grand jury or federal investigation at all

How could she intend to obstruct a grand jury investigation that she was told didn't even exist? And you will learn that there was no grand jury investigation at the time she sent this note But even if she had known about it and the grand jury had existed, there's nothing wrong with what Maureen McDonnell did, as you'll see in a moment She returned the dresses that Jonnie Williams had bought, and the government doesn't charge the return of the dresses themselves as being the obstruction No The government says again that it's the handwritten note that Maureen wrote to thank Jonnie Williams for the dresses, which falsely suggests that Jonnie and Maureen had agreed all along that she would return them But it is plain as day that the letter says no such thing The government mentioned this letter, but they didn't show it to you So I'm going to show it to you This is their evidence

So this is the note And we'll blow up the -- you'll get to see this You won't have to take my word for it You'll get to read it to your heart's content The letter does not say that Maureen McDonnell and Jonnie Williams had talked about returning the dresses The only thing it says they had talked about was charitable organizations

Can you blow it up?

It's a little hard to read because it's handwritten, but please go ahead "If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about who would welcome the opportunity to auction them for a wonderful cause "

Their case on obstruction comes down to the words "like we talked about " Now, I'm not a grammatician I'm not an English professor But if you read that -- those lines and you read what it says, she says, "many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about " She doesn't say anything about having agreed with him before to return dresses to charitable organizations She's talking about charitable organizations they talked about The evidence will show that Maureen and Jonnie had not only talked about charitable organizations, they had actually attended events for charitable organizations together

Can you take that down?

The government wants you to believe this case is about a husband and wife who were partners in crime, Bonnie and Clyde, trading the governor's office for money and gifts, but once the evidence is in, you will see that the government's theory of the case cannot be reconciled with the facts No The government's case begins and ends with the word of Jonnie Williams Ms Aber went out of her way to say it's not about Jonnie Williams, it's about all this other stuff But you'll see, it's about Jonnie Williams, a man with everything to gain and nothing to lose by claiming that Maureen McDonnell's heart and mind were infected by the same corruption that he now says motivated him

The government trusts Jonnie Williams, but that doesn't mean you have to Jonnie Williams is very good at using people to get what he wants Jonnie Williams duped Jerri Fulkerson That's the woman who forged his signature at his request, his personal assistant for many years He duped Mary-Shea Sutherland, who we talked about He duped Maureen McDonnell, and the evidence is going to show that he even duped the Department of Justice

We are confident that after you have heard and seen all the evidence in this case, Jonnie Williams will not doop you and you will find that Maureen McDonnell is not guilty on all of these charges Thank you

THE COURT: All right We're going to take a 15-minute break before the next opening statement

Mr Marshal, if you would take the jury

(Recess taken from 12:00 p m to 12:22 p m)

THE COURT: Bring in the jury, please

MR DRY: Judge, just one point I've been admonished before not to stand when the jury comes into the courtroom in this courthouse, and I just wanted to make sure that we knew what the rules of engagement were I think defense counsel were standing up We have no problem with standing up when the jury comes in We just want to know what the rules of engagement are

THE COURT: I don't have any rule If you want to stand up when they come in, fine If not

MR DRY: Thank you, Your Honor

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Counsel for Mr McDonnell

MR BROWNLEE: Good afternoon Bob McDonnell is an innocent man The evidence at this trial will make it clear that Bob McDonnell never entered into an illegal agreement with Jonnie Williams, nor did he ever promise to provide him any official benefits

The evidence will show that the federal government's case depends almost entirely on the testimony of a dishonest man who they cut a deal with so that he would change his story, and Mr Williams now has been fully immunized for multi-million-dollar securities and tax crimes that have absolutely nothing to do with Bob

McDonnell At the end of the day, there will be no evidence that Bob McDonnell, our former Governor, did anything to corrupt his office or betray his oath to our citizens Bob McDonnell is someone who has lived a life of public service and governed with integrity and purpose

After Bob graduated from Notre Dame, he joined the Army He served 21 years in the United States Army and Army Reserves, and his oldest daughter, Jeanine, served in the Iraq war He was a state prosecutor, making his community and our state safer and better He served as Attorney General and Governor, earning the reputation of being one of Virginia's most successful modern day governors

Bob helped pass important legislation Helped grow the economy He and his team helped put nearly 80,000 unemployed Virginians back to work and he made restoration of voting rights and prisoner re-entry a cornerstone of his administration Bob worked 14 to 16 hours a day, practically every day, in order to do that, and he did it all while living under the spotlight and glare without a hint of scandal or impropriety

These prosecutors are now asking you to ignore all of it and simply assume because they cannot prove that Bob McDonnell threw it all away so he could get part of a catering bill paid for his daughter's wedding Ladies and gentlemen, that did not happen

Now, Ms Aber told you this morning that their investigation began in 2013 As you will learn, that simply isn't true Their investigation began in early 2012 In fact, let me take you back to May 23rd, 2012 From today's date, that's a little over two years ago

On that date, the government's lead investigator, Agent Charles Hagan, had a meeting with his superiors and members of their team to discuss the progress of an investigation into a man named Todd Schneider, who had been the chef at the Governor's Mansion Mr Schneider had been accused of stealing some food

During the meeting, Agent Hagan reviewed some of the evidence against Chef Todd and discussed his possible defenses He also told his team that they had learned that Ms McDonnell had developed a very close relationship with and had been taking gifts from a local wealthy businessman named Jonnie Williams Agent Hagan's notes show that the meeting ended with the agents making some important conclusions about Bob and Maureen McDonnell's conduct and raised questions on how their investigation would proceed

First, the lead investigator confirmed the McDonnells' innocence in writing when he wrote that money and gifts to Maureen McDonnell were not illegal, that there was a loophole and that the Governor was not required to list on his disclosure form gifts to his wife

Next, the investigators had real concerns about Jonnie Williams, questioning whether there were possible securities violations committed by Mr Williams and that he may have committed fraud in obtaining financing for his company Lastly, the investigator's notes show that they focused their attention on how they could use Williams to go after the McDonnells Before you is an excerpt from his notes

Now, ladies and gentlemen, May 23rd, 2012, was nearly eight months before federal investigators ever talked with Jonnie Williams and it was nine months before these agents interviewed Ms McDonnell and it was long before Bob McDonnell ever considered submitting a loan application to these banks

Now, the government's thinking, over two years ago, about going after the McDonnells and to do so by using Jonnie Williams, a man they had never even met, raises serious doubts about their case Importantly, the evidence will show that what was contemplated by the government over two years ago became a reality when they charged Bob McDonnell with crimes that he did not commit

The evidence will show that during the past two years the federal government has read nearly every single e-mail Bob McDonnell either wrote or received during his time in office They read scores of his text messages They studied his personal papers and his bank records They forced his five children, both his son-in-laws, and his youngest sister into the federal grand jury for hours They interviewed his entire staff and cabinet on multiple occasions, one as many as 15 times They subpoenaed his accountant and had the IRS thoroughly review his tax returns, searching for any possible problem

They interviewed his neighbors, his closest advisors They even traveled to California and interviewed former Presidential Candidate Mitt Romney and his wife Ann, hoping to find someone to say something bad about Bob McDonnell And you know what? They came up empty They couldn't find a thing

And to show their desperation in trying to find something bad, anything bad about Bob, the prosecutor in this case used the Governor's security detail, the people whose job it was to protect Bob McDonnell and who were with him every day of his governorship, they had him eavesdrop on his private conversations and then report to federal investigators what they saw and heard And do you know how many crimes they reported about Bob McDonnell? None Zero Nothing

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, my name is John Brownlee and it is a distinct privilege and honor for me, as well as my co-counsel, Hank Asbill, to appear before you today on behalf of Bob McDonnell It is also an honor for me to be in the courtroom of the United States Judge -- United States District Judge James Spencer And, Your Honor, thank you

The federal government wants you to believe that Bob McDonnell corrupted his office, betrayed his oath by selling the governorship of Virginia to Jonnie Williams in exchange for a wedding gift to his daughter, a couple of golf matches with his sons, a few dinners, and a loan to a business he owns with his youngest sister And they want to try to do all of this while acknowledging, as they did this morning, that Jonnie Williams got nothing from the taxpayers of Virginia

The evidence in this case is uncontested that Jonnie Williams didn't get a state grant He didn't get a state contract He didn't get a state loan He didn't get a state board position He didn't get a special piece of legislation He didn't get anything in the state budget He didn't get any funds from this Tobacco Commission In fact, the evidence will be, he never even applied for any

As taxpayers here in Virginia, you can all rest assured that neither Jonnie Williams, nor any of his companies, got one dollar from taxpayer money from the administration of Bob McDonnell And the evidence will show that not only did he not get anything from the administration, he never really even asked for anything And yet despite the clear evidence that Mr Williams didn't get anything from the taxpayers of Virginia, the federal government is going to try to convince you that he got something

So what have they come up with? Setting up a couple of meetings, attending an event at the Governor's Mansion in which -- which is important -- the company gave money to the state of Virginia and that Bob McDonnell said nice things about Mr Williams' company and his products And the supposed promise to do more that the government talked about today for which there is no credible evidence is simply not enough for a federal criminal corruption case

So first, the meetings The evidence will show that referring constituents for meetings is what politicians do It's why the politicians are there, to help citizens get access to their government and a chance to make their pitch Criminalizing this bedrock principal of arranging meetings for constituents, for donors and non-donors alike, would make felons virtually of every person who has ever held a public office That is not the law, and the evidence in this case will not support it

In four years in office, Bob McDonnell asked members of his staff and cabinet to meet with Mr Williams on just two occasions, once in 2010 and again in the summer of 2011 The request in 2010 occurred before Mr Williams gave the McDonnells any gifts or loans, proving that Bob McDonnell didn't need a gift from Jonnie Williams for him to be a supporter of his company Also, the evidence will show that all Mr McDonnell did was ask that the meetings be held He didn't tell anyone to help Mr Williams, nor did he even follow up on the meetings What Bob McDonnell did, in asking his staff and cabinet to meet with Williams, was routine, appropriate, and perfectly legal

Second, this mansion event Here, Mr Williams requested an opportunity to come to the Governor's Mansion and give two state research universities, UVA and VCU, each $25,000 in research grants Mr McDonnell stopped by the event for about 45 minutes, made some casual remarks supporting medical research in Virginia, asked a few hard questions and left before the event was over Again, the evidence will show that Mr McDonnell did not pressure anyone to help Mr Williams, nor did he follow up on the event

Lastly, the evidence will show that on a few occasions Bob said nice things about Star Scientific, a Virginia public company for which Jonnie Williams was CEO

Ladies and gentlemen, saying positive things about a Virginia business is what Bob McDonnell always did That's who he was as Governor He was Bob's for jobs, creating jobs, promoting Virginia businesses, getting Virginians back to work That's what he was all about, and Bob traveled all over the state, around the country and to many foreign countries with that same message It was come to Virginia We are the most business-friendly state in America

Now, the evidence will show that no one had to pay Bob McDonnell to get him to use a Virginia product or say nice things about a Virginia company Bob McDonnell eats Virginia ham, he drinks Virginia wine, and my guess is if the man smoked, he would smoke Virginia cigarettes His whole purpose of Governor was supporting and promoting every Virginia business he could I'd like you to watch just two short video clips to demonstrate that

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

MR BROWNLEE: Ladies and gentlemen, these two examples of many show what Bob's job was as Governor It was his mission It was his passion, and it helped

Virginia dig out of one of the biggest economic recessions in 80 years The easiest thing for a Virginia business to get was a kind word about its product from Governor Bob McDonnell And the government's attempt to build a corruption case based on Bob McDonnell's promotion of a Virginia business is deeply flawed and cannot be sustained

Now, Ms Aber talked about concealment The government's case alleges that Bob McDonnell concealed his relationship with Jonnie Williams Ladies and gentlemen, Bob McDonnell never hid anything from anyone In fact, he's the only major player in this entire drama who has been completely open about everything

You aren't going to see Jonnie Williams' text messages You're not going to see Mary-Shea Sutherland's either You're going to see his, and you'll see the thousands of documents, personal notes, schedules, logs that he had He turned over everything they asked for, and the evidence at trial will make it completely clear that Bob isn't hiding anything

Now, you won't have to take my word for it because Bob McDonnell is going to tell you that himself You see, Bob McDonnell is going to take that chair right there and he is going to tell you what happened, what he did and why he did it Bob is going to take the stand and swear on everything that is holy and dear to him and tell you the truth about these false accusations He will answer every single question that Judge Spencer deems appropriate He was not hiding anything before, and he will not hide anything now

Now, remember, he has no obligation to take that stand He has no obligation to say anything in response to these allegations It is the prosecutor's burden to show that he is guilty It is not his burden to show that he is innocent, but he is going to take that stand anyway because that's who he is He will not hide from their false accusations That's because Bob McDonnell is a man of integrity And his integrity, his character, and his testimony will convince you that he is an innocent man

In this trial you are going to hear from impressive people who grew up with Bob McDonnell People who have known Bob his entire life People who have worked alongside Bob in the trenches of political campaigns in the governing of our Commonwealth People who have seen Bob when he was physically and emotionally exhausted and at the times of maximum stress, when even the most disciplined person's true character is exposed These people will be your X-ray machine into Bob's soul, and they will tell you that Bob McDonnell is truthful, law-abiding, decent, and totally dedicated to public service Bob McDonnell is not a perfect person, but they will tell you he is an honest man and the most -- least cynical person they know

Now, the prosecutors have to convince every single one of you beyond a reasonable doubt that Bob McDonnell is guilty of the crimes that they have accused him That is the highest standard in American law But I submit, we will prove to you that the prosecutors are wrong about who Bob is and that they have made a grievous mistake in accusing this man of these crimes

The evidence will show that Bob McDonnell doesn't care about material possessions He's not greedy He was not financially desperate and Mr Williams was not his only option for a loan Witness after witness will tell you that He is a humble man of great faith who is thankful every day for the incredible opportunity he had had to serve the people of Virginia He is a trusting man who gives the benefit of the doubt to every person he meets and you will see that that trait, that very trait, that honorable trait is a major reason now that he faces the biggest challenge of his life

The government's case is remarkable for what it lacks because there will be no credible evidence offered in this case that Bob McDonnell promised Jonnie Williams anything There is not a document, an e-mail, a text message, a recording, a photo, a video or anything that shows any agreement or promise between Jonnie Williams and Bob McDonnell There's nothing Even Jonnie Williams, in an unguarded moment of candor, denied emphatically that any such agreement or corrupt relationship existed between himself and Bob McDonnell

Now, as Mr Burck told you, on January 23rd, 2013, federal agents traveled to one of Mr Williams' homes in Florida to interview him At that time he had no lawyer Mr Williams made it clear that Bob promised him nothing Williams told the investigators that he never asked for anything from Bob and never expected anything from him And in May 2013, just a few months later, Star Scientific put out a public statement reaffirming Mr Williams' admission to the FBI that Bob McDonnell had done nothing wrong or illegal

But that's not all The evidence will also show that Bob never asked a single person in Virginia government to do anything for Jonnie Williams except hear him out Bob never twisted arms He never banged on doors He didn't put the screws to anyone He didn't do anything besides let Jonnie Williams make his pitch to the experts on his staff who Bob knew would make an independent and professional judgment about what to do with Jonnie Williams and his products Bob hired these people for their integrity and independence, and that is exactly what they gave him in return, and the evidence in this case will make that crystal clear

The evidence will also show that the reason Jonnie got nothing and the reason Bob never tried to make anyone give Jonnie anything is because there was simply no conspiracy There was no plan There was no agreement There was no under-the-table deal There were no secret conspiratorial meetings or phone calls and there was no scheme to defraud That, ladies and gentlemen, is what the evidence will show

The evidence will also show that Jonnie was nice to Bob and generous to his family and that that generosity was perfectly legal under Virginia law Now we know that Williams' generosity was all a sham and he was actually a false friend The evidence will show that Jonnie is lying if he claims that Bob ever promised him everything or gave him anything in exchange for that generosity Plain and simple, ladies and gentlemen, Jonnie deceived Bob Jonnie deceived and manipulated Maureen Jonnie deceived and manipulated Mary-Shea Sutherland, and Jonnie did it again to his long-time personal aid, Jerri Fulkerson Jonnie deceived his companies and its lawyers Jonnie misled the thousands of investors who entrusted his company with their hard-earned money And the evidence will show that

Jonnie Williams, the master manipulator, deceived these prosecutors and agents who brought this case and convinced them to think the worst about Bob McDonnell

And he did it to save himself from losing millions of dollars and potentially going to prison for securities and tax crimes that have nothing to do with Bob McDonnell and for which now the federal government has provided him total and full immunity, the value of which is immense to Jonnie Williams

Now, Bob McDonnell was a good Governor because he was one of the hardest working people in Virginia He was always working, always at events, always traveling, always on the go And over his four years as Governor, according to his staff, he held over 3,600 meetings, spent 4,600 hours away from home I think that's about half of the entire four-year term He gave hundreds of speeches, attended even more events, worked 14 to 16 hours a day all through the year Bob McDonnell hired an extraordinarily hardworking and talented staff and cabinet and empowered everyone on that talented staff to do their very best too, all following his example

But, ladies and gentlemen, his hard work and his dedication, and particularly his time away, it took a toll It took a toll on his family, and it took a terrible toll on his wife Bob McDonnell, by all accounts, was a good Governor He was good at raising or helping to raise his five children and he loves them immensely, but the evidence will show he was not nearly as successful as a husband. In his life, something had to give and it was his marriage The only thing that the government now offers to prove that he was conspiring with his wife

Bob did try to keep private, while he was Governor, the most personal and difficult aspects of his marriage Bob tried to shield the dysfunction of his marriage from his youngest children and from the public But now you will hear evidence about what happened behind closed doors with Maureen You will hear that no matter how hard it got or how hard he struggled, he did his level best to help his wife Bob never criticized his wife in public He never humiliated her He never scorned her, and he never did anything to diminish her He did everything he could to help Maureen to give her confidence and self-esteem He did everything he could to give her initiatives she could promote and tried to help her be the best First Lady she could be

He hired a team of professionals, including someone he thought was highly competent, Mary-Shea Sutherland, as Maureen's Chief of Staff He thought Mary-Shea would help Maureen, would guide her and protect her in this new role He trusted Mary-Shea to steer Maureen wisely and responsibly and to help Maureen cope with the demands of a public life that had caused her tremendous stress and anxiety That's why Bob asked Mary-Shea not to leave

But no matter what he did to hold everything together, it was never enough As Mr Burck alluded to, Bob and Maureen's communications broke down almost entirely and Ms McDonnell's resentment and anger and sadness grew as their marriage fell apart Bob reached out to try to bridge this gap and he wondered why, why this happened

She said she hated him She was angry for not having what she thought was enough money She was angry at him for not spending enough time at home with her, and she hated him for not being around, for serving the public night and day, and having nothing left for her And this broke their marriage apart And it created a rift so wide that an outsider, in this case another man, could invade and poison the marriage

I want to let you know how difficult this is for Bob McDonnell Although he has been in public life for many years, you will hear he is and remains a very private man As you can imagine, to be forced to discuss his troubled marriage in public with total strangers goes against every fiber of his being as a man and as a husband and as a father But Bob has agreed to open up his marriage and his life to you so you can properly assess for yourself his character and their charges

Bob McDonnell will invite all of you to evaluate his life, both successes and sorrows, all so that you can see for yourselves that the government's allegation that he was conspiring with his wife, and later with Mr Williams, is simply not true

Back in September of 2011, Bob sent Maureen a long e-mail after a weekend in which she was extremely angry at him The e-mail shows him begging her to help save the marriage You are going to read this e-mail, an e-mail, quite frankly, that no one besides a husband and wife should ever read It will show you just how broken things were in their marriage An e-mail he sent right in the middle of their supposed conspiracy But that e-mail, which Bob will read to all of you, fell upon blind eyes and deaf ears for that evening Maureen was distracted with other interests

The prosecutors in this case are going to attack Bob's integrity and character at every turn, claiming that he's entitled, claiming that he's greedy, claiming that he was financially desperate You will hear a lot of evidence about disclosure in this trial and you will hear innuendo about Bob hiding things, but the evidence will show that Bob was hiding in plain sight As Governor of Virginia, as head of the Republican Governor's Association and as a possible running mate for Mitt Romney, Bob had no privacy, none All day, everywhere, people were watching him, scrutinizing him, paying attention to everything he said and to everything he did

Now, ladies and gentlemen, over the next several weeks, we are going to address head-on each of the government's allegations One by one, we will show you why everything they accuse Bob McDonnell of doing was wrong

For instance, Ms Aber, this morning, said that Bob lied to two banks when he was seeking refinancing on a couple of properties She claimed that Bob intentionally left off Mr Williams' loans What she forgot to tell you is that Bob has been friends with the president of TowneBank for 20 years and started doing business with PenFed when he was a young soldier in the Army nearly 40 years ago

She also didn't tell you that neither bank ever claimed it had been lied to or that any of the forms submitted were false In fact, the very bank that the government alleges Bob supposedly lied to renewed that very loan a month after the government returned its indictment The evidence will show that at the time Bob submitted the applications, numerous people knew that Williams had loaned them money His youngest sister knew His youngest sister's estranged husband knew Jerri Fulkerson knew And Bob's bookkeeper and accountant had full and direct access to his accounts, which clearly showed Williams' loans

The idea that Bob would suddenly, in the third year of his governorship, in the full glare of the public spotlight, lie on bank applications because he didn't want a few bankers to know that he had taken loans from Jonnie Williams defies all logic and common sense

The evidence will also show that Bob McDonnell never hid or tried to hide Mr Williams' support, generosity or friendship In fact, while Bob McDonnell was Governor -- Ms Aber discussed this morning these statements of economic interest While Bob McDonnell was Governor, he publicly reported nearly $170,000 in donations, gifts, and loans from Mr Williams and his company All, all of them perfectly legal under Virginia law And Bob McDonnell complied with Virginia law in every respect In fact, there will be no suggestion at this trial that Bob McDonnell ever violated Virginia disclosure laws or reporting requirements, ever

You will see that for every year, from 2009 through 2012, Bob McDonnell disclosed publicly for all to see that Mr Williams had donated to his campaign, had given to his Political Action Committee and had provided him and his family some gifts and loans And Bob did nothing to hide his friendship with Mr Williams They golfed together They ate together In fact, on one occasion, their families went on a vacation together Bob McDonnell never hid anything or tried to hide anything about Mr Williams, and, ladies and gentlemen, any assertion to the contrary is simply not true

I have thought a lot about today and this moment and how I would like you to think about Bob McDonnell as we begin to hear the evidence in this case As I think about Bob McDonnell, I am reminded of one of my favorite quotes from a book I read as a young Army officer, now some 26 years ago The book, Once an Eagle, was written by Anton Myrer It is a novel about a young soldier in World War I who rose to the rank of general officer in World War II Toward the end of the book, on learning that his own son had been killed in action, he recalls what he said to his son some years ago "That's the whole challenge of life, to act with honor and hope and generosity no matter what you've drawn You can't help when or what you were born and you may not be able to help how you die, but you can and you should try to pass these days between as a good man "

Ladies and gentlemen, the evidence will show in this case that Bob McDonnell is a good man who always acted with honor and hope and generosity

Now, as this trial goes on, some of you may be surprised at how aggressively we are defending Bob McDonnell We are not going to apologize for that It is a tremendous privilege and honor for each of us to defend Bob McDonnell, to defend his freedom, to defend his family, to defend his reputation, and to defend his future against accusations by the federal government that the evidence simply will not support

We are going to defend Bob McDonnell with every ounce of energy we can muster and with every single witness you will hear And at the end of this trial, when all the chips are on the table, all the hands have been played, and there is no more evidence to hear, my co-counsel, Hank Asbill, will have the privilege of speaking to you personally in his closing argument And when that day comes, Hank will not hesitate to ask each of you to return the only just verdict in this case and that is not guilty on all counts Thank you

(Luncheon recess taken from 1:10 p.m. to 2:10 p.m.)

THE COURT: All right, let's bring in the jury, please. All right, let me invoke the rule on witnesses. All of those who expect to be called as a witness in this case, except for the government's representative, and defense expert as appropriate, will have to leave the courtroom to await their call.

MR. DRY: Just to confirm, that's only one government representative witness, case agent?

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

THE COURT: Let's approach on that.

(At Bench.)

MR. DRY: The defense has not objected to having the case agents in the courtroom, it is my understanding.

THE COURT: How many do you have?

MR. DRY: Two.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. DRY: Yes, sir, thank you.

(In Open Court.)

MR. ASBILL: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted Are you saying 8 or 80?

MR. HARBACH: 80

THE COURT: All right

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Could we take a look at Page 2 of Government's 80?

What are we looking at here, Mr Greer?

A That would be an invoice that was prepared for the wedding

Q And a couple questions about this First of all, there is a gray box around the word "Sales Rep," about a third of the way over from the left Do you see that?

A I do.

Q It has the initials RPG.

A Correct

Q Who is that?

A That's me

A Yes, sir

Q Okay Finally, Page 4 of Government's 80

A That would be the contract

Q And I note on the top right-hand corner, the first page, it says Page 1 of 3 Before we go on to the last two pages of the document, I want to note if we could blow up where it says "Total Cost" down there at the bottom, those four lines or so Thank you, sir Total cost is listed at just under $16,000 Do you see that there, sir?

A Yes

Q And then there are two 25 percent installments that are due Was that standard practice at Seasonings, to require deposits in advance like that?

A Yes

Q And then finally the last page of Government's 80, a signature page?

A Correct.

Q Okay After you -- you can take that exhibit down, please After you e-mailed the paperwork we just looked at to Cailin McDonnell, did you eventually hear back from Mr McDonnell?

A Yes, sir

Q If we could pull up for identification, please, Government Exhibit 81 Are you able to see the page on that screen, sir?

A Yes, sir

Q Okay Do you recognize this document?

A I do

Q Is this the documentation you received back from Mr McDonnell?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 81

MR. ASBILL: No objection.

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

MR. HARBACH: Your Honor, would you like me to ask to publish to the jury each time or is it okay to publish once it is admitted?

THE COURT: Once it is admitted it can be published.

MR. HARBACH: Thank you.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Okay, Mr Greer, the first thing I'd like to identify is the handwriting at the bottom of the page there Could we blow that up? Whose handwriting is that, Mr Greer?

A That's my handwriting

Q And could we walk through it briefly, where it says "Do LED lights," what was that about?

A That would have been for the tables at the wedding

To put lights on the table

Q Then can you read the next few lines of your notes?

A "Electricity very limited, bring power from garage How many fans and what the pull," and then to "Doug and Rich "

Q Do you recall what the issue was surrounding the electricity and the power from the garage?

A I felt that it wasn't going to be enough power to power everything

Q It was going to be needed for the reception?

A Correct

Q Okay Zoom back out, please. Now, there's some more handwritten notes on the right-hand side of the page there And are you able to make out who it appears signed that handwritten note to you?

A Yes

Q What does it say?

A "Bob McDonnell "

Q Now, I'm going to read this into the record and ask you if I've read it correctly, okay? Can you follow along with me?

A Sure.

Q It says: "Ryan, I have made a few reasonable changes to the contract which I hope you find acceptable Left a voicemail as well Likely final head count closer to 200-200-" something, "and will advise in advance Thanks, Bob McDonnell " There is a phone number "P S Thanks for all your help with Cailin to get this set up."

As best you could tell, did I read that correctly, sir?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, let's take a look at Page 2 of Government's 81, please And Page 3 On this one there's some other handwritten notations Do you recognize that handwriting or know who wrote that, sir? By that, I mean the $757 that's handwritten in there, and the total

A I'm not 100 percent sure of whose handwriting that is

Q Let's look at Page 4, please. And if we could just blow up right there, thank you, this area where some other handwritten notations have been made To your recollection, sir, when you received this document that we are looking at now, that is Government's 81, back from, eventually back from Mr McDonnell, to your knowledge, had anyone else marked it up?

A Not to my knowledge

Q Did Mr Schneider tell you that he marked it up by hand?

A I don't recall

Q Okay If you could back out, please Let's go to the next page of Government's 81 There is some line editing on this page Appears to say, "The deposit will be refunded if an act of God or death occurs which prevents the wedding reception from occurring " Did I read that correctly?

A Yes, sir

Q What was your understanding of who made that change to the document when you received this thing?

A Bob McDonnell

Q Please back out, Mr Starnes Then also, thank you, the bottom half, we don't need to go through all of these details, the jury can read them. But would your answer be the same on these other handwritten notations to the contract, namely, that it was your understanding that it was Mr McDonnell who made them?

A Yes, sir

Q And finally, the last page of the draft contract, which is also the last page of Government's 81, one of those signature lines has a name on it Next to the word "Client," you see the signature there that appears to be Robert McDonnell's signature?

A Yes

Q What's the date that he apparently signed it?

A December 29th, 2010

Q Thank you. You can take the exhibit down, Mr Starnes Earlier in your testimony, Mr Greer, we talked about a couple of deposits that were going to be due before the event Do you recall that testimony?

A I do.

Q Do you recall whether Seasonings received deposits like that from the McDonnells?

A We did

Q Take a look with me at Government's 79, please Do you recognize that document, sir?

A Yes

Q What is it?

A That would have been the first deposit check from the Governor

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 79

MR. ASBILL: No objection.

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q What's the amount of this check, sir?

A $3,974 25

Q And the names at the top left of the check, whose names are on this check, sir?

A Robert McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell

Q Did you deposit this check for Seasonings?

A Yes, sir

Q Could we see for identification Government's 82, please Is this the deposit slip with which you deposited the check we were just looking at, sir?

A Yes, sir

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 82

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q I don't know if you can turn your head to the side and read when you deposited that check, sir

A December 31st, 2010

Q There we go. Thank you, sir

A You are welcome

Q That's it for that exhibit, Mr. Starnes. Could we please pull up for identification Government's 156 Do you recognize this document, sir?

A I do

Q What is it?

A That would be an invoice history statement from QuickBooks

Q Is that a Seasonings record?

A It is That's where we enter the payments

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 156

MR. ASBILL: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay, Mr Starnes is blowing this up for you, Mr Greer First question is, what's the entry next to "Customer"?

A "Governor Bob McDonnell "

Q And down there, what's the purpose of this record? Sorry, that was a bad question. Let me just ask you, what's the purpose of an invoice history document like we are looking at here?

A So we would know how much payment or what's due by the time the wedding comes

Q Okay And in this case, the first payment there that's marked December 31st of 2010 of $3,974 25, is that the check we were just talking about a moment ago?

A Yes, sir

Q Was there a second deposit in identical amount a couple of months later?

A There was

Q Let's take a look for identification, please, at Government's 85 Do you recognize this to be the check for that second deposit, sir?

A Yes, sir

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 85

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q What's the date of this check, Mr Greer?

A January 22nd, 2011

Q And what's the name on the upper left corner of the check?

A Robert McDonnell

Q And an identical amount to the first deposit check?

A Yes, sir

Q Did you deposit this one?

A I do believe I did.

Q Could we look for identification at Government's 86 Is this the deposit slip for the second check we were just looking at, Mr. Greer?

A Yes, sir

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 86.

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q When did you deposit the second deposit -- excuse me, the second check, sir?

A February 3rd, 2011

Q Take that exhibit down, Mr Starnes Mr Greer, do you recall how the balance of the amount due and owing on the contract was paid?

A I do

Q How was it paid, sir?

MR. ASBILL: Objection, based on hearsay

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Go ahead, sir

A It was paid for by a check made out to Seasonings for $15,000

Q If we could take a look for identification at Government's 121, please Is this the check you were just describing, sir?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 121

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q What's the amount of the check, sir?

A $15,000

Q And what's the name on the top left of this check, the account holder?

A Starwood Trust

Q In the pay line where it says "Pay To The Order Of," it says "Great Seasons Catering " Is that your handwriting, sir?

A No, sir

Q Do you know whose handwriting it is?
A No, sir
Q When you received the check, was that filled in with Great Seasons Catering?
A It was
Q Do you recall how you received, you personally received this check, sir?
A I know I received it at the restaurant, and to be honest, it was either Todd Schneider handed it to me or Mary-Shea I don't know 100 percent who gave it to me But I received it at the restaurant
Q You think it was one of those two people?
A One of those two
Q But you don't remember which?
A I don't
Q When you say "the restaurant," what are you talking about?
A Seasonings Fine Catering We also had a restaurant
Q Here in Richmond?
A Yes, in Midlothian
Q Okay Back to the check that's displayed on Government's 121 I ou deposit this one?
A I did.
Q Did you receive any different instructions about your deposit of this check?

A Yes I was asked to cash the check

MR HAUSS: Objection, hearsay

THE COURT: Overruled

THE WITNESS: I was asked to cash the check.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q By whom?

A Todd Schneider

Q Did you take it to the bank?

A I did.

Q What happened?

A They wouldn't cash it because it is a business account so they made me deposit it

Q If we take a look for identification at Government Exhibit 133, please Is this the deposit slip for the check we have just been talking about?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 133

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Now, this deposit slip looks different from the others What happened here, Mr Greer?

A I went to the bank and had intentions on cashing the check, so I didn't have a deposit slip with me So the teller, when she refused to cash the check, she filled out a deposit slip for me

Q If you could look in the bottom right hand of the top portion of Government's 133, there is a date there that's on the far right that's kind of typed in there Can you see that date, sir?

A May 26th.

Q Of what year?

A 2011

Q You can take that exhibit down, sir One other question about when you received this check, Mr Greer Around the time that you received the check, did you receive any other instructions about what -- about how to handle it?

MR HAUSS: Objection, calls for hearsay, Your Honor

THE COURT: He can answer the question

THE WITNESS: I was instructed not to tell anybody about the check.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q By whom?

A By Todd Schneider

Q Okay After the $15,000 check that we have been talking about was deposited, was there a difference between the amount that was due and owing on the contract and the amount of the $15,000 check when you received it?

A Yes

Q Which is to say there was a refund due?

A Yes, sir

Q Did you receive any instructions about how to handle the refund?

A I was instructed by Mr Schneider to issue a refund check in the difference to Maureen McDonnell

Q Okay What did you do to take care of that?

A I advised Sarah, who issued the checks, to issue the check for the difference

Q Okay Let's take a look at Government's 159, please Is this the refund check you just mentioned?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 159

MR. HAUSS: No objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Now, Mr Greer, were you personally involved in setting the exact amount of this check, sir?

A I was instructed by Mr Schneider on what the refund would be

Q Okay And so as far as you are aware, it was Mr Schneider who selected the amount?

A Yes

Q What is the amount of this check, sir?

A $5,266 50

Q Okay Do you,recall having any discussions personally with Maureen McDonnell around the time that the refund check was issued?

A I recall one conversation in regards to a generator that I had to order

Q Tell us what you recall about that

MR. HAUSS: Your Honor, that's irrelevant

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: That there was an issue because the generator was ordered for the power, and she refused to pay She didn't want to pay for it So she did call me, but I discussed it with Mr Schneider and we decided to adjust the way the gratuities were paid out for the wedding to cover the cost of the generator

MR. HARBACH: May I have one moment, please, Judge?

THE COURT: Sure

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor No further questions at this time

THE COURT: Cross?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Greer

A How are you?

Q I see you getting a glass of water I'll do the same Where is Chef Todd these days?

A Last I heard was Florida, but the last I spoke with Mr Schneider was probably back in 2011

Q Do you have any reason to believe he is not alive and well?

A Couldn't tell you.

Q Any reason or any understanding of why he may not be here today instead of you?

A Good question

Q Now, let me go back to these, just in reverse order, the things the government was asking you about With respect to this refund of what, approximately $5,200?

A Yes, sir

Q And that refund check, what did you do with that? Did you deliver that?

A I did not deliver that

Q What did you do with it? How did you get it to somebody?

A I gave it to Todd.

Q You gave it to Todd You have no personal knowledge of what happened to it after that, do you?

A I do not

Q Who was the check made out to?

A Maureen McDonnell

Q And I believe you said that this contract or the person who signed as client was Bob McDonnell; is that right?

A There was a signature I do believe it said Robert McDonnell

Q This was for Cailin McDonnell's wedding, right?

A Yes, sir

Q Initially you sent Cailin McDonnell the contract itself and you deemed her to be your client, correct?

A That's correct

Q All right So you thought Cailin and Chris Young, her fiance', were your clients for the wedding, right?

A Yes

Q At some point Bob McDonnell signs the contract and sends in some deposits, right?

A Yes

Q And you send a check back to Maureen McDonnell

A That's correct

Q Who was never a client, right?

A Right

Q And it was never her wedding, correct? Right?

A Correct

Q You said that Todd tells you, "Don't tell anyone about this check." Correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Did my client ever tell you not to tell anyone about anything?

A Sorry, your client is?

Q My client is Bob McDonnell Did he ever tell you not to tell anyone about anything?

A No, sir

Q Now, with respect to the check for $15,000 made out to Seasons that you have testified about, you say you took that to the bank and tried to cash it, correct?

A Yes

Q And you wanted to get cash money, dollar bills or hundred-dollar bills in hand for that check; is that right?

A That's what I was instructed to do by Mr Schneider, yes

Q And Mr Schneider wanted you to do that why?

A Couldn't tell you.

Q Well, can you tell me whether or not at this time Mr Schneider was bouncing checks to employees at your company or to vendors?

A Yes

Q Did it ever occur to you that maybe he wanted the cash so nobody could cash a check against the 15,000?

MR. HARBACH: Objection, argumentative

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You tried to cash the check. I take it there was not enough money in the Seasonings account to cover that check if it bounced; is that right?

A No, sir I wasn't on the account It was a business account, so they wouldn't cash it for me

Q They couldn't cash it for you because it was a business --

A It is a business account and a business check, it was deposit only That was explained to Mr Schneider prior to me going to the bank.

Q Then why did you go to the bank and try to cash it then?

A Because I was doing what I was told. He was my boss

Q Okay And you say a business account The account in fact was a trust, Starwood Trust

A No, speaking of the Seasonings account

Q The Seasonings account I'm talking about the check itself

A The check, I didn't know about the -- the check was the check. It wouldn't have mattered if it was a personal check or anything, I still wouldn't have been able to cash it

Q Because they were going to wait five days?

A Because I wasn't on the account

Q So you couldn't cash the check.

A I explained that, but he wanted me to try anyways

Q Any reason why he didn't go try himself?

A I couldn't answer that

Q All right And this check, I know it was shown on the screen, it had the full information about the trust that wrote the account; isn't that right? It has been blocked out on what Mr Harbach showed you

A There was an address on it

Q There was a name of a trust and an address and a phone number for the trust on the account, wasn't there?

A I don't recall

Q Take a look at the check again Do you want to see a copy of it?

A Yeah, sure

MR ASBILL: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Does that refresh your recollection?

A There is a phone number on there

Q There is a name of a trust, Starwood Trust, right?

A Uh-huh.

Q There is an address in Bradenton, Florida, correct?

A Correct

Q There is a phone number, correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And the account information, the numbers that were blocked out for privacy reasons, those are all visible, in terms of what Mr Harbach showed you, those are all visible on the check itself, correct?

A They are

Q Okay Now, this check, you say you received it from either Todd or Mary-Shea; is that correct?

A Correct

Q So was that at the restaurant?

A That was at the restaurant

Q Right And you can't tell which one?

A I don't recall

Q Do you ever recall talking to the government in this case and telling them you didn't recall, aside from whether it was Mary-Shea or whether it was Todd, you didn't recall whether you got it at the restaurant or picked it up at the Mansion?

A I don't understand.

Q Do you ever recall telling the government that you got the check from the Mansion, not from an individual at the Mansion, but it wasn't at the restaurant, it was at the Mansion; do you recall that?

A I do not

Q Are you sure about it coming to the restaurant and being given to you there as opposed to it being left at the Mansion for you?

A It was delivered to me at the restaurant

Q All right And you never told the government otherwise; is that correct?

A Correct

Q All right Now, the deposits, the initial deposits, one of those was at the end of December of 2010, correct?

A Yes

Q And that was on time in accordance with the contract, wasn't it?

A Yes, sir

Q And the second one was not several months later, as Mr Harbach suggested It was in fact at the end of -- excuse me, the 22nd of January, less than a month later in the beginning of 2011, correct?

A I think it was in February But I don't remember the exact date

Q Do you need to take take a look at the deposit slips again?

A Sure

(Document proffered to witness.)

Q Here is a check and deposit slip.

A February 3rd

Q February 3rd you deposited it?

A Yes

Q And the check was written when?

A The check was dated January 22nd

Q So again, less than a month later from the time you got the first check, and in accordance with the terms of the contract and on time, correct?

A Yes

Q Now, the balance due, so the totals of the deposits that are made at the end of December in 2010 and the end of January in 2011, rough total, $8,000 towards a 15-and-change or $16,000 contract, correct?

A Correct

Q So there's $8,000 remaining to be paid going forward to the wedding, correct?

A Correct

Q And per the contract, that $8,000 was due within ten days of the date of the wedding, which was June 4th, 2011 Am I right?

A That's correct

Q And in between the end of January and June of 2011 in comes this $15,000 check, correct?

A Correct

Q Okay Now, with respect to the contract itself, I believe when Mr Harbach was talking to you, he started with a dinner that you had at the Mansion with my client and his wife and Chris Young and Cailin McDonnell That was in December or November of 2010?

A I don't remember the exact date I know the dinner occurred.

Q I know It was at the end of the year of 2010; is that correct?

A I'm not 100 percent sure It was in 2010

Q Okay And at that time, and shortly thereafter that, there was a contract, a proposed contract that you sent to Cailin McDonnell, correct?

A Correct

Q And that, again, was for 15,000 and change or $16,000 total, for the entire catering bill, correct?

A Uh-huh.

Q Earlier, go back to October, go back to the early fall in 2010, you had a meeting at your restaurant with Chris and Cailin about their wedding plans, correct?

A I don't recall

Q You don't recall the date or you don't recall meeting with Chris and Cailin about the wedding in the fall, early fall, well before December when you had the dinner at the Mansion?

A I don't recall

Q You don't recall having any meeting with them?

A I mean, the meeting may have occurred, but I don't recall It was 2010 Sorry

Q Okay Well, do you recall that there was an initial contract proposal for more money than $16,000? For something over 20,000 or $23,000?

A There was a few that Todd Schneider dealt with that had different prices on them.

Q Higher prices, correct?

A Correct

Q And Cailin and Chris, to your understanding, pushed back against that price because they wanted something that they could afford, which was in the $15,000 range Correct?

A And that's why I received the price, the lower contracted price

Q Okay And so did you have any knowledge of how the original, earlier $23,000 contract proposal came into being in terms of the gap between the two contract prices?

A That was all dealt with by Mr Schneider

Q Do you have any knowledge that Chris and Cailin were trying to set up a catering event for their wedding with a budget that they could afford, and Todd and Mary-Shea were, "Oh, no, no, that's not good enough for the Governor's daughter, you've got to have fancier stuff at the wedding"?

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR ASBILL:

Q The handwriting on the final contract by my client, aside from the signature and aside from the date, those all related to legal terms, not price terms, am I right?

A That's correct

MR ASBILL: And I know that it was taken down pretty quickly, but maybe we can pull the government's exhibit up again.

MR. HARBACH: I would be happy to. Which exhibit would you like?

MR. ASBILL: The one with the handwriting on Page 2, the contract, the final contract

(Document displayed.)

MR ASBILL: Next page, please There we go Can you blow up the handwriting, please?

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You see the handwriting on the terms and conditions page?

A Yes, sir

Q All right And the interlineation by my client goes, "The deposit will be refunded if an act of God or death occurs which prevents the wedding reception from occurring " And then his initials, R.M., at the bottom, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And the next one, three paragraphs down, reads: "Seasonings is not liable for any damage to goods, personal property or injury to guests at the event or elsewhere resulting from theft or any other cause, unless caused by its own negligence or intentional acts " Then that's initialed by my client?

A Yes, sir

Q Is that right?

A Yes, sir

Q At the very bottom of that page there is another edit, "Seasonings agrees to pay 33-and-a-third percent of the total claims of client if Seasonings fails to perform as noted in the contract " Correct?

A Correct

Q All right And my client basically asked, "I hope you will find these changes, these legal changes to the contract, acceptable " Right?

A I do believe that's what was on Page 1

Q Okay

A Of the e-mail

Q So at the end of the day, why no refund was made to Cailin or no refund was made to her father is something you don't have any idea about; is that correct?

A No

MR. ASBILL: Thank you I have no further questions

THE COURT: Anything else for this witness?

MR. HAUSS: Very briefly, Your Honor

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. HAUSS:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Greer How are you?

A Good.

Q I'm going to be very, very brief You mentioned, with regard to the $15,000 check, you got that from either Todd Schneider or Mary-Shea; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And when you say Mary-Shea, is that Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A Yes

Q And Mary-Shea Sutherland was the First Lady's Chief of Staff; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And then you also mentioned a refund check that was made out to Maureen McDonnell?

A Yes

Q And Maureen McDonnell did not instruct you to make that out to her, did she?

A No

MR HAUSS: Thank you. Nothing further

THE COURT: Any redirect?

MR. HARBACH: No May Mr Greer be excused?

THE COURT: Absolutely

(Witness stood aside)

MS ABER: The United States calls Cailin McDonnell Young

CAILIN McDONNELL YOUNG,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MS ABER:

Q Good afternoon, Ms Young

A Good afternoon.

Q Please state your name and spell it for the court reporter

A Cailin McDonnell Young, C-A-I-L-I-N, M-C-D-O-N-N-E-L-L, Y-O-U-N-G.

Q Is it correct that you are the daughter of the defendants here today?

A Yes, I am.

Q And you have how many brothers and sisters?

A There's is five of us altogether I have an older sister, myself, my younger sister, and then the twin baby boys

Q Now, I'd like to turn your attention back to your wedding in 2011 On what date did you get married?

A June 4th, 2011

Q And to whom did you get married?

A Christopher Young

Q Approximately when did you get engaged?

A It was December of 2009

Q And so going forward in time from that engagement, I assume you began planning your wedding?

A We did

Q And did you and your fiance', Mr Young, have any discussions about who would be paying for that wedding?

A We did. My husband and I really were excited and we wanted to pay for the wedding ourselves

Q And why did you want to pay for yourself?

A It was something we felt very strongly about We thought it spoke a lot about us as a couple, and my parents had done the same thing and we really admired that

Q Were you planning to pay for the entire wedding or bits and pieces of it?

A The entire wedding

Q Did you have discussions with your parents about your intention to pay for the wedding?

A We did. Shortly after we got engaged, we had to schedule a meeting to have dinner with my parents, and we went and spoke with them and told them that this was our desire and that we wanted to pay for it ourselves

Q What was your parents' reaction to that?

A You know, they respected it They thought it was, you know, admirable that we wanted to do something like that But I knew my dad wasn't that thrilled about it

Q What did your father say that led you to believe that he was not thrilled with it?

A I don't know if it was at that time exactly, but you know, he would make comments, "Okay, Cailin," you know, that kind of thing

Q That suggested to you that your father did not want you to pay for your wedding; is that right?

A Well, I know being his first daughter, I mean, I can't tell you exactly what he was thinking, but being his first daughter, of course, you know, I would think that he would want to pay for it

Q Where was your wedding going to be held?

A We got married, the ceremony was at St Patrick's Church, and then we had the reception at the Executive Mansion.

Q And did you have to find a caterer to prepare food for the reception?

A We did

Q Who did you use?

A We used -- well, we first spoke to Todd Schneider and we used his, who was the Mansion chef at that time, and we used his catering company, Great Seasonings

Q I'd like to bring up Government Exhibit 76, please Government Exhibit 76, is that an e-mail from you to Mr Schneider and your fiance' on November 9th, 2010?

A Yes, it is

MS ABER: I'd like to move that into evidence My copy is yellow

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

MS. ABER: For the record, it is yellow for everyone, Your Honor

BY MS ABER:

Q Tell the jury, please, what exactly this e-mail says Can you read it to them, please?

A It says -- it says: "Todd: Christopher and I are meeting with mom and dad on Thursday to go over a few more things After that we will be able to get the deposit to you Thank you for being patient with us "

Q And what is the subject of your e-mail?

A "Wedding "

Q Now, what were the few more things that you needed to go over with your mom and dad?

A If I remember correctly, at this time we had already received the contract and things like that So I wanted to go over with my parents the terminology in the contract My dad being a lawyer, it had a lot of legal mumbo-jumbo in it that I didn't understand. I'd never planned a big event like this, so I wanted to go over everything in that and make sure I knew what I was signing As well as in the invoice, everything was affected by the guest list and how many people we were having at the wedding And the guest list was constantly changing and we were going back and forth with my parents, and so it was months and months of trying to figure out how many people were going to be invited.

Q So at this point in time when your e-mail says, "we will be able to get the deposit to you," who is the "we" in that sentence?

A My husband and myself

Q Okay I'd like to bring up what's already been admitted as 80, please Now, Ms Young, let's start at the bottom here, please Is it fair to say this is an e-mail from Mr Greer to you with attachments?

A Yes

Q Okay Scrolling upward, please, is it fair to say that Mr Greer forwarded this back to you a couple days later?

A He did

Q And then you in turn sent this to whom?

A I sent it to my father

Q Okay If we could back up, Ms Taylor, please Let's look at Government Exhibit 77, please That has not been admitted. If we could zoom in, please, on the top. Now, Ms Young, is it fair to say this is an e-mail from you to your parents on December 3rd, 2010?

A Yes, with my husband cc'd.

Q Great Thank you.

MS ABER: I'd like to move 77 into evidence, please

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MS ABER:

Q What is it that you are attaching to this e-mail for your parents?

A It is the invoice for the reception

Q As well as the contract?

A I can't tell from this, but the title just says "Invoice "

Q So that makes sense Ms Taylor, could we flip through this document briefly to show the attachments to Ms Young It is hard when it is all electronic Is it correct now that the contract was appended to this e-mail?

A Yes, ma'am.

Q Okay Why are you sending your father the catering contract at this point in time?

A Like I stated earlier, I wanted him to look at it, all the terms on there, make sure everything was correct so I knew what I was signing And also, I had never had an event at the Mansion. They have held events there, and I wanted to make sure that we were following protocol for everything that was done at the Mansion.

Q Okay Let's look at Government Exhibit 81, please That's already been admitted. And specifically, Page 4 Is this the completed contract for your wedding catering, Ms Young?

A Yes

Q And turning to Page 5, if we could go down to the bottom there, excuse me, Page 4, head on back Thank you One more page back Thank you. Let's go to the bottom there where it indicates the total cost Now, at the time the contract was being executed, were you aware of the cost of your wedding catering?

A I was

Q Okay Were you aware of the installments that were going to be due?

A I was

Q Now, flipping forward, please, two pages Towards the end, Ms Taylor Page 6, please When did you find out that your father signed this wedding catering contract?

A It was after he had made the second payment I don't know the day, though

Q Okay What was your reaction to that?

A I was furious

Q Did you tell him?

A I did. My mother told me that he had done this I immediately called my father and yelled at him.

Q Let's turn to Government Exhibit 79, please This has already been admitted This is a check, Ms Young, dated December 29th from your father to Seasonings Fine Catering Is it fair to say that's the first payment?

A Yes

Q Let's look at 85, please So this is the second payment dated January 22nd of 2011?

A Yes, ma'am.

Q Okay As you sit here today, you are saying you learned sometime after January 22nd that this payment had been made

A Yes, ma'am.

Q Do you remember how far after January 22nd?

A I don't

Q Do you remember how far back in time from your wedding in June this was?

A I cannot accurately give you a time I'm not sure

Q Let's look at Government Exhibit 111, please Is it fair to say this is an e-mail from your father to you and then you in response on May 1st and May 2nd of 2011?

A Yes

Q Okay

MS ABER: I would move 111 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MS ABER:

Q Can you please read for the jury your father's e-mail to you on May 1st?

A "Please advise me on May 20th or so the final count and final payment amount for the wedding so I can make payment on time ten days out Thanks, Dad "

Q On the top, what is your response?

A "I will, everyone has asked RSVP by the 20th "

Q Is it fair to say your father seems to be suggesting he would be making the final payment for the wedding in this e-mail or is that not how you understood it?

A He is saying that he wanted to, yes But that was not our desire, and I was not going to send him the bill to pay that

Q After your father sent this e-mail on May 1st, did you communicate to him, say, "Hey, dad, you got this all wrong, I'm paying?"

A I had done that numerous times ever since that first time that we sat down with him shortly after we got engaged, and time and time and time again we had told them. He was aware that that's how we felt

Q As of this date, do you think you knew your father had signed the catering contract?

A I can't say 100 percent whether I did or not I might have, but I don't know Because I don't know when I found out.

Q But as of this date, May 1st, how much money did you owe on the catering contract? I don't mean an exact number; math is not my thing Would it have been the total balance minus the two payments your father had made?

A That depends if I knew he had made them or not So I can't answer that question.

Q Okay Let's talk about instead, enough with the wedding for a moment, Jonnie Williams

A Okay

Q When did you first meet Mr Williams?

A The first time I remember meeting Mr Williams was, I think it was April 29th.

Q Of what year?

A 2011

Q And how far before your wedding was that?

A I think it was about five weeks

Q What were the circumstances of your meeting?

A That day, my mother and I had actually gone skydiving One of her initiatives was military families and appreciating the military and all of that So the Golden Knights had asked her to go skydiving And they so graciously included me in that So we got to do that that morning And then I went back to work. If I remember correctly, it was a Friday I went back to work, and then when we had jumped, they had gentlemen that jumped with us to videotape and take pictures So they told us that they were going to have that video ready for us I was over the moon about it I was really excited I wanted to go get that video, and I had heard that it had been dropped off at the Mansion So after work I went, or I'm not sure what time, but sometime that evening I went to the Mansion to retrieve that video and I wanted to stop in and say hi to my parents And as I was calling around upstairs I walked in and my parents were having dinner with Mr and Ms Williams

Q So what room of the Mansion were they in?

A It was the far back right room. It is called like the library-office But we had kind of turned it into our own little family dining room when we got the dining room set after my grandparents passed away

Q How long did you speak with Mr Williams?

A It was about ten, fifteen minutes

Q What did you talk about?

A Well, first we were talking all about skydiving, and my mother and I were reenacting and explaining everything that happened. And she had actually had a faulty parachute before she jumped out, so we were talking about that And they were asking all about it And then we started talking about my wedding And I don't remember specifics of everything that was said, but I remember there was a window in the back room that looks out into the garden, the back yard, and that's where we were going to have the reception And it has a staircase that my husband Christopher and I were going to be first introduced as man and wife as we come in. So I was explaining that to them.

Q Did you stick around for dinner?

A I did not I kind of walked in as they were eating

Q Okay Did you say that was the first time you met Mr Williams?

A The first time I remember meeting him, yes, ma'am.

Q So then you leave After that evening, did you receive a call from your mother stating that Mr Williams wanted to pay for your wedding reception?

A I did.

Q Can you tell the jury what your mother said?

A My mother called me and told me that Mr Williams was so impressed by me and really enjoyed meeting me, and as a wedding gift he wanted to pay for our reception.

Q What was your reaction to that?

A I was shocked I mean, it was a hugely generous gift

Q How far after that dinner do you think your mom called you to tell you this?

A I can't say accurately, but it would have been possibly a couple days, maybe a week. But I don't know the day that I got the phone call

Q Okay I'd like to bring up Government Exhibit 121 that's been admitted Had you seen this check before, Ms Young?

A Not until the first time I met with you.

Q All right Do you know how this check got to the caterer?

A It was delivered to the Mansion

Q Who told you that?

A It was my mother

Q Did you talk to your father at all about this $15,000 check?

A I'm sure we did at some point in time, but I don't remember a conversation about it

Q Okay But somebody had to pay for the balance of the wedding contract, right?

A It was going to be Christopher and I, yes, ma'am.

Q Is it fair to say that the final payment was due ten days before your wedding?

A Yes

Q So as of May 1st, 2011, somebody had to pay for this

A Correct

Q Okay Did other folks, "folks" isn't the right word, did other guests or friends or family give you wedding gifts?

A They did

Q Did any of them give you money?

A They did.

Q Family members, I assume?

A Yes

Q Friends?

A Yes

Q Did anyone else give you a gift close to $15,000?

A No, ma'am.

Q What was the next largest gift you received from anybody else?

A I can't say accurately I'm not sure what everything cost But my husband's family gave us an amount towards, to use for the rehearsal dinner

Q How much was that?

A I think it was $4,200

Q Those were family members of Mr Young's?

A Yes

Q Now, during the time period in which you are planning the wedding, I assume you put together a guest list

A We did, and it was changing up until probably a day or two before the wedding

Q Did you consult with your parents when putting this list together?

A We did, tried to. It was a very painful process working with them on my guest list

Q Was Mr Williams on that guest list before he gave you or your family, whomever, $15,000 for the catering?

A He gave it to me as a wedding gift to me and my husband, and no, he was not on there before that

Q Why did you add him to the list?

A Obviously because of the generous gift he gave us We added multiple people that were helping us in our wedding and contributing

Q Do you recall seeing Mr Williams at your reception?

A I do not. Unfortunately, we didn't get to see a lot of people at the wedding So I'm not sure if he was there or not He did respond, yes, that he was coming

Q Is it fair to say that the caterer had been paid a sufficient amount of money between your father's deposits and the $15,000 check that there was an overage?

A Yes That was not my understanding of what happened, but that's ended up what happened, yes, ma'am.

Q So the catering company, what did they do with that overage, to your knowledge?

A What I found out later is they gave a reimbursement check to my mother

Q And when did you find out about that?

A It was February of 2012 -- 2013 I don't know the year 2013

Q As you sit here today, which year are you going with? I don't mean that sarcastically I'm sorry As you sit here today, which year do you think it was that your mother told you about this?

A It was February of 2013

Q Okay And how did your mother bring this up? What was the conversation?

A She called me and asked me if she could come over and chat with me and have dinner So she did. And she told me that she had had a conversation with the FBI and they had asked about Jonnie, and the wedding, and my dad found out about this reimbursement check, a check that I didn't even know about I didn't know it existed, either And he was very upset with her, very upset that she had taken this money and said, "This is Cailin's gift Go take it to her This is hers " So she came and gave me that check.

Q So for the sake of the record, let's look at Government Exhibit 159, please This is the check from Seasonings to your mother in May of -- June of 2011 Have you seen this before?

A I had not

Q Okay So let's look at Government Exhibit 493 that has not been moved into evidence If we could zoom in on the check Is that the check that your mother wrote back to you in February of 2013?

A Yes, ma'am.

Q Okay Did you ever reimburse your father --

MS ABER: Your Honor, let me move Government Exhibit 493 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MS ABER:

Q What is the memo line on this, Ms Young?

A "Wedding Reception Reimbursement "

Q Thanks Did you ever reimburse your father for his two deposits on the front end?

A I did not. Because my understanding of what happened was, Mr Williams wanted to pay for the reception. And when my mother asked me how much that cost and who to make it out to, I told her it was around $15,000, and so my understanding was that he was paying for the entirety of the reception since that's what I was told he wanted to do. So I thought my father would get his money back since Mr Williams wanted to pay for the entire reception So I thought my dad was made whole with his money So I didn't know that there was any outstanding money left over at the end

Q So why did you accept that reimbursement check from your mother?

A There was no point fighting at that point with them about it They were very adamant, "This was your money, this was left over " You know, after my dad's math that he did, this is what was left over of Mr. Williams's gift, which was the gift to my husband and I, so they gave us that check

Q In terms of other wedding expenses, did you and your fiance', now husband, pay for other wedding expenses?

A We did.

Q What about the location? You had the reception at the Mansion. Did you have to pay a fee for that venue?

A No, we did not

Q How many guests did you have at the wedding? At the reception. Let's talk about that

A I think it was somewhere between 200 and 250 I can't remember exactly at this point I'm sorry

Q Did you serve alcohol at the reception?

A We did

Q And did you pay for that?

A We paid for most of it, yes, ma'am.

Q What did you pay for, exactly?

A We paid for the beer, liquor, and wine, and then we had some wine that was also donated.

Q Do you remember how much wine was donated?

A I can't remember exactly I know Ms Kluge wanted to donate some, and as I have thought more on it, I think what ended up happening is she was just able to donate a bottle of champagne and Mr Morris, who was her security, he donated three boxes of red wine Then we ended up buying the rest from different vineyards And then we had a stock-the-bar party, too, to help for that, and then we bought all the beer and liquor, also.

Q Okay So you used the liquor provided at the stock-the-bar party by your friends and relatives at your wedding; is that right?

A This was a couple bottles We went out and bought much, much more, also There was just a couple bottles It was a small engagement party that we had, so we got a couple bottles, yes, ma'am.

Q How did your wedding party travel from the church to the reception at the Mansion?

MR. ASBILL: Objection, relevance.

MS ABER: I can make a proffer that Ms Young didn't pay for several expenses out of her wedding

THE COURT: All right Go ahead.

BY MS ABER:

Q How did you all travel from the church to the reception?

A A friend of ours, when he travels, travels in his limo And he was invited to the wedding and he came up and so he let us use his limo He was staying at the hotel next-door where all the guests were staying So he let the limo drive us down the street to the church and back

Q What kind of limo was it?

A I think it was an Excursion, if I remember correctly

Q Where did you purchase your wedding dress?

A It was at Maya Couture down in Virginia Beach

Q Did you pay for that?

A We paid --

MR. ASBILL: I object, relevance

THE COURT: I've heard enough.

MS ABER: Your Honor, if I may? Your Honor, Ms Young respectfully is saying she paid for a bunch of her wedding and in fact the evidence is that she did not pay for several high ticket, big ticket expenses in this wedding And further, the statements about the wedding dress go further to representations her father made to the media

THE COURT: Go ahead and answer the question, but so far, every answer is she paid for it or most of it If you've got something that indicates that she didn't pay for stuff, let's get to it

MS ABER: I'm sorry, Your Honor, that she did or did not?

THE COURT: That she did not

BY MS ABER:

Q Did you pay for the wedding dress?

A We paid $43, yes, ma'am.

Q What was the original value of your wedding dress?

A I don't remember the actual cost It was somewhere over a thousand dollars And I had a friend that worked at a wedding store and she called me and said -- and they do this for a lot of people -- they called and said that they wanted to give me a thousand dollars' gift certificate off for any wedding dress that I wanted. So I decided I was down in Virginia Beach, just driving back, we decided to stop in and look. I didn't even know what style I liked. And me and my girlfriends tried on a bunch of dresses and we tried on this one and we all started crying when I had it on because it ended up being the dress And the dress at the time was a little bit over a thousand It was on sale that day So when we went to the checkout, it ended up being $43 and I don't know how many cents

Q That was the sales tax, right?

A I'm assuming

Q Did you and your fiance' pay for your wedding rings?

A We have not, no

Q They were a gift from someone else as well?

A They were not supposed to be a gift, and I have asked the gentleman to please send us, multiple times, to send us the bill for them, and he has not

Q Did you give jewelry to your bridesmaids?

A I did.

Q Did you pay for that?

A I did not

Q Did you give favors to your wedding guests?

A I did.

Q Did you pay for that?

A We paid for some of them, yes, ma'am.

Q Is it fair to say you did not pay for the engraved silver picture frames provided to the guests?

A We did not

Q I'd like to show you Government Exhibit 549, please

Do you recognize this photo, Ms Young?

A Yes, ma'am.

Q Is it fair to say this is a picture of your mother and your brothers at your wedding?

A It is

MS ABER: I'd like to move 549 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MS ABER:

Q So that's your mother in the middle Can you identify your brothers on the sides, please?

A Looking at it, the one on the right is Sean and the one on the left is Bobby

Q Do you know how your mother's dress was purchased?

A I do now

Q At the time of your wedding, did you know where it came from?

A I don't remember I don't believe so I'm not sure

Q Okay When did you find out?

A I don't remember when I actually found out I found out a lot of information over the past couple years that I don't know

Q As you sit here today, do you believe you found out about the purchaser of this dress before the media started publicizing these stories or after?

A I can't say accurately I'm not sure

Q Okay Let's look at Government Exhibit 548, please Is this also a picture from your wedding, Ms Young?

A Yes

Q Let's zoom in, please

MS ABER: And I move to admit 548

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MS ABER:

Q Do you see your parents in this picture, Ms Young?

A Yes

Q On your screen, if you touch, you can identify where they are in the back Is it fair to say they are sort of in the center of the picture?

A Yes

Q Okay Then turning to Page 2 of the exhibit, do you see your mother in this picture?

A Yes, I do

Q Okay You can take that down, Ms Taylor. I'd like to direct your attention actually away from the wedding and to the following month of July of 2011 Did you attend a family vacation -- would you like some water?

A I have some

Q Okay Did your family take a vacation to Smith Mountain Lake that summer?

A Yes, we did.

Q Can you tell the jury where Smith Mountain Lake is?

A I don't know, it is like two hours away

Q And who went on this family vacation?

A My whole entire family

Q Where did you guys stay?

A We stayed at Mr Williams's house

Q Can you tell the jury --

A I'm sorry

Q That's okay, take your time Can you tell the jury a little bit about what the house looks like?

A It is on the point It is on the lake It is on the water

Q Could we bring up Government Exhibit 181, please?

THE COURT: Do you need a break? We can take a break. Let's take ten minutes Just take the jury out

We will be back in ten minutes

(Recess taken from 3:27 p.m. to 3:36 p.m.)

THE COURT: All right Ms Young, are you ready to proceed?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir Thank you

THE COURT: All right Let's bring in the jury, please

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Government

BY MS ABER:

Q Ms Young, I'm going to bring up Exhibit 181, just the second page of it Do you recognize this photograph?

A Yes, ma'am, I do

Q And what is it?

A It's Mr Jonnie's -- or Mr Williams' house on Smith Mountain Lake

MS ABER: Your Honor, I'd like to move the second page of 181 into evidence

THE COURT: What's the number?

MS ABER: 181

THE COURT: All right It will be admitted

BY MS ABER:

Q And so how long did you all stay?

A It was just a weekend I came Friday after work, so sometime that evening, and I left Sunday after brunch So early afternoon, I think

MS ABER: Let's bring up Government Exhibit

198, please Can you zoom in, Ms Taylor, please

BY MS ABER:

Q Is this an e-mail from your husband to you with copies to your brothers and your parents and your sisters?

A Yes, ma'am

Q On August 4th, 2011?

A Yes, ma'am

MS ABER: Okay I'd like to move Government Exhibit 198 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MS ABER:

Q And what is the subject of this e-mail?

A Mom and dad in Ferrari

Q And is there a picture attached?

A Yes

Q Let's look at page 2, please Does that depict both of your parents in a Ferrari?

A Yes, ma'am

Q Do you know where this photograph was taken?

A It was taken in the driveway of Mr Williams' house

Q Do you know whose Ferrari that is?

A Mr Williams'

Q Did your father drive that Ferrari during your weekend at Smith Mountain Lake?

A On that Sunday I think he drove it down the street, and I -- from the best of my memory, I think he drove it to brunch that Sunday

Q Now, while serving as Governor, did your father typically drive himself?

A No, ma'am

Q Who drove him?

A The Executive Protection Unit with the state police

Q Were you with your parents when they returned from Smith Mountain Lake to Richmond?

A No, ma'am

Q Did you leave early?

A Yes, ma'am

Q Changing subjects yet again I'd like to go back to 2011 before the wedding We're not talking about the wedding Did your mother ever discuss her ownership of Star Scientific stock with you?

A I don't remember a conversation about that, no, ma'am

Q At the time of your wedding, did your mother offer to give you and your husband Star Scientific shares as a wedding gift?

A She told us about it, yes, ma'am, and --

Q And when did she do that?

A It was June 6th, that Monday It was about 4 in the morning My parents drove us to the airport to take us to our honeymoon And on the car ride there, we were going over all the logistics and giving them all the information for our honeymoon, where we're going to be so in case something bad happened. they would have that information

And as we got to the airport, my mom gave us this little makeshift kind of certificate, telling us that she had gotten these thousand shares of Star Scientific to give to us for our wedding gift

Q So she made up a -- like a little handwritten certificate for you guys?

A Yes, ma'am

Q Do you still have that certificate?

A I do not

Q Did your mother indicate whether she presently owned the stock?

A Not to my memory I don't think -- I don't know if she said it one way or another

Q Let me step back for a moment This trip to the airport, who was driving?

A The EPU

Q Okay So folks from the Executive Protection Unit are driving?

A Yes, ma'am

Q And who else is in the vehicle with you?

A There -- there was two EPU, I remember -- if I remember correctly There was always two Then my husband and I and my parents

Q And when your mother is handing you this certificate, did she say anything about the quality of this investment, that it was a good one?

A What do you mean? I'm sorry

Q Did your mother say, "Hey, this is a great stock"? Did she say anything about what she believed in stock -- in Star?

A Oh, yeah She thought it was, you know, going to be really good You know, she believed in it And she had told me about Anatabloc previously, thinking that it would help me because I have a lot of joint and body issues So she thought -- she had told me about Anatabloc previously

Q At some point in time in reference to this stock gift to you, did your mother reference using money from her father's passing to purchase the stock?

A She did I don't know if it was at that point or when she said that to me, but she did say that she used the inheritance she got after my grandfather passed away to buy the stocks

Q Now, you were the first McDonnell child to get married, right?

A Yes, ma'am

Q And did your mother indicate whether she was going to provide similar gifts for your siblings when and if they got married?

A She did And, again, I'm not sure when she said this I don't think this was in the car because the car was very, very brief when she was giving them to me But she did she did say that, excuse me, it was her plan to give a thousand shares to each child when they got married

Q Did you actually get the Star shares in the June of '11 time period?

A No, ma'am

Q When did you actually get them?

A It was December of 2012 when we were filling out the forms

MS ABER: Okay Let's bring up Government Exhibit 446, please

BY MS ABER:

Q Is this the form you were talking about, a brokerage opening account at Davenport & Company?

A Yes, ma'am

MS ABER: Okay I'd like to move Government Exhibit 446 in evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MS ABER: Ms Taylor, if we could back out for a second so the jury can see it Thank you

BY MS ABER:

Q So this is your particular form?

A Correct

Q Do you know if your siblings filled out similar forms?

A To my knowledge, yeah -- I'm not sure

Q Yeah, that's all Your knowledge

A I don't know

Q Okay Why did you open this Davenport account at this time period, in December of '12?

A To put the stocks into that account, to set up an account for it

Q So you were opening this Davenport account specifically for the Star Scientific shares your mother was going to give to you?

A Correct

Q Now, why were you doing this at the end of December of 2012?

A My mother had told us that the -- well, it was already our gift We just never went about exchanging it But she had told us that the tax laws were changing and that obviously it needed to be in our name for us to either reap the benefits or not have -- I don't remember exactly what the -- the tax laws were changing with the administration or with the -- the new law that was taking effect in January 1st

Q Of 2013?

A '13, yes, ma'am

Q And so what were the circumstances of your mother telling you about these tax laws changing? Were you with your family?

A It was Christmas Day, Christmas evening It was after dinner We had had dinner and we cleaned up, were doing the dishes, all that kind of thing, and my mother was speaking to some of us kids and explaining this I don't know if the other kids knew about the stock yet

Q Who else was present?

A No one else was married at this point in time So I don't know if the rest of the children else knew about the stock But I remember Rachel, Bobby, and Sean being there at the table when my mother was telling us about this and giving us these forms

Q So was your father there?

A I'm sorry?

Q Was your father there?

A I'm not sure

Q Christmas dinner, you're not --

A This was not Christmas dinner This was way after Christmas dinner We had already cleaned up everything

I'm not saying that he wasn't there I just don't recall I just remember the three siblings sitting across the table from me as we're talking about the form

Q What about your older sister Jeanine, was she there?

A I'm not sure At that point they were going back and forth between her and her fiance at the time's house His family lives in Richmond also And I just don't recall whether they were sitting there I just remember the three little siblings sitting there

Q Did your mother hand you all documents, these account opening forms for you all to fill out?

A Yes, ma'am She had already printed them out and gave them to us

Q And did you fill them out while you were there?

A My husband and I did not, no, ma'am

Q What about your other siblings?

A I don't remember what they did

Q Okay When did you complete your form?

A I honestly think it was New Year's Eve I think we were rushing to get it in Because my husband wanted to look into it and talk to Mr Piscitelli, who we were opening this with, and do some of his own research before we just jumped in

Q And who is Mr Piscitelli?

A He works with Davenport and he's also a very close family friend of ours and he's my little sister's God

Father too

Q Ultimately, did you, in fact, have a Davenport account opened?

A Yes, ma'am

Q And your mother gave you those thousand shares of Star stock?

A Correct

MS ABER: I'd like to bring up Government Exhibit 455, please And if we could zoom in, sort of on the bottom so Ms Young can -- take it from the bottom and go and back up to the top If we could scroll so she could see that, please

A Can you go down now? I don't --

BY MS ABER:

Q And I have a paper copy, actually, if that's easier, Ms Young I don't mean to rush you

A Either way I just -- I don't remember seeing this So I was just trying to read it Okay

Q Is it fair to say this is an e-mail chain between you and Mr Piscitelli and you and your husband at the end of the year of 2012, in the beginning of 2013?

A Yes, ma'am

MS ABER: Your Honor, I'd move 455 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MS ABER:

Q Can you explain, starting at the bottom there, why you were sending Mr Piscitelli an e-mail on December 31st, 2012? What were you sending to him?

MS ABER: Up one page, Ms Taylor

A It says, "ID " So I guess I was sending him my ID

BY MS ABER:

Q Was that to go with your Davenport opening account forms?

A To the best of my memory, yes, ma'am

Q Okay And moving up a little bit, on January 2nd at 8:49 a m you are writing to Mr Piscitelli; is that correct?

A Yes, ma'am

Q Okay And then zooming -- scrolling up, scrolling up a little more, can you read for the jury what you're writing at 9:16 to your husband and Mr Piscitelli?

THE COURT: I'm having a problem hearing you Could you --

MS ABER: Oh, I apologize, Your Honor

BY MS ABER:

Q Ms Young, there's a top e-mail on there at 9:16 Could you please read it to the jury?

A It says, "Did we miss the deadline now for last year? I know mom really wanted it done last year Sorry we're so late "

Q And why did your mom really want it done last year?

A Because of the tax laws is what she told us

Q And why were you rushing to get these forms done on New Year's Eve?

A Because it was the end of the year

MS ABER: Thank you You can take that down, Ms Taylor

BY MS ABER:

Q Now, was the Star Scientific stock your parents' primary wedding gift to you and your husband?

A No, ma'am They gave us -- they gave us some furniture and things also

Q And do you know whether your parents also gave the thousand shares to each of your siblings at this time, at the end of December 2012?

A I can't answer that

Q Now, before the media started reporting on the investigation into your parents in March of 2013, were you aware that Mr Williams had loaned your mother $50,000 in May of 2011?

A I found out, it was Easter weekend It was right before the first article broke on Easter Sunday

Q In 2013?

A Yes, ma'am

Q And from whom did you learn that information?

A My mother

Q And before the media started reporting on this -- these matters in March of '13, were you aware of Mr Williams' 50,000-dollar loan to your parents in March of 2012?

A No, ma'am

Q And before the media started reporting, were you aware of Mr Williams' 20,000-dollar loan to your parents in May of 2012?

A No, ma'am

MS ABER: One moment, please, Your Honor Thank you, Your Honor I have no further questions

THE COURT: All right Cross

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Good afternoon, Ms Young How are you?

A Good How are you?

Q With respect to the last series of questions that you were just asked; namely, were you aware of a 50,000-dollar loan to your parents, of another 50,000-dollar loan to your parents, et cetera, you don't have any idea whether or not the loans were to your parents or to a company or to your mother independently, do you?

A I have no idea --

Q So --

A -- or had no idea

Q With respect to the stock certificate or the stock, the thousand shares of stock in 2012 at Christmastime, your parents didn't give you that gift Your mother gave you that gift; isn't that correct?

A Correct

Q Your father never indicated to you that he had anything to do with it or knew anything about it; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, when your mother told you that she -- she wanted to open -- you to open an account at Davenport and the tax laws were changing or whatever, Chris, your husband, wanted to investigate this; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q All right So he wanted to investigate whether Davenport was an appropriate company with which to deposit stock, basically?

A Yes

Q And did he want to investigate whether or not owning this stock was something that was worth doing, or as opposed to selling it or --

A Correct He wanted to --

Q -- some kind of investment?

A I had never had stock before And so he had a lot of the knowledge that I didn't, and he wanted to look into that and ask a bunch of questions about this firm compared to others and that sort of thing

Q Okay Going back to the day you left your -- left Richmond to go on your honeymoon, that was June 6, 2011; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q All right And you said you went to the airport at approximately 4 a m in the morning?

A It was -- I think our flight was around 6 or so in the morning So I think we were on the way at 4 --

Q Okay

A -- ish

Q You and Chris and your mom and dad, and the EPU was driving --

A Yes

Q -- is that correct?

All right And how long is the trip from the mansion to the airport?

A I would estimate, I don't know, 15, 20 minutes maybe I'm not sure Not that far

Q And how awake were you all?

A Well, Christopher and I were on cloud nine because we were finally getting to go to our honeymoon after planning this entire wedding My parents, on the other hand, were half asleep We -- we drove there to my parents' house from our home, and I think they were still in bed and so we were not exactly happy with them because we were going to be late So we were yelling at them to kind of get moving And my dad is not the greatest in the morning I get that from him So we were kind of dragging them out to get in the car so we could go

Q Okay And on the -- on the way to the airport for this 15-minute trip, you were trying to tell your mom and dad about the logistics, like where you were going and how you can get in touch with me if you need me, et cetera?

A Correct First, we talked a couple minutes about the wedding and just recapping, because I hadn't seen them since we left the wedding night And then my husband had a whole folder worth of every kind of document you can think of having to do with our honeymoon and everywhere we were going and location and all that kind of thing So we were going over piece by piece with my parents

Q Okay And at some point during the trip your mom took out a piece of paper and drew like a CigRx stock, 1000 shares, on the piece of paper?

A Correct She was scribbling in the back, I didn't know what she was doing, as we were going over these documents

Q So this was not a stock certificate It was a mock stock certificate?

A Correct It was just like a white piece of printer paper that she wrote on.

Q Okay And did you have any idea, you know, what this was worth or anything of that nature at that time?

A I don't know if she told me at that time, but I found out what it cost

Q Well, do you know whether she owned the stock at the time or not or whether this was to be purchased and given to you?

A I have no idea

Q Okay And it took a year and a half for you to -- or more, for you to get the certificates?

A Yes

Q Actual stock certificates?

A Correct

Q And between June of 2011 and the end of December 2012 when you opened this account at Davenport, did you have any more discussions about this with anyone?

A I don't remember having a discussion about it Kind of slipped my mind I didn't -- didn't really think about it

Q Was it particularly important to you and Chris financially or for any other reason over the next year and a half?

A We weren't dependent on it financially, no, sir

Q Now, the Smith Mountain Lake trip, the pictures of your dad in the Ferrari. You say he never drove as a Governor, generally?

A Not really I mean, when my sister got her new car, he drove it around the block and little things like that, but --

Q Okay

A But I also wasn't with him all the time So I can't tell you what he did every day, but --

Q Well, when you got to Smith Mountain Lake, was this Ferrari there?

A To the best of my knowledge, yes, it was already there

Q Do you have any idea how it got there or when it got there?

A I have no idea

Q Do you have any idea what discussions there may have been with Jonnie Williams and with him about it?

A I have no idea

Q Do you have any understanding of whether or not Mr Williams asked your father to bring it back as a favor to him, bring it back to Richmond?

A No, sir

Q Was it a nice car?

A Yeah I mean, I particularly like my Ford Escape That's -- so I'm happy with that

Q Seemed like a fun-thing to drive for a couple hours back to Richmond?

A I'm sure it would have been

Q How about the -- you said three days you were there at Smith Mountain Lake at Jonnie Williams' house; is that correct?

A It was maybe 48 -- well, I got there Friday evening and left Sunday afternoon So --

Q Do you have any idea how that trip was set up?

A I was not involved in it I was just given the information

Q And who was there?

A It was the -- the five siblings, my mother and father, and then that was the first time that my husband Christopher was able to go on a family vacation It's something my family does We don't have anyone else outside of our family go on vacations until you're married in the family So it was pretty exciting because that was the first one he could go on

Q Okay And was this the first time you had any real opportunity to have any sort of family time with your mom and dad in a while?

A Yeah, it had been

Q Particularly with your father?

A Yeah I didn't -- during the election and during his time as Governor and even AG, barely ever saw my father

Q Now, with respect to the wedding gifts that you were asked about, the limo ride, who was that from?

A Dr Davis

Q Who is Dr Davis?

A Well, he's recently passed away, but he's a good family friend of my family's

Q And how long has Dr Davis known your family?

A Oh, I don't even know how long Since we lived back in Virginia Beach they've been friends I don't know exactly how long

Q All right

A I think it was my mom's doctor for years and years and years

Q Did you ask him to give you, you know, a limo or use his limo for 10 or 12 hours or whatever?

A No, sir

Q Do you know whether -- did your dad ask him to lend you the limo or use the limo?

A Not to my knowledge He said, "I'm driving up there in it I'd love for you to use it, and it's just going to sit there otherwise, you know "

Q With respect to the other gifts, the engraved frames or -- those were, what, bridesmaids' gifts?

A The frames were gifts for the people invited to the wedding It was one per family

Q All right And those were from whom?

A Mr Ramadan

Q And who is Mr Ramadan?

A He's -- he's a friend of ours He's -- he's a jeweler And as part of the jewelry company, they had different gifts like that, like the picture frames And he's now a state delegate

Q Is he a personal friend of yours and Chris'?

A Yes, he became one

Q Before the wedding?

A Yes, sir

Q Did your father have anything to do with whatever Mr Ramadan wanted to give you as a wedding gift?

A No, sir I had meetings with Mr Ramadan

Q With respect to the wedding dress, did your father have anything at all to do whatsoever with the wedding dress in terms of how you got that or --

A No, sir

Q -- or the cost or anything else?

A No, sir That was through me

Q Did you ever talk to your father about the wedding dress before 2013, in terms of the cost of the wedding dress or how you got it?

A I don't remember a specific conversation

Q I mean, did you ever -- do you remember in 2013, after the investigation began, do you remember talking to your father about the wedding dress?

A I can't -- I can't think of a specific conversation But if there was one, I would have told him exactly what happened

Q Okay And did you -- did you -- is that -- would that be the first time he would have knowledge of whatever the issues, the cost was or gift certificates or anything of that nature?

MS ABER: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Do you know whether he had any independent knowledge, before talking to you in 2013, about anything relating to the dress?

MS ABER: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You never had any discussions with him about it that you can recall?

A No, sir My dad was not involved in any of the wedding planning whatsoever except for I wanted him to look over the contract and the guest list

Q And the person who ran this store, the wedding dress store, is that somebody that's a friend of your father's?

A No, sir

Q Whose friend is it?

A The young lady that works there is my friend, and she -- she doesn't own it, but it's a friend of mine And she called me and made the offer

Q Were you surprised that when you got married in the mansion and you were the Governor's daughter at the time that folks wanted to give you gifts?

A It was -- I mean, it was very flattering I was not going out asking for any -- any gifts or anything from anybody You know, it was flattering that people wanted to help us because they liked us or liked my parents

Q Did you think that any of it had anything to do with any return promise from your father as Governor?

A No, sir

Q You wanted to pay for the wedding yourself; is that correct?

A I did

Q And how much of the wedding did you and Chris actually pay for?

A I think it was somewhere over $12,000 My husband did a lot of the money so he -- he knows that better than I do He was the bookkeeper, so to speak

Q But your understanding is that you and Chris yourself paid $12,000 for your wedding; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q All right Are you embarrassed that other folks gave you gifts for the wedding?

A I am now You know, at the time, I thought people were wanting to just do something nice and help us out, and if I could go back, obviously, I wouldn't have taken anything I would have done like Christopher and I wanted to do and just have a small backyard wedding and just have our friends and family together and pay for everything ourselves and not let anyone else get involved Because, you know, our wedding is now -- has this black cloud over it, you know, with all of this that's gone on and you can't look back at it with a happy memory

Q Your plans basically, and Chris' plans, got hijacked?

A They did

Q Is that fair to say?

A Yes, sir

Q Partly by Chris' mom and dad They wanted to give you the rehearsal dinner?

MS ABER: Objection Relevance

THE COURT: Overruled

A Yes, they wanted to pay for the rehearsal dinner They came up with the $4,200 and they said, "This is what we can give you for that " Obviously, if we went over that, it would have been coming from us But, I mean, at that point it just wasn't worth the fight anymore with -- with them

BY MR ASBILL:

Q And your dad paid 8 grand towards the catering?

A Yeah He did that behind my back I did not know he had paid that I asked him strictly just to look at the contract and make sure that everything looked right legally and all of that And he told me that he had made some corrections and sent it back to Mr Greer He did not tell me that he signed it or that he started writing checks I found out later, and I was very upset with him because he was not supposed to do that

Q In terms of planning to pay for your own wedding, you said you started doing that and started trying to put that together after you were engaged?

A Correct My husband had been saving way before he ever proposed He paid for my ring in cash because he had been saving for such a long time, and then he had his own money set aside And you would have to ask him, but I -- it was several -- several thousands of dollars set aside for the wedding And then him and I started what we called the wedding fund, and every paycheck we had a certain amount that went straight into this wedding fund At one point I was doing -- I got paid biweekly So it was 300 every paycheck So 600 a month, and I think my husband was 800 a month that we put straight into this wedding fund so that we would have the money saved there to pay for everything

Q So if I understand you correctly, Chris started saving for the wedding before he even knew you would marry him?

A Yeah I guess he was pretty hopeful But yeah, he had been saving way before

Q And Chris saved on his own even before you were married, $10,000 for the wedding Is that your understanding?

A I think that's what it was about You'd have to ask him I don't know the exact price, but yes, sir

Q And then the two of you saved together for the next year and a half?

A Yes, sir

Q Before your wedding?

A Correct

Q And by the way, what kind of job does Chris have?

A He's a civil engineer He does transportation design He designs bridges and roads

Q All right And where do you work?

A I work for the Henrico Commonwealth Attorney's Office I'm a victim advocate I'm in the juvenile and domestic court So I deal with victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, murder, that kind of thing

Q And prior to working in that office, tell us a little bit about your educational background

MS ABER: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: No, you can go ahead and answer the question

A I went to Old Dominion and got my undergrad in -- I got a bachelor of science in criminal justice And I immediately -- that was when we moved up here, when my dad became AG And I went back to VCU and I got my master's in criminal justice And during that time, I was a full-time master student and I was a graduate teacher's assistant at VCU and then I was also working at the National White Collar Crime Center

And then after that, I worked on my father's Governor campaign I was the youth outreach coordinator So I was going around speaking to high schools and colleges and the young professionals, and then I started and I've been at the Commonwealth Attorney's Office for a little over four years now

Q Did you pay for any of your education?

A I did

Q What did you pay for?

A My father started a savings program before, when we were younger, and then we took out some loans and I'm paying all of those back

Q Now, aside from your testimony about wanting to -- you and Chris wanting to pay for our own wedding because you -- that's what you understood your parents had done and you thought that was admirable and you wanted to do it, were there other reasons why you wanted to pay for or control your own wedding?

A We didn't really want this wedding to get out of control and become some big political mess, and I was very firm with my father that I did not want him working at my wedding No matter where he is, people are always coming up to him and, you know, talking work and he never gets to just relax

So we were -- we wanted control over it because we didn't want it to turn into something that it wasn't And it was also, we thought it spoke a lot of us as a couple and we didn't want it to be this big fancy thing We really just wanted to dance in the backyard with our close family and friends

Q Is it fair to say that you really wanted to have some personal family time with your mom and dad at this wedding?

A I did I did I didn't want them to be off working or doing who knows what I wanted them to be on the dance floor with us and enjoying themselves You know, I never -- didn't really get to see my dad that much or my mother I mean, I had to put this on his -- I'm sorry, put this on his schedule Whenever we first picked the date, I had to e-mail his scheduler and get the wedding date on there to make sure this they saved that

And, I mean, that's how it was Anytime I ever wanted to see my father, I had to go through a scheduler and weeks and weeks and weeks, you know, before I could set something up with him And days to call back I mean, he was just extremely busy

Q And you didn't want this wedding to be with a lot of folks, a lot of political people or other people that you didn't know?

A Correct We wanted people that Christopher and I knew as a couple together We didn't want to be meeting people at our wedding

Q Now, going back to the -- to the wedding contract itself, did you ever meet with Ryan Greer to discuss the terms of the catering?

A Yeah We met with him a couple times

Q And when did -- when you say "we," you mean you and Chris?

A Yes

Q And when did you meet with Ryan?

A I don't know the exact dates We met with him a few times, and there's numerous e-mails and phone calls and texts going back and forth through this whole process

Q And did that start in the fall of 2010?

A Yeah -- yes

Q And where is the first time -- do you recall where the first time is that you met with Ryan?

A We first met with Mr Schneider to ask him --

Q Okay

A -- and that was at his restaurant

I think the first time we met with Mr Greer -- I'm -- I think it might have been the mansion I'm not sure

Q Okay And this correspondence back and forth or phone calls and stuff, I mean, was your dad involved in this?

A No, sir

Q And did you make it very plain to Chef Todd and Ryan what your budget was?

A Yeah We -- that was another thing with the contract and why it kept -- why it was so long that it took to get back because we kept chopping, chopping, chopping

Because I think the first time they came back to us it was $24,000, and that was just outrageous You know, they -- Todd and other people were saying that I'm the governor's daughter I have to have this certain level of, you know, what everyone sees and all this kind of stuff And so they were all telling us what we needed to have and what things needed to look like And so we just kept chopping and chopping I mean, we really just wanted chicken and mashed potatoes, you know, something very simple

Q When you say they were telling you what you needed to have, who's "they"?

A It was Todd and Mary-Shea

Q Had Mary-Shea previously been married herself in the mansion?

A At the first meeting that we had with her, I'm not sure I think it might have been before she was married

Q Was she married before you?

A She was

Q And did she get married at the mansion?

A She had her ceremony there She got married in a church

Q And in terms of sort of fancying up the wedding, the push was from those two?

A Yes

Q Is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q So whatever kind of modest menu you wanted, it started getting more elaborate?

A It did I didn't even get to see all the food at the wedding I didn't eat any of it, but we -- one of the things was we wanted fruit And I've seen pictures since of -- it was a watermelon carved into a swan and all this fancy kind of stuff when that's not what we had asked for We really just wanted fruit on a plate

Q Did you view yourself as the client with respect to the wedding contract?

A Yes, sir Everything -- all the conversations, everything going back and forth, it was all through Christopher and myself

Q When you found out at some point after January in 2011 that your father had made two initial payments on the contract, you said you were furious with him?

A I was

Q And you yelled at him?

A I called him and yelled at him, yes, sir

Q And his reaction was what?

A I don't remember exactly what he said, but I think he kind of felt like he got a one-up on me because he had control over it and he wanted to pay for something, but I didn't want him to So I think --

Q All right Eventually you got this -- eventually another check from Mr Williams, apparently, $15,000 was sent to the caterer --

A Correct

Q -- is that correct?

And you found that out when, roughly?

A What do you mean? I'm sorry

Q When did you find out that that had happened?

A That the check went in?

Q Yeah, that Mr Williams was making -- was giving a wedding gift

A It would have been after I met him So sometime in -- let's see I met him April -- sometime early May

Q Of 2011?

A Yes, sir

Q All right And you understood that he was making a payment towards your wedding or making a gift towards your wedding of $15,000; is that correct?

A Yeah Well, he -- my understanding was that he wanted to pay for the reception

Q All right And whatever the total cost was, he actually made a payment of $15,000; is that correct?

A Correct

Q Did you thank Mr Williams for that gift?

A I did We -- my husband and I sent him a thank you card and then we also saw him in July and thanked him personally for the gift

Q All right And you -- you fully believed it was a gift to you from him; is that correct?

A I did That's what I was told

Q All right And you talked about, in connection with that, and there was an overage or there's a refund of 5,000, $6,000, whatever it is I think there's a 7,000-dollar check to you that you talked about --

A Yes

Q -- from your mother that was given to you by her in the middle of February --

A Correct

Q -- is that correct -- of 2013?

A Correct

Q And you said that she came over to your house and said she wanted to talk to you, and that's when she gave you the check?

A Yes, sir

Q All right And did she tell you at that time that she had talked about having that refund for a long time, for a year or so, or a year and a half or whatever, and had not given it back to you and she said that her husband was very upset about that? That's basically what she said to you?

A I mean, I don't think she made any comments as to how long she had it, but she told me my dad found out about it and was very upset with her, yes, sir

Q Did she tell you your dad found out about it before the Virginia State Police had interviewed your mom?

MS ABER: Objection

THE COURT: Overruled

A My understanding was that he found out right before she came to my house

BY MR ASBILL:

Q And you took that check and you kept it?

A I did

Q Because you believed that the gift was to you, correct?

A Correct Yes, sir

Q Ms Aber referenced speaking to you in the past Have you met with the prosecutors in this case?

A Yes, I have

Q Where was that?

A It was at Hunton & Williams was the first time

Q All right And why at Hunton & Williams?

A Because that's where my attorneys are and that's where we met

Q All right Did you testify in the grand jury in this case?

A I did

Q You were subpoenaed to the grand jury?

A I think we went in voluntary -- I'm not sure But we weren't opposed to it We went and answered all their questions

Q Were you asked to provide pictures from your wedding to the government for use in this trial?

A I was

Q And did you do that?

A I did

Q And how do you feel about having your wedding be the subject of testimony here today?

A It's extremely painful

MS ABER: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

MR ASBILL: Court's indulgence One second

BY MR ASBILL:

Q The April 29th dinner with Jonnie Williams and Celeste Williams, that's who was there, and your parents?

A Yes, sir

Q And that's when you came in to get the video of you skydiving?

A Yes, sir

Q And is it fair to say that you were real excited when you came in the door?

A I was very excited

Q And were you equally as excited talking to them about your wedding and your wedding plans?

A I was I was very

Q And pointing out the stairs and --

A Yeah I got up and was showing them out the window, and everyone was all very excited

Q Do you recall whether or not you said anything to the Williams about you and Chris doing this or your planning it, paying for it, et cetera?

A I can't recall It wasn't something that we were hiding It was something we were very proud of and we were telling people But I just cannot recall exactly if that conversation happened or not

Q Do you know whether there were any further conversations between your parents or your mom alone or your dad alone with Mr Williams about your plans to pay for your wedding yourself?

A I have no idea

Q Did you also thank Jonnie Williams personally --

A I did

Q -- for the wedding gift?

A I did It was at my parents' anniversary party, which was in July My husband and I went up, after the dinner, went up and chatted with him for a while and thanked him again for -- for the very generous and kind gift

MR ASBILL: That's all the questions I have, Judge

THE COURT: All right Ms McDonnell?

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR BURCK:

Q Good afternoon, Ms Young How are you?

A Good How are you?

Q I'm going to start where Mr Asbill left off

A Okay

Q The -- you testified about this dinner on April 29th, you came to the mansion and your parents were having dinner with the Williamses, right?

A Yes, sir

Q And was that a business dinner, from your perspective?

A It looked like a very friendly dinner I didn't see -- I don't remember seeing any documents or anything They were --

Q Did it seem like a social dinner?

A Yes, sir

Q Was everyone having a good time?

A They seemed to be Everyone was in smiles when I got there

Q Did the subject of who was going to pay for your wedding come up while you were there talking to Mr Williams and your parents?

A I cannot remember I don't remember all the exact conversations during that time, but it very well might have It's not something that, like I said, that we had -- we had told numerous people about it because we were proud of ourselves for being able to do that

Q And your mother, you testified, called you a couple days later and told you about this gift that Mr Williams wanted to give you, the $15,000?

A Correct

Q And did your mother tell you that she had asked Mr Williams to give you that gift?

A She did not

Q What did she tell you?

A She told me that Mr Williams was so impressed by me and really enjoyed meeting me and wanted to pay for our reception as a wedding gift to my husband and I

Q And you added Mr Williams to the invite list?

A We did

Q And why did you do that?

A We wanted to add him for, obviously, his generous gift We added other people that helped us at the time, and we were very honored for him to do that for us We wanted him to be a part of our special day

Q So you were grateful to him?

A Very much

Q And did you understand Mr Williams to be your mother's friend?

A It was my understanding that he was both of my parents' friend

Q And did your mother tell you that?

A I mean, my parents said this is our friend, and they were all together having dinner

Q So both of your parents, you understood that Mr Williams was your parents' friend?

A My parents' friend, yes, sir

Q Now, you testified also about the stock certificate that your mother drew up?

A Yes, sir

Q The day -- I guess it was the -- two days after your wedding?

A Yes It was that Monday morning

Q And your mother told you that she had -- she wanted to give you a thousand shares of stocks as a wedding present?

A Correct

Q And it was in Star Scientific?

A Right

Q And you said at some point, maybe then, maybe later, she told you that she wanted to gift stock to all the children as presents, as wedding presents?

A Correct

Q And she did that in December of 2012; is that right?

A Yes, at that Christmas

Q And you testified that she said that she wanted you to make sure the stock was in your name before the end of the year?

A Because of the tax law changing, yes, sir

Q This is December 2012?

A Yes

Q Did she mention anything about disclosure laws to you?

A She did not

Q I want to talk to you -- you mentioned that she had talked to you a bit about Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q And did you understand that Anatabloc was the product of Star Scientific, Mr Williams' company?

A I did

Q Did you believe your mother when she said that she wanted you to take Anatabloc, that it was for your health?

A I did My mother has been very active in nutritional health care since she was 19 and sold different nutritional health care products and had us all on them And so she did -- I did believe her that it would help me

Q You mentioned 19 What was so special about 19?

A My mother had a -- had a breast tumor when she was 19 It was very, very scary for her to go through that and she had surgery, and ever since then, she became very involved in nutritional health care and vitamins and being healthy and all that kind of stuff And so she's always taught that to us and wanted all of her children to be healthy and have these certain vitamins and things

Q Is that something she told you about your whole life?

A Yes, sir, our whole entire lives

Q I think you also mentioned -- was she in the business of nutraceuticals as well?

A Yes My mother, very admirably, stayed at home to raise all of -- all of -- five children, kind of played chauffeur for -- and still is, 33 years now, and during that time, she had her business that she would sell the nutritional health care products

Q And did she make some money to supplement the family's income?

A Yes, sir

Q But she was at home?

A Correct

Q You testified, I think, that you had to contact your father's scheduler to find time to meet with him; is that right?

A Yes, I did

Q And did that start, when he was Governor, or did that happen before?

A No That happened way before

Q This was for many years?

A Many, many years

Q Did you ever speak to your mother about the difficulty of having time with her husband?

A I'm sure we had conversations I mean, it was hard for all of us My mom had -- wore many hats at home, taking care of everything, raising -- running everyone around, doing all the grocery shopping, everything So, I mean, I knew it was hard and I could see that

MR BURCK: Your Honor, may I just confer?

THE COURT: Go ahead

MR BURCK: That's it, Your Honor Thank you

THE COURT: All right Anything else from the government?

MS ABER: Yes, Your Honor

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MS ABER:

Q Ms Young, you've said it was difficult to get on your father's schedule

A Yes, ma'am

Q How often do you talk to your father -- when he was Governor, how often did you talk to him by telephone?

A Sometimes I'd call him and wouldn't get a call back for days, and sometimes he'd answer in a meeting You know, if I'd call once or twice and he'd, "Hey, I'm in a meeting Is everything okay? Is it an emergency?" Or send a text, "All okay? In meeting Love dad "

So, I mean, that's kind of hard to say on average because it was so scattered And usually when we did talk, it was a very quick conversation "How are you doing? I love you Can I do anything to help you? Good-bye "

Q Would you say that was once a day, once a week, once a month?

A It wasn't always once a day, no, ma'am Sometimes it was days without talking to him

Q But at least once a month?

A Yes, ma'am

Q Once a week?

A Yeah, I would say at least once a week

Q Now, I think you said that you and Mr Young paid approximately $12,000 out of pocket for your wedding Did I catch that right?

A I think that's what it was I'd have to go back and look, and my husband was more the money keep-tracker person, but I think it was around 12

Q It's been a few years But roughly how much of that would you say constituted the rehearsal dinner?

A That's without the rehearsal dinner With the rehearsal dinner, it was over 16

Q And how much of that was the honeymoon?

A I think the honeymoon was right around upper 3,000s My husband did the honeymoon That was his job So -- but I think it was around 4

Q Okay

A I'm not exactly sure

Q So of the 12, roughly 4 is the honeymoon, thousand dollars?

A Around 4, yeah I would -- maybe a little less

Q Now, you had made some observations, I think, about when you came through the mansion and saw your parents having -- having dinner with Mr and Ms Williams; is that right?

A Yes, ma'am

Q How long were you there?

A It was about 10, 15 minutes

Q Now, when we met with you and your attorneys at Hunton & Williams last year --

A Uh-huh

Q -- which you voluntarily came, did you have a proffer agreement?

A What do you mean?

Q Did you sign something with the government in advance saying that whatever you said wouldn't be used against you?

A No I don't -- I don't -- I don't remember

Q Have you met with your parents' defense attorneys to prepare for today?

A I have

Q How many times?

A Three times

Q And you testified before the grand jury probably about eight, ten months ago; is that right?

A Yes

Q But you refused to meet with the government after that date; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And finally, when you learned that your father had paid those $8,000 in deposits and you called him and you yelled at him, did you try to pay him back?

A I did not We were going to clean up at the end Once everything was said and done, we were going to pay him back

MS ABER: Thank you I have no further questions

THE COURT: All right Thank you, ma'am You may stand down

(Witness stood aside)

THE COURT: All right We're going to take our 15-minute break and then we'll push on We'll stop at around 5:30 So we may have one more witness that we may get in But you all take these 15 minutes and we'll be back in a few minutes

(The jury exited the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Fifteen minutes

(Recess taken from 4:31 p m until 4:44 p m)

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Government

A Yes

Q And was that authority, meaning the authority to write checks, did you exercise that independently or with Mr Williams' permission all the time or a mix? Tell us about that

A It was a mix If it was a regular monthly bill for the same amount or a regular household bill, I had the authority to go ahead and write the checks and sign them Anything out of the ordinary had to be cleared through him or through Donnie

Q Who's Donnie?

A Oh, I'm sorry Donnie is the trustee of Starwood Trust

A Yes He's --

Q How so?

A He's Jonnie's brother

Q Now, besides the -- oh, on the checks that we've been talking about for Starwood Trust or for Starwood Aviation, when we say that you have authority to sign checks, would you sign your own name?

A Yes

Q In other words, you're a signatory on those accounts?

A I am

Q Now, in addition to those types of examples where you would sign your own name to checks on those accounts, were there occasions, during your work for Mr Williams, where you would actually sign Mr Williams' name for him?

A Yes, at his expressed direction

Q Do you have Mr Williams' permission each time you did that?

A Yes

Q How did that practice come about?

A In the beginning, when I first started working for him, he told me to sign his name on a document and thereafter, every time he needed something signed with his name, he would tell me when to do it

Q I want you to focus now, please, on the time frame, if you can, from approximately 2009 through 2012 Okay? And my question for you is: During that time frame, how frequently would you say you had contact with Mr Williams?

A If he was in town, I had daily contact with him If he wasn't, it was at least by telephone once or twice a week at least

Q Did you know how to get ahold of him if you needed to, for the most part?

A No

Q What about Mr McDonnell's wife, Ms McDonnell, have you ever met her?

A No

Q Now, from time to time in your experience, did Mr Williams allow various politicians to use his jet?

A Yes

Q Do you recall an occasion in the fall of 2010 when Mr Williams allowed Mr McDonnell to use his plane to travel back and forth from Virginia to California?

A Yes

Q And in general, before we get to that specific example, can you tell us, in general, what would the process be if a politician was interested in using Mr Williams' plane? How would the process work?

A Generally, I would either get a telephone call or an e-mail requesting the use of the plane, and they would generally tell me from point A to point B and what time it had to be there

Q What would you do once you had that information?

A I would then call Mr Williams or contact him some way, give him the request and find out if it was okay or not And then at that point call the politician's office back, or e-mail them

Q And let's assume that -- that Mr Williams were to approve the flight we're talking about What would happen next?

A I would get the details, hopefully who was going to be on the plane, where they needed to go, what airport they needed to land at, what time they needed to be there I would turn that information over to the pilots They would figure out the times that it would take to get there and then send me back the itinerary to send to the -- whatever politician's office

Q Now, let's focus on the occasion in the fall of 2010 that we were talking about a moment ago where the -- where the then-Governor, Mr McDonnell, went to California and back Okay?

A Okay

Q Do you recall how that specific trip came to your attention?

A I don't know if it was a phone call or -- I think it was an e-mail, but I can't really remember, telling me they needed to go I believe to San Fran- -- Sacramento

Q And when you say "they," you mean someone on the Governor's staff?

A Someone -- the Governor and probably someone on his staff They normally travel with people

Q What was Mr Williams' reaction to that possibility? Did he approve that trip?

A He did

Q So did you make the arrangements for it?

A I did

MR HARBACH: Will you please pull up for identification Government's 64?

A Okay

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Ms Fulkerson, is this paperwork related to the flight that we've been talking about, the one in the fall of 2010, to California?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government 64

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Publishing for the jury the first page of Government 64 In the description box under there, Ms Fulkerson, what's the date of this trip?

A October 3rd, 2010

Q Okay

THE COURT: We're having problems?

THE CLERK: The jury can see it, right? They're on

MR HARBACH: Shall I continue, Judge?

THE CLERK: The jury can see it

THE COURT: Go ahead The jury has seen it

MR HARBACH: Very good, Your Honor

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay, Ms Fulkerson The question was: In the description box there, what was the date of the trip to California?

A October 3rd, 2010

Q And as best you can tell from what's written here on this document, was the return trip the same day?

A It appears to be

Q Okay

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Mr Starnes You can take that down

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Now, Ms Fulkerson, did part of your duties for Mr Williams, when you were his executive assistant, include monitoring his e-mail?

A Yes

Q How many e-mail addresses did Mr Williams have with Star?

A Two

Q And did you have access to both of those accounts?

A Yes

Q What was the difference between the two?

A One was very public You could find it on the Web site or anywhere The other one was a more private e-mail that the general public didn't have access to

Q Do you recall which address was which?

A One was jwilliams@starscientific The other one --

Q And --

A The other one was Jonnie Williams

Q And the one that was jwilliams@starscientific, was that the public one or the more private one?

A Yes It was the more public one

Q Okay And then the one that was Jonnie Williams was the more private one?

A It was, yes

Q How did that system get started? Do you remember?

A I -- Mr Williams didn't read a lot of e-mails He just got -- he just got really overwhelmed with all the e-mails going to JWilliams So it was just kind of to filter out what he needed to see for the other one, for the Jonnie Williams

Q In your experience, in general, did Mr Williams have difficulty reading?

A Yes

Q I'm sorry?

A Yes

Q Do you recall whether he has any particular condition that makes reading hard for him?

A I believe he's dyslexic

Q Now, when Mr Williams started getting overwhelmed with all the e-mails to the public account, what was the solution? What was the arrangement that you all worked out?

A That I would filter through the e-mails, the real junk mail, the ads, the -- you know, life insurance, whatever it was The important ones then, I would send them to the Jonnie Williams e-mail address and I would normally text him if he had something he needed to see

Q How would you decide whether an e-mail was important enough to forward to Mr Williams' private account?

A In the beginning -- well, naturally, if it's an ad for weight loss or it's somebody who's in a foreign country wanting money, that's obviously junk mail

Q Okay The --

A The other ones, if I recognized the name, if I thought it was a -- a business practice, he would automatically get it If I had a question, I would send it to him and text him

MR HARBACH: Okay Can we pull up for identification Government 66, please?

BY MR HARBACH:

Q This is a new subject, Ms Fulkerson

A I see it

Q Can you see it a little better now?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, is this an example of you forwarding an e-mail from Mr Williams' public account to some other people?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Okay Your Honor, government offers Government 66

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Now, let's start with the e-mail on the bottom It's from someone called Sara Machir to three different offices Do you see that there?

A I do

Q Do you know who Sara Machir is?

A She was public relations and communications director for Star Scientific

Q All right Now, at the top it says "From: Jonnie Williams, Sr ," and then it has that JWilliams address there, and I hope the horse isn't dead, but is that the public or private address for Mr Williams?

A The public

Q Okay And then I note in the body of the e-mail, whose signature block is there?

A Mine

Q So is this you forwarding something from Mr Williams' e-mail account?

A Yes

Q The date of this e-mail is October 8th at 10:39 And the first addressee there, Monica Block, do you recall who Ms Block was?

A She works in the Governor's office

Q Do you recall what her job was?

A I'm not positive, but I think she was a scheduler

Q Okay Now, the body of this e-mail says, "Jonnie asked that I forward this press release and the next one to Governor McDonnell and AG Cuccinelli "

A Yes

Q My question for you is: Would you have written something like if Mr Williams had not, in fact, asked you to do so?

A No

MR HARBACH: If we could now take a look for identification at Government 68, please

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Ms Fulkerson, can you see that okay on the monitor?

A Yes

Q Is this another e-mail in the same exchange involving your forwarding press releases?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government 68

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q And the first thing I want to note is, what is the date and time that the e-mail at the top was sent, Ms Fulkerson?

A October 8th, 2010, at 10:39 a m

Q So about 40 minutes after the one we just saw?

A Yes

Q And the -- is there an attachment to this e-mail?

A It doesn't appear that it --

Q Well, look under the Subject line there

A It does say attachment, "Star Scientific's Comments on Roskamp Institute "

Q And you wrote, indeed, "Star's Press Release" in the body of the e-mail?

A I did

Q Now, is Ms Block among the folks who this e-mail is sent to?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Now if we could show page 2 of -- actually before we do that, Mr Starnes

BY MR HARBACH:

Q What does it say in the attached field at the top of the email, what does it say there?

A "Star Scientific's Comments on Roskamp Institute "

MR HARBACH: Can we look, just briefly, at page 2 of Government 68, Mr Starnes?

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Is this the press release that was attached to that e-mail, ma'am?

A Yes

Q The next exhibit I'd like to show you for identification is Government 69, please Ms Fulkerson, is this another e-mail in the same exchange involving press releases that we've been talking about?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government 69

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay Ms Fulkerson, this one is sent at what time at the top there?

A 10:40

Q So one minute after the e-mail we were just looking at a moment ago?

A Yes

Q And is this one also to Ms Block?

A Yes

Q And other people, of course?

A Yes

Q Now, the subject line on this one and the attachment refers to what?

A "Roskamp Institute Press Release "

Q Is this a different press release from the one we were just looking at a moment ago?

A I believe so, yes

Q All right Let's take a look at page 2, briefly, of Government 69

MR HARBACH: Could you blow up the text, please, Mr Starnes, just the whole thing Thank you, sir

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Is this the press release that you forwarded in connection with the e-mail we've been looking at?

A Yes

Q All right We're going to come back to Roskamp Institute in a few minutes Okay?

A Okay

Q Finally, if we could take a look at Government 70 for identification, please Is this the conclusion of the e-mail communication about the press releases, Ms Fulkerson?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government 70

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay And now, at the top, who's this e-mail from, Ms Fulkerson?

A Monica Block

Q And the date and time that this one is sent?

A October 8, 2010 at 10:42 a m

Q A couple minutes after the e-mail that we were looking at a moment ago that was Government 69?

A Yes

Q And who's it addressed to?

A Myself

Q What does Ms Block say to you in the e-mail?

A "Got it, Jerri" -- "got it Thank you, Jerri I will print this for the Governor "

MR HARBACH: Okay Thank you, Mr Starnes You can take that down

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Different subject, Ms Fulkerson Do you recall being involved in helping to arrange a meeting between Mr Williams and a Dr Bill Hazel?

A I remember the meeting was set and it was just the fact to confirm the date and time I mean -- yeah, the date, time, and place

Q And do you recall how you found out that the meeting was set?

A I believe Mr Williams told me

Q Do you recall, as you sit here today, when exactly that meeting was?

A I -- I couldn't tell you when the dates were I believe it was in October sometime, maybe November

Q Do you remember what year?

A 2010

Q Do you --

A I don't really remember

Q Okay Let's move on, then Next subject Do you recall being involved in a request to help make arrangements for the Governor and Ms McDonnell to travel to the Final Four in Houston, Texas?

A Yes

Q Tell us what you remember about how you learned of that request

A I believe I got an e-mail from Monica Block stating that VCU had made it to the Final Four and that the Governor was invited to attend and could Starwood Aviation do the flight

Q And do you recall what Mr Williams' reaction was to that prospect?

A I remember it being a difficult flight because he was in Michigan, I believe

Q "He" who?

A Mr Williams, and the jet would take Mr Williams back and forth to Michigan for meetings concerning Anatabloc It was a difficult trip, but Mr Williams agreed to do it

Q Okay Let's take a look at, for identification, please, at Government's 92

MR HARBACH: If you could, just maybe blow up the top half so she can see it better, Mr Starnes

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Ms Fulkerson, is this an e-mail exchange concerning the flight arrangements to Houston that you've been talking about?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, government offers Government's 92

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: Okay I'd like to start, Mr Starnes, on page 2 of the exhibit And just blow up the e-mail at the bottom of the page, the one from Ms Fulkerson to Ms Block Thank you, sir

BY MR HARBACH:

Q And what's the date of this e-mail, Ms Fulkerson?

A March 29th, 2011

Q All right And could you just read the first sentence for us?

A "I just talked to JW This is a really hard trip for us to do, but Jonnie will never turn the Governor down if he can help it" -- "at all help it "

Q Okay Now, same question as I asked you before Is that something that you would have written if Mr Williams had not told you to say that?

A No

MR HARBACH: And if we could back out to page 1 Actually, take the exhibit down for just a minute, please, before we go to page 1

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Do you remember whether, after the initial arrangements were made, there was a change?

A Yes

Q What do you recall about that?

A Ms McDonnell was going to the Final Four with him, but she had to come back early The same day, I believe

Q And --

A And it threw a wrench in everything

Q Okay Was Mr Williams able to accommodate that requested change in plans?

A Yes

Q All right Now let's take a look at the first page of Government's 92, which is in evidence

MR HARBACH: And if we could blow up that e-mail from Ms Fulkerson at the top there, please, Mr Starnes Yeah, that's fine Both of them Okay Thank you, sir

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Okay, Ms Fulkerson I'd like to look at the one at the bottom that's from you Okay?

A Yes

Q Is what's the date on that one, your e-mail to Ms Block?

A March 30th, 2011

Q So the next day from what we were looking at before?

A Yes

Q All right Now, this one says -- actually, I'll ask you to read up to that first smiley face, please

A "Okay Jonnie said that just because it's the Governor's wife, they" -- which should have been "the" -- "pilots will stay in Houston and bring her back after the game "

Q All right Is that -- were those -- is that what Mr Williams asked you to convey?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: You can take that exhibit down, please

THE COURT: What's the number on that list exhibit, please?

MR HARBACH: That's 92, Your Honor

THE COURT: Thank you All right

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Next topic Do you recall, at some point, receiving word of an invitation for Mr and Ms Williams to have dinner at the Governor's mansion with Mr and Ms McDonnell?

A Yes

Q Could we take a look at, for identification, Government's 103, please, and --

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Mr Starnes Just so she can see what we're talking about

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Ms Fulkerson, do you recognize this to be an e-mail exchange about that invitation?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 103

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: Okay Can I please start on page 2, Mr Starnes, and the bottom half, just the e-mail from Ms Fulkerson there Okay My mistake

BY MR HARBACH:

Q The e-mail at the very bottom of this page is actually from Ms Block; is that right?

A Yes

Q It's addressed to you?

A Yes

Q And it's obviously an invitation to have dinner at the mansion Do you see that there?

A Yes

Q My question for you is: At the end of the first line there where it says, "The Governor and the First Lady would like to invite Jonnie," do you see that?

A Yes

Q Is that the correct spelling of Mr Williams' first name?

A Yes

Q Okay Now let's go back to page 1, please I think we saw this a moment ago, but did Mr Williams and Ms Williams accept the invitation?

A Mr Williams accepted

Q Understood Now, do you recall whether there were any additional invitations related to the dinner?

A He was invited to spend the night at the mansion

MR HARBACH: Okay Let's take a look at the middle of 103, the e-mail from Ms Block, please, Mr Starnes There you go

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Is that what you were just referring to?

A Yes

Q Did you have any conversations with Mr Williams about whether he would take the Governor and Ms McDonnell up on the offer to stay overnight in the mansion?

A Yes

Q What did he say about that?

A He said he had a perfectly good house in Goochland, there was no reason for him to spend the night

Q And then just to finish this off, if we could scroll up a little bit and see how you responded on Mr Williams' behalf What did you say to him?

A "I just talked to JW He is not bringing anyone with him, and thank you for the offer to stay overnight, but he said he'll go home to the house in Goochland "

Q All right Let me ask you, do you recall one way or the other whether or not Ms Williams went to the dinner?

A No, she did not

Q Okay And if we could go back to page 2 of Government's 103 I want to make sure I spoke correctly The invitation at the bottom there, if we could blow up Ms Block's invitation That is, in fact, only to Jonnie Am I right about that?

A Yes

Q Thank you, ma'am It was my mistake

Do you have any idea what precipitated the invitation from the Governor and Ms McDonnell to

Mr Williams to have dinner with them at the mansion?

A No

Q Do you recall any conversations with Mr Williams about the dinner afterward?

A No

Q Okay Now, a moment ago I told you we were going to come back to the idea of Roskamp Do you recall that?

A I do

Q Do you know what the Roskamp Institute is?

A It's research center on Alzheimer's, for Alzheimer's

Q Do you know where it's located?

A Sarasota, Florida

Q And do you know what relationship, if any, it has with Star?

A It has a working relationship Star Scientific was working with Roskamp to develop Anatabloc with the help -- for the help of Alzheimer's

MR HARBACH: Could we take a look, for identification, please, at Government's 114 And maybe blow up the bottom half of the page for her to be able to identify it, Mr Starnes Thank you, sir

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Can you see that okay, Ms Fulkerson?

A Yes

Q Is this an e-mail exchange concerning the possibility of Mr McDonnell going to Roskamp?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 114

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: And I think -- you can leave it right there, Mr Starnes That's good

BY MR HARBACH:

Q The e-mail that's on display for the jury right now, Ms Fulkerson, right there in the middle, the one that's dated May 4, '11, at 12:55 p m , do you see that there?

A I do

Q It says, "Jonnie said that gov is going to Sarasota to Roskamp Institute on the 1st " Would that be June 1st?

A I believe so

Q "And we are providing the transportation " Meaning -- does that mean Mr Williams' plane?

A Yes

Q "Roskamp is the company working with Jonnie on Anatabloc, et cetera " Did you -- did you -- would you have, in fact, had a conversation with Mr Williams on this subject --

A Yes

Q -- prior to sending this e-mail?

A Yes

Q All right

MR HARBACH: Now, if we could scroll down Actually, leave it right there, Mr Starnes We're good

BY MR HARBACH:

Q What does Ms Block say in reply to your e-mail one minute later at the top?

A "The 1st of June?"

MR HARBACH: And then if we could scroll up a little bit Very good

BY MR HARBACH:

Q You say to her, "Let me know after you check with him"?

A Yes "Let me know after you check with him "

Q All right Now, let's go on to Government's 118, please, for identification Is this an e-mail exchange a few days later on this same subject?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 118

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay Let's start at the bottom, please, with the e-mail from Ms Block, and could you read the -- the first paragraph there?

MR HARBACH: Maybe you could blow that up for her, Mr Starnes The one that begins "I spoke "

A "I spoke with the Governor regarding flying down to speak to the Roskamp Institute on June 1st Unfortunately, after checking with his daughter, she is getting married that Saturday He doesn't believe he will be able to attend due to some dad commitments that day I'm so sorry this won't work out "

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay And then at the bottom, why don't you read the rest of this, please?

A "What else we can do to fix this? The Governor is planning on being in Florida in December Could we tie something in then? When is their next event?"

Q All right And then if we could scroll up to see how you all concluded your conversation

A I replied to her, "I will let JW know Dads and daughters come first "

Q All right Now, that second sentence, is that Mr Williams or is that you?

A That's me

Q That's your observation?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, do you recall one way or the other whether the -- Ms Block's reference to the event in Florida in December, do you recall whether anything ever happened with that?

A I don't remember

Q Did you inform Mr Williams when you learned from Ms Block that the Governor wasn't going to be able to go?

A Yes

Q What was his reaction?

A He was very disappointed

Q Do you recall anything specific that he said or just his demeanor?

MR BROWNLEE: Objection Hearsay

MR HARBACH: I expect the answer to be no, Judge

A I just remember him being upset, that he really wanted the Governor there

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay Did you yourself attend the Roskamp meeting on June 1st?

A No

Q Do you recall whether you and/or Mr Williams was giving out samples of Anatabloc early in 2011?

A I believe so

Q Do you recall how you all would decide who would get the samples? How did that work?

A Mr Williams decided If people requested them, I had to get permission from Mr Williams

Q And were there some people that you were authorized to send samples to?

A Did he authorize me to send them to?

Q Yes, ma'am

A Yes

Q Do you remember how early in 2011 you all were doing that?

A I really don't know without seeing something

MR HARBACH: Okay Let's show the witness Government's 94 for a refreshment only, please

A Okay

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Just take a look at it, especially all the way down at the bottom there

MR HARBACH: It's the bottom e-mail that I'm interested in, Mr Starnes

A Okay

BY MR HARBACH:

Q The date range at the bottom Ms Fulkerson, does taking a look at this refresh your memory about how early in 2011 you were sending samples out to various people of Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR HARBACH: Mr Starnes, can you take it down, please

BY MR HARBACH:

Q As early as when?

A January

Q Next subject I'm going to start this one with a document It's Government's 120, please Do you recognize this document, Ms Fulkerson?

A Yes

Q Is this a check that you prepared?

A It is

A Jonnie Williams

Q Did he tell you to do that?

A Yes

Q What's the date on the check?

A May 23rd, 2011

Q What about the decision to write the check on the account of Starwood Trust, was that your call?

A No

Q Whose call was it?

A Jonnie asked me to write the check on Starwood Trust I had to get Donnie Williams', the trustee's permission

Q Did you do that?

A I did

Q Let's take a look now at Government's 121, please Oh, I'm sorry Before we take that one down, same question about the amount The $50,000, was that amount selected by Mr Williams?

A It was

Q Okay And so now if we could look for identification, at Government's 121, please Do you recognize this to be a check that you prepared?

A It is

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 121

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

A He told me to leave it blank

Q What about the memo line that says, "Wedding gift," whose idea was it to put that there?

A Mr Williams

Q Do you recall what Mr Williams said about that, about why he wanted you to put "wedding gift" in the memo line?

A It was to pay for one of the McDonnell daughter's wedding reception

Q Did you have any conversation with Mr Williams about whether the 50,000-dollar check was to be a loan or a gift?

A I believe he told me it was a loan

MR BROWNLEE: Objection Hearsay

THE COURT: She's already answered it now Go ahead

BY MR HARBACH:

Q To your recollection, did Mr Williams say anything to your about the terms of the loan, if you recall?

MR BROWNLEE: Objection Hearsay

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Looking at Government's 121 where it says, Great Seasons Catering," is that your handwriting, ma'am?

Q Okay If we could look at the next exhibit, which is Government's 122, please And before we zoom in, Ms Fulkerson, do you recognize this document?

A It's the general ledger that, when you enter checks or bills into the QuickBooks system, this is what's generated

Q Okay And were you involved with entering this data?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 122

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: Okay Now, if we could blow up Mr Starnes has it blown up already That's good Is there a way to zoom in on --

A I can see it

MR HARBACH: Sure Just the left-hand side for now

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Okay Now, about midway down the screen there you see there are a couple of checks, number -- thank you, there you go -- number 1001 and 1002 Do you see that there?

A I do

Q And the name that's associated with those in this paperwork is who?

A Maureen McDonnell

Q And then, if we could -- there you go Thank you

Now, the top line, the one that's associated with check number 1001, in the column there, does that say, "loan receivable"?

A It does

Q In the amount of $50,000?

A Yes

Q And then the second line, gift in the amount of $15,000?

Q Let's take a look now at Government's 123 for identification, please Do you recognize this to be another page from the ledger we've been discussing?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 123

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: All right And if we could just look at the top line there Thank you, Mr Starnes

You can -- let's do the same thing like last time, please Left side first so it gets a little bigger Thank you

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Now, this entry says, "Loan receivable Maureen McDonne," and then the Ls are cut off Is this for that check number 1001, is that the 50,000-dollar check we've been talking about?

A It is

Q And what does it say in the memo column?

A "Two-year loan at 5 percent Okayed by Donnie "

Q Now, would you have put "two-year loan at 5 percent" in the memo line? Would you have just decided that on your own?

A No

Q Where did you learn that from?

A Jonnie

Q Okay And now, if you could scroll to the right, please, on the same entry There's the amount of $50,000, correct?

A Yes

Q And finally, there's Government's 124 Another page from the ledger we've been talking about?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government offers Government's 124

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR HARBACH: And we're going to blow up just the first line, which is -- there it is

BY MR HARBACH:

Q This is for the second check, which was numbered 1002; is that right?

A Yes

Q And what's written in the memo column on this one?

A "Wedding gift for caterer and flowers for daughter "

Q All right And if we could scroll over to the right In the amount of --

A -- $15,000

Q Thank you, ma'am

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, that's a good place to stop, if you'd like to stop for the day, or I can keep going

And I know you're thinking, as you're sitting there, I'm going to be in this courtroom for the rest of my natural life, but again, things will start to move The first week is the slowest The first, you know, important witnesses, things will move a little slowly But as we start to go along, we'll get a better clip and we will get through this I am thanking you in advance for your patience in this matter I know it's a tough deal

JEFFREY B. KULL
OFFICIAL COURT REPORTER

P-R-O-C-E-E-D-I-N-G-S

(In Chambers)

THE COURT Whatever the problem is, let's deal with it succinctly

MR BROWNLEE: Yes, sir Last night about 9 o'clock, Your Honor, we were notified by government counsel of what we believe to be pretty highly exculpatory evidence just now provided to us after opening statement The evidence they provided was during Mr Williams' first interview on January 23rd, 2012 Apparently, at the conclusion of that interview, they asked Williams if he would wear a body wire or do some sort of recording of Bob McDonnell Williams declined and lawyered up

We think that that information is important for two reasons One, it signaled to Williams immediately that the government was in fact looking at the Governor at that time hard; and then secondly, the fact that he declined, we think, goes to his state of mind

THE COURT: So you know now What do you want?

MR. BROWNLEE: What we request is a 48-hour delay for Jonnie Williams We have about eight questions we provided to the government this morning that we think we should -- we are entitled to the answers to, how this information came to light, why we didn't know it, what the agents actually asked him, and to be able to scrub this down. We are not accusing anyone of bad faith or anything like that But we do ask for a 48-hour delay for Williams, he is supposed to be called today, to allow us to scrub this down And we think that's fair So that's our request

THE COURT: Your request will be denied If you all can't effectively cross-examine Jonnie Williams, you should leave the profession I mean really Let's go.

(Recess taken from 9:54 a.m. to 10:00 a.m.)

THE CLERK: Criminal Number 3:14-CR12: United States of America versus Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G McDonnell Mr Michael Dry, Ms Jessica Aber, Mr David Harbach, II, and Mr Ryan Faulconer represent the United States Mr John Brownlee, Mr Daniel Small, Mr Henry Asbill, Mr James Burnham, and Mr Christopher Iaquinto represent the defendant, Robert F McDonnell Ms Heather Martin and Mr William Burck and Mr Stephen Hauss represent the defendant, Maureen G McDonnell Are counsel ready to proceed?

MR. DRY: The United States is ready

MR. BROWNLEE: Defense is ready

MR. BURCK: Maureen McDonnell is ready

THE COURT: All right Let's bring in the jury, please

MR. HARBACH: Would you like the witness in the stand first?

THE COURT: Yes, have her come on up.
Ms Fulkerson, you realize you are still under oath?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

JERRI FULKERSON,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been previously sworn by the Clerk, was examined further and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Cont'd.)

THE COURT: All right Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Glad to see everybody is back. I apologize for the delay I had a sentencing that went longer than I thought it would. Stuff happens Government?

MR. HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Good morning, Ms Fulkerson

A Good morning

Q I'd like to start this morning by asking you about whether in your time working for Mr Williams there were occasions when Mr Williams would pay for something with his own money and then expense it to Star; did that ever happen?

A Yes

Q Did you guys have a system in place to process those expenses?

A Yes

Q Tell us about what you would do

A It is an expense report I tried to do them at the end of every month or the beginning of the next month. The bills would come in, we would go over them, he would tell me what was to be expensed and the purpose of the expense, and I would submit it to Star

Q How often would you prepare those expense reports?

A Hopefully every month. Sometimes it was longer

Q Could we take a look for identification at Government's 182 Ms Fulkerson, do you recognize this to be an expense report of the type you have been testifying about?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 182

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Could we blow up the text, please, Mr Starnes? Thank you, sir Okay, you know, I think let's do the left-hand side of the screen so we get the columns and description and then we will scroll over to get the amounts Okay? Thank you, sir Are you able to see the first entry on there of May 31st, 2011 and then in the payee column it says "Kinloch"?

A Yes

Q What's Kinloch?

A Golf club in Goochland.

Q Was Mr Williams a golfer?

A Yes

Q Was he a member at the Kinloch Golf Club?

A Yes

Q You said it is in Goochland?

A I believe so

Q Now, on this expense report, there is an entry for May 31st of 2011 that says "Kinloch " Do you see that there?

A Yes

Q Okay And then let's, on June 30th, 2011, is that another entry for Kinloch?

A Yes

Q And then finally, on July 31st of 2011, a third one?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, let's briefly scroll over to the right if we could and just see the amounts that are associated with those three entries

A Yes

Q How much is associated with the first entry for Kinloch?

A It looks like $2,604 49

Q Okay And now, before we go on to the others, let me ask you a question. That one was dated May 31st, correct?

A Yes

Q Now, does that mean that all of those charges were incurred on Mr Williams' account on May 31st?

A No

Q Please explain

A Kinloch's statements come out once a month, and the statement is dated May 31st, so it was charges for throughout the month.

Q So the 2,600 and change there is the total to Kinloch for the month of May, 2011?

A Yes

Q Related to this purpose

A Yes

Q Namely, meetings with and golf merchandise for Governor McDonnell; have I read that right?

A Yes

Q Let's go to the next entry now The second one, second Kinloch entry on the expense report, how much is that one?

A $2,099 29

Q For this one, Mr Starnes, we need to zoom out a little bit Scroll over That's fine Do you see where it is written in the margin there, "Dues, $2,000"?

A Yes

Q Do you know what that refers to?

A National dues for Kinloch Golf Club.

Q Is $2,000 the correct annual amount for national dues?

A Yes

Q So for that month, only $99 29 is attributable to Mr McDonnell, correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And that's for the entire month of June?

A Yes

Q All right Now, the third entry down there on the bottom, that one is for how much?

A $2,133 91

Q And again, so the record is clear, is that an entry for the entire month of July?

A It is

Q And could you scroll a little bit to the left, Mr Starnes, and so that entire amount, $2,133 91 is attributable to what's listed in the "Purpose" block?

A Yes Meetings with and golf merchandise for Governor McDonnell

Q Thank you You can take that down, Mr Starnes Yesterday, you may recall that we talked a little bit about the Roskamp Institute in Florida; do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Do you recall testifying about an e-mail exchange you had with Ms Block about whether Governor McDonnell might be able to attend?

A Yes

Q And I think we learned yesterday that he did not attend; is that right?

A Yes

Q Now, did you assist in making flight arrangements for that trip for other folks?

A I believe I did.

Q Let's take a look at Government's 146, please, for identification Can you blow up the middle part so she can see the description, please, Mr Starnes?
Ms Fulkerson, do you recognize this to be paperwork related to the flight arrangements for a trip to the Roskamp Institute that you prepared?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 146

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q What's the date of the trip down to Roskamp according to these papers?

A May 31st, 2011

Q All right Take that down, Mr Starnes Let's take a look for identification at Government's 151, please. Same drill Could you please just blow up the description in the middle? Thank you, sir Take a look at that, Ms Fulkerson. Does this appear to you to be paperwork related to the return trip from Roskamp that you helped prepare?

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

A Yes

MR HARBACH: The government offers Government's 161

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q All right Let's start with this cover page Could you read for us the text of the e-mail? What does it say?

A "Jonnie asked that I forward the attached letter and information to you."

Q Would you have sent this e-mail to Ms Sutherland if Mr Williams had not asked you to do so?

A No

Q Does it indicate that there are a couple of attachments?

A Yes

Q What's the first attachment?

A Letter to Governor McDonnell

Q And before we go to the attachment, what's the date and time of the e-mail, ma'am?

A June 16th, 2011 at 4:38 p.m.

Q Let's take a look at Page 2 of Government's 161, please Blow up the text, please, Mr Starnes Thank you This appears to be a letter to Governor McDonnell; do you see that there?

A Yes

Q Now, do you have any recollection about how this letter came to be?

A He either dictated it to me or it was forwarded to me

Q Okay And then the signature at the bottom, is that Mr Williams' signature or is that an example of you signing his name for him?

A I believe it is an example of me signing his name

Q And to reiterate, is that something that you ever did without his express authorization?

A I never signed his name without his direct authorization.

Q All right Were you involved in drafting this letter at all other than physically putting it together?

A No

Q If we could look at Page 3 of Government's 161 Actually, before we do that, I'm sorry, Your Honor, could we go back to Page 1, please? Blow up the header there What's the second attachment, Ms Fulkerson?

A "Approved Protocol for CRP Study "

Q All right Now let's take a look at at least Page 3 of Government's 161 You have reviewed this document before you came to Court here today, correct?

A Yes

Q Is this a multi-page report?

A Yes

A I do

Q And Ms Block is inquiring of you whether Mr Williams is going to attend the Governors' Retreat next weekend at the Homestead

A Yes

Q So the following weekend, would that be the weekend that begins Friday, June 24th?

A I believe so.

Q Now, you mentioned a moment ago that you were involved in making some flight arrangements Tell me what you remember about that

A First of all, I can never book the plane or agree to anything without Mr Williams' approval They asked could the Governor's Office, or Ms Block asked could Jonnie fly, I believe it was, Ms McDonnell to the Homestead. Then things changed. He agreed to it Then things changed and they asked if he could take the two children, two of the children, to the Homestead.

A Yes

A I remember discussing it with him.

Q All right If we could, it says, "I'm waiting on a time " If we could see the next page to finish this e-mail from Ms Sutherland, " that they would be able to go "

All right, now, read the last sentence for us there, the one that begins "The route would include "

A "The route would include the twins getting on board in Richmond, the plane would then go to Virginia Beach to get Jeanine, and then take the three of them to the Homestead."

Q Do you recall that issue?

Q Tell us what you remember about that

A I remember Mr Williams not wanting to go to Virginia Beach

A Yes

Q Are you able to see what letters are highlighted there in the same column where there are a bunch of months; can you make that out?

A Reading from left to right, it says "Bill, March 6th, 2012," it is the beginning of McDonnell, "McDO," then "MoBo Realty," and then "Beach House "

A Yes

Q Do you recall why you needed to cancel her flight?
A I don't remember
Q Okay To your recollection, did she fly down commercial or did she use Mr Williams' jet, or do you recall?
A If he picked her up in Tampa that would have meant she flew commercial
Q Understood. You can take down 404, please Let's take a look at, well, let me just ask you before we show you the document Were you involved in helping make any other arrangements for Rachel McDonnell's trip to Florida besides the flight exchange e-mails and transportation?

A Yes
Q What kind of high-dollar gift are we talking about?
A A whole-house generator
Q And whose idea was it to get that as a gift?
A Jonnie Williams'

A At his direction, telling me to sign it, yes

Q Now, back to the generator for Jeanine McDonnell and Adam Zubowsky Did Mr Williams in fact end up getting a generator for them?

A No

Q Why not?

A The logistics of trying to get it installed, the cost, it was more than what he thought it was going to be, and the logistics of trying to get it installed long distance was too much

Q Did he give them a different gift instead?

A Yes

Q What did he direct you to help prepare for them?

A A check. And he also gave them first class tickets for their honeymoon, airline tickets

Q What's the date of this e-mail, ma'am?
A December 20th, 2012
Q It says, "I know I have your address somewhere but for the life of me I can't lay my hands on it" and so on. Why did you need Mr Zubowsky's address?
A In order to mail the check
Q The gift check we have been talking about?
A I believe so, yes
MR. HARBACH: Excuse me one second, Your Honor
(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)
BY MR HARBACH:
Q My colleagues point out I haven't asked you who Adam Zubowsky is Do you know who he is?
A I believe he is now Jeanine McDonnell's husband
Q How is Jeanine McDonnell related to Mr and Ms McDonnell, if you know?
A Daughter
Q Do you know whether Mr Zubowsky worked for Mr McDonnell?
A I believe so.
Q Do you know in what capacity?
A I can't remember
Q Okay Were you involved at all -- this is a new subject Were you involved at all in helping to make arrangements for a trip to Savannah, Georgia for other members of the McDonnell family in January of 2013?

A Yes

Q Do you have, a recollection of that?

A Yes

Q Tell us what you recall

A I remember being contacted by telephone in the evening by Ms McDonnell telling me that Jonnie had okayed flights, commercial flights for the girls, and I can't remember which girls, their daughters, for the bachelorette party for one of them.

Q Okay And this is for the trip that I asked you about?

A Yes, I'm sorry Yes

Q That's quite all right Apart from the conversation you just related, have you ever talked to, excuse me, spoken to Ms McDonnell yourself besides that one time?

A Not that I can remember

Q Okay Let's take a look at Government's 464, please

///

///

///

///

///

///

///

Q Now, I'm going to represent to you, Ms Fulkerson, that this is a text message Okay?

A That's fine

Q Do you recognize it to be one between yourself and Jonnie Williams on this subject?

A Yes

MR HARBACH: Your, Honor the government offers Government's 464

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q All right Could you read this one to us, please?

A Just the body of the text?

Q Yes, ma'am

A It says, "1st lady of va called Tried to call u She is looking for flights round trip to Savannah for 2 of her girls For Jeanine bachelorette party Is it ok to book for points?"

Q What do you mean by that last question?

A "To book for points"?

Q Yes, ma'am

A Jonnie has a lot of American Express points, and you can book flights and pay for them with his points so it doesn't cost him dollar wise

Q I see So we're talking about commercial flights here?

A Yes

Q Not the private jet?

A Correct

Q Do you know if Mr Williams agreed to that request?

A Yes

Q Did you, in fact, purchase tickets on points for two of the McDonnells' daughters?

A Yes

Q Do you recall which ones?

A I'm guessing Caitlin or Rachel Cailin or Rachel I'm sorry

MR HARBACH: May I please have one second, Judge?

THE COURT: Sure

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR HARBACH: For refreshment purposes only, I'd like to show the witness Government's 467, page 4 Just the bottom e-mail, please, Mr Starnes

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Ms Fulkerson, does taking a look at this help you remember which two daughters you made these arrangements for?

A Yes

Q Okay Which two? Can you take a look at --

A Rachel and Cailin

Q I'm sorry?

A Rachel and Cailin McDonnell

Q Thank you, ma'am Okay New subject Do you recall Mr Williams ever telling you that Ms McDonnell had sent him a box with items he had purchased before -- purchased for her along with a note? Did he ever tell you that?

A No

MR HARBACH: May I please have a moment, Judge?

THE COURT: Yes

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor I have no further questions at this time

THE COURT: All right We'll take our morning break now, 15 minutes If you all would follow the marshal

(Recess taken from 11:16 a m until 11:34 a m)

THE COURT: All right Let's bring in the jury, please

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Cross-examination

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Judge

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Good morning, Ms Fulkerson How are you today?

A I'm okay

Q Good My name is John Brownlee and I'm an attorney for Bob McDonnell, and I'm going to ask you just a few questions this morning Okay?

A Okay

Q Thank you very much Now, I believe that you testified that you've worked for Jonnie Williams for a very, very long time; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And you've been his personal assistant I believe since about 1996, '98?

A '98

Q Okay

A Sometime around then

Q Okay

A I'm very bad with years

Q Okay That's all right So it's a good long while?

A Yes

Q Okay And is it fair to say that you respect Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q Okay And you like Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q Okay And fair to say that, in your opinion, you've been a loyal employee to Mr Williams for a very, very long time?

A Yes

Q Okay And he has, in your opinion, treated you well over those years?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, you still work for him; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, it's my understanding that he no longer works for Star Scientific; is that correct?

A I believe he's still employed with Star

Q Okay But you work for him personally; is that correct?

A I work for Star Scientific as well

Q Okay So you work for the company --

A And for Mr Williams

Q And for Mr Williams Okay So just so I understand and the jury is clear, does your paycheck come from Star Scientific or Mr Williams or both?

A From Star Scientific

Q Okay So you're paid for by the company, but you still are the personal assistant to Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q Okay And he has some affiliation now with the company?

A Yes

Q Okay And you still work for him today, as you sit here today; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And you still work for Star Scientific today; is that correct?

A Okay

Q So as you're sitting here today, you are an employee and being paid for by Star Scientific and Jonnie Williams?

A Correct

Q Now, Mr Harbach asked you a couple things about some bonuses you've received?

A Yes

Q I think one of them was 50 or $60,000 for finding a stock certificate; is that right?

A Somewhere around that range, yes

Q Fair to say Mr Williams is very generous?

A Yes

Q Okay And then I think you testified that you also received a 20,000-dollar cash bonus in January of 2013; is that right?

A Yes.

Q Okay Now, when you received that bonus, did you know that Mr Williams was being investigated at that time for securities fraud?

A I didn't know what he was being investigated for, but

I knew he was being investigated

Q Okay And so after that, after you learned that he was being invest- -- you -- he was being investigated, he gave you $20,000 cash is that right?

A Yes, in lieu of my bonus I was already supposed to get

Q Okay Is it fair to say that the $20,000 bonus was the largest cash bonus you had received to date, at that time?

A I don't remember when I got the other one

Q Okay So it could have been before or after?

A The year-end bonus?

Q Yes

A Yes

Q Okay So the year-end bonus that you received in January of 2013 was the largest year-end bonus you had ever received?

A As cash

Q As cash Okay And you received that from Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q After you knew he was being investigated for securities or some other type of case?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, you are represented by counsel here today is that correct?

A Yes

Q And your lawyer here is Mr George Terwilliger; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And you understand Mr Terwilliger at one time was the Deputy Attorney General of the United States; is that right?

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q He also has an associate working for him; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And that is Dallas Kaplan; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And they have been working with you in preparation for your testimony here both yesterday and today; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And it's fair to say those lawyers are very expensive?

A I guess

Q You guess Okay Are you paying for your lawyers?

A No

Q Okay Star Scientific and Mr Williams taking care of that?

A I believe Star Scientific is paying it

Q Okay So fair to say that the company that Mr Williams has some affiliation with, Star, who pays your salary, is also paying for your attorneys?

THE COURT: We don't need the summary question She's already answered all of that

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, prior to today, we've never had a chance to meet; is that correct?

A I don't believe so

Q Okay So you and I have never talked before; is that right?

A To the best of my memory

Q Okay Fair enough And yet prior to coming here today, you met with the good folks from the government here on at least four or five occasions; is that right? I think with maybe one or two of them were phone calls, but you've met with them on several occasions; is that right?

A Yes

Q To go over your testimony and to prepare for being here?

A I've met with them to cooperate

Q Okay Now, as Mr Williams' assistant, is it fair to say that you were responsible, from time to time, for paying for his personal bills?

A Yes

Q Okay And so do you also pay the bills for his adult children?

A Yes, some of them

Q And do you pay the bills for Starwood Trust?

A With Donnie's authorization on the unusual bills, yes

Q Okay Let's talk a little bit about Starwood Trust so we kind of understand what that is It's my understanding Starwood Trust is a trust that Mr Jonnie Williams set up for the benefit of his children; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q Okay And that Mr Donnie Williams is his brother who is the trustee?

A Yes

Q Okay So in order for you to write a check from Starwood Trust or to pay a bill from that account, you need to get Donnie Williams' approval; is that correct?

A If it's an unusual bill, yes

Q Okay And if it's an unusual, does that mean high, a lot?

A High or not a monthly bill

Q Okay And then also there's -- you pay the bills for Starwood Aviation --

A Yes

Q -- is that right?

And Starwood Aviation, just so we understand, is the company that holds the airplane that Mr Williams uses; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay So -- now, Starwood Aviation is separate from Star Scientific; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay So if Mr Williams were to use the aircraft for the benefit of Star Scientific, then Starwood Aviation would bill Star Scientific; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And who are the owners of Starwood Aviation?

A Jonnie Williams

Q Okay So Jonnie Williams is 100 percent owner of Starwood Aviation?

A Yes

Q And he's the largest shareholder of Star Scientific; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q Okay And so when he would use the plane for the benefit of the company, Star Scientific, Starwood Aviation, from which he's 100 percent owner, would make money; isn't that right?

A I don't really know if they made money

Q Okay

A The agreement was we would bill it at cost, plus maintenance

Q I see Now, you discussed some instances in which you signed documents for Mr Williams; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And I think you've testified or you've stated that you -- when you first came on board you kind of took the time to learn how to copy his signature; is that correct?

A At his direction

Q The answer is yes?

A Yes

Q Okay And you did that because Mr Williams asked you to learn how to sign his name?

A Yes

Q Okay And -- now, are you left-handed?

A No

Q Okay Mr Williams is; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay So you kind of had to learn how to write his signature with your right hand or your left hand?

A My right hand

Q Okay So you had to -- how long did that take to kind of learn how to get Mr Williams' signature down?

A I don't remember

Q Okay Is it fair to say that you've looked over some documents here over the past month or so and you've had difficulty determining which one Mr Williams signed and which one you signed?

A Yes

Q So it's a pretty good copy of it; is that right?

A I guess

Q Okay All right Now, is it fair to say that you would sign on his behalf more than just bills for companies that we talked about? Is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And, in fact, I think it's fair to say you would sign whatever Mr Williams asked you to sign?

A What he directed me to, yes

Q Okay Now, I think that counsel asked a little bit, you are a notary public; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And so we're all clear, a notary public is an official, designated by Virginia law, to notarize; that is, kind of confirm under oath signatures; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And as a notary, fair to say that you took an oath that you would faithfully perform, to the best of your ability, the duties of the office of notary public?

A Yes

Q Okay And essentially what you are attesting to when you are a notary is that the person is, in fact, in your presence, correct?

A Yes

Q And that the person who is signing the document is, in fact, signing the document?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, you do understand that it could be a crime under the laws of Virginia to notarize a document if the signor is not in the presence of the notary at the time the document is signed?

A That's not for me to determine I don't know

Q Okay Now, when you became a notary, did you -- did you take any training?

A You read a book

Q Ma'am?

A I believe you read a book

Q Okay And in that book did it describe Virginia Code 47 1-15 that goes through the fact?

A I'm guessing it does

Q Okay And you do understand that when you are a notary and you notarize a document, you are attesting to the fact that that person is, in fact, there?

MR HARBACH: Objection We've been over this

THE COURT: The objection is overruled Go ahead You can answer

A I'm sorry Could you repeat the question?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Well, let me ask it this way Mr Williams, most of the time, lived in Florida; is that correct?

A Over the years, it's half and half, I guess

Q And he would ask you, from time to time, to sign documents for him and then notarize them, and you would do that; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And so you would essentially forge his signature and then notarize that he was there when he was not?

A I don't know if you would call it forgery

Q Okay

A I'm just -- I did what he told me

Q Okay And so he asked you to -- to sign his name for him; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And he wasn't there?

A Correct

Q Okay And then you notarized it, you put the seal on it and attested to, pursuant to being a notary?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, I believe, Ms Fulkerson, you had met with the government three times, and during those three times, this whole notary issue was never raised; is that right?

A I don't remember We met about a lot of things

Q Okay

A Okay?

Q Is it fair to say that this whole notary issue came up fairly recently?

A I believe so

Q Okay And is it fair to say that recently you informed the government that you would not testify unless you were immunized, provided immunity from prosecution for all the things that happened with Mr Williams unless -- and you wouldn't testify unless they granted you immunity; is that correct?

A I don't know what immunity is My lawyers went to the government or to the judge to protect my constitutional rights

Q Okay So Mr Terwilliger, who's paid for by Star, went to the government and said you won't testify unless you got some protection Is that fair?

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Overruled

A I -- I've always been willing to cooperate and to be truthful I felt like I needed some protection and my constitutional rights upheld

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay And that protection is because you did some things based on what Mr Williams asked you to do?

A That's not for me to judge I just felt like I needed my protection

Q Okay Well, can you tell me what you think you needed protection for?

A I just wanted my -- none of my own words to be used against me I just wanted my constitutional rights upheld

Q Okay And so -- okay Well, let me move along

Now, it's my understanding that what you told the United States in all your interviews is that you never signed anything for Mr Williams in an effort to help him kind of cover up something; is that correct?

A To the best of my knowledge, I've never signed anything to help him cover up anything

Q Okay And so -- can we -- Your Honor, can we pull up, just for the witness and counsel, not for the jury, RM-1970? And can you show me the last page of that, please? Okay

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Ma'am, I'm going to show you what has been marked as RM-1970, and in looking at this document, is your signature on it?

A Yes

Q Okay And is this your certificate of notary?

A Yes

Q Okay And can you read the part there that begins, "On December 31st, 2007," for us?

A "On December 31st, 2007, before me, Jerri M Fulkerson, a notary public in and for said state, personally appeared, Jonnie R Williams, known to me, parens, or proved to me on the basis of satisfactory evidence, to be the person whose name is subscribed to the within instrument, and acknowledged to me that he or she executed the same in his or her authorized capacity and that by his or her signature on the instrument, the person, or the entity upon behalf of which the person acted, executed the instrument "

Q Okay And then you signed that --

A Yes

Q -- attesting to that?

MR BROWNLEE: Okay Can you go to the other page?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay And if you look at the last part there, I believe you stated that on this document, this is actually your signature for his; is that correct?

A I believe it is

Q Okay And so fair to say that Mr Williams came to you or called you and said, "I need you to sign this document for me," and you did so and then attested that he was actually there?

A I attested that he actually executed it

Q Okay And that he signed it?

A If that's what the whole blurb says, yes

Q Right Right But you signed it?

A Yes

MR BROWNLEE: Can you pull it back up?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, if you look there, the date is 12/31/07?

A Correct

Q Okay And that's the date that he -- that you purportedly signed it on his behalf?

A Yes

MR BROWNLEE: Okay And can you go back to the front page, please? First page

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay And this is a loan document in which Mr Williams is loaning money to a company of his called Starwood Industries, Inc ; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And he's loaning a company that he owns a million dollars on the last day of the year for December 31, 2007; isn't that right?

A I don't remember this document, but yes

Q That's what it looks like?

A That's what it looks like

Q Now, let me just ask you, Ms Fulkerson, do you recall, in this instance, that Mr Williams asked you to prepare this document after the end of the year; that essentially what he wanted you to do was to prepare this loan document and then backdate it? Do you remember that?

A I don't remember the document So no, I don't remember that

Q Okay Let me -- let me show you -- just for her -- RM-1969

MR BROWNLEE: If you'll blow up the top part, please

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, Ms Fulkerson, this is an e-mail sent to you, it says Jonnie Williams, but we've seen, from the prior testimony, that you control his e-mail account And for 14 95, you purchased this LoanBack, Incorporated document to create this loan; isn't that right?

A I purchased a LoanBack document on February 8th

Q Right And so you got this LoanBack document, which is just a good old standard legal document that you can get on-line to create a loan, but here you're getting it on February 8th and you see it was signed on December 31, '07, correct?

A It may not be the same one

Q It may not be the same one

A I've got them before

Q Okay So you just don't recall whether or not you got this one in February of '08 and then used it in December of -- at the end of the year '07 to backdate that loan?

A Correct

Q Okay And were you aware that by backdating that loan Mr Williams was able to reap a windfall of about $300,000 on his taxes?

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay Let me show you 1966 Thank you Now, Ms Fulkerson, this is a -- what they call an Affidavit of Inventorship, which -- and you've been shown this before, in which you've acknowledged that this is, again, your signature and not Mr Williams'; is that correct?

A It may be

Q Does it look like it may be yours?

A Possibly

Q Okay And it's dated December 3rd, 2010, correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Is that the right date or is that -- could that be a different date?

A I don't know

Q Okay

A I don't -- I don't remember the document So I don't know

Q Okay Is it fair to say that from time to time, Mr Williams asked you to put different dates on documents?

A No I don't remember him ever asking me

MR BROWNLEE: Okay Now come down a little bit on the document

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And, again, this is your notary signature affirming that, in fact, Mr Williams was present when this could be your signature, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And you understood that -- if you go back to the top part -- that Frank O'Donnell here, mentioned in the document, was a former business partner of Mr Williams, correct?

A Yes

Q And at the time this document was used, Mr O'Donnell was going through a divorce in Arizona; is that correct?

A I don't know

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: If she knows You can answer the question

A I don't know I don't know when his divorce was

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay Do you recall being asked to send this affidavit to a court for use in a proceeding?

A I don't remember the affidavit So no, I don't remember it

Q Okay All right Thank you

MR BROWNLEE: Let me look up 1967 All right And if you'll turn to page 2, please

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Again, now, Ms Fulkerson, this is a Bank of America authorization to re-register securities form

A Okay

Q And here once again, you are the notary on the document; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And that's your signature on it, correct?

A Yes

Q Now, I believe you've told the government that this signature here is -- is not Mr Williams' It's, in fact, yours; is that right?

A I believe it -- I believe that's true

Q Okay So that's not -- so you signed that for him?

A I believe so

Q Okay And that was dated January 27th, 2009; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And then to the right there is Celeste Williams?

A Yes

Q Okay And you signed for her as well; is that correct?

A No She signed

Q She signed?

A That's her signature

Q Okay So was she there in Virginia when you did that?

A I believe so

Q Okay But Mr Williams was not?

A That's possible

MR BROWNLEE: Okay And then if you go to the -- I think the top of that page, please

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And this was sent to Bank of America; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q Okay And if you go to the top there -- I think if you go a little higher -- you see there's a facsimile indicator --

A Yes

Q -- is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay So you sent this document, false document, by facsimile to a bank, correct?

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Did you send this document to a bank?

A It appears I faxed this document to a bank

Q Okay And this document has Mr Williams' signature on it, but, in fact, you signed it; is that right?

THE COURT: She said that

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

All right Let's look up 1975 If you'll go down, please, thank you, to the next page, to the last page Okay

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, again, this is a BB&T Note Modification Agreement, and is, again, this your notary on this?

A Yes

Q Okay And if you go to the page before, there's a signature apparently of Mr Williams, and, again, does that appear to be his signature or yours?

A I can't tell

Q You can't tell Okay

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Let me -- we can take this down Thank you

Let me change direction here a little bit I think you talked about you were responsible for making payments from the Starwood Trust; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And I think you testified Mr Williams set this trust up for the benefit of his children?

A Yes

Q Okay And you understood that by law, that's what it had to be used for because it was a trust?

A Yes

Q And his brother, Donnie Williams, was the trustee; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And fair to say that Mr Jonnie Williams really controlled this trust and used it however he wanted to; is that right?

A It's -- I don't know -- I -- I'm not Jonnie I don't know

Q Okay Now, when Mr Williams was low on cash, which he would be from time to time, fair to say you would then take money from the trust and give it to him; is that right? I mean, he would ask you to do this?

A Well, the trust owes Mr Williams -- Mr Jonnie Williams a small fortune, in my opinion

Q Okay So -- so just to go back to my question, then, so then on time to time, Jonnie Williams would call you and say, "Can you get some money from the trust and give it to me"?

A I would have to call Donnie and ask Donnie could the trust repay Mr Williams

Q Okay

A Part of the loans --

Q And Donnie would typically approve that, right?

A Some -- I guess If there was a question, they would talk about it

Q All right

MR BROWNLEE: Can we look at 1742, please? Can we blow up the bottom part first? Thank you Sorry about that

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Ma'am, this appears to be an e-mail from Jamie Madry to you?

A Yes

Q Do you know who Jamie Madry is?

A It was the accountant

Q The accountant Okay And what she asked to you do was to verify apparently that Mr Williams, in December of 2012, was going to buy a new plane; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And she's -- she says, "I believe at the meeting that Jonnie said that the trust has already loaned the money to Jonnie for purchase of the jet"; is that right?

A That's what it says

Q All right And this is the Starwood Trust that we're talking about, correct?

A Yes

MR BROWNLEE: Could we go up to the top part of it?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And this is another e-mail from you It says, "Ok Trust to Jonnie $3,605,000 for new jet"; is that correct?

A Yes

Q So Jonnie used the trust for his children to buy a 3 6 million-dollar plane for himself; is that right?

A Jonnie got repaid from the trust It was a -- it was ultimately to Aviation, but I was told -- I'm not an accountant I was told how it had to go It couldn't go from trust to Aviation

Q Okay

A It had to go from trust to Jonnie to Aviation

Q Right But the trust, which appears to be the starting point for this, is a trust that was established for the benefit of his children?

A Yes

Q And so the 3 6 million went from his trust to Jonnie to Aviation to buy a 3 6 million-dollar plane?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: You can take that down Thank you

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Let me shift gears here a little bit here Now, you testified, I believe yesterday, that Mr Williams donated flights to Governor McDonnell when he was both running for Governor and when he was actually Governor; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q And I think you testified that he did that a lot for the politicians; is that correct?

A He's done it for other politicians, yes

Q Okay And is it fair to say that public officials, politicians request Mr Williams, ask him to use his plane often; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And so when Mr Jerry Kilgore was in public service, he used Mr Williams' plane; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q Okay And former Attorney General Ken Cuccinelli used his plane; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q And former presidential candidate John McCain used his plane; is that correct?

A I can't remember

Q Okay How about former presidential candidate Mitt Romney?

A Yes

Q Let's change a little bit here Now, you testified yesterday about a dinner that was held at the Governor's Mansion for Jonnie Williams in April of 2011; is that correct?

A I believe so

Q Okay And I believe you testified yesterday that only Mr Williams attended that dinner; is that right?

A To the best of my knowledge, yes

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: And if we can look at 0869

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q All right This is the follow-up e-mail to the e-mails that the government showed you yesterday They didn't show you these So I wanted to show you these and see if we could refresh your recollection

THE COURT: We don't need you to editorialize Just ask a question

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q On -- this is an e-mail on April 25th, and it says, "Jonnie would like to know if it's ok to change his mind and bring Celeste with him to dinner "

A Yes

Q And then the response is, "Of course! Does she have any dietary concerns?"

So Ms Williams attended the dinner, correct?

A Now you've refreshed my memory

Q Okay

A Apparently she did

Q Okay Great

MR BROWNLEE: You can take that down

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, we've talked about Mr Williams' generosity Is it fair to say that he gives lots of folks gifts?

A Yes

Q And I think you mentioned at one time he spends a lot of money on golf clubs; is that right?

A He does

Q Okay And he --

A In my opinion

Q Okay Fair enough And he buys them for the sales reps Is that fair?

A He has, yes

Q And doctors?

A Yes

Q Okay And he also gives away, I guess, Louis Vuitton bags to people?

A Yes

Q Now, is it fair to say that he would, from time to time, lavish gifts on female friends of his?

A He's very generous, yes

Q Okay And is it true that from 2004 -- 2003 to 2004, he paid some bills for a woman living in South Carolina?

MR HARBACH: Objection May we please approach?

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, you had talked before about Mr Williams' -- I think you called it generosity Do you think it fair to say he likes to impress people with how much money he has?

A I don't know why he does it

Q But he does it?

A He just gives gifts Okay?

Q And he gives a lot of gifts; is that correct?

A I don't know what people consider a lot

Q Okay Fair to say that he would brag to people about how much money he has?

A I -- I've never heard him brag about it that I can recall

Q Okay Let me shift here

MR BROWNLEE: All right Can we show 896? That's the wrong one You can put that down Show 897

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay Now, this is a -- I think you've looked at this before I think it's in evidence, but we won't put it in evidence since we're using one of ours I apologize But this is a check to Mr McDonnell for $50,000 dated May 23rd, 2011, from Starwood Trust; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Now, you wrote this check at Mr Jonnie Williams' direction; is that correct?

A With Mr Don -- yes, it's correct, with Mr Donnie Williams' approval

Q Okay Mr Jonnie Williams asked you to write this, and then you went and got Donnie Williams' approval?

A Yes

Q And these funds are supposed to be for the benefit of Mr Jonnie Williams' children, right?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, you testified that this loan to Ms McDonnell, I think you said, was two years and 5 percent; is that right?

A Yes

Q And that's what Mr Williams told you?

A Yes

Q Okay But you weren't there when that loan was negotiated; is that correct?

A No

Q Okay And you've never seen a written agreement for that?

A No

Q Okay Now, Mr Williams has, and I believe you've stated before that he has in the past made loans to people without documentation; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Can we show -- now, the check underneath that, the one below it --

A Yes

Q -- for $15,000, again, this is from Starwood Trust?

A Correct

Q And this check, you were asked to prepare this check by Mr Jonnie Williams?

A Correct

Q Okay And the Pay to the Order Of was left blank?

A Yes

Q And Mr Williams, Jonnie Williams, asked that that be left blank?

A Yes

Q Okay And on the bottom there in the Memo line it says "wedding gift"?

A Yes

Q And on the ledger you booked it as a wedding gift?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: All right Take that down

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, you mentioned Mary-Shea Sutherland, and I believe you testified it was your understanding that she was an assistant to Ms McDonnell; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay

A I don't know her official title

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: Could we pull up 1160?

Your Honor, we may have to do this the old-fashioned way May I approach and show the witness the e-mail?

THE COURT: Just give it to the marshal

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, sir

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Now, Ms Fulkerson, this is an e-mail to you on September 2nd of 2011 from a woman named Abigail Farris Rogers?

A Yes

Q Okay And you remember getting this e-mail?

A I don't remember getting it, but --

Q Okay And when you got it, I think she had some trouble spelling your name, but when she eventually got it, you then forwarded it to Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q Okay

A I believe I did

Q And this e-mail references an attachment; is that correct?

A It looks like it, yes

Q Okay All right And let me show you, if we can, 0004 And this is a document that was attached to that e-mail to Mr Williams from Ms Rogers that references a potential contract between Ms Sutherland and Mr Williams Do you recall that?

A I don't remember seeing it, but it's here

Q Okay

A So --

Q Okay And -- you can take that down

And Ms Sutherland was the person that you coordinated with with this Mansion event or this Mansion launch event that you talked about; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And she was your point of contact for this event; is that right?

A I didn't coordinate the event, but she was the point of contact for -- if I needed something

Q Okay And when there was the hurricane, I guess, and there was some question as to whether or not it would be delayed, you contacted Ms Sutherland to see if it was still on?

A Yes

Q Okay And is it fair to say that you learned that Ms Sutherland was your contact from Mr Jonnie Williams?

A I believe so

Q Okay And just so I'm clear here, when you were told about the point of contact, the point of contact was not a gentleman by the name of Martin Kent?

A No

Q Or Jason Eige?

A Not that I remember

Q Okay It was Mary-Shea Okay

A I believe so

Q Thank you

MR BROWNLEE: Can you pull up 1426?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q I believe the government showed you this check, and these were the checks made out to MoBo Realty from Starwood Trust; is that correct, ma'am?

A Correct

Q And I believe that there were three of them prepared, two had to be voided and then one actually was sent?

A Correct

Q Okay But on the first one, it's made out to MoBo Realty, Attention Maureen Uncapher; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And the second one was still made out to MoBo Realty, correct?

A Yes

Q And the third one was as well?

A Yes

MR BROWNLEE: You can take that down

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q All right Let me show you 1958 Ma'am, this is a text message from you to Mr Williams in April of 2013

Do you know who Talhia is?

A I believe her last name is Tuck She is -- she was the communications person for Star Scientific

Q So she dealt with the press; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And you are here telling Mr Williams that "Talhia sent draft 3 of press release What do you want me to do?" Do you remember what you were sending him and what you were doing here, what this related to?

A It relates to the third draft of a press release

Q Okay

A What did he want -- what did he want me to do

Q Okay And did this press release have to do with the company's response to the federal investigation?

A I have -- I have no memory

Q You can't --

A I don't know

Q Okay Thank you Now -- Court's indulgence for one second, Your Honor

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Let me show you, ma'am, 725

MR BROWNLEE: If you'll go down to the bottom

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q This is an e-mail, it says Jonnie Williams, but I believe it's from you, to Janet Neal, who worked for Attorney General Cuccinelli And can you tell us what you were doing here in this e-mail, ma'am?

A It says, "Jonnie is in New York today and" --

MR HARBACH: Object to the witness reading from a document not in evidence

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Can you just tell us what you were trying to convey here? Please don't read it I apologize

A He would like to get an appointment with Attorney General Cuccinelli

Q Okay And do you recall, were you able to do that?

A I don't remember

Q Okay Fair to say, though, Mr Williams met with a lot of different public officials from time to time?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: Let's see 1179, please If you'll go down to the bottom

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q This is an e-mail from Attorney General Cuccinelli to you requesting permission to use the aircraft to go from Manassas to Louisville, Kentucky Do you remember that?

A Not particularly, but I see the e-mail

Q Okay And if you scroll up, your response there is, "The jet is all yours " So, again, he's requesting to use the aircraft personally, and you authorized it?

A I don't know if it's personal or business wise, but Mr Williams --

Q No, no I apologize It wasn't for personal, but it was he personally requested This e-mail actually came from the Attorney General himself, correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Excuse me And you would not have authorized that unless Mr Jonnie Williams gave you permission; is that correct?

A Correct

Q Okay

MR BROWNLEE: Let me see 1988 I'm sorry, 19 -- yeah 1988 All right And if you'll just highlight the bottom portion there

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q All right Now, this is an hand e-mail from Teiro

Cuccinelli --

MR HARBACH: I'm sorry, Your Honor I have to object to counsel reading from a document not in evidence

THE COURT: Just ask the questions you want If you want it admitted, then we can deal with it completely, but the way you're doing it Ask her a question about it

MR BROWNLEE: All right Yes, sir

BY THE COURT:

Q Is this an e-mail from Ms Cuccinelli?

A It appears to be

Q And it's dated in June of 2012; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And she is thanking you for allowing she and her family to use the lake house at Smith Mountain Lake; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Fair to say that Attorney General Cuccinelli and his family used the lake house on occasion?

A Yes

Q Okay More than once?

A I believe so

Q Okay And this is her just thanking you for that?

A It appears to be

Q Okay All right

MR BROWNLEE: Can 1 show 1989?

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Let me show you the bottom portion of this, and this is an e-mail from you to Elaine Thompson Do you know who Elaine Thompson is?

A A receptionist/secretary at Star Scientific

Q Okay And this is an e-mail reflecting that you are sending Attorney General Cuccinelli's mother-in-law more Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q And you did that from time to time?

A Yes

Q And did you send a lot of it to her

A I can't remember

Q Okay More than once?

A It says "more," so I would think so

Q Okay Thank you This is Government's Exhibit 410, and I believe Mr Harbach showed it to you and it is in evidence So I believe that it can be -- subject to the Court's approval, it can be seen

THE COURT: It's been admitted already

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q This is a -- just so I understand, this is a document that when a politician or a public servant were to accept a gift or travel from your company, Star Scientific, they would send this to you, and then you would fill it out and figure out an amount, and then that way the politician can take that amount and put it on a public disclosure form. Is that your understanding?

A I'm not sure what the government's or the politician's office does with it If they asked me to fill it out, I filled it out

Q And if you look at the -- next page, sir Thank you

Down in the middle part of it, you've come up with an estimate of whatever the value the company believes is appropriate and that's what you submitted?

A I believe so

Q Okay Now, is it fair to say that -- so in this case it's $6083; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay Is it fair to say that if you don't get this sent to you, then you can't fill it out? Is that -- that makes sense, but is that fair to say?

A Yes

Q Okay And in this case someone from Mr McDonnell's staff apparently sent this to you in an e-mail; is that right?

A I would think so, yes

Q I mean, the Governor didn't personally send this to you Somebody who worked for him did?

A I'm guessing

Q Okay All right And then they filled it out as best you could, and you sent it back so they could do whatever they needed to do with it?

A That's correct

Q Okay Now, you had talked about -- thank you very much

You had talked about some -- a trip that Rachel McDonnell took down to Florida, I think with a girlfriend of hers, and stayed at one of Mr Williams' condominiums; is that correct?

A It's his brother's condominium, but yes

Q And Rachel is Mr McDonnell's daughter?

A Correct

Q Okay Now, did you get one of these forms that we just discussed here, did they send you one of those to fill out?

A I don't remember

Q Okay All right All right And you also talked about that the Governor's daughter and her friend used a dock or a boat while they were down there; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And you said that that wasn't Mr Williams' -- it was not Mr Williams' boat; is that right?

A No

Q Okay Do you know, is that John McKeon's boat?

A I believe it is

Q Okay Did you receive one of these forms to fill out for Rachel McDonnell using Mr McKeon's boat?

A I don't remember

Q All right Now, you had talked about Adam Zubowsky, who married Mr McDonnell's oldest daughter There was this effort for Mr Williams to give them a generator?

A Correct

Q And were you aware that that was what Mr Williams was trying to give them as some sort of engagement gift?

A I believe it was a wedding gift

Q Wedding gift Okay And he didn't give the generator He ended up giving a 10,000-dollar wedding gift?

A Correct

Q Do you remember if anyone sent you one of these forms to fill out?

A I don't remember

Q Okay All right And I'll ask you as well, you had talked about some flights that Mr Williams used -- he had some points And so he gave some points to fly some of the children to some event; is that right?

A Yes

Q To Savannah, Georgia, I think you said?

A Yeah I believe it's Savannah

Q Savannah Okay And you don't remember getting one of these forms to fill out, do you?

A No

Q Now, let me ask you this You had testified that on one occasion you actually spoke to Ms McDonnell; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And is that the only time you remember talking to her?

A The only time I can remember

Q Okay But you were aware that -- that Mr Williams, Jonnie Williams, was very close with Ms McDonnell; is that correct?

A I don't know how close they were

Q Okay

A I know they talked

Q Okay Well, let me ask you, then Were you aware that in about 15-month period, beginning in April of 2011, that they had over 1,200 either cell phone calls or text message transfers?

A No

Q Were you aware that they traveled to Michigan together?

A Yes

THE COURT: She says she doesn't know how close they were You can ask ten of these "were you aware" questions She doesn't know She doesn't know Ask a question that she can respond to

MR BROWNLEE: I think she said she did know, sir

A The Michigan trip was for business

MR BROWNLEE: Okay So I -- I think --

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Did you know they went to California?

A Give me some more detail here

Q Okay They went to a nutraceutical event in both Salt Lake City and then also a trip to California?

A With other people

Q So the answer is yes?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, what was your understanding of Mr Williams' relationship with Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A I -- professional, I guess I don't really know

Q Okay So were you aware that Ms Sutherland wrote Mr Williams a letter in January of 2012 indicating that Mr Williams had informed her that at that time -- this is January 2012 -- that Mr Williams was planning to replace you?

A No

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

MR BROWNLEE· Court's indulgence for one moment

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR BROWNLEE: Thank you very much, Your Honor

Thank you, Ms Fulkerson

THE COURT: All right Counsel for Ms McDonnell

A Because of the invest- -- he said -- I believe he said he cannot give stock that year

Q I think you were about to say because of the invest- --

A Yes

Q Again, do those caddy fees include the tip?

A Yes

Q If we could scroll down to the next receipt real quick. Is that a purchase of apparel at your club for about $648?

A Yes.

Q And then go to the next one down. That's another expense at your snack bar, right?

A That's correct

Q All right We can zoom back out on that Now, again, all the charges for July 26th that are shown on this receipt, whose account were they charged to?

A Jonnie Williams'

Q Now, do you recall Mr McDonnell's sons again coming to the course in August of 2011?

A Yes.

Q Turning to Page 3 of this exhibit Then also to Page 4 Are Pages 3 and 4 receipts for particular visits in August of 2011?

A Yes

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 200 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Starting with Page 3, looking at the first receipt in the upper left-hand corner, could you tell us what that particular receipt is for?

A That is for merchandise in our golf shop.

Q Does that include -- what's a Ping Voyage bag?

A That's a golf bag

Q Now, if we could scroll down real quick, on that next one there, does that show -- what does that show in that receipt?

A It shows unaccompanied fees for two guests for nine holes

Q If we could scroll down. What does that one show there?

A That's the caddy fee

Q If we could zoom back out Now, if we could zoom in -- the date of the prior ones was August 5th; is that right?

A That's correct

Q If we could zoom in on the top one in the middle Does this show another visit on August 11th of 2011, six days later?

A Yes

Q Do you remember Mr McDonnell's sons coming out with a friend on or around that time?

A Yes

Q What's the total cost of their visit on that occasion?

A $900

Q Then below that, I guess there's two receipts for beverages, right?

A Yes

Q And then zooming back out and going to the upper right, is that a charge at the snack bar for that visit?

A Yes

Q Looking at the next receipt down, what's the date on that receipt?

A That is August 13th.

Q Do you recall Mr McDonnell coming out with his son, Sean, on that date, two days after the prior visit?

A Yes

Q And on, I guess this would have been the second time Mr McDonnell came there, did you actually greet him yourself the second time as well?

A Yes.

Q Would the greeting have been similar with the first greeting you had with him?

A Yes.

Q The next receipt down from that one, just scrolling down, what does that mean there, for Titleist Pro V1x?

A Those are golf balls purchased in the golf shop

Q Below that, are those more caddy fees there?

A Yes

Q Those caddy fee charges, based on what you can tell, the prices include the tip?

A Yes

Q Turning to Page 4 of this exhibit briefly Are there some more charges for food in the upper left-hand corner there?

A Yes

Q And all of these charges that we have looked at from August of 2011, whose account did those charges go on?

A Jonnie Williams'

Q And this last visit in August of 2011 when Mr McDonnell again came, was Mr Williams present on that occasion?

A No.

Q All right Now, zooming forward just a little bit to the winter of 2011, winter of 2012, do you recall a later visit by Mr McDonnell and his two sons in or around January of 2012?

A Yes

Q I'd like to show you Exhibit 285 Is this the first page of Mr Williams' statement for January of 2012?

A Yes

Q Turning to the second page, are those the specific charges from that month?

A Yes

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer 285 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Zooming in on the second receipt down on the left, does that show again the golf charges for that particular occasion?

A Yes

Q On this occasion in January of 2012, did you again personally greet the Governor, former Governor, when he showed up?

A Yes.

Q Was the greeting similar to the first one that you had had with him?

A Yes

Q I see here that there is both the guest fee of $300 and then the $90 cart fee. Are you allowed to take a cart at Kinloch?

A Yes

Q If you do, does the caddy still come with you or no?

A Caddy still comes with you, yes

Q So scrolling down to the next one, is that the caddy fee there on top of the cart fee for that day?

A Yes

Q Again, does that caddy fee there include the tip being charged to this account?

A Yes.

Q Now, based on these receipts or your recollection, was Mr Williams present in January of 2012 when Mr McDonnell and his sons played there?

A No

Q But whose account did all of these charges go on?

A Jonnie Williams'

Q All right Now, do you recall after that January, 2012 visit, a fourth visit by Mr McDonnell to your property?

A Yes

Q I'd like to show you Exhibit 433 Is this the first page of David Dean's bill for November of 2012?

A Yes

Q That's the member that we referenced earlier, the former member that worked for Mr Williams

A Yes

Q Turning to the second page of this document, are these some of the charges from that month?

A Yes.

Q Turning to the third page, are those more charges from that month?

A Yes.

MR. FAULCONER: We offer Exhibit 433 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Just zooming in on the top left corner of that page, can you tell us what individuals are listed there under that particular receipt?

A David Dean, Jonnie Williams, Governor Bob McDonnell, Sean McDonnell, and Bobby McDonnell

Q Do you recall those individuals playing at your course in about November of 2012?

A Yes

Q What was the total charge for that golf on that day?

A $187 50

Q Now, to be clear, was this the first time that you had seen Mr McDonnell and Mr Williams together?

A Playing golf together, yes

Q Now I'd like to show you Exhibit 434 Is this Mr Williams' receipt from that same month, November of 2012?

A Yes

Q Turning to Page 2, are there some charges for November 23rd, 2012 on that receipt?

A Yes

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 434 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q The second receipt down on this page, could you tell us what that shows?

A Caddy fees

Q Again, like the others, does this one include the tip?

A Yes

Q Now, I'd like to zoom out real quick, and then just looking at those other receipts as best you can tell, do those show additional charges for food and beverages while they were there on that occasion?

A Yes.

Q Like the other ones we have talked about, whose account did these charges go on?

A Jonnie Williams'

Q Mr Owenby, since that visit in November of 2012, have you ever seen Mr McDonnell at Kinloch again?

A No.

Q What about his sons?

A No

Q All right Now, we have seen some receipts for items that were purchased like clothing or things like that Do you sell clothing at the course?

A Yes.

Q Does some of that clothing include that logo that we saw earlier in that one picture where we zoomed in?

A Yes.

Q Clothing that has the Kinloch logo on it, can you get it other places or where can you actually get a piece of clothing like that?

A Only at Kinloch.

MR. FAULCONER: I'd like to offer up to the witness Exhibits 9-A, 10-A, 11-A, 12-A, 14-A, and 19-A with the assistance of the security officer

(Documents proffered to witness)

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Mr Owenby, if you could take a second to look through these photos and let us know when you have had a chance.

A Yes, sir

Q Mr Owenby, are these items with the Kinloch logo on them?

A Yes, sir

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibits 9-A, 10-A, 11-A, 12-A, 14-A, and 19-A into evidence

THE COURT: They will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q We will try to flip through these pretty quickly Looking at 9-A first Is this a shirt purchased at Kinloch Golf Club?

A Yes.

Q Where is the logo on this one that lets you know that?

Q If we could look at 10-A briefly Is this another shirt purchased at Kinloch?

A Yes

Q 11-A? Is this also a shirt purchased at Kinloch?

A Yes

Q 12-A, if we could. Would the same be true for this one?

A Yes.

Q And then finally, 14-A. Is the same true for this one?

A Yes

Q If we could look at 19-A. Could you tell us what this is?

A This is a golf bag

Q Can you tell what brand of golf bag this is from looking at it?

A It is a Ping

Q And is that the Kinloch logo on it?

A Yes

Q Now, all the items we just looked at, where would you buy them at Kinloch?

A In the golf shop.

Q If I could show you Exhibit 144, which we haven't looked at but was previously admitted. Could you tell us what that's a photograph of, Mr Owenby?

A That's the golf shop at Kinloch Golf Club

Q Is that where you would purchase the items we just looked at?

A Yes

Q If we could zoom in to the right of the keyboard there, in the left of this picture, what is that item there?

A That's a credit card machine.

Q Now. at Kinloch, do the items you sell in the pro shop, do they have price tags on them?

A Yes.

Q If somebody who comes in as a guest of a member wants to pay for something, can they offer to give you their credit card and pay for the item at the pro shop?

A Yes

Q Do you accept credit cards generally at Kinloch for other expenses as well?

A Yes

Q Now, in the four times that Mr McDonnell was at your property, did he ever ask you about how he should pay for anything?

A No.

Q Do you have any record of Mr McDonnell paying for anything at Kinloch Golf Club?

A No.

MR. FAULCONER: One moment, Your Honor No further questions for this witness, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Cross?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Good afternoon, sir

A Good afternoon.

Q My name is John Brownlee, and I represent Bob McDonnell I just have a couple questions for you. I believe you testified that in May, August, 2011 and then in January of 2012, Mr McDonnell came out to your course and golfed; is that right?

A Yes

Q On each of these three occasions you met him at the entryway and welcomed him to your club; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And he was unaccompanied in those three instances? Mr Williams did not golf with him; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And on those occasions, I think he had some combination of his sons with him and then he always had his protective detail with him; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And I believe you testified that when you greeted him, you informed him that you had been notified by Mr Williams that he was coming and you were expecting him.

A Correct

Q Okay And so you were fully aware at that time that Mr Williams would be paying for the golf that day; is that correct?

A Correct

Q And many of the receipts that Mr Faulconer showed you today actually had Mr McDonnell's name on it or his sons' name on it; is that correct?

A Yes

Q So people knew that he was actually out there playing that day

A Yes

Q And if you recall, when he was at your club, was he open and interacting with people and playing openly out in the club?

A Yes

Q He appeared to be comfortable at the club? I don't know how good a golfer he is, but he seemed to be comfortable?

A Yes

Q He was outgoing, friendly with people?

A Yes

THE COURT: Mr Brownlee, I need to stop One of my jurors needs to go out So we've got to deal with this If you all would leave and let the juror take care of himself

All right, we will take a break. A juror was feeling ill, so I don't know how long this is going to be So we will get back as soon as we can.

(Recess taken from 2:53 p.m. to 3:14 p.m.)

THE COURT: All right Bring the jury in, please

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

All right, proceed.

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Mr Owenby, I just want to go back. We were talking about the times that Mr McDonnell came out and played at the course I just was asking you was he -- did he appear to be comfortable there, friendly to people, and kind of acting very normally when he was at your course?

A Yes

Q Okay And let me talk on the one instance in November of 2012 when Mr McDonnell was there and

Mr Williams was there. Was Mr McDonnell's security detail with him on that trip as well, if you recall?

A I don't recall

Q Is it fair to say on the other times there, though, his detail was always with him?

A I think so, yes, sir

Q On all the times that Mr McDonnell was at your course, did you ever see him do anything in an effort to try to conceal his appearance there or hide that he was there?

A No.

Q And is Mr Williams still a member of your course?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR. BROWNLEE: Nothing further

THE COURT: Any questions?

MR. HAUSS: No questions, Your Honor Thank you.

THE COURT: All right Thank you, sir You may stand down.

(Witness stood aside)

Government, call your next witness, please

MR. FAULCONER: Your Honor, the United States calls Robert Ryan McDonnell

ROBERT R. McDONNELL,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Could you please state your name and spell your last name for the court reporter?

A Robert Ryan McDonnell, M-C-D-O-N-N-E-L-L.

Q What's your relationship to the defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Ms Maureen G. McDonnell?

A I am the son.

Q Do you recall meeting a man named Jonnie Williams, Sr sometime around the summer of 2011?

A Yes, late spring to summer, 2011

Q And 2011, was that before or after your dad took office as Governor?

A This was after my dad took office.

Q Before your dad ran for Governor, did you know who Jonnie Williams was?

A No, sir

Q Had you ever seen him around family events before your dad ran for Governor?

A No, sir

Q Now, before 2011, the year that you met Mr Williams, had you ever played golf at a place called Kinloch Golf Club?

A No, sir

Q After you met Mr Williams, did you play out at Kinloch Golf Club?

A Yes, sir

Q Is that a private course?

A I believe it is a private course, yes

Q Is anyone in your family a member of Kinloch?

A No, sir

Q When you played there, who was the member who was sponsoring you?

A Jonnie was the member at Kinloch.

Q The first time you played at Kinloch, do you remember when that was approximately?

A The first time we played was, I believe, late May, 2011

Q Do you remember who was with you the first time you played?

A Yes It was myself, my twin brother, my soon-to-be brother-in-law, and my father

Q And who did you understand to be paying for your day when you were at Kinloch on that particular occasion?

A I believe Jonnie was the member, so I believed he was paying

Q Now, later, after that first round of golf at

Kinloch, can you tell the jury whether you actually received some golf apparel from Mr Williams?

A After Kinloch?

Q Yes, after the first visit to Kinloch.

A I don't remember if I received any after the first visit

Q Do you remember receiving a golf bag from Mr Williams?

A I do

Q Could we show Exhibit 20-A for identification? Do you recognize this item that's shown in this picture?

A Yes That's a Virginia golf bag and a set of clubs

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 20-A into evidence

THE COURT: The number again?

MR. FAULCONER: 20-A.

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Mr McDonnell, is this a golf bag that you received from Mr Williams?

A Yes I received this golf bag about a week after an event at the Homestead. Jonnie sent the clubs to me

Q Now, if we could bring up Exhibit 21-A. Do you recognize what's shown in this photograph?

A Yes, sir These are the particular clubs in the bag,

Callaway

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 21-A into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

MR. SMALL: No objection.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Now, are these the golf clubs that you received from Mr Williams?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, backing up for just a moment, you had mentioned earlier that these clubs came off an event at the Homestead. Do you remember Mr Williams being at the Homestead as well?

A Yes, sir, Mr Williams was at the Homestead.

Q And when you were at the Homestead, did you play golf with Mr Williams when you were there?

A Yes, sir

Q When you played golf with Mr Williams while you were there, was your father present?

A No, sir, he was not My father was busy at meetings, and Jonnie asked if I wanted to just go play with him, and we just played about nine holes until the sun went down together

Q Do you recall if Mr Williams played with your father apart from being with you on that particular visit to the Homestead?

A No, he did not play with my father

Q Now, going back to the golf -- moving on from the golf clubs, if we could show you Exhibit 17-A. Do you recognize what's shown in this photograph?

A Yes, sir

Q What's shown in this photograph?

A Two pairs of golf shoes

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 17-A into evidence.

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Are these golf shoes that you received from Mr Williams around the same time as that bag and clubs?

A Yes, sir These shoes showed up along with the clubs and bag

Q When you received the clubs and the bag and the shoes, did you discuss the fact that you had received them with your father?

A Yes. So I remember the week or so after the Homestead, I got a call from Jonnie saying, "Hey, there is a present for you waiting at your house." And I get home and there is a bag and clubs just sitting there along with these shoes So I told my father -- well, first I called and thanked Jonnie. I don't know where the gesture came from. But I told my father that he had sent me these shoes and clubs

Q What was your father's reaction to that?

A My father's reaction was that I should send them back to Jonnie

Q Do you remember him saying something about it being a little excessive?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, did you actually end up returning the clubs and the shoes and the bag to Mr Williams?

A No I believed the gift to be -- obviously I was excited, so I believed it to be a gift to me Jonnie and I had developed a relationship by that point, so I thought it was just an independent present to me and I didn't think that we -- that I should return them.

Q So did you keep them?

A I did keep them.

Q Did you use them in your father's presence?

A I believe so, yes

Q You played golf with your father after that time?

A Later possibly, yes

Q Now I'd like to show you Exhibit 18-A. Do you recognize the item shown in this photograph?

A Yes, sir, I do.

Q And what is it?

A It's a Notre Dame golf bag

Q Do you know who this bag previously belonged to?

A I believe my father

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 18-A into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Do you know where this bag came from before it got to your father?

A I believe this came from Jonnie

Q Now, this was around June or July of 2011 that you received these items; is that right?

A Yes. This was late June, I believe

Q Now, later in August of 2011, do you remember playing at Kinloch Golf Club again?

A I would like to see the date or like a calendar Like a specific day

Q Let me put it this way: Do you remember playing out at Kinloch Golf Club again later that summer without your father present?

A Yes, sir

Q Do you remember playing there with your brother and a friend of yours?

A Yes I believe it was Brandon DeGraff

Q And after, when you played that time, was

Mr Williams with you?

A No , He was not

Q And do you recall ever discussing with your father that you had played at Kinloch without Mr Williams present?

A I don't remember a particular discussion about going out there, about that specific outing

Q Do you ever recall whether you talked to him in general about the fact of going out to Kinloch without him or Mr Williams present?

A Yes. there was probably a discussion that I went and played golf at Kinloch that day or along those lines

Q And do you remember what your father's reaction was to that?

A I don't remember his particular reaction. But I just told him I went and played golf that day

Q I guess after -- do you remember him saying anything about it being excessive like about the bag and the shoes?

A No, not particularly

Q Now, I'd like to show you briefly something that's previously been admitted, which is Exhibit 177 Sorry, Exhibit 200 If we could turn to the third page of this document If we could zoom in on the top receipt in the middle Does that show that outing that we were talking about earlier with Mr DeGraff?

A Yes, sir

Q Does that seem like about the right time frame, August 11th of 2011?

A Yes, sir

Q All right We can go and take that down. One moment, Your Honor, I apologize.

Now I'd like to direct your attention to December of 2011 And specifically, around Christmastime Were you at home for Christmas that year with your family?

A Yes, sir

Q And do you recall any expensive gifts that your father received?

A December, 2011?

Q Yes.

A Not particularly

Q Do you recall him receiving a watch that Christmas?

A Oh, December Okay Yes, sir, a watch.

Q And could you describe that for the members of the jury?

A I believe it was a Rolex watch.

Q And do you remember who he received it from at Christmas?

A Yes, he received it from my mother

Q And do you recall that Rolex watch being engraved?

A Yes, I believe it had my dad's name on it

Q Do you recall his reaction when he received that particular item?

A Yeah, I do. He was surprised. It was a nice watch. But really, his first reaction was like, to my mother, "Another watch?" He had a Seiko watch of 10 to 15 years that she gave him before. He didn't know he needed another watch, was really his first reaction.

Q I guess before that, before the Rolex watch, what would you say was the next nicest gift you had seen your mother give your father?

A Probably that Seiko watch before

Q Well, Christmastime of 2011, that would have been obviously around December 25th, right?

A Yes

Q Do you recall actually playing out at Kinloch with your father a few weeks after that?

A A few weeks after -- possibly

Q If we could show Exhibit 285, which has been admitted. If we could turn to the second page of that document If we could zoom in on the second receipt down on the left Looking at that document, Mr McDonnell, does that look like about the date, January 7th, 2012, of another time that you went out to Kinloch?

A Yes That seems right, January 7th.

Q And do you recall going out to Kinloch in January of 2012 with your father and your brother?

A Yes I believe it was an unusually nice day for January to be able, to play golf So I do remember that

Q And like the prior occasions, who did you understand to be paying for your dad at Kinloch that day?

A Jonnie was a member there, so I assumed it to be Jonnie

Q Now, I'd like to briefly direct your attention to another Christmas, and that's the Christmas of 2012 Do you recall receiving shares of stock in Star Scientific around Christmas of 2012?

A Yes, sir

Q And do you actually recall a conversation about that around the time of Christmas dinner?

A Yes I think it was later in the evening, as dinner was wrapping up.

Q Was your father present for that conversation?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, I'd like to show you what's been marked for identification as Exhibit 448 Looking at the first page of this document, do you recognize this as a Davenport & Company form that you filled out?

A So that is not my handwriting

Q Do you recognize this as a Davenport form that you reviewed and then later signed?

A Can I see my signature?

Q Sure If we could go to the third-to-last page There we go. If we could zoom in on the bottom there Is that your name and signature?

A Yes, sir

MR. FAULCONER: We would offer Exhibit 448 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Could you tell us what the date is there by your signature?

A December 26th, 2012

Q If we could zoom back out and then go to the first page So is this a form that you filled out to receive those shares of stock in Star Scientific?

A Again, I did not That is not my --

Q I apologize Was this a form that you signed in order to receive the shares of Star Scientific stock?

A Yes, sir, I signed the form.

Q When you were discussing receiving this stock, can you tell us whether your parents said anything about how they had bought it?

A So my understanding was that my grandfather, who had passed away, had left each kid a thousand dollars, and that was invested into the Star Scientific stock.

Q Was there any discussion about having gifted shares of that stock to your sister, Cailin, the prior year?

A I don't remember that

Q Was there any discussion of having purchased and sold the stock at various points in 2011 with your parents?

A I don't remember that conversation.

MR. FAULCONER: One moment, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sure

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q With respect to what you said earlier about the money for the stock having come from your grandfather's estate, who was it that said that?

A My mother

Q And that was in the same conversation that we were talking about?

A The dinner table conversation?

Q Yes

A Yes, sir

Q Was there any conversation at that dinner about taxes or tax consequences as it related to that stock?

A Not that I remember

MR. FAULCONER: Your Honor, I think now I have no further questions

THE COURT: All right

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SMALL:

Q You testified you met Jonnie Williams in the spring of 2011, correct?

A Yes

Q And who did you meet him through?

A So the first time I met Jonnie, he was with my mother and she introduced me to him.

Q Okay And you understood him to be a friend of your mother, correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Now, you said you developed a friendship with Jonnie Tell us what that means to you.

A So after I met Jonnie, we exchanged text messages and phone calls I was really interested, I grew up interested in nutraceuticals and I was health conscious through my mother, but I also had a passion for business and I understood Jonnie to be a successful businessman. So I think that developed into this mentor/mentee relationship He kind of took me under his wing and taught me about business

Q Okay And he also, I take it, invited you to play golf, correct?

A Yes.

Q And who called who? Did he call you or did you call him?

A So the first initial times, Jonnie called me to play golf in the summer of 2011 I was busy with my internship and also preparing to play soccer at UVA, so I declined the offer for the first few times But eventually, we did connect and play golf

Q You were on summer vacation from college, right, at the time?

A Yes

Q And Jonnie Williams called you and invites you to play golf, right?

A Yes, sir

Q And you said no. You couldn't do it

A No, I was busy

Q And he called you again and invited you to play golf, right?

A Yes, sir

Q You said no again.

A Yes

Q That happened a couple times.

A The first couple times, yes.

Q But then you were asked questions about the Homestead event The Homestead event was basically some kind of a political gathering or convention, am I right?

A Yes It was some sort of RGA or PAC convention out at the Homestead

Q And you had been to, I assume, you had been to a few political events before, right?

A Yes, I've grown up around politics, so I've been to quite a few

Q Fair to say that if you are not directly involved, the evenings are interesting but the afternoons are not?

A Yes.

Q Okay So in the afternoon, you met up with Jonnie Williams at the hotel; is that right?

A Yes, sir At the hotel

Q Tell us what happened.

A So as all the political, politically-involved individuals at the Homestead, they had their meetings during the afternoon, and Jonnie approached me and he asked if I wanted to salvage the last few hours of daylight So just him and I went off and played about nine, ten holes of golf until the sun went down, really

Q So you are a college kid?

A Yes.

Q He is a successful businessman. Did that feel strange to you, that he was inviting you to play golf?

A No. Again, because I've grown up around politics, I am used to communicating and interacting with people two to three times my age So it really didn't strike me as strange And furthermore, I was really interested in business, so I wanted to talk to him and learn from him.

Q So the two of,you went out and played nine holes of golf

A Yes

Q What did you talk about?

A Really just current events, small talk, casual talk. We would talk about golf in general Just very social

Q All right And over time, I take it you continued to develop a relationship with Jonnie; is that right?

A Yes, sir

Q Friendship with Jonnie

A Yes A friendship.

Q And did you consider that separate from your mom or your dad's friendship with Jonnie?

A Yes, I really did. As time went on and we communicated through phone calls and texts, I considered it a legitimate friendship outside of whoever my father was, and I viewed him as a mentor

Q You said that you both were interested in nutraceuticals, correct?

A Yes, sir

Q You talked about those issues?

A Yes Just generally It was just more of a background of being health conscious. My mom has always been interested in nutraceuticals and health, so that was a shared common interest

Q You were also both interested in business, right?

A Yes, sir

Q Talked about those issues?

A Yes So during the summer of 2011, I was getting ready to apply for business school at UVA, so we would talk about how that was going, what classes, courses I was taking, just general business

Q And you are in business school now; is that correct?

A Yes, sir, I'm at Duke University School of Business

Q Over time, did you continue to have conversations with Jonnie Williams?

A Yes, sir

Q Did Jonnie Williams ever tell you that his father was helping him with his company?

A Jonnie Williams' father?

Q No, that your father was helping him -- let me rephrase it Forgive me. You are right, I'm wrong Did Jonnie Williams ever tell you that your father was helping him with his company?

A No, sir, never

Q Did he ever say that he had an agreement with your father to promote his company?

A No, sir, never

MR. FAULCONER: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR. SMALL:

Q Did he ever ask you to talk to your parents, either of them, about his company?

A No, sir, never

Q Did Jonnie Williams ever ask you for anything other than to play golf with him?

A No. Nothing other than golf

Q I take it Jonnie Williams offered you a number of different things, right?

A Can you explain "things"?

Q Sure Well, we saw some shirts and some rounds of golf, right?

A Yes

Q You understood he was a wealthy businessman?

A Yes, sir

Q And did he ever say anything about "Gee, you ought to pay for some of this"?

A No, sir

Q And when you went golfing, you knew that Jonnie was going to pay, right?

A Yes, sir

Q Did you ever ask Jonnie Williams to pay for your golf?

A No, sir

Q Did you ever ask Jonnie Williams to pay for a shirt or something?

A No, sir

Q He offered to do those things, right?

A Yes, sir

Q So you said that the golf clubs showed up You used that word. Where did they show up, the golf clubs that Jonnie Williams gave you?

A Yes So again, I remember the phone call I was driving in the car and he said, "There is a present waiting for you at home " Home at that point was the Governor's Mansion. So when I got home, the clubs were in the bag, were just there

Q Let me back up a little bit This was shortly after you and Jonnie played at Homestead?

A Yes, sir This was about five to seven days after the Homestead event

Q So at Homestead, you had your own set of golf clubs, right?

A Yes I was playing with my original set of Ram golf clubs that my father had gotten me seven years prior

Q Wait a minute How old were you at the time, when you were playing at Homestead?

A 2011, I would have been 19

Q So your dad bought you a set of golf clubs when you were 12 or 13?

A Yes, 12 or 13

Q And at Homestead, with Jonnie, the wealthy businessman, you were still playing with those golf clubs, right?

A Yes, the same clubs.

Q Fair to say, I don't know much about golf clubs, they are pretty old and beat up by that point?

A Yes, they were used, and used a lot

Q Did Jonnie notice that or say anything about it?

A I believe he noticed the clubs I was playing with.

Q But did you ever ask Jonnie Williams to buy you a new set of clubs?

A No, sir

Q Did you have any expectation at all that he would do that?

A No, sir

Q And so when you got home and the surprise was there, what did you do?

A I immediately called Jonnie and thanked him many times

Q What did he say?

A He said, "Don't worry about it, you are welcome I can't wait to see you playing with them."

Q And you were asked about whether your father thought the gift was a little excessive And you said that yes, he said something about that, right?

A Yes, my father believed it was excessive

Q Fair to say there was a bit of an argument within the family about those golf clubs?

A Yes So I was clearly excited about the clubs and I thought it was a gift directly to me, and so there was a disagreement between myself and my father And my mother even weighed in on the situation and she sided with me, that I should be able to keep the clubs because it was a gift to me

Q So your mom and you thought you should keep them and your dad thought you ought to give them back

A Yes

Q Who won that argument?

A I won the argument, because I ended up keeping the clubs

Q Okay And Jonnie Williams made some other offers to you as well, did he not?

A Can you be specific?

Q I don't want to get into details, but just quickly, you have sort of a recurring bronchitis, right? Fair enough?

A Yes, I have had recurring upper respiratory infections for many years.

Q And when you were out playing golf with Jonnie, did that come up?

A Yes. We would talk about my bronchitis and he would mention his product, Anatabloc, and how it decreases inflammation and he thought it would be helpful for me to take because it would help calm the inflammation that causes bronchitis

Q And did he offer to provide you with this product, Anatabloc?

A Yes, I believe he just gave me a few capsules

Q Okay And said you could get more? He would get you more?

A I don't remember that specific part, but --

Q Okay Did you in fact start taking Anatabloc?

A Yes, I did start taking Anatabloc

Q And he also offered, am I right, to arrange for you to see a specialist, right?

A Yes In the fall of 2011, after taking Anatabloc, I had another serious case of bronchitis, so he thought that I should go visit a specialist that he knew at Johns Hopkins

Q Okay Did you?

A I did not. By that point I was back at UVA and I was too busy and told him that I didn't think it would work out I was seeing a doctor at UVA, so I did not go see a specialist

Q He also offered to give you an internship; is that right?

A Yes.

Q All right Tell us about that

A So during the summer of 2011, I was interning at a law firm, at Eckert Seamans, and again, Jonnie and I, as we would talk, we would talk about my business interest So he thought it would be a good idea for me the following summer, 2012, to be his apprentice or do an internship with him to some degree So that was the conversation.

Q Okay And what happened?

A So I thought it was a good idea because I'm applying to business school I thought it would look good, be a learning experience for me. I went back and told my father And he said, "Absolutely not," that I had a good internship at Eckert Seamans and he told me if I worked hard it could materialize into an internship the next summer and he didn't think interning or traveling around with Jonnie was a legitimate internship.

Q So what did you do?

A That was the end of the conversation I told Jonnie I didn't think this would materialize, it was not going to work

Q That was another thing Jonnie offered you where you said no, right?

A Yes, sir

Q Just briefly, a couple other things. You recall your family going for a weekend to Smith Mountain Lake?

A Yes I remember Smith Mountain Lake

Q And that was Jonnie's house at Smith Mountain Lake?

A Yes

Q Okay And when you arrived at Smith Mountain Lake, was there a car in the driveway?

A Yes, there was a Ferrari parked in the driveway

Q And tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what happened with that car

A So my understanding was that the car had to be brought back to Richmond for some reason. And we all, all the kids, thought it would be really funny if my dad drove it back, so we pushed him to drive it I personally was scared. He hadn't driven himself in two or three years So it was kind of amusing to see

Q So when you say he hadn't driven himself, every Governor has a protective service, right?

A Yes, sir He had the protective service and then campaigning the last year as Attorney General he wasn't driving, either

Q And the protective service, their job is to take him everywhere he goes, right?

A Yes

Q And in fact, you are aware that they get a little upset if he kind of sneaks off and goes to the ice cream store himself or something

A Yes They don't like that

Q He had a ride back from Smith Mountain Lake, right?

A Yes, he had the EPU

Q Who encouraged him to get in the Ferrari and drive it?

A It was the kids

Q You said previously, I think, that it was kind of a family joke What did you mean by that?

A Yes So again, none of us had seen my dad drive a car in forever, and to be driving a Ferrari, it was amusing to us and we knew it would be fun for him. So it was really quite fun.

Q You were asked some questions about this watch that was a Christmas present Who is it your understanding that the watch came from?

A From my mother

Q Okay And the watch, you said it was -- it said "Rolex" on it; is that right?

A Yes, it was a Rolex.

Q But did it come in a Rolex box? It didn't come in a

Rolex box, did it?

A I don't remember the particular box, but I don't think it was Rolex.,

Q And it didn't have a Rolex certification, did it?

A No.

Q What did you think about the watch?

A So originally, I thought the watch was a fake

Q A fake meaning sort of a knock-off?

A A knock-off Exactly I looked at the watch, and I've seen a Rolex once or twice before, and the second hand on this particular watch ticked instead of rolled, so I thought it was a fake at first That was my first intuition.

Q Is the roll your understanding of why it is called a Rolex?

A That's my understanding

Q And also, do you have -- I gather your parents had been, both parents had quite recently been on some job development, business development trips to the Far East?

A Yes They were in Asia at some places on a job expansion tour

Q Did that contribute to your view that the watch was probably a knock-off?

A Yes It played a part I know the black market, or the black market over there. So I believed, I thought it was just purchased through that

Q You were asked some questions about Christmas of 2012 and the Star Scientific stock. Do you recall there being any particular rush to sign the forms?

A No real rush to sign the forms

Q And the prosecutor asked you if your parents explained what was going on. Who actually explained what was going on?

A My mother told us that we had been given a thousand dollars from my grandfather, her dad, and that it was invested in Star Scientific

Q Did your father, do you recall your father saying anything about this?

A No He was just present, but never talked.

Q So you testified that you thought that Jonnie Williams was a friend and a mentor, correct?

A Yes, I believed him to be a mentor

Q And because of that, because you thought he was a genuine friend and mentor, you thought it was okay to accept gifts from a wealthy friend. Is that fair to say?

A Yeah. I thought it was a personal gift to me from a friend and a mentor

Q In hindsight, can you tell the jury, has your view of that changed?

A Yes

MR. FAULCONER: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: The objection is sustained

BY MR. SMALL:

Q How old were you when your father started in public service?

A I was a month and ten days old.

Q So throughout your life, he has been in public service?

A Yes He has been 22 years or 21, 22 years in public service.

Q And has that put some demands and strain on your family?

A Yes.

Q I take it despite that, your family supported him in his work; is that right?

A Yes We supported him.

Q Why is that?

A We know that my dad loves Virginia and he loves to serve I always remember, one of his favorite Bible verses is "The greatest among us is the servant of all "

MR. FAULCONER: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SMALL: Thank you, Bobby Nothing further

THE COURT: Anything from Ms McDonnell?

A I'm doing well, yourself?

Q Good, thank you. So you just testified that you understood that Mr Williams was your mother's friend; is that correct?

A My mother's friend.

Q And he was also at some point your friend.

A Yes, sir

Q Did you ever, did Mr Williams ever tell you he was hanging out with you to try to get closer to your father?

A No, sir

Q He made you feel like he wanted to hang out with you; is that right?

A Yes

A No, sir

Q Now, you also mentioned that a shared interest that you and Mr Williams had was nutraceuticals, right?

A Yes, sir

Q That's not something you recently got into That's something you have been interested in your whole life; is that right?

A Yes, sir

Q That's because that's something that your mom has been really interested in your whole life

A Yes, sir

Q In fact, would you say that your mom is very passionate about nutraceuticals?

A She is very health conscious

Q Now, when you would spend time with Mr Williams, when you would golf with him, did he ever talk to you about his product, Anatabloc?

A Yes, we would casually talk about Anatabloc

Q And would you say he was enthusiastic about Anatabloc?

A Yes He was enthusiastic

Q Fair to say that Mr Williams was a bit of a salesman?

A Yes, he is a businessman and a salesman.

Q And would he ever tell you about the launch of Anatabloc and how great that was going to be?

A There were conversations about the launch.

Q You also mentioned the strains and demands that your dad's public service has put on your family

A Yes, sir

Q Fair to say that your dad, throughout your life, has been very, very busy?

A Very busy, very hard-working

Q And did that become worse after he became Governor, even busier?

A Yes, even busier

Q Then you mentioned the Rolex that your dad got being a gift from your mom; is that right?

A Yes, sir

Q Did you ever hear your mom say that watch was from Jonnie Williams?

A Not at that time.

Q And with respect to the shares of stock that you got in Christmas, 2012, your mom didn't say anything about disclosure requirements, did she?

A No

MR. HAUSS: One minute, Your Honor Nothing further, Your Honor Thank you.

THE COURT: All right Any redirect?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. FAULCONER:

Q Now, Mr McDonnell, before your testimony here today, did you meet with the defense lawyers in this case, your parents' lawyers?

A Yes, sir

Q About how many times did you meet with them?

A One to two times Three times

Q And did you decline to meet with us before your testimony here today?

A Yes, my counsel advised me to decline.

Q Now, you talked a little bit about your communications with your father About how often would you say that you spoke to him on the phone?

A My father?

Q Yes

A Around that time?

Q Around the time of about 2010 to 2012

A So I was at UVA and we probably talked once or twice a week by phone.

Q Now, you talked also about your interactions with Mr Williams When you interacted with Mr Williams, was it mostly in person or by phone?

A Most of it was -- well, I mean, there was texts and then personal contact So it was varied.

Q When you interacted with him, though, how many times did you meet him in person?

A Possibly around ten.

Q How many times do you remember playing golf with him?

A Five, four or five

Q I just want to make sure we are crystal clear on this The first time you spoke to Jonnie Williams on the phone, who called whom?

A The first time I spoke to Jonnie?

Q Yes

A I don't remember who called who

Q Okay Now, you also talked a little bit, I think Mr Hauss asked you about this, when you were interacting with Jonnie Williams, did he mention his product, Anatabloc?

A Yes, sir

Q Did he specifically mention the launch of the product Anatabloc?

A He vaguely would talk about like when he was -- he was excited for it to hit the markets

Q Now, you also were asked about the trip to Smith Mountain Lake that you took. In addition to driving the Ferrari home, do you recall whether your father drove the Ferrari anywhere else while you were at Smith Mountain Lake?

A I don't believe it was driven anywhere except from the house back to Richmond.

Q And you also talked about the Rolex a little bit on cross-examination. And you talked about your opinions of the Rolex. To be clear, your father never said anything about thinking the Rolex was fake in your presence, did he?

A Not in my presence.

MR. FAULCONER: One moment, Your Honor No further questions, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Government, call your next witness

MR DRY: The government calls Mark Sykes to the stand

MARK SYKES,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR DRY:

Q Good afternoon, Major Sykes

A Good afternoon, sir

Q Can you please state your full name for the record?

A Yes Mark Jeffrey Sykes S-Y-K-E-S

Q And where do you work, sir?

A Division of Capitol Police

Q And how long have you worked for the Capitol Police?

A Two years

Q And your rank is major?

A Correct

Q And what's your title?

A Assistant Chief of Police

Q And how many people do you supervise, sir?

A We have 73 sworn officers, 14 -- 31 wage and 14 civilian, for a total of about 118 people

Q And can you briefly describe what the Capitol Police does?

A Capitol Police provides law enforcement and -- police law enforcement security services for the Capitol complex and area, state buildings, parking facilities We also, our jurisdiction, extends out to the Science Museum of Virginia, which is a state property, also as well as the War Memorial

Q And does that jurisdiction go over the Patrick Henry Building?

A It does, sir

Q And can you briefly describe what the Patrick Henry Building is?

A The Patrick Henry Building is one of the government facilities It houses the office of the Governor and most of the individuals who are on the Governor's staff, cabinet officials, folks of that nature

Q And does the jurisdiction of the Capitol Police also include the Executive Mansion?

A It does

MR DRY: I'd like to bring up Government's Exhibit 551 for identification, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Have you had an opportunity to review this document before?

A I have

Q And what is it, sir?

A This is the site plan, area plan for the Capitol area

MR DRY: I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 551 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, zooming in on the Capitol Square portion -- right there, Mr Starnes, thank you -- can you point out on the screen where the Executive Mansion is?

A Yes, sir It would be here

Q Okay And how many entrances are there for the Executive Mansion?

A There are three primary entrances, a main gate, a north gate and a south gate to that facility

Q And do you see a building, the Patrick Henry Building you were talking about before?

A Yes, sir, I do

Q Can you point on the screen where that building is?

A Okay

Q And is that commonly referred to as the PHB?

A Correct

Q And how far away, approximately, are those two buildings?

A Approximately 100 yards

Q And is there a private way to get from the Patrick Henry Building to the Executive Mansion?

A There is

Q And what is that?

A A set of tunnels

Q And who's allowed to use those?

A Executive Protection, the Governor, and his staff

Q Okay And as part of your duties, do you oversee the officers who provide security to both the Patrick Henry Building and the Executive Mansion?

A Yes, sir

Q I'd like to -- you can take that down, Mr Starnes

Bring up Government's Exhibit 531, please

And do you recognize this photo, sir?

A I do

Q What is it?

A That's a photograph of the Executive Mansion, also referred to commonly as the Governor's Mansion

MR DRY: I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 531 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, what are we looking at here? You described three entrances What are we looking at here?

A Yes, sir This would be the entrance I described as the main gate That's the main entrance off North Drive, leading into the front entrance of the Mansion To the left of this photo, which would be in the northerly direction, you'd have the north gate, and that gate is essentially between the Patrick Henry Building -- the exterior of the Governor's Mansion Complex and the Patrick Henry Building To the south or to the right of this photo as you move down, there's a slight grade on the hill There's a carriage house or a cottage, Mansion cottage, and there's a south gate that allows you access into and out of the facility from that point as well

Q And where -- which gate do most visitors come through?

A Most visitors would come through the main gate, the gate that's depicted here

Q Okay And are there records kept of when visitors come to the Executive Mansion?

A There are

Q And I'd like to now hand the witness Government's Exhibit 110, 125, 186, 287, and 290

Have you had an opportunity to review these records before your testimony here today, sir?

A Yes, sir, I did

Q And what are those records?

A These are daily guest logs for the Executive Mansion

Q And are these visitors' logs kept in the course of the regularly conducted activity of the Capitol Police?

A Yes, sir, they are

Q And who actually fills out the information on the logs?

A The officer on duty

MR DRY: At this time the government would like to admit Government's Exhibit 110, 125, 186, 287, and 290

THE COURT: They'll be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, the Capitol Police were served with a federal grand jury subpoena for these records, sir?

A Yes, they were

Q And were you personally involved in trying to respond to that grand jury subpoena?

A Yes, I was

Q And can you tell the members of the jury what the process was that was involved?

A I have a records coordinator that I went to and asked her to collect and assemble all the records and documents we had to comply with the federal grand jury subpoena for the time in question, time period in question

Q And were you able to find each and every daily log for the visitors' logs to the Mansion that were requested in the grand jury subpoena?

A No, sir, we were not, but we found quite a few of those

Q Okay And can you just briefly give an overview of the ones that you weren't able to find, as far as date wise?

A I can In 2010, I think there were eight months that we could not locate And I want to say the -- my recollection was the latter two months of the -- that year were what we did have

There were also a segment of those records I think from 2011, January, I believe March and April, that were missing from 2011 And I think there may have been one month or portion of a month from 2012 But we had everything else

Q Now, is it fair to say you guys went through the records multiple times trying to find these?

A Yes, sir I can assure you we did

Q Okay But the five logs that I've admitted into evidence there, those were among the records that you did find?

A Yes, sir That's correct

MR DRY: Let's bring up Government's Exhibit 110 as an example

BY MR DRY:

Q What is the date of this particular Mansion log?

A This is May 2nd, 2011

Q And in the left-hand corner, it says "Shift #1 OIC: Sergeant Bassett " What does that mean?

A That would be the shift, the particular shift sergeant, our officer in command of that particular shift So that sergeant is in charge of that particular shift

Q And then to the right of that it's got Officer Brackett and Robinson, what does that mean?

A Those were the two officers who would have been on duty that day

Q For that shift?

A For that shift, correct

Q And tell the members of the jury which shift -- what does Shift #1 mean?

A Shift #1, we have a midnight shift And that's why you see two officers' names there Midnight shift runs from 12 midnight until 8 a m And at that point we have one officer positioned at the Mansion gate and a second officer inside the Mansion in the Executive Protection Office

Q And then Shift #2?

A Shift #2 is day shift That essentially runs from 8 a m until 4 p m We have one officer at that point because the Virginia State Police Executive Protection are on duty during day shift So we have one officer That officer is positioned at -- outside at the Mansion gate

Q And then Shift #3?

A Shift #3 is from 4 until midnight And once again, that would be one officer positioned at the Mansion gate

Q And so just so we're clear, during the day, EPU officers assist and protect in the Mansion Is that fair?

A Correct

Q How many days off does Capitol Police take from protecting the Mansion?

A We are not off It's a 365-day-a-year operation, 7 days a week

Q On this particular log, do you see an entry in the "Time In" column for 7:50, since we're up there?

A Yes, sir

Q And whose -- whose name is next to that?

A Mary-Shea

Q And in the "Organization/Guest" column, what does it say there?

A Mansion staff

Q Can you -- can you tell the members of the jury, who's required or who's supposed to sign in on the visitor logs?

A Anyone other than VSP, Executive Protection Unit, First Family, Capitol Police, and visitors who would come for major events Tax Tribute would be an example of one such event

The other folks are an approved personnel list, to include Mansion staff and so forth But everyone else, with the exception of those three primary groups, are to be signed in or to be logged in

Q Now, if you're on this approved list, are you still supposed to sign in?

A Yes, sir, you do

Q Do you see, on this particular log, going down at 9:24, do you see a name listed there under the "Time In" column or -- or the "Name" column for 9:24?

A Yes, sir

Q And who is that?

A John Williams

Q Okay And in the "Organization/Guest" of, what's listed there?

A 102

Q And who does 102 refer to?

A 102 is the call sign we use for the First Lady

Q Okay And does anyone else have a numerical identifier?

A They do Each member of the family would have a distinct call sign

Q And for the Governor, what's his call sign?

A 101

Q Going back now to Government's Exhibit 531 You've previously testified that most visitors come through the front gate right here, right?

A Yes, sir

Q Is it possible for someone to get into the Executive Mansion without signing in to the visitors' log?

A Yes, sir

Q Can you describe when that would typically happen?

A There could be an occasion where a member of the First Family or someone on staff would say we're coming in through the north gate That person or family member may have someone else in the car We would not necessarily go over and look in the car to see who else would be in there, sir

Q Fair enough

Thank you very much, sir

A Yes, sir

THE COURT: Any questions, Mr McDonnell?

MR BROWNLEE: Nothing, Your Honor Thank you

THE COURT: Anything?

MR BURCK: No, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Thank you, Major You may stand down

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor

(Witness stood aside)

THE COURT: Call your next witness, please

MR DRY: The United States calls Jonnie Williams to the stand

JONNIE RAY WILLIAMS, SR.,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, can you please state your full name for the court reporter?

A My name is Jonnie Ray Williams

Q And, sir, how do you spell your name?

A It's spelled -- first name is spelled Jonnie, J-O-N-N-I-E, R-A-Y, Williams

Q And are you senior or junior?

A I'm senior

Q Okay Were you one of the founders of a company named Star Scientific?

A I was

Q And when you founded Star Scientific, what type of business were you founding?

A What type of business was it?

Q Yes What type of --

A It was a tobacco business

Q And specifically, what type of tobacco business? What were you doing?

A I had the -- I bought the old Brown & Williamson cigarette facility in Petersburg, Virginia, and we manufactured cigarettes and we manufactured cigars for Swisher Sweets

Q And at some point did your tobacco company have -- kind of transition of trying to find healthier ways of curing tobacco?

A Yes

Q Can you briefly describe that?

A I came from health care, and I ended up with the cigarette factory And the first thing was to get it into the black, making money, and I did that and the company was doing very well

And then I set out believing that -- you know, understanding that the cigarettes are a problem, and I set out to see if I could make them less toxic, make them no more harmful than they had to be

Q And eventually, did you patent a way of doing that?

A I did that I did do that

Q But at some point did Star Scientific's focus change from tobacco to what's been called a nutraceutical?

A Yes

Q And kind of describe how that happened

A Well, as we left the cigarette business, I discovered a way to remove the -- prevent the tobacco-specific nitrosamines -- which is the strongest, most abundant carcinogens in tobacco -- from forming

One of the major tobacco companies came in, British American Tobacco, as a partner, and -- through their Brown & Williamson subsidiary And so that was moving along, and then one of the other companies in the industry started to copy what Brown & Williamson was doing; R J Reynolds And we litigated the case against R J Reynolds, and we lost the case on infringement All the patents were upheld, but we lost on the infringement side, and then we ultimately settled the case

But once that had happened, I had taken the company from a very profitable cigarette business into this area of trying to make it less harmful tobacco And then my partner, Brown & Williamson, was purchased by R J Reynolds Tobacco Company that I was litigating with So it made it a little difficult

But through the process of discovering and figuring out how to block the nitrosamines from forming, what I was looking for was why can't people just quit smoking, why can't they -- you can go down to the drugstore and buy all the nicotine you want, and the quitting rate is 4 or 5 percent at the end of the year There must be something else in there And that led me to identifying the compound in tobacco that I believe is not only responsible for people smoking, but I believe it's responsible for -- is the explanation was the key for why people that smoke aren't developing these autoimmune diseases like thyroid disease, Parkinson's disease that have been studied in hundreds of thousands of patients

Q So is it fair to say that when you were working on this product, you identified something called Anatabine?

A I did

Q And you believed that that would reduce inflammation diseases in the human body Is that true?

A I did I tested it for that, and that's -- that was the result

Q Well, let's go back What -- Star Scientific, in 2009, what was your title with Star Scientific?

A CEO, chair -- CEO of the company

Q And how much were you paid in salary as CEO?

A Base salary was a million dollars a year

Q And in 2009 was Star Scientific a profitable company?

A No, not at that point I had taken it into a biotech area

Q And what were your duties as the CEO of Star Scientific?

A Well, when you're -- when you're in a biotech area, you're trying to develop a technology that's going to change things The number one rule in business is to stay in business So what I did was I covered Wall Street and the investment community from several prior deals that I had, companies that I was a founder or co-founder of that were very successful So my access to capital was very good

And so I would routinely meet with investors, meet with the investment community to keep a base of support underneath of what I was doing to support this going forward Because when you start doing this, when you -- when you're not funding it from operating cash flow and you're relying on investment capital, new investment capital to come into the company while you complete whatever it is until you reach the point of commercialization, your access to capital is very important

Q Were you the owner of a company named Starwood Aviation?

A Yes

Q And what's Starwood Aviation?

A Starwood Aviation is a company that just houses the airplane

Q And when you say "the airplane," what type of airplane?

A Learjet

Q And ultimately, whose jet is that?

A Mine

Q Okay And what type of things did you use the jet for?

A Raising capital, product development I move around a lot It's a small infrastructure in the company, and I'm busy and I move around from place to place a lot

Q And when you're using the jet for company business, do those flights come out of your pocket or who pays for them ultimately?

A No The company reimburses me for the business trips

Q And if they are just personal trips, who pays for them?

A I pay for them

Q Did you occasionally lend your -- your jet to Virginia politicians to use?

A I did

Q And why would you let Virginia politicians use your jet?

A I think it's become common practice here in Virginia and know other people that have jets here in Virginia, and you allow the politicians to use the airplanes because if you're a Virginia company, you want to make sure that you have access to these people, and the airplane -- the airplane accomplishes that

Q Well, and to be clear, what type of politicians are you loaning your jet out? Are they Republican, Democrat, a mix?

A I'd say mine is on the Republican side

Q And beginning in March of 2009, did you start lending your jet to Mr McDonnell during his campaign for Governor?

A The first time Governor McDonnell used my airplane, I was coming into Richmond, and someone had contacted my secretary and said they need to use the jet to go to Roanoke, Virginia, I believe And I said okay, I'm coming in at this -- this time and they can take it and go to Roanoke with it And I met the Governor on the tarmac as I was walking into the FBO

Q Now, in March of 2009, was he the Governor?

A No

Q Okay So had you ever met Mr McDonnell before this March of 2009?

A I don't recall ever meeting him

Q During Mr McDonnell's campaign for Governor, do you know how many times you -- you met him?

A Three times, two times

Q Okay And how would you -- how would you characterize your relationship with the Governor prior to him becoming Governor, Mr McDonnell?

A He's -- he's -- he's a politician and I'm a businessman

Q Okay Now, after the election in November of 2009, after he's actually elected but before he goes into office, did you ask to meet with him?

A Yes

Q And where was this meeting going to occur?

A At the Four Seasons Hotel in New York

Q Okay Why did you want to meet the Governor?

A To develop a relationship with him

Q A personal relationship?

A No A business relationship

Q And did the meeting actually occur at the Four Seasons?

A It did

Q And that was in New York?

A Yes

Q Who was present during this meeting?

A The Governor's wife; several of the aids; one of the aids, Adam Zubowsky; another gentleman by the name of Phil Cox; and a friend of mine by the name of Brad Kroenig

Q And -- now, Kroenig was your personal friend, right?

A I invited him to come to dinner

Q Okay And who is he?

A Brad lives in New York

Q And what's his occupation?

A Brad is a model, a professional model

Q Now, had you ever met Ms McDonnell before this meeting?

A I don't think so

Q Okay Now, during -- kind of place this Where does this meeting occur in the Four Seasons?

A Physically?

Q Yeah I mean, just kind of set the stage for where this meeting is at

A In the lobby of the Four Seasons on 57th Street, when you walk in, it's a grand lobby And off to the right is not a formal restaurant, but a -- a restaurant that's available, you know, to have light lunch -- to have lunch, to have breakfast and dinner, light dinners

Q And how long do you think you spoke to the Governor and Ms McDonnell at this? Was it a three-hour thing or --

A No, no They were going to -- they were going to a Christmas show in New York, a Broadway Christmas show So I'm going to say I was there with the Governor and his wife for, at the most, an hour

Q Okay And generally, what was the topics of discussion? Are you pitching anything or what are you --

A No In that environment, I don't have -- it's not an environment to be trying to sell the Governor anything or pitch anything to him I'm just trying to -- I'm just trying to establish a relationship with him and it happens to be in a nice environment

Q And during this -- this conversation, did the subject of Ms McDonnell's inauguration dress come up?

A It did, yes

Q And just walk me through what happened

A When I introduced my friend, Brad Kroenig, he is -- as a male model, he's in the fashion industry She was very interested in that And she said, you know, "I have a problem with" -- "I've got to come up with a dress to wear for the inauguration " And so she mentioned to Brad, you know, "Do you know anyone in" -- "with you being in the fashion industry, that could help me, you know, with a dress?"

And Brad turned it to me and said, "One of Jonnie's good friends, his daughter is the goddaughter of Oscar de la Renta " And so that sort of put it back with me

Q And then what happened?

A I told her that I would help her -- I'd help her get a dress for the inauguration

Q And what kind of dress were you offering to help get her?

A I didn't know at that point what the dress needed to be like, but a nice dress for the inauguration

Q And when you said offered to help her, were you offering to pay or offered to find or how did that work?

A Well, at that point I was hoping that -- through my friend that, you know, maybe from one of these shows or whatever, maybe Oscar de la Renta, as close as my friend is with him, that they would let her borrow one for the inauguration

Q But did you learn whether that was going to be possible or not?

A I found out that that wasn't an option

Q Now, when you were having this conversation with Ms McDonnell, is Mr McDonnell present?

Q Seated to her left And does she say anything to Mr McDonnell about the dress?

A She did

Q What did she say?

A She said, "This is great Jonnie is going to help me get a dress for the inauguration "

Q Now, did you subsequently -- you said that you found out that you couldn't get a loaner dress and you were going to have to buy it?

A Right

Q Did -- did you have conversations with Ms McDonnell about that?

A I did

Q Describe those

A I told her I needed to get a date when she could come to New York as soon as possible so that we could go to Oscar de la Renta so that she could be fitted for the dress to have it in time for the inauguration

Q Did you ultimately buy Ms McDonnell's inauguration dress?

A I did not

Q Why not?

A When I received a phone call from a lawyer at the Governor's office saying that, you know, "I understand that you're getting ready to purchase Ms McDonnell a dress for the inauguration I'm calling to let you know that you can't do that "

And I said, "Thank you very much "

Q Okay And do you remember, was that lawyer's name Jason Eige?

A Yes

Q Did you have a subsequent conversation with Ms McDonnell about not purchasing her the dress?

A I did

Q And what was discussed then?

A She wasn't happy about it She was disappointed, and she indicated that she had been told that the dress for the -- an inauguration dress -- it was actually two things It was, one, a fancy dress like this would look bad in this economy to be wearing at the inauguration And secondly, the dress would have to be given away, the inauguration dress, if I purchased the dress, and she said she would just take a rain check

Q Did she use those words?

A Yes

Q Now, in October of 2010, did you fly back from California with Mr McDonnell on your private jet?

A Yes

Q How did that come about?

A Someone on his staff contacted my assistant and said that they -- they really needed to use the airplane to go to California

Q So did you agree to that request?

A I agreed to that request and allowed them to use the airplane

Q And did you fly out there with the airplane or how did you get on board?

A I took a commercial flight

Q Okay So you took a commercial flight to where?

A To San Francisco And then I had the plane come pick me up from Sacramento to San Francisco to pick me up so that I could spend time with the Governor to explain to him what I was -- you know, what our business -- what I was trying to accomplish

Q All right Just so I'm clear, so your jet flies from Richmond to California, and where do you fly from commercial to Sacramento?

A I don't remember whether I left out of Richmond or Florida or where I left out of, but I took a commercial flight to intercept that trip

Q Okay And why -- why did you want to be on board your aircraft for the flight back from California to Richmond with the Governor?

A I figured that would give me five or six hours with the Governor to explain to him what I had discovered here in Virginia and to explain to him that I needed his help and -- in moving this forward

Q And during this five or six hours with the Governor, what did you tell him?

A Well, what I did was I explained to him how I discovered it I gave him a basic education on the -- on smoking, the diseases that don't happen with smokers and just tried to make sure he understood, you know, what I had discovered in this tobacco plant and that I was going to -- what I needed from him was that I needed testing and I wanted to have this done in Virginia And I did ask him -- I told -- I asked him, "Would you connect me with the person in Virginia in your administration so that I can move this forward" --

Q And --

A -- after I finished explaining, you know, how Anatabine works and the properties of it

Q So you said that you mentioned testing Did you talk about -- and the testing that you wanted was where?

A In Virginia He thought -- we both agreed, he agreed, that the independent testing in Virginia was a good idea

Q But he -- he didn't agree in any way to -- he didn't guarantee you, yeah, I'm going to get you the testing or anything else like that What did he actually agree to do for you in that flight?

A He agreed to help me find -- he agreed to introduce me to the person that I needed to talk to

Q And did he tell you who that was?
A Dr Hazel
Q And who is Dr Hazel?
A Dr Hazel is an orthopaedic surgeon that's in charge of Virginia's equivalent of HHS, health and human services
Q Now, we talked about the trip to New York City in November of 2009, and then we just went over this flight in October of 2010 Both of those are interactions with the Governor In between then, how often did you meet the Governor?
A I don't recall meeting -- I don't recall, unless there's a paper or some sort of record that says that I met with him I don't recall
Q Let's do it this way During that time frame, how would you describe your relationship with the Governor?
A He was busy doing his business I was busy doing mine
Q Okay Did you actually get a meeting with Dr Hazel in November of 2010?
A I did
Q Where did you meet Dr Hazel?
A At the Patrick Henry Building
Q And what was the purpose of the meeting with Dr Hazel?

A To explain to Dr Hazel what I had discovered And I explained to him that I was early with this and I was trying to set it up to where ultimately this compound that I discovered, which was an anti-inflammatory, that was very potent, that appeared to have -- look like a vitamin from a safety profile, and I was doing the work and working with medical researchers and physicians at Johns Hopkins to try to demonstrate -- try to develop this into a product that could be ultimately shown to lower the health care cost in Virginia

Q And did you mention to Dr Hazel anything about your wife Celeste's experience with Anatabine at the meeting?

A I did

Q And briefly, what was that about?

A I shared with him the experience of what happened with my wife when she developed Hashimoto's thyroiditis

Q And your wife had this condition?

A She did She developed thyroid disease, and it accelerated to the point where the nodules became atypical And when the endocrinology -- endocrinologist at VCU Medical School said that she needed surgery, then I contacted the chief of endocrinology at Johns Hopkins And I took her there, Dr Paul Ladenson Dr Paul Ladenson did -- conducted a full examination of my wife He's a thyroid expert, and he agreed that her thyroid was going into cancer It was too high of a risk with the mortality associated with that and her thyroid needed to be removed

And while I was there with Dr Ladenson and my wife in his office, I asked Dr Ladenson, I said, "Have you ever conducted any studies with smokers and Hashimoto's thyroiditis?"

And he said, "Why would you ask that?"

And I said, "I'm curious "

He said, "The only study that I know of that's ever been done was done here, and smokers generally don't get thyroid disease "

So I asked him, I said, "Before you do the surgery, can you give me" -- "can you give me 60 days so I can try something to stop it?"

And --

Q And that was Anatabine that you were going to try?

A I took Anatabine I took it at a level of what smokeless tobacco people using chewing tobacco and various varieties of that That was the only guideline I had for the level of Anatabine

And I made them into a form of a Tic Tac for my wife, and I asked her to take these right up until the time that we showed up for surgery at Johns Hopkins and before the surgeons

Before she was going into surgery, I insisted that they do a sonogram or a test once more to check the thyroid disease And they came back in maybe an hour with her, and this thoracic surgeon contacted Dr Ladenson over at endocrinology and said, "Ms Williams is no longer a candidate for surgery "

Q Is it fair to say that this -- your wife's experience made you enthusiastic about this idea?

A Very enthusiastic

Q But, sir, first of all, you're not a scientist, you're not a doctor, right?

A I am not a scientist I am not a doctor

Q Okay And when you first say this to Dr Ladenson about, "Hey, can you give me 60 days," what's his kind of reaction to your idea?

A "Jonnie, I get a lot of" -- "I get a lot of quirky relatives that suggest things" --

Q Okay But --

A -- "but I'll give you" -- "I'll give you like 60 days to try this "

Q All right But when you're telling Dr Hazel about your wife's experience and about the product and your beliefs, what's his reaction?

A It's interesting

Q But did you feel like he was as enthusiastic as you were?

A No

Q Okay And at this point did you have any human studies, human trials that you could point to to say, yes, this is effective for X, Y and Z?

A No I was there to start the dialogue and let him know what it was that I had discovered and what it -- what I hoped the testing would demonstrate

Q As you left there, did you get any commitments from Dr Hazel regarding what he was going to do to help you?

A No I invited Dr Hazel to come to the Roskamp Institute, which was conducting testing

Q Let's talk about that Just briefly describe what the Roskamp Institute is

A It's a private research institute, funded by a philanthropist, Bob Roskamp, that -- in Sarasota, Florida And he brought in a group of maybe 100 researchers on his own privately to try to address Alzheimer's

Q And did Star Scientific and the Roskamp Institute, did they have any financial relationship?

A I don't believe with the institute itself, but with an arm of the institute that is engaged in commercial activity

Q Okay So that's a financial relationship that benefits Roskamp?

A It does

Q Okay Did Dr Hazel agree to go to the Roskamp Institute?

A I believe he did I'm confident that he agreed I just don't remember exactly how that went to the next step

Q Okay

A He said he was -- he was interested in going

Q And why did you invite Dr Hazel to the Roskamp Institute?

A Well, Dr Hazel is a physician He's a key person -- he is the key person that I know at this point in the administration And with him being a physician, I felt like if he sees the test results and he sees the work that's going on, maybe he would understand better than someone like me, that's not a doctor or a scientist, trying to explain this discovery that I had

Q Did you ultimately schedule a flight for him -- for Dr Hazel to go down to the Roskamp Institute?

A I did

Q And did he actually go?

A No

Q What happened?

A Somewhere through that period, he said that he wouldn't be able to attend

Q And what was your reaction to him not going down?

A Disappointed

Q Now, I want to move to February of 2011 Did Star Scientific have an event in February of 2011 for a product called CigRx?

A Yes

Q And what was the purpose of that event?

A CigRx used this Anatabine, and unlike using it as an anti-inflammatory to try to help people with a particular problem, I believed that the anti-inflammatory contributed to why people were smoking And so we developed a product called CigRx as a dietary supplement, hoping that smokers would find that Anatabine that they're used to that makes them feel good in tobacco in this product

And so what we had done is I had engaged a -- a national health group with a test market in Richmond where we had a field sales force to contact physicians and health care professionals in the Richmond area and bring them together at The Jefferson Hotel so I could bring in our medical director, who's a former chief of anesthetics and addictive substances at the FDA

And so I wanted him to be able to explain to the Richmond health care community what we had discovered in this new product that we were making available in the stores and the drug stores and to them to assist smokers

Q And just for clarity sake, the compound you're talking about is Anatabine; is that correct?

A It is It's Anatabine

Q And then you have a product that you're promoting in February of 2011 called CigRx?

A CigRx

Q And Anatabine is in CigRx?

A Yes

Q And then later on you have a product with Anatabloc?

A With an increased level of Anatabine for a different purpose

Q Okay And the cigarette's purpose is the smoking cessation?

A It's an alternative to smoking We would like to think -- smoking cessation is actually a drug claim at the FDA

Q Okay

A So we --

Q An alternative --

A -- wanted to avoid any problems with that, but we believe that this is the active ingredient in tobacco, aside from nicotine, and that this could be helpful to smokers as an alternative not to use cigarettes

Q Okay And Anatabloc, that has a higher dosage, but that is for anti-inflammatory?

A It's an anti-inflammatory Chronic -- autoimmune diseases -- the underlying cause of an autoimmune disease is chronic inflammation that eventually --

Q Okay I want to stop you there

All right So going back to the CigRx event at The Jefferson Hotel, I just want to make sure I understand You've got this doctor that's going to talk to other doctors and trying to explain CigRx, correct?

A Correct

Q And the goal of doing that is to get these other doctors to do what?

A To recommend the product to their patients

Q Okay And did Mr and Ms McDonnell attend the CigRx event?

A At the end of it, that evening

Q Okay And how did that come about?

A From having met the aid to the Governor, Adam Zubowsky, I contacted Adam and asked him could they stop by

Q Okay

A And he text me back and he said, "Let me know when you need" -- "what time you're going to be finished so we can come by towards the end "

Q And when did you contact -- did you know that Adam Zubowsky is the body man for the Governor, the aid?

A The aid, yes

Q The traveling aid?

A Yes

Q When did you contact him in reference to when the Governor showed up, how far in advance? Just ballpark me

A Well, I think I contacted him that afternoon and alerted him to the event

Q Okay

A And then I -- my recollection is that he responded to me and said, "Let me know what time and then" -- maybe 30 minutes, 30, 40 minutes

Q And why did you want the Governor and First Lady to stop by your event?

A Well, I had Richmond physicians and health care professionals in the room, and I thought the credibility of the Governor towards letting them know that our company was important, this discovery was important would be very helpful to our company

Q And did Mr McDonnell make any remarks at this event?

A Yes

Q And briefly, just -- were they really long remarks or just brief remarks?

A Those remarks were related to, I think it's important that we have companies in Virginia with this entrepreneurial in pursuing ventures like this This is sort of the backbone of Virginia, or companies that are pursuing technology like this, and, you know, we're proud to be supportive of this company

Q As of this event, had you socialized with the Governor or Ms McDonnell in February of 2011 when they showed up at this or is this more the donor relationship?

A I have had no -- I have not socialized with them

Q Okay Now, did you see Mr and Ms McDonnell again in April of 2011 in New York?

A Yes

Q And, in fact, did Ms McDonnell contact you about going up to New York?

A That's correct

Q Tell the -- tell the jury about that

A She contacted me and said, "We can go to New York now Can you come up for this event at the Union League Club and I'll have you seated with the Governor and we can go shopping now "

And I said, "Are you sure that's okay?"

She goes, "It's okay It's okay now "

Q And what type of event was this Union League Club event?

A It was a typical political rally The people in that audience were investment banking groups in New York that were interested in the Republican agenda, and the Governor represented that

Q Now, did you agree to take Ms McDonnell shopping in New York City?

A I did

Q And who was present during this shopping trip?

A Ms McDonnell, her Chief of Staff Mary-Shea, and myself

Q Were there EPU officers nearby?

A One from New York One from Virginia

Q And where were they at?

A They drove the car

Q Okay And what stores did you go to in New York City?

A We had lunch at Bergdorf Goodman, a department store on Central Park And after lunch, I had made an appointment with -- I don't know how you would describe it -- a designer or a fitter at Oscar de la Renta, through my friend, to show her some dresses And so that's the first place we went to

Q And where did you go after that?

A Louis Vuitton on 5th Avenue

Q Okay And then where did you go after that?

A She wanted to go back to Bergdorf Goodman

Q And kind of walk us through what's happening in each of these stores I mean, when you went there, was it to purchase one dress or what was going on?

A She needed two dresses She needed one for the anniversary, and she needed one for the upcoming wedding with her daughter --

Q Okay

A -- or wedding reception I'm not sure

Q Okay When you say "anniversary," whose anniversary?

A Hers and the Governor's

Q Okay So you go there for two dresses, correct? And --

A I'm not sure if it was two -- you know, this went on for hours I'm not sure if there were two dresses at Oscar de la Renta or what -- two dresses at Bergdorf Goodman I'm not -- I don't know the number of dresses from what stores

Q All right But ultimately, were only two dresses purchased through the whole shopping trip or were more --

A No There were more things

Q Okay Kind of describe what was bought

A At Oscar de la Renta, there was at least one dress, maybe two, a white leather coat, a full-length white leather coat At Louis Vuitton, shoes, a purse, a raincoat And at Bergdorf Goodman, at least one dress And that dress was tailored and it didn't work So I called back to the store and purchased another one and had it sent to the Governor's Mansion

Q Okay And what was Ms McDonnell's demeanor during the shopping?

A I'd say she was happy

Q Okay Is Mary-Shea there, I think you said?

A She is

Q And did you buy anything for Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A I did

Q And tell the jury how that came about

A Well, after Oscar de la Renta and Louis Vuitton, we went back to Bergdorf Goodman a few hours later And I'm sitting in the designer dress department at Bergdorf Goodman and I'm sitting on an ottoman while Ms McDonnell is trying on dresses Mary-Shea is sitting there And we're sitting there for a while, and I said, "Mary-Shea, you may as well try" -- "try a dress on "

Q Okay And did she ultimately get a dress?

A She did

Q Total how much, approximately, did you spend on Ms McDonnell during the shopping trip?

A $20,000 or so

Q And Mary-Shea Sutherland got how many items?

A One

Q And that was one dress?

A Yes

Q That was approximately $1,600?

A I don't recall exactly how much it was

Q Okay Did you go to the Union League Club event later that night?

A I did

Q And who did you sit next to at the event?

A I sat with the Governor and his wife

Q Okay Now, I want to fast-forward to the end of that month Did you go to dinner at the Governor's Mansion on April 29th of 2011?

A I did

Q And how did that come about?

A Maureen McDonnell invited my wife and I to attend dinner with her and her husband at the Governor's Mansion upstairs in the private residence

Q And did you buy Ms McDonnell anything as a hostess gift for the dinner?

A I did

Q And tell the members of the jury how that came about

A Well, I didn't know what to get I told my wife about what had happened in New York

Q What do you mean "what had happened in New York"?

A That, you know, I had purchased these things for her in New York

Q That you had purchased what?

A In particular, a purse in New York And she said, "Well, let's go over to Stony Point, if you can remember what it looked like, and get a wallet to go with the purse "

Q What store in Stony Point?

A Louis Vuitton

Q Okay Just so I'm clear, so your wife suggests that you go to Louis Vuitton to pick out a matching wallet?

A Yes

Q Okay Did you do that?

A I did

Q And you show up at the Governor's Mansion Who are you having dinner with at the Governor's Mansion?

A The Governor and his wife

Q Okay And did you meet any of the Governor's children during this dinner?

A I did

Q Who?

A Rachel, his daughter that was going to school, came by, and Cailin, his other daughter that was getting married

Q And how long were these interactions with the kids?

A The Governor talked to Rachel for a couple minutes, standing there She was standing there And Cailin, maybe a couple minutes or -- I just don't -- it was brief

Q It was brief But you don't know specifically? You couldn't tell us 5 minutes, 10 minutes, 15 minutes, right?

A I can't tell you that I can tell you that it wasn't over five minutes

Q Okay What did you discuss during dinner with Mr and Ms McDonnell?

A Anatabloc that contains Anatabine

Q Okay And was your wife discussing it as well?

A Yes

Q And what was she saying about --

A She was -- she heard me pitching this, or selling this to the Governor, and I think she decided on her own just to explain to the Governor what had happened with her experience And he listened very well He listened closely to what she had to say

Q And during this, are you bringing up the studies again?

A I am

Q Before -- before your meeting with Cailin McDonnell and Rachel McDonnell, had you ever met them before?

A I don't recall ever meeting them

Q Okay

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 110? I believe that's been introduced into evidence already

BY MR DRY:

Q You've seen this document before, sir?

A I have

MR DRY: And can we blow up where his name is? Yeah, right at the 9:24 part

BY MR DRY:

Q That's your name on the Mansion log?

A Yes, it is

Q And that reflects that you came to the Mansion at 9:24 and left at 11:25, right?

A This is on the date of the dinner?

Q No, no, no, sir

A This is a different one?

Q I'm sorry Let's go up

A Okay

Q Upper right-hand corner

A Yes

Q Do you see the date of May 2nd, 2011?

A I do

Q And you see where you arrive at 9:24 and 11:25?

A I do

Q Did you actually meet with Ms McDonnell on that date --

A I did

Q -- at the Mansion?

A I did

Q How did that come about?

A She contacted me and asked me if I would come see her

Q And who was present during this meeting?

A Her and myself

Q Did you know what the purpose of the meeting was going into the meeting?

A She wanted to talk about Anatabloc

Q Okay And then while you're at the meeting, what happens?

A Maureen McDonnell was explaining to me hers and the Governor's financial situation, that they were -- that they were in financial trouble

Q And did she describe how much financial trouble she was -- they were in?

A She said her and her husband were discussing filing bankruptcy, but he thought it was a bad idea And she told me that they had a loan with a physician in Virginia Beach that was a high interest loan, short term, and she explained to me that the real estate at Virginia Beach, with the economy, was not renting and covering the payments and that they were basically in trouble

Q And did she mention who the high interest rate loan was from?

A A doctor in -- she may have said the name I don't -- I don't think she said the name, but some doctor in the Virginia Beach area that they knew

Q Did the subject of credit card debt come up?

A Yes

Q What was said about that?

A She said their credit cards are -- were basically tapped out and they were high, and -- and she -- she became very emotional at this point

Q And what did she -- what was your response? Was she asking for anything or what is she doing, just commiserating with you?

A I sat there and listened And then she said to me, "I have a background in nutritional supplements and I can be helpful to you with this project, with your company The Governor says it's okay for me to help you and" -- "but I need you to help me I need you to help me with this financial situation "

Q And specifically, what did she ask you to do?

A She said that they had a wedding -- their daughter Caitlin was about to be married and they had a balance on the reception bill of approximately $15,000 or so And she said she needed to borrow $50,000 And she said she would help me, and I said, "Okay, I'll do it "

Q Well, to be clear, she's saying that she's going to help you, but she's not promising you that the Governor is going to help you, right?

A No

Q And she never tells you at this meeting, "I'll get Bob to do X, Y or Z if you give us the money"?

A No

Q Okay So you agree to the $50,000 Does the subject of Cailin's wedding expenses, Cailin McDonnell's wedding expenses, does that lead to a request as well?

A Yes And I agreed to do that as well

Q And what was that?

A $15,000

Q Did she tell you why she needed the $15,000?

A She was short on the -- she didn't know how she was going to cover the expenses of the wedding reception

Q And did she tell you how much the reception was going to cost and how much was left over?

A I don't recall exactly the numbers I think the reception cost was maybe 25 or $30,000

Q And that was according to Ms McDonnell?

A Yes

Q Now, you tell Ms McDonnell you're going to help her Is there anything that you want to do before you write the checks?

A No The only thing I cared to do before I gave her

$65,000 in two checks is I needed to make sure her husband knew about it

Q Why?

A He's the breadwinner in the house, and I'm not writing his wife any checks I'm not writing his wife checks without him knowing about it

Q Did you have a conversation with Mr McDonnell before you loaned the 50,000 and gave the 15,000?

A I did

Q Do you remember the exact date of that conversation?

A I don't I recall that it was on the day that I came there or somewhere -- I just don't recall whether it was in person or whether I talked to him on the phone

Q Well, tell the members of the jury what you remember about the conversation with Mr McDonnell

A I called him and said that, you know, "I met with Maureen I understand the financial problems and I'm willing to help I just wanted to make sure that you knew about this "

Q And what does he say?

A "Thank you "

Q Does he dispute that they are having financial problems?

A He just mentioned that the real estate in Virginia Beach was the problem

Q Is there any discussion about -- you knew he was a lawyer, right?

A I did

Q Did you agree on terms for the loan?

A I don't recall what the terms were at that time

Q Okay Did you draft up any loan paperwork?

A No

Q Okay Why did you agree to loan $50,000 and give $15,000 to the Governor?

A I needed -- I needed his help

Q Help personally?

A Not personally I needed the -- I needed the help of -- what I was trying to do was I discovered this compound in the tobacco plant that I believed that would lower the health care costs I know that he controls the medical schools here in Virginia And so I needed his help with the testing of this to help me implement this into the system, and I needed the credibility that comes with that office and with the state of Virginia for letting people know about the benefits of Anatabine

Q When you agreed to give the 50,000 and 15,000, were you doing it because you thought that Mr McDonnell and Ms McDonnell were your personal friends?

A No

Q What were they?

A This was a business relationship

Q At some point in May of 2011, did you invite the Governor himself to go down to the Roskamp Institute?

A I did

Q And what event did you want him to come to?

A There was a fundraiser being held at the Roskamp Institute, and it was also investors from New York and different places that were attending that meeting But also doctors from Johns Hopkins were attending to discuss with the physicians from Roskamp the science

Q And this meeting was going to be on June 1st, 2011?

A I think so

Q And that was down in Florida?

A In Sarasota, Florida, at the Roskamp Institute

Q Did Governor McDonnell tell you that he would go, decline? What did he tell you?

A He wasn't able to go, but his wife was

Q Okay At some point did you think he might go?

A I did

Q Okay And you said that his wife went Did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell about that?

A I did

Q And what was that co sation?

A I talked to her and I told her what was going to happen, and she was willing to come down and as long as she could get back the next afternoon because the wedding was coming up

MR DRY: Okay I'd like to show Government's Exhibit 125, which I believe has already been introduced into evidence

BY MR DRY:

Q On the top right-hand corner, do you see the date on that, sir?

A May the 23rd, 2011

MR DRY: And can you go -- scroll down to the noontime and then highlight both the noon blocks

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir, that says 12:00, right?

A Yes

Q And that's your name, Jonnie Williams?

A It is

Q And it says "To see 102," correct?

A Yes

Q And below that says "Alia Williams," right?

A It does

Q With the same time in and time out?

A Yes

Q Do you know who Alia Williams is?

A No But I know who Celeste Williams is I think they -- they just misspelled my wife's name

Q Okay Did you actually go with your wife to the Executive Mansion that day?

A I did

Q And was that a significant date for you?

A It's our anniversary

Q Your wife and yours anniversary?

A Yes We were going to The Jefferson to have lunch, but I told her I had to stop by the Governor's Mansion first

Q And why were you stopping by the Governor's Mansion that day?

A To deliver these checks

Q What were the amounts on the checks?

A One was for 15,000 One was for 50,000

Q And did you instruct your assistant, Jerri Fulkerson, to write those checks?

A I did

Q One of the checks was made out to Maureen McDonnell Why was it to Maureen McDonnell?

A That's who I was told to make the check out to

Q By whom?

A Maureen

Q On the 15,000-dollar check, that was made out in blank Why was that made out in blank?

A It was going to the catering company, I thought

Q Okay Before Ms McDonnell asked you for the 15,000, had you been invited to attend the wedding? Before she asked you for the money, not before you delivered it

A I don't recall

Q Had you planned on going to the wedding?

A No

Q What was Ms McDonnell's demeanor when you gave her the 50,000 and 15,000-dollar checks?

A She was pleased

Q And, in fact, can you walk the jury through what happened as you're delivering the checks? Does your wife come into the Mansion as well? You were there for an hour and 15 minutes

A I left her in the car for a little bit I had trouble getting out, and Maureen McDonnell eventually came out and asked my wife to come in

Q And what are you and your wife doing with Ms McDonnell for an hour and 15 minutes?

A We went upstairs and had a salad --

Q Okay

A -- with Maureen McDonnell, I believe

MR DRY: Can you please bring up Government's Exhibit 134, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, this is an e-mail from Mr McDonnell to you,

correct?

A Yes

MR DRY: I would like to move Government's Exhibit 134 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, do you have difficulty reading?

A On two fronts When I don't have my glasses on --

Q Okay

A -- and just reading in general is difficult

Q And have you always had difficulty reading?

A Yes

Q Okay I'm going to read this aloud and you tell me if I'm -- if I'm messing up Okay?

A Okay

Q The date of this is May 28th, 2011 "Johnnie Thanks so much for all your help with my family Your very generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated as well as the golf round tomorrow for the boys Maureen is excited about the trip to Florida to learn more about the products and to see Celeste Have a restful weekend with your family Thanks "

Is that the correct spelling of your name, sir?

A No

Q Okay And I read that accurately?

A I think so

Q Okay What's the Governor referring to when he mentions "the golf round tomorrow for the boys"?

A Ms McDonnell had contacted me and said that they would like to go to the Kinloch Golf Course with the boys as they prepared for the wedding of their daughter

THE COURT: Did you say Mr or Ms ?

BY MR DRY:

Q Who -- who called to make the request?

A I believe Ms McDonnell called me I'm sorry

Q No That's okay Just make sure that if you're going to look over, you've got to pull the mic over so that --

A Okay

Q There we go

A All right

Q So I believe you said Ms McDonnell called you To be clear, had you previously mentioned, hey, I've got this private golf course in Kinloch and made a general invitation at this point?

A Yes

Q Okay And Ms McDonnell calls you to take you up on it --

A Yes

Q -- is that accurate?

All right Now, were you invited to play on that day with the McDonnells or was it just the family?

A Just the family

Q Okay Did the Governor call you after they played?

A That evening

Q That evening And what did he say? Was it a voice mail or did you actually talk to him?

A I think it was a voice mail

Q Okay And do you remember what he said?

A That, Jonnie, thank you for all you do for my family Thank you for this wonderful day that we had at Kinloch

Q Okay So it was a general thank you call?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, going on, it says, "Your very generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated " Had Cailin and you ever talked about -- had she made the request for the money, for the $15,000 to you or had Ms McDonnell?

A Ms McDonnell

Q Okay The Governor writes, "Maureen is excited about the trip to Florida " What's he referring to?

A The Roskamp Institute meeting that's coming up

MR DRY: Judge

THE COURT: All right We'll stop for the evening We will get back together tomorrow morning Let's make it 9:30 again I have a sentencing, and hopefully that won't take more than a half an hour But you all get here at 9:30, and we'll -- we'll get started with tomorrow's session

Again, please don't discuss the case with anyone, allow anyone to discuss it with you, and if that happens, come and tell me, please You all have a good and safe evening and be healthy All right We'll see you tomorrow

THE COURT: All right We'll be back at 9:30 in the case and 9:00 generally

All right, good morning once again Mr Dry?

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Cont'd.)

BY MR DRY:

Q Good morning, Mr Williams

A Good morning

Q You recognize you are still under oath, correct, sir?

A Yes

Q Mr Williams, I think we left off talking about the

June 1st, 2011 Roskamp meeting So I want to start with that First of all, did Ms McDonnell fly down for the Roskamp event?

A Yes

Q And who went down there, did her Chief of Staff, Mary-Shea Sutherland, go down there with her?

A Yes

Q And was their EPU there?

A Yes

Q How did Ms McDonnell and Ms Sutherland and the Executive Protection Unit personnel get down to Roskamp?

A In my airplane

Q And what was the purpose of the event from your perspective?

A This was a fundraiser, but it was also combined with investigators were coming And doctors from Johns Hopkins and doctors from Roskamp were presenting the science to the attendees

Q When you say investors, investors in what?

A Investors in the company, Star Scientific.

Q Okay Was there a dinner the night before this event?

A There was

Q And where was that dinner at?

A At the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Sarasota, Florida

Q Who attended that dinner?

A Ms McDonnell, Mary-Shea Sutherland, Dr Ladenson, my wife, Dr Dale Wilson, several other doctors and investors

Q And where did Ms McDonnell and Ms Sutherland stay overnight?

A At the Ritz-Carlton.

Q Okay And who paid for that?

A I did.

Q Now, going to the next day, can you tell the members of the jury basically what happened at this Roskamp event, you know, who was speaking and generally what was said?

A Dr Mullan as the Director of the Roskamp Institute, he is a well-known physician in the area of research in Alzheimer's, and he explained what had happened with this discovery and the impact and showed videos of what had happened when they give mice with Alzheimers Anatabine and showed how it improved them to normal functions Dr Ladenson and his colleague, Dr Caturegli, they showed their studies on mice models where the mice are genetically engineered to develop thyroid disease, and in the presence of Anatabine in their drinking water, those mice who are genetically engineered to develop it no matter what in about 30 days, it stops the onset of the thyroid disease

Q Okay So these doctors are presenting this to the attendees How many attendees approximately, if you can remember?

A 75, 80, or more

Q Okay And just to be clear, you were talking about studies, mice studies, but you still hadn't gotten human trials underway at this point

A No

Q Correct?

A That's correct

Q Okay Did Ms McDonnell make any statements at the event?

A Yes

Q And tell the jury how that came about

A She was seated beside me, and I said to her, I said, "It is up to you, if you don't want to say anything, that's okay But I wanted to offer if you wanted to address this group, I just wanted to, felt like I should offer," since given who she was, the First Lady of Virginia, and a guest, that I offered if she wanted to address the audience

Q To be clear, did you want to introduce her as the First Lady regardless of whether you expected her to make comments?

A Yes

Q Okay And what did she say in response when you said, "Hey, if you would like to make some comments, you can"?

A She said, "Yes, I would like to "

Q And what did she say?

A She stood up and she told everyone it was an honor to be there today, it was very exciting given her background in nutritional and supplements and wellness, and given that she had had some health issues on her own when she was younger, and that she thought what our company was doing and this new discovery was very important, and she was there to lend her support to the company

Q Did she make any comments about how she was willing to lend her support?

A She did. She said, she said at some point when she was speaking, she said, "I'm going to go with Jonnie and the State Trooper and have him drive us to every doctor in Virginia to let them know about this " And then she invited everyone in the room for the launch, to have it at the Governor's Mansion

Q The launch of what?

A The launch of Anatabloc, which was going to happen in a few months

Q And had you discussed that with her beforehand?

A No

Q Were you surprised that she offered for everybody to come to the Governor's Mansion for the launch of Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q When you introduced her, did you introduce her as Maureen McDonnell or First Lady of Virginia Maureen McDonnell?

A First Lady of Virginia Maureen McDonnell

Q Okay Did you think that Ms McDonnell's comments at the launch were helpful to you?

A I did

Q Why?

A We are a Virginia company And the Governor's wife has taken the time to come all the way to Florida to lend the credibility to this company in Virginia, that what they are working on and what they have discovered is important And so the credibility of Virginia came with that

Q Now, to be clear, she didn't say that the Governor was going to pass any legislation for Star or anything like that, right?

A No.

Q Okay After the event, did Ms McDonnell bring up the subject of Star's stock price?

A Yes

Q And how did that happen, where were you, kind of how did that conversation come about?

A When everyone was leaving, we walked out the front doors And there was an SUV there to take them back to the airport to come back to Virginia And she turned to me and said, "Jonnie, why is the stock down today with, you know, all of these good things going on?" And I said, I just turned to her and said, "Maureen, I guess there are more sellers than there are buyers today " And I said, "But in these biotech companies like this, when they are at this stage, they are going through this long development stage and testing, the stock gyrates " I said, "Why?" She said, "Because I bought stock " And I said, "What do you mean you bought stock?" She said, "Well, we missed out before and I didn't want to miss out this time when the stock was steadily going up " And so I said to her, I said, "Maureen," I said, "this is a risky investment doing things like that I thought I loaned that money to help you with your bills " I said, "You need to sell that stock and just use that money to pay your bills "

Q Did she tell you whether she was going to sell the stock or not?

A I don't recall her saying anything

Q Okay I'd like to go to Government Exhibit 161 that's previously been admitted This is the e-mail from Jerri Fulkerson to Mary-Shea Sutherland, and the jury has already seen that It is basically just saying, "Jonnie asked that I forward the attached letter and information to you." You have seen this e-mail and this letter before, right, sir?

A I have

Q And if we could go, first of all, did you in fact ask Ms Fulkerson to e-mail this to Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A I did

Q And why did you ask for this letter to be sent to Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A Because either Maureen McDonnell or Mary-Shea had contacted me and they asked me to put in writing, to put in writing what it was that I wanted.

Q And did you understand why you needed it in writing? Who was it going to?

A To the Governor

Q Let's go to the second page And first of all, sir, did you write this letter out yourself? You can blow up the top for me, please

A I wrote the first sentence

Q You wrote the first sentence And how do you know that you wrote the first sentence?

A Because whenever it says, "The particular intent of this letter" is something that I have carried through from the eighth grade in an English class

Q Okay But the rest of the letter, who wrote that?

A I went over to the Roskamp Institute and asked Dr Crawford and Dr Mullan to help me write this letter because the Governor wanted the -- needed this in writing

Q Okay, sir To be clear, you write, "The particular intent of this letter is to provide the Commonwealth of Virginia with a technology platform to lower healthcare costs "

Had you discussed this idea with the Governor personally before sending this letter?

A Yes

Q When?

A On the flight back from California

Q Okay You had raised that subject matter with him on that flight?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, in the remaining part of that first paragraph, you describe various ongoing studies, some of which I think you referenced before Had you previously discussed the ongoing studies with the Governor before writing this letter? I'm not talking specifics about each and every one of them, but generally

A In general, yes Specifically, I don't recall that, the specific studies being discussed.

Q But you had talked to him about you guys are doing some studies

A Yes

Q And when did you discuss that generally?

A When?

Q Yes When was the first time?

A The first time I recall doing that was on the Meg Whitman flight

Q That's the flight back from --

A Sacramento, California from where he was supporting Meg Whitman in her bid for some office

Q So the California flight back, you understood that the Governor was out there to support Meg Whitman; that's why you refer to it as the Meg Whitman flight?

A That is

Q Okay Going to the second paragraph, I'm just going to read this to you "I am suggesting that you use the attached protocol to initiate the 'Virginia Study' of Anatabloc at the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia School of Medicine, with an emphasis on endocrinology, cardiology, osteoarthritis, and gastroenterology "

First of all, can you tell the members of the jury what you meant by the "Virginia Study"?

A The "Virginia Study," I came to call it the "Virginia Study" from working with Dr Ladenson over at Johns Hopkins He thought it was, you know, he could be helpful with the medical schools in Virginia, and was just -- we started referring to it as the "Virginia Study "

Q And why did you want the medical schools in Virginia to do it? Why not just have -- when we say "do it," are we talking human trials, mice studies? What type of trials was the "Virginia Study"?

A Both. Animal and human studies

Q Both. And why did you want Virginia research universities to do those studies instead of like Roskamp?

A Roskamp is a private research institute I don't think they are really equipped to do this. But the goal was, with this discovery from the tobacco plant, this Anatabine, if this was what was causing people to have less auto immune diseases, then it made sense to me that the medical schools in Virginia should be interested in this and the State of Virginia should be interested in this given that the people that were researching this were very credible, well-known physicians that were helping me with this And if Virginia, if Virginia and the Governor, the State of Virginia, and its medical schools, I felt like they needed to know this

Q Well, to be clear, you just said that you didn't think Roskamp was equipped to do these kind of studies Would studies from these universities be more prestigious than from Roskamp, have more credibility?

A Yes

Q Now, when was the first time you remember talking about the "Virginia Study" with the Governor?

A I recall specifically talking about it and laying it all out because I was on the plane with him for five or six hours

Q That was the California flight?

A Yes

Q Okay Going to the last sentence of the letter, please, all the way down now, "Once you have had a chance to review this, please have someone on your staff contact me "

Did you ever get any formal response from the Governor on this, a letter back?

A I don't recall any response from this

Q Okay And that signature there, did you authorize Ms Fulkerson to sign for you?

A Yes

Q Just go up to the top really quickly, please That was addressed to the Governor?

A Yes

Q Okay You can take that down, please, Ms Taylor

Okay, that was June 16th Later that month, did you attend an event at the Homestead Resort?

A I did.

Q Okay What type of event was that?

A I understood that event to be an annual rally and a meeting for the Governor where his top supporters, donors, get together for a meeting And it was in combination with Eric Cantor was there, and then there was a panel discussion on various topics, and it was combined with that.

Q And how did you travel to the event?

A In the plane

Q Okay And did anyone else fly with you to the Homestead?

A I believe Bobby McDonnell and Rachel McDonnell were on the plane Maybe Jeanine I'm not sure A few of the McDonnell children were on the plane

Q Okay So you know that there was some children of the McDonnells, but you are not sure exactly which ones?

A I'm not sure which ones

Q But how did it come to be that you were transporting the Governor's children to this event?

A Maureen contacted me and said, "Jonnie, you need to come to this event and you will get to spend some time and play golf with the Governor And I need you to bring my children, a couple of my children with you when you come "

Q How did she originally -- where did she want the plane to go in the original plan?

A For me to pick up one of the children in Newport News or Virginia Beach somewhere

Q And how about the other child?

A The other one was in Richmond

Q Okay So just so I'm clear, where did Ms McDonnell want the plane to travel to?

A She wanted me to leave Richmond with one of her children and then pick up another one in Newport News or Virginia Beach, and then fly over to an airport on the mountaintop over in the western part of Virginia near the Homestead.

Q And did you agree to do that, to make that --

A I agreed to take them, but not to go to Newport News, because it is too difficult in a jet to do short hops like that

Q Okay But you did transport them from Richmond to the Homestead?

A I did

Q Okay When you arrived at the Homestead, do you see anybody in the lobby of the Homestead when you get there?

A An aide to the Governor, Adam Zubowsky, Maureen McDonnell, and Jeanine McDonnell

Q And did you have any conversations about electronic cigarettes?

A I did, because I knew Adam smoked.

Q Okay Just briefly, what was the conversation?

A I just told Adam, I said, "You know, Adam, I know you would rather not smoke, so I made this electronic cigarette with Anatabine in it to help you get away from smoking "

Q Now, was the Governor present for any of this conversation?

A I don't believe so.

Q During your visit, your time at the Homestead, did you and the Governor discuss the Anatabloc studies that you wanted at UVA and VCU?

A I don't specifically recall Like I was with him playing golf for four hours or so, but I can't tell you exactly, specifically You know, this is something that's important to me, and so I'm generally trying to move this forward every opportunity I get

Q But you don't remember the specific conversation?

A I don't recall any specifics of that meeting

Q At some point, do you get the idea that you want to get funding for these studies from the Virginia Tobacco Commission?

A Yes

Q All right Well, tell the jury what your understanding of the Virginia Tobacco Commission was

A I was familiar with the Tobacco Commission from being in the business, and that the MSA settlement, various states had this additional money coming in that they were collecting And some of the states were using it for revitalization of the communities that are hit the hardest by the impact of tobacco And so as I discussed this with the Governor on the flight back from California and at different times, he thought it was a good idea that the funding be independent, away from us in Virginia, and thought the Tobacco Commission would be a good source of funding for something like this

Q Now, to be clear, did you eventually hire Jerry Kilgore to help you with this idea?

A I did

Q And were your conversations with the Governor about the Virginia Tobacco Commission, were those before or after you hired Mr Kilgore?

A Before

Q And when you are discussing this with Mr McDonnell, he is encouraging you or discouraging you from making the application?

A No, he thinks it is a good idea

Q Okay But does he sit there in these conversations and say, "I guarantee you I'll get that done," or anything like that?

A No

Q Okay So you hire Mr Kilgore Why do you hire Mr Kilgore, first of all?

A I knew Jerry Kilgore. I have known him for a while And after he left being Attorney General, he was at a law firm in Richmond and he was involved in lobbying activities as well And I just thought that given his background, having been the Attorney General and been involved when the MSA and the Tobacco Commission and all of that was constructed, that he would be skilled at assisting us

Q And did you know that he had any family relationship with the Tobacco Commission that might be helpful?

A I don't recall that

Q Okay Now, what's Mr Kilgore's role in this process going to be? What's he hired to do?

A He was hired to work with our General Counsel, Bob Pokusa, to assist us in preparing applications for grants to the Commission for studies to be conducted at Virginia medical schools

Q You said that you have known Mr Kilgore for a while. Did you lend your plane to Mr Kilgore for his run for Governor?

A I may have

Q Okay Had you ever given Mr Kilgore any personal loans while he was running for Governor?

A No

Q Had you ever taken any of his family members on shopping trips when he was running for Governor?

A No

Q Had you ever bought a Rolex watch for Mr Kilgore?

A No

Q At the time that you are hiring Mr Kilgore, I understand he is going to make the applications What is Star Scientific doing regarding the UVA and VCU piece in order to get them on board?

A We are working with him.

Q What does that mean, sir?

A The medical director of our company and another person there, Dr Ryan Lanier, are working with researchers to facilitate these studies

Q Okay And what are the universities going to have to do in order for the studies to get funded by the Virginia Tobacco Commission?

A Prepare grant applications and attach the study to show what it was that they were going to be doing in the use of funds

Q So they are going to help prepare the grant or they are going to have to agree to do the studies and then they are going to be responsible for making the applications that Mr Kilgore is going to help.

A Yes, the administrative part of that

Q Prepare As this is going on and you are trying to get UVA and VCU on board, does Star Scientific have an event at Gibson Island?

A Yes

Q That was July 23rd, 2011?

A Yes

Q What was the purpose of that event?

A Dr Ladenson, the chief of endocrinology at Johns Hopkins, said that they have done things like this before, and it was a good idea to get, to have all of the doctors get together and learn the science behind what was going on so they could have an open discussion and exchange ideas about how to proceed with validating Anatabine as an anti-inflammatory or for treating diseases

Q And did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell before this event?

A I did

Q And what did you ask her?

A I asked her if she could attend, because doctors from VCU's medical school and from the University of Virginia were being invited and I thought it was a good opportunity to have her along

Q And what did she say?

A She said she wasn't able to make that meeting And I asked her if Mary-Shea Sutherland would be able to attend.

Q What did she say in response?

A She said, "I'll check with her and see "

Q Why did you want Ms McDonnell or Mary-Shea Sutherland to attend this event?

A I think it was really important, that we had researchers from the medical schools in Virginia, with prestigious physicians from Johns Hopkins, to see that Virginia was supportive of this; and for VCU's doctors and for University of Virginia's doctors to see that this is important, this is being taken seriously by the State of Virginia, by the physicians at Johns Hopkins, and by researchers at University of Virginia and VCU taking the time to come to Gibson Island to spend the day addressing these issues

Q Did Ms Sutherland attend the event?

A She did

Q And who else attended this event? Do you remember specific people from UVA or VCU?

A Dr Peggy Shupnick from University of Virginia, she was a colleague of Dr Ladenson's when they were at Harvard Dr John Clore, an endocrinologist from VCU that was a colleague of Dr Ladenson's And maybe three or four other physicians from different departments at Johns Hopkins, from cardiology, gastroenterology I don't recall the additional ones

Q That's fine Now, that event is on July 23rd. Did you let the McDonnells use your Smith Mountain Lake house from July 28th to July 31st of 2011?

A Yes

Q Where is that home located?

A About 165 miles southwest of here in Virginia

Q Now, did you live at this house full time?

A No

Q What was it?

A It was a vacation house that we would use from time to time

Q How did it come to be that the Governor and his family were vacationing at your house?

A I either offered it or they knew about it

Q Okay But you had let other politicians stay at your Smith Mountain Lake house occasionally, right?

A I have

Q Okay Before this trip, had you had any conversations with Ms McDonnell about wanting to meet with a representative from Bill Hazel's office?

A From, say, HHS, yes

Q Tell the members of the jury about that conversation.

A I was talking to her and I said, "I need to meet, if you could contact someone over there, I need to meet with someone so that I can, you know, things are improving and we are moving forward and I need to bring someone, if you could bring someone over so we could bring them up to speed."

Q Okay And what was Ms McDonnell's response?

A "Okay "

Q Before the Governor and his family stayed at your Smith Mountain Lake home, did you have any conversations with Ms McDonnell about your Ferrari and vehicles?

A No, the only time that ever happened was, I had lunch with Mary-Shea and Maureen McDonnell one day at Kinloch to discuss Anatabloc And my home is on the way back from there, and she said she would like to see it So we went, stopped by my house, and we went in through the side of the house, the garage, and she commented, she was asking, you know, "What kind of cars are those? They are nice cars "

Q And did you tell her what type of cars they were?

A I told her

Q And before the vacation, did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell about whether one of those cars was going to be at your Smith Mountain Lake house?

A Yes

Q And what did she say?

A She said, she, mentioned to me, "All right, do you have any of those cars over at the lake house?"

Q And what did you say?

A I said, "No "

Q What was the response?

A She said, "It would just be nice, you know, we never get to do things like that " It was, "You know, if we had that, you know, something like that over here " And I said, "I'll bring one over "

Q And in fact, did you have the Ferrari delivered?

A I did.

Q Did you have any other conversations with Ms McDonnell about the Ferrari when she arrived at the Smith Mountain Lake house?

A I think twice she called me and asked me when was it coming, and I said he was on his way

Q Okay

A And then I believe when it got there, I just wanted to make sure that -- I told them a couple of things that I thought they ought to know about it

Q Did you know who was going to be driving the Ferrari?

A I asked her not to let the children drive it

Q Okay Fair enough. Did you have any conversations with Ms McDonnell while they are at your home about what you had requested, about the representative from HHS?

A Yes She just confirmed to me that, you know, the meeting was set for when she returned.

Q Okay Can we pull up Government Exhibit 185? I believe this has already been -- maybe not Sir, this is an e-mail from Ms McDonnell to you.

A Okay, there is no text here

Q I know I'm sorry The e-mail itself, it has attachments But does it say from Ms McDonnell to you?

A Yes

Q And that's on July 31st, 2011?

A That's correct.

MR DRY: The government moves to admit 185 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q All right, can you go to the second page of the exhibit, please? Do you remember getting this e-mail, sir?

A I do.

Q And what was the context of when you received this e-mail?

A They were returning from Smith Mountain Lake

Q What color is the Ferrari that you had shipped up to

Smith Mountain Lake?

A It is called white with cuoio tan interior

Q And what model is your Ferrari?

A It is a Ferrari California

Q Is that a convertible or a hardtop?

A It is both.

Q All right Now, going to Government Exhibit 186, please And this has been admitted. Have you seen this document before, sir?

A Yes

Q That's dated August 1st of 2011?

A Yes

Q And that's the day after Ms McDonnell e-mailed you the picture of the Governor driving the Ferrari, right?

A Yes

Q Going down, do you see your name on this Mansion log next to 9:45?

A I do.

Q And it has a departure time of 12:14; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And that's your name, sir?

A It is

Q And in the Organization/Guest column, what does that say?

A "See 102 "

Q You knew 102 as what?

A I have no idea.

Q Two lines down, please, that's got, it says M. Huffstetler there Do you see that, sir?

A I do.

Q A time in of 9:55 Do you recall -- and a time out, just to be clear, 11:05 for M. Huffstetler and 12:14 for you.

A I do

Q Where did -- did you meet with a Ms Huffstetler?

A I did.

Q And that was while you were at the Mansion?

A Yes

Q And where did Ms Huffstetler work?

A For Dr Hazel in the Patrick Henry Building in the Health and Human Services Department

Q Okay And who was present during this meeting?

A Maureen and myself and Ms Huffstetler

Q It was the three of you?

A Yes

Q Where did the meeting occur?

A In her office at the Governor's Mansion.

Q And was Ms McDonnell present for the entire meeting?

A Yes

Q Now, was the Governor here for this meeting?

A No

Q Okay What did you discuss with Ms Huffstetler?

A The test results, and what we were planning, and at some point we hoped to reach with enough data to where we could test this at some point to lower the healthcare costs in Virginia

Q And did you mention to Ms. Huffstetler the idea of testing Anatabloc on state employees?

A Yes

Q What did you mean by that? What was the plan there?

A The idea was, if you take, I don't recall exactly how many thousands of state employees there are, but if you gave them this to take as part of their diet, and you started improving the attendance from cold symptoms, which are inflammatory, or it began lowering the use of prescription drugs, and you started lowering the healthcare cost on a volunteer population within the state, that would be a good model

Q You just said "volunteer " Were the people going to know that they were taking this and have agreed to do that?

A Yes They would be volunteers

Q Okay Did you mention anything to Ms Huffstetler about your conversation with the Governor vis-a-vis

Virginia Tobacco Commission?

A That's who we were using That's one of the places we were seeking funding from.

Q Okay Now, on Government Exhibit 186, can we go down, please, I want to go to the 10:34 There we go. And can you highlight the 10:34 line, please, Ms Taylor? Do you see a name next to, on the 10:34 line, who is the visitor?

A Appears that it is Dr John Clore from MCV, or VCU

Q Did you know who Dr Clore was?

A Yes, I had met him through Dr Ladenson from Baltimore He is an endocrinology professor at VCU's medical school

Q Was he one of the people you went to, as you mentioned a while ago, the Gibson Island event?

A Yes

Q Did you have a meeting with Dr Clore in the Executive Mansion?

A I did.

Q And who attended that meeting?

A Myself, Maureen McDonnell, Dr Clore, and I'm not sure whether Ms Huffstetler was there at that particular time with Dr Clore or not

Q Okay How did Dr Clore come to be invited to the Executive Mansion?

A I called him up from Maureen's office and asked him could he come over

Q And did you just do that or did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell before you --

A I did

Q Okay Tell us about what your conversation with Ms McDonnell was before you picked up her phone and invited Dr Clore over to her house

A I told her that, you know, Dr Clore was important, and he could cause studies to happen at VCU's medical school as well as other doctors, and that I thought it was important to instill in him that this was important

Q And what was her reaction?

A "Call him up "

Q At the meeting with Dr Clore, generally, what were you telling Dr Clore? You had already seen him at Gibson Island. So --

A Yes I was just letting him know with Maureen McDonnell sitting there how important this was to Virginia, to the Governor This was important

Q Okay Now, according to the Mansion log, Ms Huffstetler leaves at 11:05, Dr Clore leaves at 11:31, and you leave at 12:14 Did you have any private conversations with Ms McDonnell during your visit to the Mansion?

A Is the question did I have any private conversations?

Q Yes In other words, you just said that you were, first of all you,were in a meeting with, I believe, Ms Huffstetler in Ms McDonnell's office, right?

A Yes

Q And then Dr Clore in Ms McDonnell's office, yes?

A Yes

Q You are there after they leave Did you have any conversations with Ms McDonnell outside the presence of Ms Huffstetler or Dr Clore?

A I did.

Q All right Tell the members of the jury about that

A Well, we summed up what was going on after meeting with those people, and then I was, as I was sitting here like this, she noticed my watch and she says, "Jonnie, what kind of watch is that?" And I said, "It is a Rolex." And she was, you know, she was interested in it So I took it off and handed it to her so she could look at it And she said, "I would really like to get one of these for the Governor He just wears these old, you know, watches " And I was sitting there, and I said, "Do you want me to get you one of these watches for the Governor?" And she said, "Yes, that would be nice "

Q And did you agree to buy the Rolex for the Governor?

A I did.

Q Did you subsequently buy the Rolex?

A I did

Q Can I get Government Exhibit 33, please? Can you bring up 33-A?

(Exhibit proffered to witness)

Sir, is that the Rolex watch that you purchased?

A Yes

Q When did you buy the watch? Was that after the meeting?

A Yes

Q Where did you buy it?

A Malibu Jewelers in Malibu, California

Q How much did the Rolex cost?

A I don't remember, six or seven thousand dollars

Q Can we go to the second page, please? Can you look, because it is hard to see in the picture, Mr Williams, can you look on the back of the watch?

A Yes

Q It is part of the reason we needed the watch What's engraved on the back?

A It says, "Robert F McDonnell, 71st Governor of Virginia "

Q Did you have any discussions with Ms McDonnell about the engraving?

A I did.

Q And tell the jury about that

A When I was in the store, I was there with my daughter and my wife, and I was looking at this And I was buying it And my wife actually suggested to me, she says, "Well, you should have something engraved on the back of it " So I called Maureen McDonnell from the store and asked her what would she like engraved on the watch.

Q What did she say?

A She thought about it She said, "Put 71st Governor of Virginia on it "

Q What was her reaction to you buying the watch for the Governor?

A I can't tell so much over the phone

Q But did she ever tell you not to tell the Governor that you had bought the watch?

A No

Q And when you gave the watch to Ms McDonnell, what type of box was it in?

A It comes in a green Rolex box

MR. DRY: I'd like to publish the Rolex to the jury, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sure Go ahead.

MR. DRY: I'd like to enter Government Exhibit 33 and 33-A into evidence, publish the Rolex to the jury, and I still have a few more questions about it

THE COURT: They will be admitted. All right, Mr Marshal, just take it

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, you give the Rolex to Ms McDonnell, it is in the green Rolex box Did you want --

THE COURT: Stop asking questions while he is -- let him do this Just pass it down the row to each juror

(Exhibit proffered to jury)

All right What's the number on the watch again?

MR DRY: 33, Your Honor Here is the bag that it goes in. The pictures are 33-A, Your Honor

BY MR. DRY:

Q I believe you just said that Ms McDonnell never told you not to tell the Governor But did you want people to know that you had bought a Rolex watch for the Governor of Virginia?

A No

Q Why not?

A I thought it was wrong, it was a bad idea for anyone to know that

Q Wrong how?

A I shouldn't, it was a bad -- it was a bad decision on my part to buy that watch when she asked for it

Q But why, Mr Williams, why was it a bad decision?

A I shouldn't have had to buy things like that to get the help that I needed. And I thought, I just thought it was a bad idea I took a business risk, and it was a bad idea It was a bad business decision

Q But to be clear, sir, you didn't have to buy the watch Nobody held a gun to your head, did they?

A No No. I made a mistake when I bought that watch

Q But that was your decision You bought it

A It was my decision, no one else's

Q And you knew it was wrong?

A I knew it was wrong

Q You previously mentioned that Ms McDonnell told the Roskamp attendees that the launch of Anatabloc would happen at the Governor's Mansion, right? You talked about that a little bit yesterday

A Yes

Q Or very early this morning Was there in fact an event at the Mansion for Anatabloc on August 30th, 2011?

A There was

Q What was the purpose of the event?

A That was the day that the company launched Anatabloc for sale And it was the physical launch of that Associated with the launch that day was tied in with the Governor's Mansion, with a luncheon at the Governor's

Mansion

Q And who was going to be attending this luncheon?

A Doctors from Johns Hopkins, doctors from University of Virginia, doctors from VCU, prominent doctors here in Richmond, Maureen McDonnell, the Governor, Mr Roskamp, the philanthropist behind the Roskamp Institute, and doctors from the Roskamp Institute

Q How was the date of the event selected?

A I believe it was selected on a day that was convenient to have the use of the Mansion and the Governor and Maureen McDonnell's schedules

Q You mentioned the Governor twice Did you want the Governor to attend the event?

A I did.

Q First of all, did you discuss that with Ms McDonnell?

A I did.

Q What did you tell her?

A I said, "We need the Governor there "

Q What did she say?

A "Okay "

Q So why did you want the Governor to attend?

A Well, I had this dilemma of I'm going to pursue the prescription version of Anatabine because it needs to be in a prescription form so that doctors have the testing and know how much to dose And that was going to take a number of years And I had these physicians here from the medical schools so that they would become interested in it and doing the testing on Anatabloc itself, not necessarily the drug version, because it appeared to have a food-safe profile, and to have Virginia, the seal of Virginia and have Virginia's medical schools behind it, and to have the doctors from Johns Hopkins that have been doing the basic testing to validate all of this work with the doctors in Virginia As it is a Virginia study for Anatabloc, I thought that made good business sense That would be very good for our company

Q I understand you wanted to get the studies at UVA and VCU done I think my question is, why did you want the Governor in the meeting between your company and the UVA and VCU people, doctors?

A Because it sends a signal to those medical schools that this is important The credibility associated with it

Q And did you discuss that with Ms McDonnell?

A I did

Q Was Ms McDonnell supportive of the idea of having this event at the Mansion?

A It was her idea

Q What do you mean it was her idea?

A At the Roskamp Institute, when she announced it

Q All right It might have been her idea, but who decided who to invite? Who is the one that's actually saying, "I want that doctor, that doctor, that doctor, this person, this person, this person"?

A Me.

Q On the day of the event, did you bring any samples of Anatabloc?

A I did.

Q And why did you bring samples of Anatabloc?

A I wanted to make sure everyone knew they could take the product with them. It was the day of the launch, the day of the introduction of this product I was proud of it I thought it was -- I actually thought it was an historical moment; that from this tobacco plant, which I brought tobacco plants from the farms out in Virginia, from a farm in Southside Virginia, to use that to explain to everyone at that meeting that hidden in this tobacco plant was Anatabine that was responsible for the health benefits from tobacco

Q When you said that you wanted samples to be available for the attendees, were the samples actually placed at each place setting?

A They were

Q And who did that?

A I don't know particularly who set them, who the person was that put it beside each one, but it was, I believe it was my idea to do that

Q Okay Walk us through what happens during this event First of all, is the Governor there at the beginning?

A No

Q All right Well, walk us through generally what happens at this event

A I was at the end of one table, Maureen McDonnell was at the end of the other First she spoke and welcomed the doctors, and shared again with them why this was important to her, and how exciting this was to have this launch here, introduction at the Governor's Mansion, and to have physicians from the medical schools in Virginia here to get involved and study and test Anatabine

Q And after Ms McDonnell speaks, what happens?

A I spoke next

Q Okay You mentioned tobacco leaves What are you doing with tobacco leaves during your chat?

A Well, that's where I discovered Anatabine, you know From working with, you know, it was part of -- I've been working with it for years with organic chemists from the University of Kentucky So I thought I would bring the tobacco plant just as a prop to be able to show the doctors where I found this anti-inflammatory

Q Does the Governor come in at some point?

A He did.

Q Do you remember roughly when?

A Towards the end. He sat down and was eating lunch

Q So everybody ate lunch during this event?

A Yes

Q Okay

A And he began asking the doctors their questions

Q When you say "the doctors their questions," had doctors given presentations during the lunch?

A Dr Ladenson was talking about it, Dr Wright was talking about it, our medical director I don't recall much after that

Q You said that the Governor was asking questions Can you kind of describe what's going on at this point?

A Asking questions like, you know, "What are the end points here? What are you looking for to show efficacy with the studies? How are you going to proceed with that?"

Q And did you think the Governor's attendance was helpful?

A Yes

Q When he is asking questions, is he expressing any support for Star, the idea of further studies?

A He was generally supportive I mean, that was the purpose

Q Did you give any money out to UVA and VCU?

A We handed out eight checks for $25,000 apiece to doctors at the medical institutions, including doctors from Johns Hopkins, so that they could prepare the grant applications to study this and whether it was for gastroenterology, cardiology, endocrinology, osteoarthritis, a variety of disorders

Q So what's the plan, sir? You give the $25,000 grants to the research universities What are they supposed to do with those? Use that money to do what?

A They are supposed to use that money because preparing a grant application is a lot of work. It is not just simple application It requires a lot of work, a lot of back-up material, the trial, the study design of what it is that you are going to do And so the idea was to prime the pump, to assist them in funding so they would have the incentive to have the cost of preparing, covering the cost of preparing, the time it takes to prepare the application so that it could be submitted to, hopefully, the Tobacco Commission for funding

Q All right Just so we are clear, they are going to do basically a study proposal

A Yes

Q That's going to be turned into a grant application.

A Yes

Q And that's going to hopefully go to the Virginia Tobacco Commission That's the plan

A That's the plan

Q Okay Did you think that having the event at the Governor's Mansion was helpful to your company?

A I did

Q Why?

A The credibility that came with that I'm trying to have this tested in Virginia The doctors from Johns Hopkins are helping me with the doctors in Virginia because I don't know them at the medical schools And with an institution like Johns Hopkins, with physicians contacting their colleagues here at Virginia medical schools, I felt like I had their attention And since it was going to be done in Virginia, to have the crown of it or the "Virginia Study" or, you know, "This is what happened in Virginia "

Q As of the date of that event, what were the things that you had already given to the McDonnells?

A Plane trips, shopping spree

Q $50,000 loan?

A $50,000 loan, a $15,000 catering bill, golf trips -- I mean golf outings I don't know, maybe some other things

Q Which of those things did you give to the McDonnells because you thought that they were your friends?

A The McDonnells were not my personal friends

Q But why are you giving them this stuff then?

A I thought it was good for our company

Q Do you think you would have had that event had you not given them things of value?

A No, I did not

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 243, please And blow up the bottom part, please. Mr Williams, do you recognize this as an e-mail from Ms McDonnell to cjw01@me com and your e-mail account?

A Yes

MR DRY: I move Government Exhibit 243 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q First of all, who is cjw01@me com? Whose e-mail account is that?

A My wife

Q Okay I'm just going to read this to you and you tell me if I've read this correctly "Jonnie and Celeste, here is the info about the Cure By Design Dinner on September 24th I'll have an invitation mailed to you and you'll be my guests " Go up, please And then Ms Fulkerson forwards this to you with an attachment, correct?

A Yes

Q And you have reviewed this before?

A I have

Q Let's go to the second page, please This is a flier At the very bottom, what is the date of the event going to be, right next to Saturday?

A September 24th, Saturday, 6 to 10, 2011

Q Okay And going to the next page at the very top, where is the event going to be at?

A At the Hilton Hotel in Richmond

Q Okay Did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell about this event?

A I did.

Q Tell the members of the jury about that

A She contacted me and described the event and said she would like for Celeste and I to come, and that she was nervous about it because it was a fashion show and she was going to have to model a dress on a runway set-up that they had for the event

Q Did she make a request of you?

A She did.

Q What did she want?

A She says, "Well, I don't know how to do this like Brad. It would be nice to have Brad here for something like this "

Q When you say "Brad," who is Brad? Is that Brad Kroenig, the model?

A Brad Kroenig is a friend of mine in New York

Q He is a male model, I think you testified earlier?

A He is

Q Did you and Kroenig go to the charity event?

A We did.

Q Did your wife attend?

A No.

Q Why didn't she attend?

A She wasn't interested.

Q Okay Going to Government Exhibit 246, please Have you had the opportunity to review -- well, just go through those briefly, please Have you had an opportunity to review these, sir?

Q And are these photos of the Cure By Design event?

A They are

MR DRY: I would like to admit Government Exhibit 246 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, first of all, actually, can we go back to the first photo real quick? Can you just, where are you located at while this picture is being taken?

A The table in front of the gentleman speaking

Q And whose table was that?

A Maureen McDonnell's and the Governor's

Q Okay So where are you seated at in relationship to them? Are you at their table?

A I'm at their table

Q Okay Going to the second photo Now, obviously, for the record, that's Mr and Ms McDonnell holding hands on the left-hand side?

A Yes

Q On the right-hand side, who is that gentleman?

A The far right is Brad.

Q Okay

A And the fellow that has the microphone is the host, the director of the Cure By Design event

Q Okay And while this is going on, what's happening? What is the gentleman, the M.C gentleman doing?

A Well, there was a runway fashion show of cancer survivors, and then once that was done, there was an auction to raise money

Q An auction And was one of the things that was auctioned off a trip to New York City?

A Yes

Q And who was the trip going to be with?

A The Governor and his wife

Q Okay Walk us through -- did you bid on the trip?

A I did.

Q Walk us through why and how that all came about

A Well, they were offering, auctioning off different items They were auctioning off -- what seemed to gain the most attention was beach house vacations in North Carolina's Outer Banks, and people were bidding on that, multiple bids on those sorts of things And then it came up to where the host offered his home in New York for the weekend, and included the McDonnells as a weekend in New York, as an item to be auctioned off

Q What was the bidding like at first?

A I was the only bidder

Q Okay And so you bid on the event Was that the last bid that you make?

A I bid against myself

Q And where are Mr and Ms McDonnell while this is going on?

A They are standing on that stage with the host

Q Going to the fourth photo in the series, please, did you win the trip?

A I won the trip.

Q Okay

A I was the winning bid, if that's what you mean

Q Yes, sir And how much approximately did you spend at this auction?

A Well, a little girl was first, and she was auctioning off a painting And so I bought that

Q Can you go to the sixth page of the exhibit, please? Was that the painting that you bought from the little girl?

A It is I gave it back to her

Q Okay So just to be clear, everything that you spent at the auction wasn't spent on the trip with the McDonnells, right?

A No

Q Okay So you bought this painting that this little girl did and you gave that back.

A I did

Q But then you also bought the trip with the McDonnells

A Yes And the amount came to, I don't know, maybe it was around $15,000, $13,000, $14,000

Q After the event, did you have dinner that night? Did you have dinner?

THE COURT: Let's stop for the morning break. We will take 15 minutes

(Recess taken from 11:06 a m until 11:26 a m)

THE COURT: All right Let's bring in the jury

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Mr Dry

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, I believe that we left off at after the Cure By Design dinner -- that was at the Hilton, I believe you testified about, correct?

A Yes

Q After the event, did you go to dinner that night?

A I did

Q And who did you go to dinner with?

A The Governor, his wife, and my friend Brad

Q And who picked up the tab for dinner?

A I did

Q Do you remember approximately how much you spent at the restaurant?

A Twelve, $1,500 or so

MR DRY: I'd like to now bring up Government's Exhibit 250, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Actually, you know what, before we get to that Mr Williams, I think that we talked about Ms McDonnell and the Ferrari at Smith Mountain Lake Did you ever have any other conversations with Ms McDonnell in the summer of 2011 about automobiles for the McDonnell children?

A Yes

Q Please tell the jury what those conversations were about

A The first one was for her daughter Caitlin She -- Maureen mentioned to me that she needed to get a car because her old one, you know, was in bad shape and what have you And I just listened

And then I received a phone call from her daughter She said, "I found a car at this place This is how much it is, this is who you contact, and my mother said you're going to pay for it "

Q And what did you say?

A "Your mother has been very helpful to me I need to call her "

Q And did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell?

A I did

Q And what did you tell Ms McDonnell?

A I told her I just couldn't buy a car I just couldn't do anything like that

Q Any other conversations about vehicles? You said the first conversation --

A The two boys going to school, I believe they were sharing a car, and she asked me if I would sell her one of the Range Rovers at a low price for the boys

Q What did you tell her?

A I told her the Range Rover drinks too much gas and the maintenance is high

Q So ultimately, did you buy a vehicle or sell a vehicle to Ms McDonnell at a discount for her children?

A I did not

Q And why not?

A It's too visible

Q What does that mean, "too visible," sir?

A I thought I had an understanding she was helping me, they were helping me with my company, but the thought of writing a check to a car dealership for one of the McDonnell children that I didn't even know, I just had a tough time with it

Q And, sir, I believe you keep saying Caitlin

A Cailin

Q Okay

A Yes

Q All right When you say Caitlin, do you mean Cailin McDonnell?

A I'm not sure of the spelling

Q Okay

MR DRY: Let's go ahead and go to Government's Exhibit 250, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Have you seen this document before?

A I have

Q And this is a flyer for an event for Anatabloc at the Westin Hotel; is that correct?

A It is

MR DRY: Government's Exhibit 250 We'd like to move that into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q All right Sir, first of all, just -- Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals, what is that?

A Star began as a tobacco company, and we formed Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals, and that's where the Anatabloc products and the pharmaceutical version of this was going to be housed

Q So when that says "Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals," is that just a subsidiary of Star Scientific?

A It is

Q Okay

A A wholly owned subsidiary of Star Scientific

Q Okay And this event was going to be at the Westin Hotel; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q And what's the -- on the -- is that October 18th on the left-hand side?

A Yes

Q Okay And what was the purpose of having this event at the Westin?

A This particular event was the beginning or part of these meetings that we were going to conduct around the United States to showcase this discovery and to present the data that had been conducted so far to the medical community

MR DRY: Can you go -- scroll down on the -- there you go Right there

BY MR. DRY:

Q And those are three doctors that are going to be speaking; is that right? Mr Mullan, Dr Ladenson, and Dr Caturegli; is that correct?

A Yes It's pronounced Dr Mullan

Q Mullan I'm sorry

Now, the featured guest, who's listed as the featured guest?

A The First Lady of Virginia, Ms McDonnell

Q And how did Ms McDonnell come to be the featured guest for this event?

A I called and asked could the Governor attend

Q And what did she say?

A He wasn't able to, but she was

Q And why did you want the Governor or the First Lady to attend the event?

A These were local doctors They were doctors from VCU, and I thought it was important that these physicians realize this was important in Virginia

Q Did Ms McDonnell attend the event?

A She did

Q Did she give brief remarks in support of the company?

A She did

Q Okay

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 254, 254 There you go

And, Judge, just to -- I don't think there's going to be an objection The government moves -- would request moving 254 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir, this is another flyer, correct?

A Yes

Q And is this a second event?

A Yes

Q Where is it going to be at?

A In Michigan at the Warwick Hills Country Club

Q And what's the date of the event?

A Saturday, October the 22nd

MR DRY: Going down on the flyer

BY MR DRY:

Q Who's going to be the featured guest, sir?

A The First Lady of Virginia, Maureen McDonnell

Q Did you have a conversation with Mr McDonnell about his wife attending this event before she flew to Michigan?

A I did

Q Tell the members of the jury about that

A On Friday, before the event, I asked him was it okay, and he said yes, he was going to sleep in late in the morning, just have her back by so-and-so -- such and such time

Q And why did you call Mr McDonnell to ask this?

A I wanted to make sure it was okay

Q Why did you want the First Lady to attend the event?

A Because of the credibility that came

Q And did she give any remarks at this event?

A She did

MR DRY: Your Honor, we have a videotape that's Government Exhibit 253

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, have you reviewed the videotape of the Michigan event?

A I've seen the tape before

Q And did it accurately depict what happened on that date in Michigan?

A It does

MR DRY: I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 253 into evidence, and we're going to play excerpts of that, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR DRY: All right Could we play the first excerpt from 251, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q And just -- these are going to be the First Lady's remarks

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, just for clarity, who is the gentleman that introduced Ms McDonnell there?

A That's Dr Dale Wilson He's a professor of OB-GYN at Michigan State, and he is a practicing physician in Flint, Michigan

MR DRY: Okay Can you go ahead and start the tape?

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Did Ms McDonnell know she was going to speak at the event?

A Yes

Q And were you happy that Ms McDonnell flew to the event and made the remarks for Star?

A I was

Q How did you travel there?

A In the airplane

Q Okay

MR DRY: Can we go ahead and play the second excerpt?

BY MR DRY:

Q This is going to be your remarks, sir, at 30 minutes, 30 seconds and 34 minutes, zero seconds

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, how important was it for your company to get the human trials of Anatabloc done at this time?

A It's what physicians are used to Physicians are used to seeing clinical data, double-blind studies

You know, it's anecdotal with my wife It's important because it's never happened before, and it links up with the studies that have been done at Johns Hopkins that show that women that smoke have 73 percent less thyroid disease even at low levels So it matches up

But for a physician to treat a patient, they need that data The data is -- the data is just so necessary

MR DRY: Can you play the third excerpt?

BY MR DRY:

Q This is going to be your remarks at hour and 53 minutes of the presentation

THE COURT: I didn't hear you

MR DRY: These are going to be Mr Williams' remarks at hour 53 of the presentation, 1 hour and 53 minutes

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, you keep talking about UVA and VCU studies Were those -- what are you talking about there? Were you talking about the studies that you had given planning grants for?

A Yes

Q And at the time did you think that VCU and UVA were going to agree to do the studies?

A I did

Q And was it important to you?

A It was

Q Why?

A Those studies would give -- make the physicians comfortable with recommending it to their patients

Q Show you what's Government's Exhibit 258, please This is another flyer for a separate event at Pelican Hill in Newport Coast, California

MR DRY: The government would request to move for Government 258 to be put into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir, we're not going to go through all of this again, but was there an event at The Resort at Pelican Hill?

A Yes

Q And was this similar to the other events?

A It was

Q And did Ms McDonnell attend this event?

A She did

Q Why did Ms -- why did you want Ms McDonnell to come to this event? For the same reason as the last event?

A Yes

Q Did she give any remarks?

A She did

Q Was this event videotaped?

A I believe so

Q Have you previously reviewed a videotape of it?

A Not the entire tape, but I've seen clips of it

Q Okay

MR DRY: Well, let's -- I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 257 in, and we'll play the clips, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q All right This is going to be you introducing Ms McDonnell at the California event at Pelican Hill

MR DRY: Can you play the first excerpt, please?

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Who is that gentleman, sir?

A That's Dr Kiet Doan He's a general surgeon

Q Where at? Do you know?

A In Flint, Michigan

MR DRY: Can you go ahead and continue playing the tape, please?

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR. DRY:

Q Would you have had Ms McDonnell speak at your event had she not been the First Lady of Virginia?

A No

Q Ms McDonnell makes a comment in that excerpt about you being a long-time friend of the Governor How many times had you and the Governor actually met by October of 2011?

A Maybe six times

Q Did you talk frequently on the phone with the Governor?

A No

Q Were your interactions with the Governor business or personal?

A They were business

Q Did you consider the Governor a long-time friend in October of 2011?

A No

Q Were you happy that Ms McDonnell made that comment, though?

A I wasn't going to correct her

THE COURT: I didn't hear you

THE WITNESS: I said I wasn't going to correct her, Your Honor

BY MR DRY:

Q All right The next excerpt is short This is your remarks about the studies It's -- can we play the second excerpt?

(Video Played)

(Video Ended)

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, is this just another example of the importance of UVA and VCU studies to you?

A It is

Q Now, let's talk about that a little bit This is in October of 2011 What is Star Scientific doing to get those studies done at UVA and VCU?

A Well, we've already passed out grants to facilitate the preparation of the applications And Dr Curtis Wright, as I mentioned, is the medical director of our company that was a former chief of anesthetic and addictive substances for the Food & Drug Administration. So he was very capable of working with the institutions to conduct clinical studies

And assisting him was Dr Ryan Lanier So they were trying to assist the physicians that were going to be studying Anatabloc and preparing the applications with whatever they needed

Q But by December of 2011, are things imminently going to happen or what's going on?

A I would say we're caught in the bureaucracy of large institutions

Q What do you mean by that?

A Anytime it's a large institution, it's very slow to move projects through

Q Okay And did you think that you were -- what -- which institutions were you trapped in the bureaucracy of?

A VCU and UVA

Q Okay

A And UVA in particular

Q Well, let's go to January of 2011 -- I'm sorry, '12 January of 2012 Does the subject of the McDonnells' beach properties come back up?

A Yes

Q And tell the jury about how that occurs Initially, in January of 2011, who were you having conversations with about the beach properties?

A Maureen McDonnell

Q Okay And what is Ms McDonnell telling you?

A She said the rent is not covering the payments

Q And what does she want you to do about it?

A She wants me to loan them some more money

Q And do you have conversations with a man named Michael Uncapher about that as well?

A I did

Q And tell the jury about who's on the phone, what's the conversation

A I recall having a conversation with him to where Maureen put him on the telephone and -- because I didn't think -- I didn't think Maureen -- Maureen knew there was a problem, but she didn't have a grasp of the financial details of the problem specifically

And her -- I believe this was her brother-in-law, and he was sort of a manager of the -- the real estate venture at Virginia Beach, the houses in Sandbrige, Virginia And I asked him particular questions I was trying to get a handle on, okay, they need to borrow some money You know, how much money are we going to end up -- how deep is this hole here

Q And was there any discussion about you buying the beach properties?

A There was

Q And tell the members of the jury about that

A That didn't go far I had no interest in buying real estate in Sandbrige, Virginia

Q And who brought that up to you?

A Maureen McDonnell

Q So you don't agree to buy the beach properties, but what do you agree to?

A I agreed to help them with money

Q And when you say "them," who are you talking about?

A The Governor and his wife

Q And specifically, why are you agreeing to help them?

A Because they are helping me

Q How?

A With these meetings, with introductions, the launch at the Governor's Mansion, the credibility that they are lending to what I'm doing

Q At the same time that you're having conversations about lending more money, does the subject of the studies at UVA and VCU come up?

A Yes

Q How?

A The Governor called me

Q Tell the jury --

A That was later

What happened was is Maureen McDonnell asked me, "How are the studies going over at UVA?"

Q Okay

A And I said, "They're slow "

She said the Governor wanted to know how the studies were going at UVA

Q Did she call you back after that conversation?

A She did

Q And what did she say?

A She said he was furious when I told her that it was bogged down in the administration

Q So in the initial conversation, you tell her it's bogged down?

A Yes

Q And then subsequently, she calls you back?

A She calls me back and she says, "The Governor wants the contact information of the people that your company is dealing with at University of Virginia "

Q Were you happy with this news?

A I was I was pleased that they were -- someone was going to follow through with it

Q What did you do as a result of this conversation with Ms McDonnell?

A I contacted Dr Wright Dr Wright had Ryan Lanier get the contact information, forward it to my son, and I asked my son to send it to Maureen

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 298, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir, this is an e-mail from Dr Wright to you, correct?

A Yes

MR DRY: I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 298 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir -- just scroll down, please Thank you A little bit higher up, the second e-mail Thank you

And this is the e-mail that you just talked about from Mr Lanier to Dr Wright?

A That's correct

Q And the subject line is "UVA people," correct?

A That's correct

Q And then if you go up, Mr Wright forwards that information to you And why had you requested this contact information?

A Because Maureen McDonnell said that the Governor wanted it

Q And how -- this is on February 3rd of 2012 How much -- how long did -- before this e-mail did Ms McDonnell ask you for the contact information?

A Within a few days

Q Okay And then at the same time -- can you take that down, please

At the same time this is going on, you are having conversations with Ms McDonnell about something called a Healthcare Industry Leaders Reception?

A Yes

MR DRY: And I'd like to show -- well, let me go back

BY MR. DRY:

Q When you ask Dr Wright to send this information, had you written a check yet to help out with the beach properties?

A No

Q Okay

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 301, please

BY MR. DRY:

Q Sir, this is an e-mail from Maureen McDonnell to Caroline Birgmann, and you are cc'd, courtesy copied, on this, correct?

A Yes

MR DRY: I'd like to move Government's Exhibit 301 into evidence, please

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q All right Let's go to the bottom e-mail And who is Ms Carolyn Birgmann, sir?

A She's a sales representative in Virginia

Q Okay I'm going to read what Ms Birgmann wrote to Ms McDonnell Subject line, "MD e-mail addresses " I'm going just going to read the first sentence, and you let me know if I'm reading it correctly "Hi, Maureen I hope you are doing well! Jonnie Williams, Sr has asked me to compile a list of MDs in the area for you to include on your invitation list for the event coming up the end of February "

Had you asked Ms Birgmann to give this list to Ms McDonnell?

A Yes

Q Why?

A Because the Healthcare Leaders Reception was an annual event held at the Governor's Mansion to recognize healthcare leaders, and I was given the opportunity to invite people, doctors, to the reception

Q What do you mean you were given the opportunity?

A Maureen McDonnell called me and said, you know, invite all the doctors that you want to invite to the Healthcare Leaders, to the meeting

Q And who did you want to invite?

A Besides local physicians?

Q Yes

A Dr Ladenson and a colleague of his, Dr Crantz

Q And how about Star folks?

A Yes, employees from Star as well

Q And did you want to go?

A I did

Q Okay And can we go -- well, hold on before that

When you said that you wanted to invite local doctors, why did you want to invite local doctors?

A Because they would be there and see that our company was there, and we would get the opportunity, at the Governor's Mansion at the reception, to talk to various doctors

Q And what were you hoping these doctors would do?

A I was hoping they would do the same thing that we were traveling around the country for is to share with them what we had discovered and to learn about Anatabloc

Q But did you want them to do something with their patients after they learned about all this?

A I did I wanted them to use the product because it would be good for the company

Q Okay And let's go to the top portion of the e-mail This is Ms McDonnell response, and you're cc'd on this All right I'm going to read this Just let me know if it's incorrect

"P S By the way, the docs we are identifying for the reception are healthcare industry leaders in Virginia

Thanks, Carolyn! We appreciate the list of docs that you sent, but wanted you to know that you didn't have to limit them to this area It's a reception for healthcare leaders from all over the state of Virginia, so please expand on your list I checked our number of invites, and if Jonnie has any more than these 39 docs, send them along because we have room to invite more We may already have some of these docs on our invite list

So if you can put them in alphabetical order, we can run your list against ours and remove the duplicates We're actually sending out invitations this week, and I was wondering if you also have the physical addresses of the docs you're referring? If so, and if it's not too much trouble, could you send them over to us? Thanks so much for your help "

Did you think it was a benefit to your company that you'd be able to invite who you wanted to the Healthcare Leaders Reception?

A I did

Q Why was that --

A Well --

Q -- just briefly?

A Anytime in front of the showcase of the Governor's Mansion, the credibility that comes with presenting your product to someone, it automatically takes on an importance from the credibility

Q Okay

MR DRY: I'd like to bring up Government's Exhibit 312 And, Your Honor, Mr Williams isn't on this e-mail, but I believe it's been stipulated to authenticity, and we'd like to admit Government's Exhibit 312 into evidence at this time

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR DRY: Okay Let's go to the bottom e-mail first -- or the middle e-mail No, no That's -- there we go Thank you, Ms Taylor

BY MR. DRY:

Q Okay This e-mail here says from Jonnie Williams, Jr Who is that?

A My son

Q And it's to Maureen McDonnell, and it says, "FD: Anatabine clinical studies - UVA, VCU, JHU Please let me know if this helps I have not heard from my father on that" -- "on this yet "

Why is your son e-mailing Ms McDonnell this information?

A I'm not sure I understand this Is -- is --

MR DRY: We can go down Go down a little bit so he can see

BY MR DRY:

Q And, in fact, I've got a paper copy of this if you want to just take a minute to look at it, sir I know that you're not on this e-mail

THE WITNESS: Thank you

BY MR DRY:

Q Let's just do it this way Is this Mr Lanier e-mailing your son and then your son forwarding the information to Ms McDonnell about who the contact information is at --

A Yes

Q -- UVA?

A I understand what it is now It just --

Q It's okay

A It just didn't make sense the way it was -- to me

Q On the screen

A I didn't understand it

Q Okay

MR DRY: And then can we go to the top e-mail, please?

BY MR. DRY:

Q And, sir, that e-mail is from Ms McDonnell Do you know who rfmva09@gmail com is?

A The Governor of Virginia

Q And then it's got a separate e-mail, Bob McDonnell

Do you know who Jasen Eige is?

A He's a lawyer for the Governor for the state of Virginia

Q Okay And can you read that to me?

A Which part?

Q What she wrote

A "Here's the info from Jonnie He has calls in to VCU and UVA and no one will return his calls "

Q Did you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell in which she talked to you about what she did with the information that she had requested from you, the contact information that your son had sent?

A She said she forwarded it to her husband

Q At the time of this e-mail, had you actually written another check for any additional loans to the beach properties?

A No

Q Okay

MR DRY: I'd now like to show Government's Exhibits 318, please And let's go to the bottom e-mail first, please

BY MR DRY:

Q This is an e-mail from the Governor to you; is that correct, sir?

A It is

MR DRY: I'd like to admit Government's Exhibit 318 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And, sir, Ms McDonnell is not on this e-mail; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q And the date of the e-mail is February 16th, 2012?

A Yes

Q It says, "Johnnie Know u have been slammed Do u want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents Thanks for all your help Gov "

First of all, is that the correct spelling of your name?

A No

Q When the Governor references "know u have been slammed," what is he talking about? Generally, what is going on with this e-mail?

A Well, we had had a conversation where I discussed with him that I had been really busy, and we had conversations -- where it refers to "certificates and the documents" -- was possibly loaning his stock certificates so that he could borrow money against them

Q Let's talk about that a little bit What -- when you say loan him stock certificates, first of all, stock certificates in what?

A In Star Scientific

Q And whose stock certificates were those?

A They were mine

Q And your conversation with the Governor, what was the plan or the discussions about loaning stock certificates?

A We had a conversation where I wasn't exactly sure, from talking to his brother-in-law, just how deep this hole was at Sandbrige and how much money it was going to take So I thought a way to keep him out of my cash would be that I would just loan him -- take some certificates and split them into individual certificates, maybe take them out of the airplane account, since there were shares over there, and let the Governor either sell those or borrow money against those as he needed them once they determined what the amounts were that they needed monthly for the cash deficiencies at Sandbrige

Q All right Well, let's a step back Stock certificates Are these literally pieces of paper that is shares of Star Scientific stock?

A Yes

Q And whose name are those in, if they're yours?

A They're in my name, or if they're in the airplane account, they're in Starwood Aviation

Q Fair enough And you're talking about physically delivering stock certificates to who?

A To the Governor's broker, stockbroker

Q Okay And were the -- in the initial discussions, were the shares going to be transferred out of your name?

A No They would have a stock power signature guaranteed from me, attached to the certificate so that he could borrow against it But the idea was is that okay, the lending institution has the ability to take that once I've signed it

Q Okay

A But it would stay in my name for purposes of, you know I wanted to keep the stock certificates in my name

Q Well, why did you want to keep the stock certificates in your name?

A I didn't want anyone to know what I was doing

Q What does that mean?

A I didn't want to see stock certificate shares being transferred to the Governor of Virginia

Q All right If you physically -- or if you actually transferred the shares into the Governor's name, what's the process that that would require?

A It would be sent to the transfer agent with that stock power, as I just described, and the stock -- the stock transfer agency, which is usually a bank that administers and keeps the accounting of the shares of a company, of who owns what, they would then transfer those as per the instructions with the stock power being signature guaranteed and signed

Q Okay So the stock power basically allows whoever -- if you don't do it that way and you just put a stock power with the certificate --

A Yes

Q -- and the Governor would borrow against that --

A Yes

Q -- is that right?

A That's correct

Q And if for some reason the Governor didn't pay back the loan --

A Right

Q -- then what could the lender do, based on that stock power?

A They would take the stock and sell it to cover the loan

Q Okay But the benefit of this, in your mind, this approach, was what?

A It was two-fold It was, one, to keep them out of my cash, since I had the certificates and had no intentions of selling them, and that would facilitate whatever these cash needs were going to be down here in Virginia Beach And the second one was I didn't want anyone to know

Q Why don't you want people to know that you're loaning the Governor money?

A I think it's a problem

Q What does that mean, sir?

A I think it's a problem -- I think a problem with why I'm loaning the money

Q All right Well, why are you loaning the money?

A I'm loaning him money to help me

Q Help you do what, sir?

Let's stop beating around the bush Why are you not wanting people to know that you're loaning the Governor money?

A It may be wrong I think it's wrong It could be wrong, and it could be -- it could be violating laws I don't know that, but it could be

Q You knew it was wrong, and you were hiding it?

A I knew it was wrong I was uncomfortable I didn't think I should have to be doing this

Q I understand you keep saying --

A Yeah

Q -- you shouldn't have to be doing this

A Yeah

Q But it was your choice, right?

A I made a bad decision I knew it was wrong I thought the ends justified the means for what I was trying to accomplish here in Virginia, and I made a mistake It was a bad mistake I should have never written the checks

Q When you're talking about stock certificates with the Governor, did the subject of whether you were going to document this -- this new loan come up?

A Yes

Q Tell the members of the jury about that

A I met with the Governor and discussed it

Q And what?

A I told him I would just as soon keep it between us with a handshake

Q And what did he say?

A He had his own disclosure issues

Q Did he say he had his own disclosure issues?

A He did

Q In your conversations with the Governor about this stock plan, did the two of you discuss whether you would have to report the transaction to the SEC?

A I told him that I believe I was required to report it, and his position was is he didn't understand why because you wouldn't have to list the person that it was transferred to And I told him I needed to check into that because I wasn't sure of that under Sarbanes-Oxley laws, under the disclosure I wasn't sure about that, whether it could be done without it showing who they would be transferred to

Q Well, hold on Let's talk about that a little bit First of all, the SEC is the Securities and Exchange Commission?

A That's correct

Q And when you transfer -- if you had transferred shares using the transfer agent so that the shares were actually in the Governor's name, the transfer agent would know about that, right?

A That's correct

Q And would lawyers at Star know about that?

A That's correct

Q And the lawyers at Star would have required you to do what, if they had known you had done it?

A They would have stopped it But I would have been required to file a Form 4 with the Securities and Exchange Commission within, I believe, 48 hours

Q Okay Well, let's talk about that What's a Form 4?

A A Form 4 is a disclosure form from the Securities Exchange that anytime you have any changes to your beneficial ownership, you're required to file that document

Q So is it fair to say there was no way for you to get the stock certificates into the Governor's name without other people knowing?

A That's what I had learned

Q You mentioned Sarbanes-Oxley What's Sarbanes-Oxley?

A Sarbanes-Oxley is law that was passed to strengthen the disclosure of companies in transactions, financial transactions to the shareholders

Q And financial transactions of whom?

A It's complicated There --

Q Well, let's put it this way Does Sarbanes-Oxley apply to you as the CEO of a publicly traded company?

A Yes, I believe so

Q And that requires -- that puts restrictions on and disclosure requirements on you as CEO, right?

A That's correct That's my understanding

Q And is Sarbanes-Oxley often referred to as Sarbox?

A It is

Q During your conversations with the Governor about you providing this additional money to him, is Maureen McDonnell present?

A No

Q Is anybody else present?

A No

Q During these conversations, does the subject of UVA and VCU come up, the studies at UVA and VCU?

A In a phone call

Q Okay Let's --

A Let me back up I'm not sure if you are referring to the -- the conversation in person or in phone calls I need to make sure I understand what your questions are

Q My question --

A Your question is

Q -- is during your conversation with the Governor about you providing him money, was anything mentioned about UVA and VCU studies?

A During this dialogue over a period of time?

Q Yes

A Yes

Q What?

A He said -- he called me and he said, "I'm following up with the situation over at UVA," and then it shifted to that he needed some more money for Sandbrige

Q Do you remember the exact date of that conversation?

A I think it was the day of the Healthcare Leaders meeting

Q Well, let's talk about the Healthcare Leaders meeting

MR DRY: I'd like to show Government's Exhibit 341, please This has been stipulated to, and the government would move to admit 341 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Going down to the bottom, please, can you blow up the -- or actually, on the top right-hand corner, what's the date there, sir?

A February the 29th, 2012

Q And it says "Building: 706 - Patrick Henry Building," correct?

A That's correct

MR DRY: If we can scroll down, I think it's fourth from the bottom

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you see your name there, "Jonnie Williams"?

A I do

Q And in the "Agency Name" it says "Gov," correct?

A Yes

Q And that's a "3r" and "Room Destination" of 1:25, correct?

A Yes

Q Now, is this the same day as the Healthcare Leaders Reception event?

A Yes

Q And did you have a private meeting with the Governor that day?

A Yes

Q How did that meeting come about?

A In a conversation with -- I'm not sure exactly the time and how it was arranged, whether it was with the Governor or Maureen McDonnell

Q All right So either a conversation with either the Governor or Ms McDonnell --

A -- about the setting up of the meeting

Q About the setting up of the meeting And where was this meeting held at?

A In a conference room at the Patrick Henry Building

Q Okay Who else was present for the meeting?

A No one The Governor and I

MR DRY: All right I'd like to -- this has not been stipulated to, but I'd like to pull up Government's Exhibit 2, but only the third page And I'd like to move this page into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR ASBILL: No objection

BY MR DRY:

Q Okay, sir Do you recognize those notes?

A I do

Q And, sir, in the middle of that page, whose notes are those or whose handwriting is that?

A That's mine

Q Okay And the top of the page, is that your handwriting?

A No

Q And the bottom of the page, is that your handwriting?

A No

Q Do you recall, at this February 29th, 2012, meeting scribbling down these notes?

A I do

Q When it talks about 50,000 -- and this meeting is with the Governor?

A Yes

Q Is the top portion of your part of it, "50,000 SHS M," what does that refer to?

A This was -- that, in particular, refers to loaning them 50,000 shares at that point It's one of the options that we discussed was loaning them 50,000 shares so that they could borrow against it

Q Well, let's talk about that for a second You've previously talked about, I believe, the stock power of attorney idea where the shares won't leave your name --

A Right

Q -- but they'll -- they'll borrow money against that, right?

A Right

Q Were there discussions about rent?

A There were

Q Tell the jury about that

A Well, it was considered that I could rent the house down at Virginia Beach and help them with it that way and just write the checks as rent

Q Did you have any intention of renting those beach houses?

A No

Q Okay Now, you said that this was about loaning the shares How many shares was being discussed?

A 50,000 shares

Q And there's a notation to the left, it looks like "$ 10 "

A Yes

Q What does that mean?

A That means -- what was going on right here is let's suppose that I loaned him 50,000 shares He borrows the money against the 50,000 shares The stock price goes up or the shares are called in or sold and the stock price goes up He would be on the hook and have an obligation to purchase those shares back at a higher price to return those

Q Okay

A And one of the ways to address that was I had options, a security to purchase shares in the future at a price that were below the market So I suggested to the Governor maybe you could buy 50,000 of these at $ 10 and that would cover -- if the stock ran up, that would cover it

Q All right Well, let's break that down a little bit All right First of all --

A That would cover your exposure for the difference between what you're borrowing and what the increased appreciation could be That would cover that exposure

Q Okay First of all, let's -- let's unwind that a little bit

A Okay

Q So you have stock in Star Scientific, right?

A Yes

Q And you have what s called options?

A I own options also It's securities It's part of my ownership

Q Okay And an option is basically a right to purchase the stock at a certain price?

A At a certain price and at a certain time

Q At a certain price, at a certain time Okay Now, you're discussing a way that you could protect the Governor from the danger of giving him shares, him selling them and then him being on the hook to give you back those shares at a higher price; is that right?

A That's correct

Q Okay Now, you're offering to sell him those options at $ 10, right?

A Yes

Q How much were those options worth at this point?

A Probably a dollar

Q Okay So if you sold him 50,000 options at $ 10 a piece --

A Right

Q -- how much would he owe you?

A $5,000

Q And how much were those options worth at that time?

A 50,000

Q Okay And what would happen if -- what was the benefit to him?

A Well, if he owned the options -- if he bought the options and he just borrowed the money, it could repay the money But if the stock appreciated, the options would cover the entire loan, if the -- if the appreciation was enough

Q What was Mr McDonnell's reaction to this discussion?

A These were just options we were sitting there discussing

Q Okay Does the subject of reportability come up in this meeting?

A Yes

Q In what context?

A He says -- he said, "I have disclosure I have reporting requirements," and I said, "So do I "

Q And was he saying "I want to report this" or "I don't want to report this"? And when I say "this," I'm talking --

A I said that I'd just as soon keep this between us and no one know this

Q And what was --

A And he said that was fine with him And that's why no lawyers were contacted after that

Q Did you do the $ 10 option plan?

A I did not

Q Why not?

A Because I later found out I would have to disclose that also

Q So in order to transfer the shares, the options to Governor McDonnell, what would have had to happen?

A I would have had to file Form 4s with the Securities and Exchange Commission and disclose who they were transferred to

Q Okay And would lawyers have known if you had transferred -- was there a way for you to transfer those options to the Governor without lawyers knowing about it?

A No

Q Was there a way for you to transfer those options to the Governor without the transfer agent knowing about it?

A No

Q Okay Why didn't you want to do the option plan because it would be reported?

A I didn't want anyone to know about it, once I found out it was the same situation with restrictions of transferring the shares

Q And why didn't you want anybody to know about it?

A I didn't want anyone to know that I was helping the Governor financially with his problems while he was helping our company

Q After your meeting with the Governor, did you attend the Healthcare Leaders Reception?

A Yes

Q And that was the event that Ms McDonnell told you that you could invite people to?

A Yes

Q I'm just curious, at this point was Mary-Shea Sutherland, had she left Ms McDonnell's employment?

A Yes

Q Okay And she left back in September of '11, right?

A I don't recall the specific month, but I -- she had left

Q Did all of the people that you invited actually attend the event?

A Not all of them

Q Okay But did you have Star Scientific folks there?

A I did

Q Your son attended?

A David Dean

Q David Dean Who is who?

A Head of sales

Q And did anybody -- Dr Ladenson?

A Dr Ladenson, at this point, we had retained as a consultant to the company

Q Okay

A And --

Q And did he bring somebody?

A Dr Crantz, a colleague of his, an endocrinologist from McLean, Virginia

Q Okay Let's go -- and there were several doctors that you were trying to get to sell -- or convince that Anatabloc was good for the local area, right?

A Yes

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 334, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you recognize this picture, sir?

A I do I'm standing beside Dr Crantz

Q All right That's a picture of you at the Healthcare Leaders Summit, correct?

A It is

Q Or Healthcare Leaders Reception

MR DRY: Government moves to admit Government's Exhibit 334 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Okay Sir, that's you in the middle with your arms crossed?

A Yes

Q And I think you've already said this, but I just want to clarify To your right with the white hair, who's that gentleman?

A That's Dr Crantz, Dr Ladenson's friend

Q And Dr Ladenson was the Johns Hopkins researcher, right?

A He's the chief of endocrinology at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine

Q And I think you said Star had retained his services, right?

A Yes

Q Did the Governor announce Dr Ladenson's attendance at the event?

A He did

Q How did that come about?

A While the Governor was speaking, I asked Maureen to go over and have the Governor recognize Dr Ladenson as a special guest that evening

Q And what did she say?

A Okay

Q And did she go up to the Governor?

A She did

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 338 into evidence? Government would move Government's

Exhibit 338 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q That's a picture of the Governor and Ms McDonnell at the event?

A Yes

MR DRY: Then let's bring up Government's Exhibit 336 into evidence Government would move Government's Exhibit 336 into evidence as another picture from the Healthcare Leaders Reception

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And this is while the Governor is making remarks, sir?

A Yes

MR DRY: I'd like to move -- come up -- Government's Exhibit 337 into evidence, please

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, you're on the left by the pillar?

A I am

Q And to the left of you is who?

A Dr Crantz

Q And to the left of him in the back with the white hair next to Dr Crantz, who is that?

A That's Dr Ladenson

Q Were you happy about the Governor recognizing Dr Ladenson at this event?

A I was

Q Why?

A It drew the attention in the place that Dr Ladenson was important

Q And if Dr Ladenson is important, who is he representing at that event?

A Star Scientific

MR DRY: Can we bring that down, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q After the reception, did you go out to dinner that evening?

A I did

Q Who did you go with?

A The Governor and Ms McDonnell, Dr Ladenson, Dr Crantz, David Dean, and myself

Q And where did you go?

A A couple of blocks from the Governor's Mansion, a restaurant called La Grotta

Q Okay And what was discussed at the dinner?

A Anatabloc

Q Okay And were there often occasions where you were with the Governor that you didn't discuss Anatabloc?

A I don't recall -- I don't recall any

Q All right Well, let's bring up Government's Exhibit 346 into evidence This is an American Express bills for Mr Williams Government would move Government's Exhibit 346 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And the top of this bill, the closing date is March 29th, 2012, Mr Williams

MR DRY: Can we go down?

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you see an entry for La Grotta?

A Yes

Q And the date not of the charge, that's February 29th of 2012?

A Yes

Q And what was the cost of the dinner?

A $1,423 19

Q Did you pay the entire bill?

A I did

Q And just so we're clear, is this your personal credit card or is this your corporate card?

A It's the company one

Q Okay So included in this bill is whenever you travel on company business, things like that?

A When I'm working

Q Okay

MR DRY: Can we bring that down, please?

BY MR DRY:

Q Did anybody offer to pay other than you?

A No

Q Okay Mr Williams, we've talked a lot about your cars and your homes a little bit, but just -- let's be clear You've traveled around in a private jet for a long time, haven't you?

A Over 20 years, 25 years

Q And what are some of the kind of cars that you own or have owned?

A All sorts, Ferraris, Aston Martins, Range Rovers

Q Rolls-Royce?

A One time I didn't care for it

Q Okay And you own a lot of homes?

A A few homes

Q And you've -- your homes are nice homes They're typically more than a million dollars a piece, aren't they?

A They are

Q And many of your expenses, Star Scientific would reimburse you, didn't they?

A Yes

Q What kind of expenses did Star Scientific reimburse you for?

A Mostly travel and entertaining people, dinner, New York, California, meeting with investors, travel-related expenses

Q And when you travel, you travel in style, generally, nice rooms, nice hotels, right?

A Generally

Q Okay Did anyone at Star Scientific review your -- the expenses that you charged to the company?

A The chief financial officer

Q But where is he in the food chain at the company? Is he above you or below you?

A Below

Q Did you expense to Star Scientific things that you bought for the Governor and his wife and his family members?

A Such as?

Q Dinners, golf clubs

A Yes

Q Okay Kinloch golf outings?

A Yes

Q But did you expense -- I think you referred to it as this, the shopping spree for Ms McDonnell, did you expense that to Star?

A No

Q Why not?

A It was out of line It wasn't normal for me to do anything like that

Q Well, and isn't it true that the CFO would have seen that, right?

A Yes, he would see that

Q And that would -- that might be questioned, wouldn't it?

A I would hope so

Q Did you expense the Rolex that you bought for the Governor?

A No

Q Why not?

A I didn't want anyone to know about it

Q Did you inform the other executives at Star Scientific that you were loaning money to the Governor?

A No, I did not

Q Other than Ms Fulkerson, did anybody know at Star Scientific?

A No one

Q Why not?

A I didn't want anyone to know what I was doing

MR DRY: Let's -- let's bring up Government's Exhibit 348, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, this is an e-mail from John Piscitelli to you, correct?

A It is

MR DRY: Government would move Government's Exhibit 348 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q And, sir, the subject of this is "Transfer instructions"?

A Yes

Q And this is March 2nd of 2012?

A Yes

Q Who is John Piscitelli?

A He's a stockbroker at Davenport & Company for the Governor

Q Did you know that Mr Piscitelli was going to be e-mailing you with transfer instructions?

A Yes

Q But -- and you talked to the Governor about that?

A I did

Q Now, in the fourth line down, it says "For Further Credit " Who is that to?

A It's for further credit to the McDonnells' account 7502-4806

Q Now, it talks about "Incoming Fed Wire Instructions " Is there a distinction between transferring shares this way, according to these wire instructions, and the way we talked about earlier with the stock certificates --

A Yes

Q -- and the power of attorney?

A There is

Q And what is that?

A The DTC system is set up for brokerage firms to transfer shares electronically from one brokerage firm to another

Q Okay And were you excited about the idea of electronically sending shares over to Davenport?

A This was in a time frame of when it was being considered whether it had to be disclosed with filings at this point

Q If you had transferred the shares -- could you transfer shares, first of all, in stock certificate form or would they have to be held --

A No It would be electronically The shares would follow at some point

Q Okay So you would have to have shares in a brokerage account?

A Yes

Q And then you would have to transfer those shares into the McDonnell brokerage account?

A That's correct Electronically they would show up, and the paperwork would follow

Q Okay Did you want to transfer the shares electronically?

A I couldn't do that

Q Why?

A Because I found out that it would have to be disclosed

Q Did you have any discussions with a man named John McKeon about the idea of transferring shares to the Governor?

A I did

Q What were those discussions?

MR ASBILL: Hearsay Objection

THE COURT: You need to stand up when you address

MR ASBILL: I'm sorry, Your Honor I object

MR DRY: They're not for the truth of the matter asserted, Your Honor

THE COURT: The objection is sustained

BY MR DRY:

Q Did you ask Mr McKeon to do anything regarding the transfer of the shares to the Governor?

A I did

Q What did you ask him?

A I asked him if he would loan the shares to the Governor because the Governor was in financial trouble

Q And did you explain to him why you wanted him to do it?

A I told him that, you know, I was too close to it

Q And did he agree to transfer the shares?

MR ASBILL: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

A He said he would sleep on it

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR DRY:

Q Stop

THE WITNESS: Sorry Sorry

BY MR. DRY:

Q Ultimately, did Mr McKeon transfer any shares?

A No

Q Okay After the e-mail from Mr Piscitelli March 2nd -- can we pull that down, please? -- did you have a discussion with the Governor in which you told him that you couldn't transfer the shares?

A Yes

Q And what did you tell him?

A I told him it was unavoidable and that I needed to just loan him the money and write a check

Q What was unavoidable?

A The disclosure

Q And what was his reaction to this?

A Okay

Q And, sir, I'm sorry Let me just back up for one second Mr McKeon, is -- what's your relationship with Mr McKeon?

A He's a friend of mine

Q Is he also a shareholder?

A Yes, he is

Q Okay

MR DRY: I'd like to now go to Government's Exhibit 347, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, this is a questionnaire that attorneys from Star Scientific ask you to fill out, correct, a disclosure requirement?

A It's an internal one at the company

MR DRY: Okay Would move Government's Exhibit 347 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q What's the purpose of this internal questionnaire?

A It's a questionnaire sent to the officers and the directors of the company so they can obtain the materials that they need in order to accurately prepare the company's security exchange filings

Q So is this information used by the company's lawyers to complete like the annual report?

A That's correct

Q And who does the annual report go to?

A The shareholders

Q And what was your understanding of your legal obligations to be truthful to shareholders?

A My understanding was to be truthful to the shareholders

Q All right Well, let's -- let's talk about that a little bit Going to -- and you knew that you had disclosure requirements to shareholders, right?

A I did

Q And you knew generally that it was prohibited for you to give things of value to government officials in return for stuff, right?

A I did

Q And you knew that if you were going to do that, that would be something that you'd have to report You knew that, right?

A Yes

Q Well, let's go to -- let's go to the sixth page of the exhibit

A I knew that in general Not from in writing and documents, but I just -- my general understanding

Q You knew it?

A I knew it

Q All right Well, let's go to the question 11 I'm going to read this and you make sure that I've read this correctly "I have knowledge, or a reason to believe, that the company, at any time since January 1, 2011, has or may have engaged, directly or indirectly, in: Any bribes or kickbacks to government officials (both domestic and foreign) or their relatives, or any other payments to such persons, whether or not legal, to obtain or retain business or to receive favorable treatment with regard to business "

Did I read that correctly?

A Yes

Q And that's marked false, right?

A Yes

Q What box should have been checked?

A It should have been true

Q Why?

A It should have been true because I was making payments

Q And you were making payments in exchange for what?

A To help our company

Q And at this point you had already loaned the McDonnells $50,000, right?

A Yes

Q And you had already given a 15,000-dollar check for the wedding reception?

A Yes

Q You had already had the shopping spree, the Rolex, the vacation, right, all of that?

A Yes

Q The dinners, golf clubs, all of that?

A That's correct

MR DRY: Let's go to the eleventh page of the exhibit I'm sorry It should be 681 on the bottom I think the next page The top of that, please

BY MR DRY:

Q This is the Signatures and Certifications block, right?

A Yes

Q I'm just going to read to you the second paragraph in the first block "I understand that the information that I am furnishing to you herein will be used by the company in the preparation of the annual report The answers to the questions set forth above are accurate and complete to the best of my knowledge "

Did you sign that?

A It's not my signature, but I authorized it to be signed

Q Okay That's Jerri Fulkerson's signature?

A It is

Q And you told her to sign it?

A I did

Q And the date was March 12 -- 2nd of 2012, right?

A Yes

Q Did you even bother to review this document before telling her to sign it?

A I did not read it

Q But you knew generally, you knew that you had to keep what you were doing with the Governor secret, didn't you?

A I did

Q If you had read it, would you have checked that box any differently?

A No

Q You would have still lied, right?

A I didn't want anyone to know

THE COURT: All right We are going to stop here for lunch It's 1:00 If you all could come back, let's make it five after 2, we'll get started with the afternoon session

THE COURT: All right

(Luncheon recess taken from 1:05 p.m. to 2:05 p m.)

THE COURT: All right, bring in the jury, please

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

All right, Mr Dry?

BY MR. DRY:

Q Mr Williams, I think where we finished up was the March 2nd of 2012 disclosure, the Internal Disclosure Form. I'd like to now bring up what's previously been admitted as Government Exhibit 352 Can we blow up the top portion, please? Sir, this is a check written to MoBo Realty in the amount of $50,000 off of Starwood Trust. What is Starwood Trust?

A It is a trust that my children are the beneficiaries of

Q Okay, sir And who is the trustee of this trust at this time?

A My brother, Donnie Williams

Q Okay And Donnie was the trustee, but were you making decisions regarding what happened in the trust?

A Yes

Q And if the trust was writing checks, typically you would authorize those and Ms Fulkerson would check with your brother; is that right?

A Yes In this case I called my brother, also.

Q You called your brother and explained to him you were going to do this $50,000 check?

A Yes

Q Okay Did you instruct Ms Fulkerson to write the check after speaking with your brother?

A I did

Q Why is the check written to MoBo Realty, sir?

A That's who I was asked to have the check made out to

Q Asked by whom?

A I believe Maureen or the Governor, one or the other

Q One or the other?

A Yes

Q Did you know what MoBo Realty was?

A Somewhere through here, I had learned what it was from the brother-in-law, I believe, earlier on talking about it

Q Okay And what was your understanding when you wrote this check of what MoBo Realty -- instructed Ms Fulkerson to write the check, what MoBo was?

A MoBo Realty was, I don't know the legal entity of it, but it was a partnership owned by the Governor and his wife, and the Governor's sister and her husband.

Q Okay And the Governor's sister was Maureen Uncapher at this time?

A I believe so.

Q Now, were you aware that there were checks that were voided out?

A I've learned that

Q Okay But at the time you didn't --

A I didn't pay any attention to it

Q And did you instruct Jerri Fulkerson not to have Maureen McDonnell's name on the checks?

A All I can tell you is that I just had the check made out to who I was told by the Governor or his wife who to ultimately make it out to

Q So you don't remember a specific conversation with Jerri Fulkerson about that?

A As I sit here, I don't

Q Now, what was this $50,000 for? What was it?

A It was additional money to help them out with the beach property

Q Okay And so I think you previously testified you didn't do the stock transaction, right?

A That's correct

Q And so was this basically a way to get more money to the Governor and his family?

A It was

Q Did you ever have any loan paperwork associated with this new $50,000 loan?

A No

Q And at the time that you wrote this check, what did you expect to get in return from the Governor?

A I expected what had already happened, that he would continue to help me move this product forward in Virginia

Q And how, sir?

A Whether it was assisting with the universities, with the testing, or help with government employees, or publicly supporting the product

Q Now, after this $50,000, did you give another $20,000 to the McDonnells?

A I did.

Q Let's bring up Government Exhibit 374, please The top e-mail is from Jerri Fulkerson on behalf of you to Mr McDonnell, correct?

A Yes

MR. DRY: I'd like to move for the admission of Government Exhibit 374

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, going to the bottom e-mail, sir, that's from Mr McDonnell to your e-mail account, correct?

A Yes

Q And that says, "Can you talk tomorrow for a few minutes on Sandbridge Hope all is well How is your golf game Best to Celeste " And Celeste was who?

A My wife

Q And Sandbridge, what did you understand him to be talking about as, far as a few minutes on Sandbridge?

A That they needed some more money

Q Okay And the date? When you say "they," who?

A The Governor and his wife.

Q And the date of that e-mail is May 14th, 2012?

A Yes

Q And on the top of it, Ms Fulkerson responds and says: "Jonnie asked me to send you an e-mail asking you to call him at your convenience He is available all day " There is a number listed. Is that your cell phone number?

A It is

Q Is Ms McDonnell on this e-mail? Either one of them?

A I don't see it

Q Okay Let's go to Government Exhibit 375 That is very small So let's go to the second, I think it is blown up. This is a text message from you to the Governor on May 14th, 2012 at 1:20 p.m. Correct?

A Yes

MR. DRY: Government would move Government Exhibit 375 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, that basically just says, "Got e-mail, call any time Jonnie " Correct?

A Yes

Q These text messages were just between you and the Governor, correct?

A That's correct

Q Government Exhibit 379, please This is an e-mail from the Governor to you on May 18th, 2012 at 5:26 p.m., correct?

A Yes

MR. DRY: The government moves for admission of Government Exhibit 379 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q The date of that text message is May 18th. That's four days later, right?

A Correct

Q And Mr McDonnell writes: "Johnnie Per voicemail, would like to see if you could extend another 20k loan for this year Call if possible and I'll ask Mike to send instructions Thx Bob " Did you receive this text message, sir?

A I did.

Q First of all, is that the correct spelling of your name?

A No

Q Government's Exhibit 380, please Now, this is a text message from you to the Governor at 5:38 p.m., correct?

A Yes

Q That's basically 12 minutes after that other text message was sent to you, right?

A Right

Q And in this one, you write: "Done Tell me who to make it out to and address Will FedEx. Jonnie " Why are you asking him who to make it out to?

MR. DRY: I'd like to admit Exhibit 380 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q Why are you asking the Governor who to make the check out to?

A I have no idea who to make the check -- who he wants the check written to

Q Now, you say yes within 12 minutes Did you have a conversation with the Governor about what the terms of this new $20,000 loan was going to be?

A I don't recall having that conversation

Q So did you think it was going to be -- what did you think the terms were going to be?

A Whatever the ones were before

Q Okay And was there a written loan agreement for this one?

A No

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 389, please. This is a text message from you to the Governor, 5/25 2012 at 12:02 a.m.; is that correct?

A Yes.

MR. DRY: Government moves Government Exhibit 389 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q There, you say, "MoBo was done Tuesday Golf game improving Hope to play with you and Phil Homestead Star doing great Jonnie " You say MoBo was done Tuesday Is that because you had sent the money, the $20,000?

A Yes

Q And these text messages that we have just gone over, those were just between you and the Governor, correct?

A Yes

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 390, please. Now, this is a text message from the Governor to you, correct?

A Yes

MR. DRY: The government would move Government

390 into evidence

THE COURT: What's the number again?

MR. DRY: 390, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR DRY:

Q And this one, the Governor writes: "Thanks so much for the help See you in a few weeks " You in fact loaned the Governor another $20,000, right?

A I did.

Q Now, this one, was it a check or a wire transfer? Do you remember?

A I don't recall I don't know

Q Okay. At the time that you loaned the money to the Governor, did you think he was your personal friend?

A No

Q Why were you loaning him money, the next $20,000?

A I was loaning him money so that he would help our company

Q Were there various times in 2012 that you and the Governor communicated about Star Scientific stock?

A Yes

Q And let's do some examples Government Exhibit 370, please This is a text message from the Governor to you, correct? That's your phone number there?

A Yes

MR DRY: The government would request the admission of Government Exhibit 370 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. DRY:

Q The date of this text message is April 28th of 2012

A Yes

Q So this is before the $20,000 that we just talked about, right?

A Right

Q And it is sent at 1:59 a.m. Can you read what the Governor wrote to you there?

A "Stock going great Alzheimers study announcement really helped. Thanks for coming to Romney event and helping him. Gov "

Q And you have had an opportunity to review these text messages before today, correct?

A I have

Q And that makes it easier for you to read them?

A It does

Q Can we go to Government Exhibit 392, please Do you recognize this as an e-mail from Mr McDonnell to you on June 13th, 2012?

A Yes

MR DRY: The government moves Government Exhibit 392 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. DRY:

Q This is on June 13th, 2012 What does the Governor write to you there?

A "Stock looking good. Well done Gov "

Q All right Let's go to Government Exhibit 395, please I believe this is already admitted. Now, the bottom e-mail is from the Governor to you What does he say there, sir?

A It says, "Congrats on the patent for Anatabine Progress continues "

Q Okay And then Ms Fulkerson forwards you that e-mail, right?

A "Good announcements lately Stock looks good. Hope all is well You and Celeste enjoy the 4th of July
Gov "

Q Was it unusual for you to get text messages from people about how Star Scientific's stock price was doing?

A No.

Q Why not?

A They generally comment when it is good and they generally comment when it is bad.

Q When you say "they" --

A Shareholders

Q Did you and the Governor ever discuss the ownership of Star stock?

A He said he was a shareholder I didn't know how many shares he owned, though.

Q What was the context of those conversations?

A Make a comment like, you know, "I'm a shareholder and I'm rooting for you."

Q Okay And was that generally when you were discussing how things were going with Star?

A I can't say in particular

Q Okay But you know that you had those kinds of conversations

A Yes

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 397, please This is another text message from you to the Governor This is July 3rd of 2012 Do you recognize this document, sir?

held on July 12th?
A Yes
Q Tell the jury about those discussions
A She called and said she was in Williamsburg and that they were having the Republican Governors' Meeting there, and she said it would be a good opportunity to have Anatabloc there, but it was kind of late And I said, "Well, I'll have someone run it down so that they can place it in the rooms for the governors "
Q And when you say "run it down," what does that mean?
A Deliver it
Q And you are delivering samples of Anatabloc?
A Samples of Anatabloc, I believe to the Williamsburg Inn or wherever it was that they were staying
Q Were you happy about this?
A Any time I have an opportunity to put Anatabloc in front of somebody, I feel good about it
Q And was it good that these were governors?
A That was very good.
Q Okay Now, let's go to the Chatham Bars Inn trip What is the Chatham Bars Inn? What is that?

A Yes

Q What is that?

A It is a Cognac.

Q Okay What kind of Cognac?

A It is expensive Cognac

Q Okay Ball park me on how much. If I went to a store, how much would this cost me?

A If you bought it at the ABC store, it would probably cost 3,000 a bottle In a restaurant it would probably be 5,000 or so

Q Now, you had previously talked about this charity auction that was back in September of 2011 This Cure By Design and the auction for a trip. Right?

A Yes

Q Was that trip that you won or that you purchased --

A I bought

Q That you bought, was that to Chatham Bars Inn or was that something else?

A That was a trip in New York.

Q Okay So were these trips related in any way?

A Not in my mind.

Q Did you expense this trip to Star Scientific?

A I did.

Q And why did you do that?

A Because I was working the entire weekend.

Q What do you mean by that, sir?

A I was working I was there with Dr Ladenson to try to help get the Governor more involved.

Q And at this time, did you think that the Governor was still going to assist you with your company?

A I did.

Q Let's go to -- let's take that down, please I want to change topics I want to go to Government Exhibit 431 Now, this is a series of text messages, sir And these are between you and the Governor; is that correct?

A Let me look at it just a moment and make sure, unless you know it is

Q No, I want you to make sure

A Yes

Q Okay In fact, let's go down all the way to the bottom. These text messages were produced by you from your cell phone, right?

A Yes

Q Okay So let's go to the top and let's take these in order These are November 22nd, this is from you to the Governor Can you just read what you wrote to the Governor on November 22nd?

A "Happy Thanksgiving from the Williams kitchen."

MR. DRY: I'm sorry I'd like to admit Government Exhibit 431 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. DRY:

Q Sorry to interrupt you, sir Go ahead.

A "Happy Thanksgiving from the Williams kitchen."

Q And then let's scroll down And this was from the Governor back to you What did he write there?

A What do I write or what does he write?

Q What did he write

A "Jonnie Thanks for all you do for me and my family Governor "

Q Is that the correct spelling of your name?

A I didn't see it Yes, it is

Q Okay Now, going down, this is your response to him. What do you write there?

A "Your family is very special "

Q And then I think on the second page you continue Keep going down. You send another text message right after that Go down to the content You write, "You too " Correct?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, the first, can we go back to the first page, because it is,a little bit -- the very top one, the text message That was sent at 6:56 p.m. on November 22nd, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And let's go to Exhibit 432, please This is a text message photo that you send to the Governor

MR. DRY: The United States would ask to admit Government Exhibit 432 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q And this was right after you sent that first text message, you sent a photo, right?

A Yes

Q Can we go to the second page to blow up the -- yeah In fact, let's just go to the third page, because that's even bigger There we go What is this photo of?

A That's the kitchen at my house out in Goochland

Q Okay And who are those people?

A The left is Chef Leo and his wife

Q Chef Leo

A Yes

Q Who is Chef Leo?

A Chef Leo is someone I met a few years ago that when we are home in the house out in Goochland on Thanksgiving and Christmas, he comes over and prepares dinner

Q And in fact,✓ was this Thanksgiving?

A It was

Q And what was Chef Leo's relationship with the McDonnells at this time?

A He was their chef, too

Q At the Mansion?

A Yes

Q And how did that come about?

A They had lost their chef or had a problem with their chef, and she called me

Q When you say "she," who?

A Ms McDonnell And said, "Jonnie, do you know a chef?" And I said, "I do And I'll give you his name and number But if you hire him, you can't have him on Thanksgiving and Christmas "

Q Why not?

A Because I need him.

Q Okay Fair enough. So why are you sending this e-mail or text message to the Governor?

A I was poking at the Governor a little right here Sort of, I knew that Leo had told me that they -- he had prepared their dinner and it was being heated up

Q I got you.

A And I was probably being silly a little bit right here

Q Okay Well, this wasn't the only photo of the chef that you sent to the Governor, was it?

A No.

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 445 This is a text message you sent on December 24th of 2012 to the Governor, correct?

A Yes

MR. DRY: Government seeks to admit Government Exhibit 445 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q Okay You sent that at what time, sir?

A 7:46 in the evening on Christmas Eve

Q On Christmas Eve Let's go to the second page That's the photo Then let's go to the third page, which is the actual digital portion of this Who is that on the left-hand side?

A Chef Leo.

Q Who is on the right-hand side?

A That's my wife, Celeste

Q And this was Christmas Eve of 2012; is that right?

A Yes In the living room.

Q And why are you sending him this photo of the chef?

A Because Chef Leo told me that they were -- he had prepared dinner and they were heating it up.

Q Okay Well, did you get a text message response from these photos?

A I did

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 444, please This is an image that was on your cell phone; is that right?

A Yes

MR. DRY: The government seeks to admit Government Exhibit 444 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Let's go to the larger one Sir, did you receive that soon after you sent that text message on December 24th?

A Yes

Q And this is a picture of what?

A Picture of the Governor showing off a watch

Q And the watch there, what does that look like?

A Your question was?

Q Do you recognize the watch?

A It looks like the Rolex that I purchased in Malibu

Q Before you received this picture, had you ever had any discussions with the Governor about the Rolex?

A No

Q Okay So did you know whether he knew who it was from or anything like that before you received this photo?

A No

Q Okay

A I had no direct communication with him about it

Q Okay Now, at some point, does your brother start helping out the McDonnells in some way?

A He does

Q And how does that come about?

A The McDonnells were going to, I believe, a football game that they wanted to go to one Sunday and Maureen called me and said, "I have to go over to Wyndham." It may have been on a Saturday, was telling me what the problem was They wanted to go to a football game, but they had to go paint the deck and clean up the house over at Wyndham, the yard work, landscaping And so she was complaining about it And so I told her I would help her with it

Q She is complaining about doing the yard work?

A She is complaining about doing the yard work and painting the deck.

Q And did she ask you how you got that stuff done for your house?

A She knew that

Q She knew what?

A She knew from when she was over at my house out in Goochland that there are people that work there

Q Okay And you agreed to help her out What did that mean?

A Whether to do the minimal amount of landscaping or deck painting or whatever it was that she needed so she could go to the football game on Sunday

Q And so what did you do?

A My younger brother is a retired police officer, and I called him and asked him if he would help me out with it and deal with it

Q And what did he do?

A I think he got, arranged for another person or two to help him and went over there and dealt with it

Q Okay And was there -- how much work did he do there?

A I'm not sure I didn't learn until two or three weeks later that he was still doing work there I hadn't talked to him. And he said he was still there

Q Okay Was the Governor aware that your brother was doing yard work and home improvement projects at his house?

A Yes

Q How do you know that?

A I talked to the Governor about it

Q And what did he say?

A He said, "Donnie is a good guy He is a nice fellow Thank you for helping us out "

Q Okay Now, Mr Williams, you were interviewed by law enforcement agents on January 23rd, 2013? Do you remember that?

A I remember it very well, sir

Q Okay And you were interviewed by Special Agent, FBI Special Agent Kennedy and Virginia State Police Special Agent Charlie Halen; do you remember that?

A That's correct

Q Now, when they came to interview you, were you completely honest with them?

A No

Q In fact, what did you tell them about, first of all, who is Paul Perito?

A Paul Perito is a very good friend of mine, a very close friend of mine, and he also happens to be the Chairman and the President of Star Scientific He is a lawyer

Q He is a lawyer?

A Former federal prosecutor

Q Okay What did you tell the agents about whether Paul Perito knew about all your business dealings?

A I told them that everything that I do goes through

Paul Perito

Q Was that true?

A Not in this case it wasn't

Q In fact, did Mr Perito know about the loans to the McDonnells?

A He didn't No one did except for my secretary and myself

Q What did you tell the law enforcement agents when they asked you whether you ever got anything in exchange for the loans to the McDonnells?

A I don't recall what I said to that

Q Okay

(Document proffered to witness)

A I see it There are a lot of highlighted areas

Q Okay I want you to put that to the side now So the question before you is, what did you tell the law enforcement agents when they asked you whether you ever got anything in exchange for the loans to the McDonnells?

MR. ASBILL: Objection.

THE COURT: Does that refresh your recollection?

THE WITNESS: Does it refresh my recollection? Yes Seeing this document and saying that, yes

MR. BURCK: I just ask that Mr Dry identify the document that he has put in front of the witness

THE COURT: Go ahead and identify the document for me.

MR. DRY: It is your Report of Interview from that interview, correct?

THE WINTESS: Okay, yes

BY MR DRY:

Q And you hadn't seen that report before today?

A I've never seen this document

Q The question is, what did you tell the law enforcement agents when they asked you whether you ever got anything in return for the loans to the McDonnells?

A I was not truthful and I told them that I didn't receive anything

Q All right What did you tell the law enforcement agents about whether you ever asked for anything in return from the Governor?

A I don't recall telling them I asked for anything

Q But had you in fact been asking for things?

A I had.

Q And can I see that back?

(Document proffered to Mr Dry)

THE COURT: Holdup, Mr Dry We have a juror having a little coughing spasm. So we will just wait I'll tell you what, let's take ten minutes

(Recess taken from 2:58 p.m. to 3:11 p.m.)

THE COURT: All right, let's bring in the jury

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

All right

BY MR. DRY:

Q Mr Williams, I believe that the question I asked was, what did you tell the law enforcement agents about whether you asked for anything from the Governor? And you said that you did not specifically recall Right?

A Yes

Q I'd like you to review that document That's a separate portion That's the same report It is a different page of that I'd like you to review that, the underlined portion. I'd like you to put it aside Does that refresh your recollection?

A Yes

Q What did you tell the law enforcement agents about whether you ever asked for anything from the Governor or expected anything?

A I didn't ask for anything and I didn't expect anything

Q And was that true?

A No, it wasn't

Q And why were you lying to the law enforcement agents?

A The questions that they were asking me caused me to believe that the Governor was in trouble or may be in trouble, and if he was in trouble, I could be, also

Q Okay And if the Governor was in trouble, what were you and the Governor going to be in trouble for?

A The Governor was in financial trouble And I needed his help And I think the trouble would be, what was wrong was, I went to the Governor with this big discovery that I had, and I just made a mistake because I thought the Governor could help bring this product to marketplace and it was the right thing to do But the reasons that I was loaning him money and helping his family, I needed his help, but it was wrong to do that.

Q Well, to be clear, you knew it was wrong at the time; that's why you were hiding it

A I did. I knew it I knew it was wrong I thought the ends justified the means And I was wrong I should have just, you know, I should have just tried to figure out how to do it a different way, but I didn't.

Q All right

MR. DRY: I want to make sure he is not looking at anything

(Document retrieved from witness)

BY MR. DRY:

Q Now, after you were interviewed by law enforcement, did you have any conversations with Mr and Ms McDonnell to tell them that law enforcement agents had interviewed you about their relationship with you?

A No

Q Let's bring up Government Exhibit 470 This is a text message produced from your phone from Ms McDonnell; is that correct?

A It is

MR. DRY: Government seeks to admit Government Exhibit 470 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Blow that up And that's sent on January 24th That's a week after your interview with law enforcement, correct?

A Yes

Q And I'll just go ahead and read this "Jonnie Would you like to stay at our beach house in Sandbridge for some of the time you are in Virginia? Pick the best days and take the time with your family on the ocean Or you can have a Star Scientific retreat there and have your team come down and join you for a meeting If one of the weekends works out with his legislative schedule, I'll bring Bob down and then you would have some private time to talk somewhere he is comfortable Let me know what you think. MM."

Did you follow up on this?

A No

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 484, please This is an e-mail between you and Ms McDonnell, actually, between your wife, you, and Ms McDonnell; is that correct?

A To my wife, me, from Ms McDonnell

MR. DRY: Government seeks to admit Government Exhibit 484 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. DRY:

Q Okay, sir, the date of this is February 11th, 2013, correct?

A Yes

Q Had you had any conversations with Mr McDonnell or Ms McDonnell informing them that you had been interviewed by law enforcement regarding your relationship with them?

A No

Q Okay The bottom e-mail is from the Governor It is e-mailing his children and cc -ing his wife I'm going to read this to you, sir Make sure I get it correct

"Kids Asking for help Need to rent the beach houses at Sandbridge more Willing to give your friends a discount for the times its tougher to rent Will you help us and e-mail your friends list and tell them your family has a few beach houses for rent Do not mention me And will give a friend discount 10 percent off from now until May 15 and 20 percent off October 15 through March 30, 2014 They can go to www sandbridge com to see Sunseeker or east coast palace Thanks kids Also plan to use it some yourselves this year Love Dad."

Ms McDonnell forwards that to you and your wife, correct?

A Yes

Q And what did you think was the purpose of that e-mail?

A It is wintertime, and I don't think many people are attracted to Sandbridge in the wintertime

Q And so why is she e-mailing that to you or forwarding the e-mail to you?

MR. BURCK: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR. DRY:

Q All right Let's go to Government Exhibit 3, please Do you recognize that document?

A I do

Q And this is a handwritten letter that you received from Ms McDonnell?

A It is

MR. DRY: The government moves Government Exhibit 3 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q All right, before we read the document, sir, let's take a step back. How did you receive this letter?

A It was in a box that was delivered to my house in Goochland on the kitchen counter

Q And do you remember approximately when it showed up?

A Sometime in February.

Q February or March?

A Or March. I don't know the date I don't know the date --

Q Okay

A -- that it was there

Q But you said it was in a box.

A It was

Q Is it the only thing that's in the box?

A No It was a large box on the kitchen counter when I came in the house, and I actually thought it had been shipped there from my wife or daughter from somewhere.

Q All right What happens? There is a big box in your house in Goochland. What happens? Do you open the box?

A I'm curious, so I open the box

Q And what do you find in the box?

A Looked like most of the things from the shopping spree in New York. And this letter

Q When you say the shopping spree, is this the stuff that you had purchased for Ms McDonnell in New York?

A It is

Q And you said the letter was in there What was your reaction when you opened up the box?

A It was a sinking feeling It was like, "Oh, no "

Q And why?

A I sat down in a chair in the den and read this letter over and over, and this letter, this letter was a fabrication.

Q Let's talk about, first of all, you are not sure of the exact date, but this was March of 2013?

A Yes

Q I'm going to read the letter to you.

A Okay

Q "Dear Celeste and Jonnie. I can't begin to thank you how special you made me feel on Cailin's wedding day and on our 35th wedding anniversary day all dressed up in the beautiful outfits you adorned me in on both momentous occasions I'm so happy we have been able to share so many significant milestones in our lives with you both I Truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits and show them off on many grand occasions If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about who would welcome the opportunity to auction them for a wonderful cause, having been worn only once by the First Lady of Virginia to her daughter's wedding at the Executive Mansion and celebrating her 35th wedding anniversary with the Governor Actually, if that happens, I think I'll be there to bid on them myself Please know that we cherish our friendship with you and look forward to many more wonderful memories together ahead. XOXO, Maureen McDonnell "

Let's take a step back. This 35th wedding anniversary, what's she referring to there?

A When we went to New York, it was for an anniversary dress, and also for one of the parts of the wedding, maybe the reception or what have you.

Q And did you attend a 35th wedding anniversary party?

A I did.

Q And where was that at?

A In Barboursville, just outside of Charlottesville

Q And whose anniversary was this?

A The Governor and his wife

Q And who did you bring with you?

A My wife

Q Okay Now, in the letter, it talks about your daughter enjoying the outfits Had you ever discussed with Ms McDonnell the idea of her returning the outfits to you before this box showed up?

A No.

Q And had she ever discussed returning the outfits so that your daughter could enjoy them?

A No.

Q Had she ever discussed the idea of returning the outfits so that they could be auctioned off for charity?

A No

Q What was your reaction when you read the letter?

A I was -- I felt sorry for her

Q Were you worried for yourself?

A I was worried for myself, but at that moment when I read this letter and I sat down, I felt sorry for her

Q Well, what's the first thing you did after you got this letter and box? After you read the letter, what did you do?

A I called Jerry Kilgore at McGuireWoods

Q That's a law firm?

A A law firm here in Richmond

Q He is a lawyer as well, right?

A I called him right after I read it

Q What happened next? After you called him, what happened?

A He sent someone to come pick the box up.

Q With the letter?

A With the letter

Q All right At some point, the investigation, there starts to be news accounts of your relationship with Mr and Ms McDonnell, right?

A Yes

Q And that was around Easter of 2013?

A Yes

Q By that point, you had hired your own personal attorneys?

A Yes

Q And let's go to 506, please This is, the bottom is an e-mail from you to Ms McDonnell; is that right?

A Yes

Q I'm sorry, a text message

A A text message

MR. DRY: The government seeks to move Government Exhibit 506 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. DRY:

Q Now in this, sir, you write to Ms McDonnell: "Celeste and I are proud to be your friends We both admire how hard you and Gov work for Virginia We will do anything for you. Jonnie " This is after you have been interviewed, right?

A Yes

Q And you knew that Ms McDonnell had been interviewed?

A Yes

Q By law enforcement?

A Yes

Q Why are you sending this text message?

A I felt sorry for her

Q Why do you feel sorry for her, sir?

A I don't want anyone in trouble, and she was in financial -- they were in financial stress and hardship.

Q Let's be clear, though. How did you know that Ms McDonnell had been interviewed by law enforcement?

A My brother No, I don't recall

Q Did you have a conversation with your brother when the box comes back?

A I did.

Q And does he relay a conversation he had with Ms McDonnell?

A He did.

Q As a result of that, did you understand that Ms McDonnell had been interviewed by law enforcement?

A I did.

Q And this is going to go into the press; the press now is getting a hold of this, right?

A Yes

Q When you say you felt sorry for Ms McDonnell, had your brother communicated anything that Ms McDonnell wanted told to you through your brother?

A Yes

Q What was that?

A That's why I felt sorry

Q What was that?

A He said that she was crying --

MR. BURCK: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR DRY:

Q All right Did you have a romantic relationship with Ms McDonnell?

A No

Q Did she ever say anything to you indicating that she believed you had some romantic relationship?

A No

Q What type of relationship did you have with the McDonnells?

A I thought I had a business relationship with both of them.

Q But you called them your friends in some text messages?

A Business friends I liked them both But it was a business relationship

Q Now, after you are interviewed by law enforcement, you knew that you were under investigation for things unrelated to your relationship with the McDonnells, right?

A Yes.

Q And you understood that you might be under investigation for that, too, right?

A Yes

Q The other stuff, what was your understanding of what you were being investigated for that was not related to the McDonnells?

A Securities filings, a bank loan -- bank loans, and the Starwood Trust investments

Q And when you say the Starwood Trust investments, that was your control of Starwood Trust?

A Yes

Q And your relationship with Mr McKeon?

A Yes

Q And some transactions that you two had entered into, right?

A That's correct

Q Now, ultimately, you agreed to cooperate with federal authorities in their public corruption investigation of the McDonnells

A I did.

Q Why did you agree to cooperate in that investigation?

A It was the right thing to do

Q Were you worried about yourself?

A I was worried about myself, too

Q Let's talk about what you got in return for your cooperation Let's start with -- you agreed to be interviewed by law enforcement on July 1st of 2013, right?

A Yes

Q And between your first interview with law enforcement on January 23rd of 2013 and July 1st of 2013, had you talked to any law enforcement agents?

A No

Q Had you been interviewed?

A No

Q And you had lawyers at that point, right?

A I had lawyers

Q Okay Now, let's bring up Government Exhibit 524 And sir, this is a proffer agreement Have you seen this document before?

A I have I have seen it

Q And under the terms of that, this agreement, what were you required to do?

A To answer all the questions truthfully

Q And could anything that you say during this interview be used against you if you were charged?

A Not as long as I told the truth.

Q Okay Going to the third page of the exhibit, did you sign this?

A I did sign this agreement

Q And that was with your attorneys, right?

A That's correct

Q Now, after you are interviewed --

MR. DRY: Government Exhibit 524 into evidence, Your Honor?

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q When you are interviewed, do you want immunity from prosecution for your relationship with the McDonnells, right?

A Yes

Q Let's go to Government Exhibit 523 And this is an actual immunity agreement that was entered into after your interview; is that right?

A Yes

MR. DRY: Government seeks to admit Government Exhibit 523 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, what was your understanding of what you were required to do under the terms of this agreement?

A The first one

Q The first one

A To answer all the questions truthfully

Q I'm sorry, there is a proffer agreement and this immunity agreement‹ So this one

A Yes

Q What is your understanding of what you have to do under this agreement?

A To cooperate with the government in its investigation and answer questions.

Q And what are you getting in return?

A That I won't be charged for any corruption.

Q Any corruption involving anybody?

A Involving the Governor during this period.

Q Okay Well, on that first paragraph, it says, "would receive transactional immunity in exchange for his complete and truthful cooperation regarding potential violations of criminal law related to his agreement to provide, and his provision of, things of value to Virginia Governor Robert F McDonnell, First Lady of Virginia Maureen P McDonnell, and their family members "

A Yes

Q Does this say anything about securities fraud, sir?

A No

Q Does it say anything about your relationship with Starwood Trust?

A No

Q Does it say anything about your relationship with Mr McKeon?

A No

Q What was your understanding of whether you could be prosecuted for any of those other things after this agreement?

A I could.

Q And why did you want immunity from prosecution related to your relationship with the McDonnells?

A Because when I answered those questions truthfully, the answers to those questions exposed me to trouble

Q Trouble?

A Trouble, possible criminal charges

Q Okay Now, let's go to the second page of this That's your signature at the bottom?

A Yes

Q Going to the third page, that's your attorneys' signatures?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, that was July 1st of 2013 From that time until June 5th of this year, did you have any other agreements with the government?

A No

Q During that period of time, did you continue to be interviewed by the government?

A I did.

Q Were you interviewed on September 12th, 2013?

A I want to answer the question, but unless I know that particular date, I just don't like saying that I did that

Q You were interviewed in between the time you got the first immunity agreement and the time that you got the second one?

A Yes

Q And you were interviewed about your relationship with the McDonnells, right?

A Yes

Q Did you tell the truth during those interviews?

A I did.

Q But subsequently, you entered into another immunity agreement with the government, right?

A I did.

Q Please bring up Government Exhibit 530 Now, before you entered into this second agreement, what was your understanding of whether you could have been charged with your relationship with Mr McKeon, the Starwood Trust, or anything else unrelated to the McDonnells?

A I could, but I wasn't concerned about that

Q Okay Did you ask for a second immunity agreement?

A I did not I did not ask or demand an agreement

Q Let's talk about this second agreement In the second paragraph, I'll read it --

MR DRY: Admit Government Exhibit 530 into evidence, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR DRY:

Q In the second paragraph, it says the conduct for which you would receive immunity "is limited to conduct involving his agreement to provide and his provision of things of value to former Virginia Governor Robert F McDonnell, former First Lady of Virginia Maureen P McDonnell, and their family members; conduct related to loans Williams received from 2009 to 2012 in exchange for his pledge of Star Scientific stock; and conduct related to Williams' gifts of Star Scientific stock to certain trusts from 2009 to 2012 No other conduct or potential violations of federal criminal law are covered by this agreement "

So you understood -- what did you understand you to be getting immunity for?

A For what it just says here

Q Were you getting immunity for anything else?

A No

Q Now, what was your understanding of what you were required to do under the terms of this agreement?

A To cooperate with the government and tell the truth

Q And what was your understanding of whether this agreement provided you any protection from civil lawsuits or civil government investigations or anything like that?

A It doesn't

Q As long as you provide truthful testimony here today, sir, what is your understanding of the risk of you going to jail?

A I don't have any risk of going to jail if I'm truthful

Q But if you lie under oath, what's your understanding of the risk of you going to jail?

A There is a possibility

MR. DRY: Just one moment, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sure

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

BY MR. DRY:

Q One last thing, sir On this agreement that we just spoke about, is this the agreement that you have been testifying under today, this last one?

A I don't have it on my screen The last one --

Q 530

A -- that was just here?

Q Yes, 530 In fact, I should have done this Let's go to the third page of that That's your signature there, sir, at the top?

A Yes, it is That's the agreement

MR DRY: The government will tender the witness, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Cross? Mr Burck, just so you will know, we are going to stop for the afternoon break at 4:15

MR. BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Williams

A Good afternoon.

Q My name is Bill Burck and I represent Maureen McDonnell Have we ever met before?

A I don't think so

Q And you have never met with me preparing for this trial, did you?

A No

Q And you have met with the government, though, to prepare for your testimony today?

A I have

Q How many times roughly?

A Maybe seven or eight times

Q Is that in addition to the meetings that you discussed, some of which you discussed with Mr Dry over the last year-and-a-half? He mentioned a meeting in September of last year, a meeting in July of last year, some other meetings

A I would say seven or eight times

Q Total?

A I just don't recall having that many meetings with them.

Q Okay Thank you You told us yesterday, and it was a while ago now, but yesterday you told us a little bit about yourself

A Yes

Q And Star Scientific and building up this business Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q And you mentioned, I think, that -- how long have you been at Star Scientific, or when did you start the company?

A About 1990

Q 1990 And before that, had you been in other businesses?

A Yes

Q Can you tell us a little bit about those businesses? Tell us where you come from.

A From the beginning?

Q From the beginning

A I grew up in Fredericksburg, Virginia, and went to

Stafford High School My family has been from that area for many, many generations And then I went to a small college in Providence, Rhode Island, Johnson and Wales And then I got married. I met my wife up there

Q That's Celeste?

A Celeste And then I came back to Virginia During the summers, I had worked at a car dealership in Fredericksburg at home I came back and went to work there for a short period of time. Then I went to work for a real estate developer in Fredericksburg His name was Carl D. Silver Then I invested into an optical business in one of the shopping centers that Carl --

Q An optical business?

A An optical business for eyeglasses And I invested money into that and was part owner of it The partner had a drug problem and left And so I was, I came in from in the real estate business, where I was successful, and tried to operate that business And it had a lot of debt and I couldn't make it work. When I was maybe 21 years old And it ultimately failed And during that process, I had met a friend of mine that's one of my best friends today He is an opthalmologist from Johns Hopkins His name is Frank O'Donnell And Frank O'Donnell was a real bright fellow And he would come down on weekends from Johns Hopkins and see patients in the optical and a physician practice and refer people to the optical shop And him and I developed a great friendship And then Dr O'Donnell was very bright, he graduated from Johns Hopkins He was chief resident his last year and was first in his class for plastics and ophthalmology And he left, and he was the Chairman of the Department of Ophthalmology at St Louis University School of Medicine, was his first job out of Johns Hopkins

Q Can you just orient us in time right now?

A Maybe 1980

Q Thank you Please go ahead

A Okay And then Dr O'Donnell moved to St Louis, back to his home, where he was the Chairman of the Ophthalmology Department and him and I kept in touch. The optical business didn't work out I don't want to drag you through this if there is --

Q I'm interested. Please

A Okay I just want to make sure I'm answering the question is all And then when the optical business didn't work out, my wife was from Massachusetts, and so we moved to Massachusetts to Hingham, Massachusetts, and I went to work when I was maybe 22 at a Mercedes Benz dealership called Prestige Imports in Hingham, Massachusetts. And Dr O'Donnell contacted me from St Louis, said, "Jonnie, I want to come visit you, I have an idea on something "

So Dr O'Donnell and I started a company called CME-SAT And then, so Dr O'Donnell had this idea about providing continuing medical education via satellite, so the doctors that are required to have their continuing medical education credit wouldn't have to travel and be inconvenienced. And at this time, satellite receivers were starting to come into play And so we formed this company And at the Mercedes Benz dealership, one of my customers was Tom Burns of the large law firm in Boston, Burns & Levinson. And one day I was in Boston going to, looking for Mr Prifty's office

Q Who is Mr Prifty?

A A corporate lawyer And I ran into Tom Burns walking down the street And Tom said, "Jonnie, where are you going?" And I said, "I'm looking for Mr Prifty, because my friend, Dr O'Donnell and I, are forming a company to broadcast continuing medical education via satellite " And he said, "Well, you don't need Mr Prifty, just come on with me " And I went inside Milk Street in Boston, and he introduced me to his partner, Larry Levinson And they said, "Listen, Jonnie, we know you are doing very well over at the Mercedes Benz dealership but we want you to move into our law firm. We are going to incubate you as a client for the law firm."

Q This is for the satellite business?

A Yes

Q So you are running two businesses at this point?

A No, I was starting it up I was just getting ready to start it up So then I quit my job And a person I got to be friends with and I'm still friends with, one of my customers was Doug Hajjar Doug Hajjar was a very bright fellow, Chief Financial Officer of M/A-Com. You see their satellite dishes around. So I called Doug, and Doug agreed to help me And so M/A-Com came into the deal with us And I went to New York and I arranged for the financing for us to start that company And we later sold out of that company and a group out of Canada took it over

Q Roughly how much money did you make off of that?

A I was 25 years old at the time I think I made $500,000 off of that

Q Then tell us, where did you go from there, because obviously you built Star Scientific, a big company

A Okay And then from there, Frank O'Donnell, Dr O'Donnell, the opthalmologist, he read a story in Time Magazine about a gentleman named Dr Werner Baumgartner at the hospital in Long Beach, California, where he had discovered a technology called radioimmunoassay of hair analysis to use for drug testing And so I contacted the doctor and went out and met with him. And at this point he just had an idea And so I brought in management, I raised the capital, put the company together, and that's a very successful company today It is actually used in the federal court system and major corporations for drug testing It is a profitable New York Stock Exchange company called Psychemedics. And --

Q What's the market cap on that?

A I don't know right now, maybe it is 70 or $80 million I haven't paid any attention to it It may be higher But it has been profitable, 69 quarters or so in a row

Q What's your percentage ownership of it?

A I don't own it now I sold it earlier

Q How much did you make off of that?

A I don't remember

Q Was it more than $500,000?

A Yes

Q Millions?

A Maybe

Q Please continue I just want to understand how you got to where you are

A Yes And then at the time, also at the time I was doing Psychemedics, I had invested in a company called Spectrum Pharmaceuticals at the request of my friend, Dr

O'Donnell His friend was starting this company And I invested money in it, but I wasn't involved in the organization or putting the company together And I made maybe $700,000 or a million dollars or more off of that, maybe two or so

And then right there at the same time, a fellow named Charles Munnerlyn had left CooperVision, a company that makes intraocular lenses in Sunnyvale, California -- I skipped one in there, a company called Eye Technology that makes intraocular lenses, and I did well with that With VISX, VISX was a company, an idea of Charles Munnerlyn. This is when, this is why you have lasik now, is because of VISX And I learned about it through Dr O'Donnell And I flew out Sunnyvale, California and met with Charles Munnerlyn He had just one office He had left CooperVision in a small rented place and had this idea that he could reshape the cornea to correct people's vision. And on the spot, I called Dr O'Donnell while I was there in Sunnyvale, and I said, "Frank, this looks good, you know, rush, we are like in Star Wars right here with this laser for putting a prescription on someone And, you know, they haven't even made it to animals This is a concept " And he said, "Well, it makes sense " And so I wrote them a check for $600,000, and I was the second largest shareholder of VISX And then I probably ended up raising them another $50 million back then.

Q When is this?

A This is back in maybe 1990, 1989 or 1990 somewhere

Q Right before Star Scientific?

A Through there And with VISX, by that time, this was maybe 24 years or so ago, by that time I was, off of VISX, I was making millions of dollars off of VISX.

Q Per year?

A At that point, I didn't come under -- until I started going into this healthcare area with the tobacco part, I was up in the millions of dollars a year Up until that point, even 25 years ago. 24 years ago My tax returns would show that

Q And did you use that money, the money you made off of that company, to start Star Scientific?

A I did.

Q Tell us about that How did Star Scientific --

A Star Scientific came about because I had loaned some money to a company in Petersburg, Virginia that had the old Brown & Williamson Tobacco Company

Q You mentioned that yesterday Go ahead

A So it was there, empty, and so I went in and bought it

Q How much did it cost?

A I put up at the time, the first check I wrote there, I paid off a bank for the equipment and then bought the building and maybe I spent a million-and-a-half dollars or so back then, 20 years or so ago And so at that point, I went to the President of Swisher International That's the largest cigar company in the world. They are in Jacksonville, Florida And I persuaded the CEO of that company, Tim Mann, since they didn't manufacture their own little cigars, to let me manufacture them in Petersburg, and that if that business grew large enough, I would help him move it out of there into Jacksonville at their manufacturing facility

Q Let me stop you there Swisher was the largest cigarette manufacturer in the world?

A Cigar

Q Excuse me You went to them and persuaded them to do what?

A To allow me to contract manufacture their small cigars at the Brown & Williamson factory in Petersburg

Q Had they been doing that in Petersburg before that?

A No.

Q So you are the one who convinced them to do it?

A I did

Q How did you do that?

A I went and met with Tim Mann, and I took with me a gentleman from Petersburg that's a friend of mine today, for many years, Paul Lamb And he was in charge of Brown & Williamson's operations when they were functional in Petersburg He was a tobacco engineer And I took Paul with me and convinced them that we could manufacture them in Petersburg

Q That was a big step forward for Star Scientific as a new company?

A Yes Within about -- I had the company profitable in maybe 120 days or so

Q And when you, let me make sure I understand, did you start it from scratch?

A I did

Q And you grew profitable in 120 days?

A I did I started it from scratch

Q How many successful companies is this for you?

A Psychemedics -- up until that point? Or up until now?

Q We will get to now But let's start with up until that point

A Up until that point, Eye Technology, Opthalmic Imaging Systems, a company called CA Blockers that didn't work, but the successful companies were VISX -- I don't know if I'm missing anything But four or five through there And then once I got the tobacco factory going in Petersburg, then I took that one into making millions of dollars fairly quickly, and then took the sales up to about 150 million

Q When did that happen, the 150 million?

A The 150 million was maybe fifteen years or so ago

Q Roughly late 1990's?

A I don't remember I don't recall exactly when it was But at the time, what I was doing is I had the company very profitable, and I had no debt And so at that point, Wrigley's Chewing Gum had just won the Advertising Age Award of the Year, marketing it to smokers And so I had an idea if you could put tobacco into -- small amounts of tobacco into the chewing gum, it may compete well with that So I went to Wrigley's, to the chewing gum company in Chicago, and they were afraid of it being tobacco So I found a company in, a large company in Mexico that was willing to make it

And then before I did that, I contacted the Food and Drug Administration at the Food Division, Bob Lake, and I went and met with him to explain to the FDA what it was; that I was in the cigarette business, contract cigarette business, and that I was manufacturing little cigars, but what I really wanted to do was try to move away from that and market products that would be safer alternatives for smokers

Q That must have been tough You are a cigar company and you are going to the FDA, Food and Drug Administration, to explain to them how you are now going to move into healthcare or health improvement products That can't be an easy conversation

A I don't think it was difficult They were very interested at this period in history with tobacco So I met with them, and they said, "You need to have experts " It is called under the Grass Certification, generally recognized as safe three experts And so I found the experts that worked in this area, and I went back to the Food and Drug Administration with that And when I went back, the room was full of people, and they had the FDA out of Rockville piped in from the Drug Division, other people, Legal And Bob Lake said, "Jonnie, you have to go to the -- go over to the Drug Division with this "

So I went to the Drug Division. And at the time, I had met Dr Jaffe, who was a former U S Drug Czar, and probably the most well-known addiction expert in the world, but he was anti-tobacco And I had him coming down to Virginia, to Richmond, on the weekends helping me so I could understand this When I went to the Drug Division, they said, "Jonnie, the problem," or actually, I was still back at the Food Division, they said, "The problem with what you have are the nitrosamines " And I asked one of the experts, "What are nitrosamines? Is this like hot dogs or what is this?" He said, "They are tobacco-specific nitrosamines that are formed during the curing of tobacco So I said to them, I said, "What about if I can remove the nitrosamines?" They said, "Good luck. No one has been able to do that "

Q Is this the origins of Anatabloc, the Anatabine?

A It is

Q Continue

A If you want me to stop, just say so

Q No, I don't Please continue

A And then at this point, I thought, well, I called Virginia Tech because it is an agricultural school And I tried to find an organic chemist that was familiar with that tobacco and they said, "You have to go to the University of Kentucky " So I called the University of Kentucky, and a nice fellow answered the phone, Dr Harold Burton. He was a nitrosamine expert And I asked him to give me a 101 to a 404 fast on tobacco-specific nitrosamines

Q What does that mean?

A In school, where you started your classes, 101 to 404

Q Okay

A So what happened was, I asked him, I said, "Dr Burton, are there nitrosamines in tobacco when it is green?" He said no. I said, "What about when it is yellow and it is ripe like a banana and the starches have gone to the sugar and the chlorophyll is left, like seventh grade science?" He said, "No, they haven't formed yet " "So when do they form, at the end of yellowing?" He said, "Yes, that's when they begin to form." I said, "So if I can put the brakes on the nitrosamines from forming, if I can put the brakes on at the end of yellowing, I should be able to prevent the nitrosamines from forming " And again, just real fast, the Indians had to learn this, the settlers had to learn this when they first came to Virginia in rotating the crops -- tobacco plants are large, leafy plants -- when you see that they are pulling a lot of nitrogen out of the soil that nitrogen gets converted into nitrate and in the presence of alkaloids or salts, like nicotine, anatabine, nornicotine, anabasine, in the presence of those salts, the microbial reduction of the nitrate to nitrate present, you form carcinogens In tobacco itself they are the carcinogens In tobacco smoke, 23 percent transfers the strongest and most abundant carcinogens even in cigarette smoke For my purposes I'm in smokeless and I'm trying to prevent this from forming at this point Now, once I did that, here is how I did it I thought, "Well, it must be a microbial situation This has to be bacteria during this, if it is at the end of yellowing " Now, I'm not a scientist, I'm not a doctor, but I'm rationalizing, but I've been exposed to technology companies from lasers to radioimmunoassays to drugs

Q You had technology companies, you came from technology

A Yes So I understood, I had a basic understanding of that So what I did was, I thought, well, maybe the microbials on the surface I'll send it out to Dr O'Donnell and have him take an excimer laser and hit it and see if that -- whatever microbial activity that is, that will work. But while I was waiting for that, I was sitting in my office at the cigarette factory in Petersburg and I thought, and that wavelength, microwave, removes moisture, and fast And it should also kill any microbial activity So I took the tobacco and put it in a microwave, a kitchen microwave at the end of yellowing And I stood there for 60 seconds, two minutes, three minutes, and I sent it off to the University of Kentucky to Dr Burton to be tested for nitrosamines And he received it and called me up and he said, "What did you do to the tobacco?" I said, "I'm not going to tell you Are the nitrosamines in the tobacco?" And he said, "No, how did you do this?" I said, "I'll tell you later I need you to come over here and visit with me " So when I received the tobacco back from the laser, the microbial part of it, I realized that the microbes were down in the plant The UV laser for, you know, ablating tissue was surface and that wasn't going to work. So I focused on the microwave I flew out to Amana Corporation in Iowa and met with the CEO and had him build me --

Q You said Humana?

A Amana Corporation that builds microwaves in Iowa And I built some microwaves, the length of this room.

Q Big microwave

A Well, what I did, once I had it working in a kitchen microwave, I sent someone that worked for me in the office down to Wal-Mart and bought 200 microwaves so I could see if I could cure enough tobacco by hand to make some cigarettes to show that this was commercially -- that I had to figure out how to apply it commercially at some point And during that period, there was a meeting in Richmond. I'm trying to think of the name of it I haven't been around it for a while I think it was called like the TRC or something like this, it was Tobacco Research in Chemistry And all of the leading tobacco researchers and chemists came here in Richmond to the old Hyatt Hotel And I went there and met with R.J Reynolds, Philip Morris, British American Tobacco, the leading tobacco companies

Q All the big companies

A All the big companies I met with And they were all, I would say, I just took the lead out of the gasoline

Q How did you do that?

A By curing the tobacco. These were the strongest and most abundant carcinogens in cigarette smoke, and I figured out how to stop it At that point, I was using giant microwaves And it was cumbersome, because I had to remove so much moisture when it would come in off the farm, so I had a 50, 60-square foot building down in Chase City The farmers would bring in the tobacco, and I would run it through the microwave Even at that point, with the microwave, Brown & Williamson Tobacco came in with me But once I had removed the nitrosamines, Warner-Lambert, Schering-Plough, SmithKline, three of the largest drug companies in the world, they came to my house out in Goochland.

Q They came to you.

A The CEO's of those companies came there Because keep in mind, I'm back over at the Drug Division, and I've just taken the nitrosamines out So maybe this is a good drug for them to attack the tobacco industry So I had a deal with Schering-Plough for a couple hundred million dollars And it went to the Board

Q The Board of Star Scientific?

A No Yes, back early on Star Scientific. When it was private And so I had a deal with Schering-Plough for like first payments, like $200 million or so going on And then the, what happened was, the Board voted it down because the drug company was afraid of tobacco. And at that point, I went back to -- Brown & Williamson had contacted me, the CEO, Nick Brooks That's the largest operating division of British American Tobacco, the second largest tobacco company in the world

A And he called me and said, "Listen, Jonnie I need what you have I won't try to take it from you I won't try to steal it from you I need what you have " He said, "So let's get together and work out a deal," and I did

And while I was doing that, they had agreed to buy the tobacco from the microwave They didn't care how I was doing it --

Q Right

A -- as long as the nitrosamines were out of it

And while I was doing that, one of the engineers from Brown & Williamson one day made a comment Because I had a group of their engineers that they assigned now down in Chase City with me, and he said, "We'll never be able to convert all the tobacco over using these microwaves, Jonnie, not as big as our business is " And so then I realized it would be a specialty situation

So then I went back to the drawing board while we were doing the microwaves, and I believed that what was causing this microbial situation I could solve with oxygen So I took a -- a Maytag clothes dryer, the -- I had -- I bought it from a used appliance store because the old dryers would get hot enough to where you could heat it up enough to kill the microbial activity, which was maybe around 170 degrees or so

And so I took a -- a Maytag clothes dryer and I took a magazine rack and bolted it inside the spinning dryer, and I had a fellow that used to work for me at the cigarette factory, Tommy I said, "Tommy, we don't have time to hot-wire this I need to you stay here all night and every hour, or whatever it is with the clothes dryer, just reset this thing for me "

And so I came back the next morning I took the tobacco that looked like normal tobacco, where the microwave made it flat because it removed the moisture so fast, and I sent that to the University of Kentucky And they said, "We can't find the nitrosamines in here "

So what I did then is I got in my car -- and I don't know if I got in a car or got in a plane I went to Bennettsville, South Carolina, to the largest company that makes curing barns, and within a week from my Maytag clothes dryer, I had designed a unit for curing tobacco, and I ordered $30 million worth of them

And I went to Brown & Williamson and I said, "I need you guys to bankroll this thing for me because this is how you're going to take the lead out the gas with the tobacco " And I had a very good relationship with Brown & Williamson Their general counsel and their executive vice president, Mick McGraw, was a nonsmoker and he was very interested in what I was doing

So Brown & Williamson bankrolled it, and I started going to Macon, Georgia, every few weeks or so and was basically leading them that way And in the British American Tobacco's annual report the following year, British American Tobacco, the parent company, said that they were using my company to make their tobacco products less harmful

Q Mr Williams, can we just stop there for a moment?

A Yeah

MR BURCK: I think it's 4:15, Your Honor I didn't know if you wanted to continue or --

THE COURT: Let's stop We'll take 15 minutes

(Recess taken from 4:13 p m until 4:21 p m)

MR BURCK: Your Honor, I understand that the witness is in the bathroom

THE COURT: All right Just hold on a second

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Mr Burck

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BURCK:

Q Mr Williams, just before we continue, I was just wondering, did you speak to your attorneys in the last 15 minutes during the break?

A I did

Q Did you talk to them about your testimony?

A I did About my testimony?

Q About your testimony

A Yes

MR BURCK: Would you mind, the court reporter, I would ask that you read the last two sentences or so of Mr Williams' testimony before we went on break

(Record read)

MR BURCK: Thank you

BY MR BURCK:

Q I just wanted to have it read back so that you could reorient where we were in your testimony

A Okay

Q So please, if you could continue

A Yes So at that point, things were going very well with our partner, Brown & Williamson And -- and I had worked with -- I brought in some other people to help, scientists from the University of Kentucky, neurologists, different people, to come in and fill in background on things that I was trying to do

And where I was trying to go with Brown & Williamson was to convince them that, okay, we block the nitrosamines from forming They're the strongest, most abundant carcinogens in tobacco, but where you really need to go with this is you need to go with smokeless in a form of a

Tic Tac, and that way we can eliminate the carcinogens and have your products much safer

And so I did that

Q When you say "Tic Tacs," the form of a Tic Tac, actually?

A Compressed -- I would take the tobacco and pulverize it in like Pillsbury flour and then put some binders in it to make it into the form of -- a Tic Tac form of a dissolvable mint And they had embraced that, and they were test marketing that around the United States

They were also test marketing a safer cigarette, or a cigarette with less toxins with this new tobacco in it, they were testing that around the United States

And so the rest of the industry saw what Brown & Williamson was doing And they basically had no choice, once the nitrosamines were coming out of the tobacco, and they started to copy Not as well, but they were copying what I was doing

Q You mean copying patents?

A Yes, copying -- copying the technology of lowering the nitrosamines through using airflow and controlling the temperature and the humidity inside of a curing chamber to prevent the microbial activity from reducing nitrite to nitrite with those alkaloids for the nitrosamines So the other companies started to do this

Q Right

A And then I -- I --

Q I'm not sure what they were doing, but it sounded very --

A Okay

Q And so the patents themselves, you owned the patents or did the company own the patents?

A They're in my name --

Q They're in your name

A -- and I signed them to the company

Q Okay

A And then Reynolds, we -- we sued R J Reynolds Tobacco Company for patent infringement, and that was quite a challenge when you sue a tobacco company and you're a small company It's quite a challenge when you do that because the lawyers pile in on that

Q Right

A And so the problem was not so much that I would litigate Reynolds, but my partner was Brown & Williamson I had carved them out, and we decided that, okay, if Brown & Williamson takes the lead out the gas here, the other ones won't have any choice And that's what we were working on

And so what happened was that Mick McGraw called me up one morning, the general counsel and the executive vice president of B&W, and said, "Jonnie, I hate to tell you this, but Reynolds is buying our company " And that's the company that I'm litigating with

A And so that was a -- that was a surprise And so at that point I decided I didn't want to stay making cigarettes I wanted nothing to do with it So I sold out of the cigarette part of it

Q Right

A Now I found myself in straight litigation here on a very large lawsuit with a very large tobacco company, which is very high risk

And so while I -- while I was doing that, while I was doing that, I asked Dr Jaffe one day, "Dr Jaffe, why are people smoking?" Dr DeLorenzo says the nicotine has such a weak half-life, it doesn't last very long It's addictive, but it's really not why people are smoking, in his view

I said, "You're a psychiatrist and you're an addiction expert Why are they smoking?"

And he said, "I think they're mildly depressed "

And so --

Q Mildly depressed?

A Mildly depressed And so then I brought in some neurologists and I asked them, "What are you writing prescriptions for for people that are depressed?" And they explained to me Pargyline, different drugs, MAO inhibitors like Wellbutrin like you'll hear on TV advertised sometimes.

And so once I heard that and I understood that maybe there's another alkaloid in tobacco Just because nicotine is the most abundant one and it's addictive, maybe there's another one in tobacco That's maybe the reason that they're smoking And so what I did was I had some tests performed at the tobacco company, brought in chemists from the University of Kentucky and put it into the form of an extract, like a vanilla extract, Marlboro cigarettes I put into an extract Then I took Nicorette Gum with the nicotine, put it into an extract

And then what happened was we took all the alkaloids in tobacco And now I'm trying to match them up to an MAO inhibitor, and nicotine was zero as an MAO inhibitor And then I --

Q What does that mean?

A It -- in your brain you produce monoamine oxidase Monoamine oxidase regulate your dopamine levels And so that's why a class of drugs were developed called MAO inhibitors to try to inhibit the monoamine oxidase, and then you have more dopamine available And studies had shown that smokers had lower MAO levels, just testing in general

And so the challenge I had was to isolate the alkaloid or the compound in tobacco that was responsible -- that would match up to a Marlboro on an MAO assay as an antidepressant And when we conducted that MAO assay on nicotine, it was no MAO activity on nicotine, and this is a drug that's used for antidepressant activity

A So I thought, well, maybe there's another mechanism or something, but nicotine is zero I've ruled that one out because, you know, nicotine is available everywhere so why can't you just go to the drugstore and purchase it in any form and quit, and it doesn't work very well

So then I tested a Marlboro cigarette in extract form, and when the neurologists and the chemists did that assay, a Marlboro cigarette inhibits this monoamine oxidase activity It's 60 percent And so the drugs -- the reason they have a problem with the drugs for MAO inhibitors, it's very difficult to regulate They'll go to 80, 90 percent, and they have black box warnings and you'll have a stroke

But on the MAO activity of a Marlboro, it went to 60 percent, and no matter how hard you dosed it, it stayed -- it stayed at 60 percent Okay And so now the challenge was is is there an alkaloid in tobacco that matches up with that

And so when I got to Anatabine, I knew that nornicotine was very addictive and it was -- you know, it showed that activity but too high Anabasine was -- had aspects to it from prior tests, from livestock in Russia eating it and having the animals deformed And then when I tested it with Anatabine, when I held the chart up at the light, it was 100 percent dead match on a Marlboro cigarette, the Anatabine was, for MAO It was a hundred percent statistically dead match on a Marlboro cigarette

So at that point I thought, well, if I take it and make it a drug, it's -- you know, I'm looking at ten, who knows how many years this is going to take And so I had done the work on it and I left it alone, and then when we went into the R J Reynolds trial, it didn't work out All the patents were upheld at the appellate office Every claim in the patents was upheld, but they were infringing just a little bit below our levels and we ran into trouble with that, and we settled the case for less than we wanted with R J Reynolds And once that happened, I was in a situation, we were in a situation where, okay, what do I do now with this

And so I went back to the Anatabine And the medical director of our company, as I had mentioned earlier in this trial, is a former chief of anesthetics and addictive substances, which covers nicotine, at the FDA So he ended up coming on board as the medical director of the company So that gave me a tremendous resource in in-house for that

And so then what I set out to do is -- with Dr Wright was can you organize the tox -- the toxicology work to show that Anatabine is food safe, and since it's found in potatoes and tomatoes and the night shade plants, let's sell it as a vitamin And Dr Wright organized the toxicology studies up at Harvard And we went through that for about two years, and then that takes us up to about 2009 or so where you heard me talking about the CigRx product

A And so at that point I had isolated, we had synthesized Anatabine chemically We had figured out how to make it And so now the challenge was to go to market and see if there was a market and see if this was going to work with the smokers

Q Right You told us a little bit about the experience your wife had with --

A Yes

Q -- the product?

A Yes

Q Can you tell us a little bit more about that?

A Okay My wife had developed --

MR DRY: Judge, relevancy We've been here for --

THE COURT: I think he's been very thorough about that issue I don't know that we need to hear any more about it

MR BURCK: That's fine, Your Honor

A Okay

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Mr Williams, it's fair to say that you are -- you're a very successful businessman; is that right?

A I feel that way

Q And you told us that you've built five -- at least five different companies up from nothing?

A Yes

Q All right And I understand that you come from very humble beginnings; is that right?

A Rural Virginia

Q And you were not wealthy when you were a child, were you?

A No

Q What is your net worth in this period of time, last five years, roughly?

A I don't care to answer that, unless I have to under the law

Q You don't have to answer it specifically Can you give me a range?

A I really don't care to do that --

Q Okay

A -- in public, unless it's required of me by this court

Q It could be, but I will not press you on it

A Okay

Q But you're well -- you're worth well over a million dollars, right?

A Yes

Q Now, this whole experience, this investigation, everything that's gone on has been difficult for you, has it not?

A It's been very difficult

Q And your reputation has taken a beating, hasn't it?

A It has

Q And people think you've done something wrong, right?

A I don't know if they do or not Some may Some may not

Q Well, you testified earlier that you did to Mr Dry's questions Do you remember that?

A Yes I was concerned about it

Q Has this hurt your -- has this whole experience, this investigation, has it hurt your financial situation?

A Other than the impact maybe on -- since I left Star Scientific and brought two physicians in, I felt some impact in it from there But as far as my ability to operate and move forward in business, I don't believe it has

Q That's good to hear

And you are no longer the CEO of Star Scientific, but you're still employed by Star Scientific, right?

A I'm a low-level employee

Q Right

A A dollar a month

Q What's your current -- what's your current position there?

A I don't think I have a position, other than they pay me a dollar a month, and I try -- I'm available when they need me to help them with anything

Q And what's your -- what percentage of the company do you own at this point, roughly?

A I don't know percentage wise Maybe a little over 10 percent or so

Q And what's the market cap in the company, generally?

A It's dropped quite a bit with all this

Q Yeah, yeah

A It's probably -- maybe $80 million or so

Q So roughly your -- your percentage ownership is about $8 million right now?

A Maybe in Star

Q But it hasn't -- but that has not -- even though there's been a dramatic decline in the stock price, that has not overall affected your ability to do business?

A It's not -- it doesn't impact my ability to do business

Q Okay Did you tell the government at any point that you are a -- you are just a vitamin salesman?

A I don't recall ever saying that I was a vitamin salesman

Q Do you think you are a vitamin salesman? Is that what you would think you'd sum up your career?

A Well, I'm a salesman for whatever product our company is developing And Anatabloc is a dietary supplement, and I've been working with people at the company trying to sell it

So if --

Q And --

A Some days I would say I'm doing that, yes

Q So some days you're a vitamin salesman, but --

A Probably

Q -- is that how you'd sum up your career?

A It's not

Q How would you sum up your career, just briefly?

A I try to develop technologies that are going to change, have a change in the marketplace or change and try to improve products for people I try to -- that's what I'm focused on would be disruptive technologies that have the capability to improve people's lives

Q And Anatabloc, CigRx, those are disruptive technologies in your view, right?

A Yes, they are

Q Tell us about CigRx and Anatabine and what they mean to you

A What Anatabine means to me?

Q What it means to you

A Let me try it this way, and if it doesn't work for you, I'll try it a different way --

Q However -- whatever way you want to try it

A Since you're just letting this go here, I'll try

Let me tell you what Dr Ladenson thinks of it

Q Okay

A Is that okay?

Q Absolutely

A All right Dr Ladenson thinks that the Anatabine discovery is one of the most significant discoveries in modern medicine, right there with antibiotics

Q Antibiotics? Is that what you --

A Antibiotics That's what he thinks

Q And we've heard testimony about Mr -- Dr Ladenson, right?

A Yes

Q Do you agree with him?

A I do I've had firsthand experience of it working

Q And this is -- this is the story about your wife that you spoke about briefly yesterday?

A Yes

Q Okay So is it fair to say that you truly believe in Anatabloc, CigRx and your products, right?

A I do

Q Now, what you've been telling us today, has this been just a pitch to you or do you really believe what you've been saying?

A What I've been telling you --

Q Today

A -- all day or just about this --

Q No, no Just in the last -- in the last half hour

A I've been trying to respond to your question about where I started and where I've arrived

Q Right Absolutely And so it's -- it's genuinely what you believe; isn't that right?

A It is

Q I just want to take you back to some testimony you had yesterday or maybe it was earlier today Mr Dry described a period of time October 2010 Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q And I believe you were on your private jet with then Governor McDonnell Do you remember that?

A I do

Q And do you remember your testimony about that?

A I recall discussing it

Q And you -- I think you testified that you spoke to the Governor for five or -- the whole trip about Anatabloc, right?

A Only the period that he fell asleep for a while Other than that, I was talking about Anatabloc

Q He fell asleep while you were speaking?

A Somewhere during the trip, I think I put him to sleep

Q How -- how long do you think you were able to speak to him during that period?

A All the time he was awake It was hours

Q Hours Okay Okay Did he engage with you or did he just sort of stare at you?

A He had to listen to me

Q It was a confined area, right? So he had to --

A I had his attention

Q Okay And did he respond as you were speaking or did he just let you talk?

A He asked questions, and the Governor is a bright fella and he listened politely

Q And he actually got you a meeting with Dr Hazel after that, right?

A He did

Q And how long after the flight was the meeting with Dr Hazel?

A It seemed like maybe a week

Q And Dr Hazel was the Secretary of Health for the state of -- or the Commonwealth of Virginia?

A Yes

Q In that meeting did you explain to Dr Hazel or try to explain what your products could do for the state of Virginia?

A I did

Q But I think you testified that Dr Hazel didn't share your enthusiasm, right?

A Well, I didn't expect him to share my enthusiasm He's an orthopaedic surgeon and he's a doctor And I didn't have the clinical data So that didn't surprise me

Q I want to ask you a question, and stepping back to some testimony you gave yesterday about a conversation you had with my client in May of 2011, on May 2nd, 2011

A Yes

Q And that was the meeting that you described --

A Yes

Q -- and you testified that she told you about the couples' financial difficulties?

A Yes

Q Is that what you said?

A Yes

Q And I believe that you testified about what she said to you in the course of that meeting about what she would do for you and what you would do for her Do you remember that?

A Yes, I do

Q And do you recall your testimony?

A In general

Q In general? And did she tell you that -- did Maureen McDonnell tell you that she was going to get the Governor to do anything for you?

A No

Q Did she say that she was going to do --

A She said, "I'll help you all I can "

Q "I'll help you all I can " Okay

A She said the Governor said it was okay for her to help me

Q Right The Governor was saying it was okay for her to help you?
A Yes
Q But he never said that he was going to help you?
A No, not that day
Q I just want to ask you a question just so I understand the testimony --
A Yeah
Q -- because it was a long day
A Yeah
Q Just sitting here today, are you 100 percent sure that Bob McDonnell agreed to help your company, Star Scientific, because of the loans and gifts that you gave him and his family? Are you 100 percent sure of that?
A I am 100 percent sure of that I believe that
Q And -- and so you believe that but for the gifts and the loans, you would not have gotten the launch, as you called -- or as it was referred to at the Mansion, right?
A Yes
Q And you would not have gotten the second meeting with Dr Hazel, right?
Do you remember there were two meetings?
A I'm listening You're listing --
Q I'm asking I'm asking --

A Well, I didn't know if it was -- I was to respond to each one separately

Q I'm sorry I thought you responded to the launch saying that -- would you have --

A No, I didn't say anything

Q No That's fine

A I'm sorry I was listening

Q My apologies The launch, would you have gotten the launch but for the gifts and the loans?

A No

Q Would you have gotten the second meeting with Dr Hazel but for the gifts and the loans?

A I don't know that

Q You don't know that?

A I don't know the second meeting because -- I don't know the second meeting because -- I just don't know about the -- I don't know of -- when you ask me that because I loaned the money and I got the meetings So I didn't -- I just don't know that

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor I don't think that the witness testified about a second meeting with Dr Hazel I think he --

THE COURT: Well, he's asked the question sufficiently Ask another one, please

BY MR BURCK:

Q And the healthcare event in early 2012 --

A Yes

Q -- do you think that -- you were able to invite a number of doctors --

A Yes

Q -- from very prestigious universities and hospitals; Johns Hopkins, one of the top schools in the country, right?

A Yes

Q And do you think that you got that, the invitations, only because you gave these loans and these gifts?

A I think the -- the whole evening, sir, from the -- from the invitations to the private dinner with Dr Ladenson and Dr Crantz, and then when they surprised me and invited him to spend the night -- the two of them to spend the night at the Governor's Mansion after dinner, I don't believe that I would have -- that would have happened

Q Okay So that was because of the loans and the gifts?

A I think so, yes I believe that

Q The -- the second one I talked about, that's the only one you're not sure about?

A The second one?

Q The second one I talked about the --

A With Huffstetler?

Q Huffstetler, the -- with his staff

A Well, they had arranged for the meeting with Dr Hazel --

Q Right

A -- but I just don't -- you know, I just --

Q You're not sure about that one?

A I'm not sure about that one

Q That's fine That's fair

Now, let's talk a bit about my client, Ms McDonnell, and discussions you had with her about Anatabloc, and I think you testified that you spoke to -- every time you met with the Governor, you spoke about Anatabloc?

A Every time I had the opportunity

Q Every time you had the opportunity Okay And Ms McDonnell, did you talk to her a lot about Anatabloc as well?

A I did

Q And when you -- you knew that -- or she told you that she was -- she had a history with nutraceuticals, right?

A She did

Q And when did you first learn that? Do you remember? Was it the first time you met her or was it sometime thereafter?

A I don't recall when I first learned that

Q Okay But it was something you understood; that was something that she was really interested in?

A Yes

Q And you told her about the experience your wife had, right, with Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q And you mentioned Dr Hazel really didn't share the enthusiasm with this product?

A I didn't have the data to show him

Q You didn't have the data, right Ms McDonnell did share your enthusiasm; isn't that fair to say?

A Yes, she did

Q And you genuinely believe that she did?

A I believe she thought it was -- I believed that she believed in the product

Q Okay And that was from the very beginning of when she learned about Anatabloc?

A I believe it was early on, yes

Q And you know that she started taking it herself, right?

A Yes

Q And you know she gave it to her children?

A I didn't know she gave it to her children

Q Now, you testified yesterday, in response to a question from Mr Dry, that you are a businessman and

Governor McDonnell is a politician, right?
A I did say that
Q And that was the foundation of the relationship that you were trying to build with Governor McDonnell, right?
A It was a business friendship and I needed -- I needed him to help me as the head of Virginia
Q So from the very get-go, you saw Governor McDonnell as a potential business -- call it target?
A I wouldn't call it a target
Q What would you call it?
A I would call it -- in the beginning, I thought it was -- when I first met him, I just wanted to form the relationship just like with other people that have used the airplane over the years
Q So it was no different than other politicians at the -- at the early point?
A Not at the early point
Q Okay And would it be fair to say that you had -- let's call it an agenda with Governor McDonnell?
A Yes
Q And the agenda was to promote your business?
A To promote the company and try to have him help with the testing of the product, yes
Q You testified earlier about a social gathering with Governor McDonnell and Ms McDonnell in December of '09 in

New York City Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q And that was in the lobby of the Four Seasons Hotel?

A Not in the lobby ,but off the lobby in a small -- in a restaurant area

Q And just so I understand the sequence of what happened at that -- that -- that meeting that you testified about, you had a friend with you, Brad Kroenig?

A Brad Kroenig

Q Kroenig Who was a male model You testified about him

A Yes

Q And you met with the Governor and the First Lady in the lobby? No?

A No We had drinks

Q You had drinks

A And they were going to a show

Q Okay And they went to the show, right?

A Yes

Q Now, when they went to the show, they left behind members of staff?

A They did

Q And that was Phil Cox?

A Phil Cox, Adam Zubowsky, and I can't recall the names of the other people

Q Okay And when you were -- you were at a bar area?

A No Sitting in the restaurant

Q Sitting in the restaurant Did you order any drinks while you were --

A Yes

Q And I think you testified about some Cognac --

A I did

Q -- earlier at a different event, a couple years later, right?

This was at -- I think at the vacation --

A Yes, at the Chatham Bars Inn

Q Yeah

A Yes

Q So in the Four Seasons I think you ordered the same Cognac, right?

A I did

Q And that was the Louis XIV -- XIII? Excuse me

A Louis XIII

Q XIII XIV would probably be $10,000

A I don't know if they make one

Q How much was the Louis XIV that you bought, that bottle?

A It may have been $5,000

Q $5,000 Did anybody ask you to buy it?

A No

Q You wanted to buy it?

A I was entertaining the folks, those people

Q You were entertaining the people who were there?

A Yes And Brad Kroenig was there

Q Okay

A And so that's commonplace for Brad in his world And I had invited Brad to come along because I thought people would find Brad interesting and it would make it --

Q Right

A -- soften the -- the meeting

Q Soften --

A Make it interesting --

Q Right

A -- to them

Q And that's because Brad is a male model, he's -- he's famous in the fashion industry?

A He's very famous in the fashion industry

Q Phil Cox and Adam Zubowsky, how long had you know them -- known them? Excuse me

A I don't know if that may have been the first time I met Phil Cox I'm not sure Adam Zubowsky I had met maybe once before that or so

Q So you bought -- but you did buy the Cognac?

A Yes

Q And you shared it with them?

A Yeah, I shared it with them

Q Is it fair to say that when you're around, nobody else has to reach for their wallet?

A I would say -- I would say when I'm around, I try to make things a little easier for people

Q Right And you don't -- no one is -- you're a generous person, right?

A I am I think I am

Q And you've done extremely well in your life?

A I think I've done well

Q No one is forcing you to provide 5,000-dollar bottles of Cognac, right?

A No one is forcing me to do that

Q You enjoy it?

A I actually don't care for that, but other people seem to I'd rather have a milk shake from Carl's

Q I'm sorry I'm not talking about the taste of the Cognac I'm saying you enjoy --

A Oh

Q -- giving people things that make them happy, gifts?

A I generally like to -- I try to help people

Q Okay Now, going back to the -- excuse me

When the Governor and the First Lady -- or actually, excuse me

They were not -- he was not the Governor at the time, right? He was the Governor-elect?

A That's correct

Q And Maureen McDonnell, when they returned from the show, they joined you?

A No I don't recall seeing them after the show

Q Okay So you saw them before?

A It was maybe 45 minutes or so before the show

Q Got it And that's where you had the conversation with them about -- or with Ms McDonnell about the Oscar de la Renta dress?

A That's correct

Q Do you remember -- you know Oscar de la Renta personally, right?

A No, I don't

Q You don't?

A No

Q You didn't show, on the phone, people where Oscar -- that you had Oscar de la Renta on the phone?

A I have no idea -- if Oscar de la Renta walked in the room, I wouldn't know him

Q Okay And you testified that Brad Kroenig had been talking to Maureen McDonnell about a dress?

A Yes And Brad reminded me that a very good -- close friend of mine that I spend time with every week, his -- his daughter, Oscar de la Renta is the godfather of his daughter

Q I see

A And that's where that came from

Q I understand I understand Ms McDonnell didn't ask you to buy a dress at that -- at the Four Seasons, right?

A She asked me to get her -- if I could get her -- she turned -- told her husband I was going to get her a dress But at that point I was hoping I could borrow one

Q Well, let's just back just up a little bit

A Yeah

Q Because I think you testified earlier that Brad Kroenig had said -- turned to you --

A Yeah

Q -- after he was talking to Maureen McDonnell --

A Yeah

Q -- and said to you, "Don't you know Oscar de la Renta's" --

A Yes

Q -- right?

A Yes

Q And then you said -- and he said -- and Brad Kroenig said to you, "Can you help her get a dress"?

A No Brad Kroenig said can I help her get a dress?

Q Is that what you testified?

A I don't believe so Brad Kroenig turned to -- he turned to me and pushed it back to me

Q Right I mean -- what does that mean? What does it mean pushed it back to you?

A He shifted it back to me because Brad realized that he didn't know anyone -- see, in my mind, I thought -- my daughter was a model with Ford and --

Q That's Rachel, right?

A -- and I met Brad from -- at one of the runway shows And they have all these clothes at the runway shows So I thought that, you know, when we're talking to Brad, maybe he could -- there's a place to borrow one of these dresses for the inauguration

Q Right

A And then Brad reminded me of my friend that was real close to Oscar de la Renta So then I said, "I'll get you" -- "I'll help you get a dress "

Q Okay So you said that "I'll help you get a dress" to --

A "I'll get" -- "I'll help you get a dress," yes

Q You said it to Maureen McDonnell?

A Yes, I did

Q And she was happy about it, right?

A She was very happy

Q And she turned to her husband and told him?

A "Jonnie is going to help me get a dress for the inauguration "

Q But you didn't end getting a dress for -- for Maureen McDonnell, right? You didn't actually get one for her at that time?

A No, not at that time

Q You testified that was because you were informed that it would be inappropriate?

A The lawyer called me --

Q The lawyer --

A -- and told me

Q -- Jasen Eige?

A Yes

Q All right And you testified that you had a conversation with Maureen McDonnell around that same time?

A Yes

Q And you recall, I think, that she said to you that it would be too expensive, given the economy at the time, in sum and substance?

A I did

Q And you testified that she said that she would take a rain check on that?

A Yes

Q And I --

A On a shopping trip to --

Q On a shopping trip

A On a shopping trip Not on another inauguration dress

Q No I think only one for Virginia, right?

A Yes

Q Do you recall telling Mr Eige that -- that you -- that you wanted to convey to Maureen that after the Governor-elect's term is up, you want to fly her up to get a dress?

A No

MR BURCK: Your Honor, may I approach just to refresh recollection?

THE COURT: Sure

MR BURCK: This is RM-0676

THE COURT: Could raise your voice a little bit?

MR BURCK: I'm sorry, Your Honor RM-0676

THE COURT: All right

BY MR BURCK:

Q And without reading from it, just -- out loud, just start from the bottom and read it up and then I'll -- then put it aside, please

A This is from Jasen --

Q Wait Mr Williams, don't -- please don't read from the document Just read it to yourself

A Okay

Q Before I ask you any questions, this is -- you're not on this e-mail, right?

A That's correct

Q This is an e-mail dated December 18, 2009?

A Yes

Q And it's between Jasen Eige and someone named Crystal Cameron?

A Yes

Q Do you know who Crystal Cameron is?

A I have no idea

Q And after reading that document, do you remember my question: Did you tell Jasen Eige that after the Governor-elect's term is up, you want to fly her up to get a dress?

A I don't recall that at all

Q Thanks

Now, I just want to shift gears just a little bit

Actually, before I go on, did you meet with the prosecutors in this case about three weeks ago or so?

A Yes

Q Did you tell the prosecutors that you did not recall -- excuse me -- that after meeting with FLOVA -- do you know who FLOVA is?

A It's a nickname for Ms --

Q First Lady of Virginia?

A Yes

Q -- that after meeting with FLOVA in December of 2009, after meeting with her, that you don't recall any other interactions with her until October 2010? Do you remember telling them that?

A I may have said that I don't recall As I sit here, I don't recall that

Q And you did testify to a conversation, a phone call you had with her --

A Yes

Q -- after the meeting?

A Yes

Q So when you said -- or you may have said to the prosecutors that after meeting with FLOVA in December of 2009, you do not recall any other interactions with her until October 2010?

A Not in person On the phone call when she talked to -- called me about the dress

Q Okay Now, shifting gears just a bit You talked to Mr Dry about an interview that happened in January of 2013 with the Virginia State Police --

A Yes

Q -- and the FBI Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q And the agent, the FBI agent and the Virginia State police officer, or detective, he -- they showed up at your home --

A They did
Q -- in Florida?
A They did
Q Did they call you to tell you that they were coming?
A No
Q So it was a surprise?
A It was a surprise
Q And they knocked on the door and there they were?
A Yes
Q And you spoke to them voluntarily, right?
A I did
Q And you didn't have any lawyers present?
A No
Q Now, one of the topics I think they wanted to talk to you about was the McDonnells, right?
A Yes
Q And the other topic -- or there were two other topics, at least One was about Mr McKeon, right?
A Yes
Q And you touched briefly on who Mr McKeon is
A Yes
Q Can you tell us a little bit more about who Mr McKeon is?

A John McKeon is a friend of mine He's become a friend of mine, and I met him in Richmond maybe six -- six years or so ago, six or seven years ago

Q And what does Mr McKeon do?

A He's a private investor He used to be a fund -- a money manager in New York

Q And is he a wealthy man?

A I think so

Q I think in that interview with the Virginia State Police and the FBI in January, you told them that you had gotten a 2 million-dollar loan for Mr McKeon in June of 2009?

A Do you have something that --

Q Yes, I can --

A Help me with that

Q I'll help you out Absolutely

A I just don't want to guess at that

MR BURCK: Your Honor, we're just going to pull it up We're going to pull it up

THE COURT: All right

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, Mr Williams, can you see that okay?

A I can

Q And Mr Dry actually showed you this document earlier, right?

A He showed me this document earlier today?

Q I'm asking you the question If you don't recall, I can take you to the sections that he showed to you

A No I -- as I sit here, I don't recall this document

Q Mr Williams, what I'll do is I'll take you down -- can you move the pages down to, say, the third page Further down, please And further -- oh, actually, right there is perfect Thank you

Now, without reading out loud from the document -- could you blow up the bottom paragraph of that page?

Now, without reading that out loud, can you just read it to yourself?

A Okay

Q Do you recognize that paragraph?

A Okay Give me just a moment

Q Sure

A Okay

Q Do you remember this document now?

A I don't remember the document itself, but I've just read this one

Q Okay Well, we're actually going to go up to page 2, the fifth paragraph

Could you blow that up? I think that's the wrong paragraph Can you move it up just a little bit? There we go

Can you read that paragraph to yourself?

A Yes

Q And remember, my question to you is whether or not you told the investigators that you received a 2 million-dollar loan from John McKeon?

A Okay

Q Do you remember telling the -- does this help refresh your recollection as to whether or not you told these investigators that you received a 2 million-dollar loan from John McKeon?

A I don't recall specifically if I did or not

Q Okay Let me ask you this Did you receive a 2 million-dollar loan from John McKeon?

A I would like to see -- I would be --

THE COURT: Well, this question calls for independent memory If you recall whether you got --

A I don't recall specifically

THE COURT: All right

BY MR BURCK:

Q You don't recall receiving --

A I recall --

Q Go ahead

A I recall loans with John McKeon, a credit line, but I can't recall that specifically as I sit here

Q Okay That's fine Let me ask you --

A Okay

Q -- do you recall telling the investigators in the January 2013 interview that you had not repaid the loan as of that date --

A Yes

Q -- the loan you talked about just now --

A Yes

Q You remember telling them?

A I remember saying that

THE COURT: All right We're going to stop here primarily because I can't take another second I've had all I can stand for the day, and I'm sure you feel the same We will get back It's been a long day, and I'm -- I'm starting to lose focus so let's stop here

We will start tomorrow at 9:30 And, again, please don't discuss the case with anyone, allow anybody to discuss it with you and take care We'll see you tomorrow Hang tough We'll get through it All right We'll see you tomorrow

MR. HAUSS: Maureen McDonnell is ready to proceed, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right I had just one kind of administrative thing And this is meant for the media mostly I had such a large number of media outlets who missed a deadline on the request for cell phone, exception to our cell phone policy So I've decided to give another opportunity We are going to go up on the website today, make an announcement this morning, so I hope the information gets out The folks who have missed the previous deadline will have an opportunity to apply in writing, and the new deadline for this new opportunity is close of business on August 5th. I'll try to get that word out And then, of course, we will have to do our due diligence and vetting, so it will be a while That's the reason why we had a deadline to begin with It takes us a while to go through these Most of the folks who missed the deadline, a lot of them were out of town, and I thought it was a little bit unfair, so we are going to give them an opportunity, just so you know.

The next thing is, the Marshals have informed me that we have had some violations of our cell phone use policy And I just want to warn you, if you do that and you get caught, not only are you going to lose the phone, you are going to lose the privilege of having the phone So just beware Let's bring in the jury, please

Good morning Good to see you. All right, we are ready to get started again Go ahead.

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Cont'd.)

BY MR BURCK:

Q Thank you. Your Honor, I'd like to hand up to the witness a document we looked at yesterday, a Virginia State Police report, January 26th, 2013 Good morning, Mr Williams

A Good morning

Q Last night, did you speak to your lawyers or this morning did you speak to your lawyers about your testimony?

A Not about my testimony, but I met with them this morning and walked‹over here I rode over in the car I'm sorry

Q But you didn't speak to them about your testimony yesterday?

A In particular, I don't recall talking about my testimony They just said I did a good job answering the questions

Q Okay Then this morning you didn't talk to them about your testimony?

A Not about my testimony, no

Q Okay Thank you Yesterday, where we left off, we were talking about the January, 2013 interview, surprise interview by the Virginia State Police and the FBI Do you remember that?

A Yes, I do

Q What I am going to do, I gave you a document that's a report from that interview

A Okay

Q I'm not going to ask you to read from it I'm going to ask you a series of questions about what you said at that interview, and you just tell me whether or not you said it Okay? You don't have to look at that document Just put it off to the side

A Okay

Q So during that interview, did you tell the police that you had given Maureen McDonnell a $50,000 check and that it was a personal loan?

A Yes.

Q Okay And you told them, didn't you, that you did not get anything in return for the loans?

A I did.

Q And you told them that the Governor is a friend of yours and that he plays golf with you?

A Yes, I think I said that

Q And you told them that you first met the Governor when he was the Attorney General of Virginia; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q And you said that you were a rural Virginia boy? Do you remember saying that?

A I'm from rural Virginia, but I don't recall ever referring to myself as a rural Virginia boy

Q Okay Well, do you remember saying that Bob McDonnell is the best Governor Virginia has ever had; do you remember saying that to them?

A Yes

Q Do you remember saying that the Governor is a very hard working individual?

A Yes

Q And do you remember telling them that you never asked for anything from the Governor and never expected anything from him; do you remember that?

A Yes

Q And you told them that Maureen McDonnell is into wellness and supported your product; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q You also said to them that you had never paid her for anything Didn't you tell them that?

A Yes

Q Now, remember this loan where you testified, the first loan, the $50,000 loan to Maureen McDonnell, you testified about it yesterday?

A Yes.

Q I want to ask you some questions about what you told the Virginia State Police and the FBI in January of 2013, okay? You said that Maureen McDonnell had approached you for the loan, right?

A I recall that

Q Okay And you explained that, or she explained that the McDonnells were upside down with their rental properties in Virginia Beach and that they needed $50,000?

A I believe that's correct

Q Okay So you gave her a loan, right? That's what you told them?

A To the best of my recollection, I did

Q Okay And you told the police and the FBI in that interview that you were sure the Governor was aware of the loan because about two days later after the loan, the Governor called you on his cell phone Do you remember saying that?

A I don't recall that

Q Okay Do you remember that you told the police that Governor McDonnell called to discuss the terms of the loan with you and that you told him to repay the loan when the real estate situation turned better? Do you remember saying that?

A I remember that

Q Okay Could you take the document that's right there, and if you turn to Page 5 of the document

A Turn to what page?

Q Page 5 It is actually highlighted to make it a little easier

A Okay

Q See the top, the first paragraph, the top of the page, Page 5?

A Yes

Q Okay Can you read that to yourself, that paragraph? Don't read it out loud, please Just read it to yourself and I'll ask you some questions

(Witness perusing document)

A The first paragraph or the entire page?

Q Just the first paragraph, please

A Okay.

Q Okay Now, you remember I just asked you whether or not you told the police that you were sure the Governor was aware of the loan because about two days later after the loan, Governor McDonnell called you on his cell phone? Do you remember saying that now?

A That's what that says, but that's not my recollection.

Q That's not what I asked you. You don't recall?

A I don't recall it being two days later, no

Q So if it says that in the document, it is incorrect?

A I believe that's incorrect, yes

Q So then, did you tell the police and the FBI that you had given a check for $15,000 as a wedding gift for Cailin McDonnell?

A I did.

Q And did you tell the investigators again that you did not get anything in return for the loan to the Governor and Maureen McDonnell; did you tell them that?

A I don't recall telling them that I received anything

Q You don't recall telling them that you received anything I asked you a different question

A Okay

Q Did you tell them that you did not get anything in return for the loan to the Governor and Maureen McDonnell?

A I don't recall specifically how I answered that question at that time. But that's why I responded the way I just did. I just don't -- I didn't recall saying that I received anything

Q Okay Did you tell them that you did not ask for anything and that you did not want anything? Did you tell them that?

A I don't recall that specifically I may have, but I don't recall that

Q Okay Well, can you take a look at that document again? Look down to the fourth paragraph It is a small paragraph right in the middle of the page Again, I would ask you to read that It starts -- well, fourth paragraph. It is highlighted. Just read that to yourself without reading it out loud.

(Witness perusing document)

It is a very short paragraph One sentence Have you finished it?

A I understand it is short I just want to make sure I understand it so when you ask me the questions, I'm giving an accurate answer

Q Sure

A Okay

Q Okay Now, I, asked you, did you want to make sure, did you tell the Investigators that you wanted to make sure that they knew that you did not get anything in return for the loan you gave to the Governor and Maureen McDonnell; did you tell them that?

A I don't know if I told them I didn't receive anything or not I may have

Q Okay And did you tell them that you did not ask for anything and that you did not want anything; did you tell them that?

A I don't recall that

Q Okay Now, did you tell them about Maureen McDonnell traveling to Sarasota, Florida to support your product? Did you tell them about that?

A I may have

Q Okay Did you tell them about the Roskamp Institute in Florida?

A I may have

Q Did you tell them that Maureen McDonnell came to that conference?

A I may have

Q Did you talk about the conference that Maureen McDonnell went to in California?

A I may have I don't recall that

Q Did you tell them that Maureen McDonnell had other business in California and agreed to talk about your product?

A I don't recall that

Q Do you remember telling them about a third conference at the Westin Hotel in Richmond, Virginia?

A I don't recall saying that specifically

Q Do you remember telling them Maureen McDonnell was supportive of your product, even handing out samples to individuals; do you remember telling them that?

A I may have I just don't recall specifically saying that

Q Did you equate her support as similar to what the support she would give to, say, the Virginia wine business; did you tell them that?

A I don't recall

Q Okay If you look again at that document, there is the fifth paragraph that's right underneath the very short paragraph that you read before Please read to that to yourself Don't read it aloud And I'll ask you some questions

A Would you ask the question again?

Q The fifth paragraph down, right underneath the short paragraph you just read, it says, "Williams was told "

That's how it starts Do you see that? It is highlighted.

A I don't see that Yeah, I see that now

Q Please just read that to yourself

A Okay

(Witness perusing document)

Okay.

Q Now, I just asked you whether or not you remember telling the police and the FBI that Maureen McDonnell was supportive of your product and even handed out samples to individuals; do you remember telling them that?

A I recall her being supportive of the product

Q That's what you recall, but did you tell them that?

A I don't recall that as I sit here now It has been a while ago

Q Okay And did you equate her support for your product to the support she gives to the Virginia wine business; did you tell them that?

A I don't know if I did or not

Q Okay Now, you told them also about the launch of your product at the Executive Mansion Do you remember telling them about that?

A Yes

Q You said to them that you planned the event and decided who to invite and sent out the invitations; you told them that, right?

A I don't recall that

Q You told them that you thought launching the product from the Mansion would add credibility to your product, right? You told them that?

A Yes

Q And you told them that it was important to stress the importance of the new discovery from a Virginia company, right? You told them that?

A Yes

Q Now, just looking at the paragraph right beneath the one you just read, "Williams confirmed. " is how it starts

A Yes Do you want me to read that?

Q I just want you to read that first couple sentences

A Okay Just a second.

(Witness perusing document)

Okay

Q Okay Now, do you recall saying that you planned the event, decided who to invite, and then sent out the invitations?

A I don't recall saying that I planned the event at all

Q Okay

A That I planned the event I don't recall that

Q So if the document says that, it is inaccurate?

A I'm just saying I don't recall I don't recall that I've never seen this document

Q Okay Now, at the end of this interview in January, 2013, didn't Special Agent Hagan, one of the two who is present, didn't he ask you to wear a wire?

A He did He asked me would I wear a wire

Q And it was about the McDonnells?

A It was It was about the Governor

Q The Governor So it wasn't about Maureen McDonnell; it was about the Governor?

A I believe so

Q And you understood that he wanted you to wear a wire without informing the Governor and record the conversations you had with the Governor, right?

A I didn't think much about it at that point

Q Yes or no Is that what he asked?

A Ask that question again

Q Did he want you to wear a wire so that you could, without the Governor knowing about it, record your conversations with the Governor; is that what he wanted you to do?

A I'm not sure He asked me would I wear a wire, and I stopped the meeting right then.

Q You stopped the meeting right then?

A That's my recollection

Q Why did you stop the meeting right then? Let me ask you this way , Did you stop the meeting right then because there was nothing to record?

A I stopped the meeting right then because I felt like I better call the lawyers in Washington, that there is a problem.

Q So you stopped the meeting because you were worried about the fact that he had asked you to wear a wire against the Governor, right?

A At that point when he said that, my thoughts were, the Governor could be in trouble, and I could be, too

Q Okay So you wanted to talk to your lawyers

A Yes

Q All right And you called your lawyers, right? Is it right after that meeting, the same day?

A I called them immediately afterwards

Q And your lawyers are from what law firms?

A Steptoe & Johnson in Washington, D C and McGuireWoods in Richmond.

Q Okay

MR. BURCK: I would ask your assistance in calling up Government Exhibit 524 It was admitted yesterday

(Document displayed.)

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Do you see that? You can blow it up just a little bit so it is easy to read.

THE CLERK: Who is publishing the exhibit?

MR BURCK: We are

THE COURT: Let me switch back

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Now, Mr. Williams, you discussed this document yesterday with Mr Dry This is a July 1st, 2013, something called the Proffer Agreement It doesn't say that, but that's how Mr Dry described it Do you remember discussing this document yesterday?

A I do.

Q Okay And if you look, the last page, Page 3, you see your signature on that document?

A I do.

Q What's the date of your signature?

A July 1st, 2013

Q Okay So you had an interview with the government on July 1st, 2013, right?

A Yes, I believe so

Q Okay Now, this document was provided to you by your lawyers?

A Yes

Q Okay And they described it to you, they discussed it with you before you signed it?

A Yes

Q And this document says in sum and substance that anything you tell the government at this meeting about the McDonnells can't be used against you, right?

A Yes

Q So long as you are truthful, right?

A As long as I'm truthful.

Q Who tells you what the truth is? The government is the one who decides whether or not something is true, right?

A I think if it is truthful it is truthful It is

Q It is what it is from your perspective?

A From my perspective, the truth is the truth

Q But this document doesn't say a court of law or a jury is going to decide whether or not it is true?

A I don't know if it says that in here or not But I'm just trying to answer your question

Q I'll tell you it doesn't

A Okay

Q Now, at that meeting, you had a second meeting where you discussed the same topic that you discussed with the Virginia State Police and the FBI in January, right? You talked about the McDonnells?

A Yes

Q Is that right?

A You mean on that date?

Q On that same day Right?

A Yes

Q This document was provided to you at the meeting

A Yes

Q Okay

MR. BURCK: May I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

(Document proffered to witness)

THE WITNESS: Am I keeping this one still?

MR BURCK: You can put that to the side

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Now, what I have just given you is a report by the FBI It is dated July 2nd, 2013, but it is of the interview that occurred on the 1st I don't want you to read from the document I'm going to do the same thing I did before with the Virginia State Police report I'm going to ask you some questions about what you said to the FBI, then I'm going to ask you to review the document to see if it helps you refresh your recollection if you don't recall anything Okay?

A Okay

Q I ask you to, well, let me ask you the questions first and then I'll direct you to the page You talked to them about the loan that you gave to Maureen McDonnell, right? Do you remember doing that in July of 2013? $50,000 check?

A I believe that was discussed.

Q Okay And you said that Maureen McDonnell told you that she and the Governor were in financial trouble Do you remember telling them that?

A Yes

Q And you said that her husband, you told the prosecutors that her husband had borrowed money from a doctor in Virginia Beach at a high interest rate and that they had maxed out their credit cards and they were at the point of filing bankruptcy Do you remember saying that?

A That they were -- I didn't say at the point of filing it I said my recollection of that is, they had discussed filing bankruptcy I didn't say that, I don't recall ever saying they were at the point of it, that they had discussed it

Q Okay So if the document says something different, the document is inaccurate to you?

A I'm just giving you my recollection If the document says something different from my recollection --

Q You told them that Maureen asked you for a $50,000 loan to pay down their credit cards and help their rental property through a tough rental market Do you remember telling them that?

A I believe so

Q You didn't tell them at that meeting, though, that Maureen McDonnell had said she would do anything for you, right?

A I don't recall

Q Well, you told them about a friend who is a judge that you met in Florida sometime around the time that Maureen had asked you for the loan Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Okay And did you tell them that you asked this friend, who is a judge, if there was anything wrong with you loaning the Governor $50,000? Do you remember telling them about that?

A I recall that

Q And do you remember that the Judge said, "As long as you do not ask for anything in return, you can loan anybody money " Do you remember saying that?

A I recall saying what the judge told me, was that "As long as you don't get any contracts, you can loan money The reporting of that, it is their problem, not yours "

Q So is your understanding from this judge that as long as you don't get any contracts?

A As long as I don't get any contracts is what he said

Q Contracts from the state, the Commonwealth of Virginia?

A Yes

Q That was your understanding

A That was my understanding

Q Is that your understanding today?

A That's my understanding of what he said, yes, that day

Q Okay So you remember telling the FBI about this

A I do

Q Okay Now I'd like you to take that document I showed you before, handed up, and go to Page 5, please

THE COURT: Has he indicated an exhausted recollection?

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, he said that he did not recall that he did not tell them that Maureen McDonnell said that she would do anything for him.

THE COURT: All right

THE WITNESS: I don't understand that

THE COURT: There is a difference between the witness saying "I don't recollect something" and you refreshing it by letting him look at the document, and the witness saying something different and you using the document to impeach. Now, we've got two different routes that we go, and you know you have to do one thing with the other and something else with the next He has not indicated an exhausted recollection on this particular point His recollection is different

MR BURCK: Yes, Your Honor Your Honor, what I am asking the witness here is simply does he recall telling the FBI at this meeting that Maureen McDonnell said she would do something for him. And he says he does not recall telling them that So what I wanted to do is show him this document in the relevant area, have him read it, and see if it refreshes his recollection

THE COURT: Ask him that question again. Let's see

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Mr Williams, do you recall, you did not tell the FBI and the prosecutors at this meeting on July 1st, 2013 that Maureen McDonnell had said she would do anything for you in exchange for the loan You didn't tell them that, did you?

A I don't recall whether I did or not

THE COURT: Go ahead

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Please turn to Page 5 And there is a paragraph that begins, "After reviewing Exhibit 6 " Do you see that? That's the second paragraph

A Yes

Q You can read the whole paragraph if you like, but you can start at the second sentence which begins, "Maureen later met with Williams " and just read the rest of that paragraph to yourself

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Does this help refresh your recollection about whether or not you told the prosecutors and the FBI on July 1st, 2013 that Maureen McDonnell had said she would do anything for you in exchange for the loan? The only question is whether or not it refreshes your recollection. That's all

A I don't recall

Q You don't recall whether or not you said it or you don't recall -- is that what you are saying, you don't recall whether you said that?

A Ask that question again It was a little quick

Q Sure Does this document refresh your recollection about whether or not you said to the FBI and the prosecutors on that day that Maureen McDonnell had offered to do anything for you in exchange for the loan?

A This document doesn't say that And it doesn't refresh my recollection -- my recollection is different from what I just read, parts of it

Q Okay Thank you, sir Now, about this loan and the same meeting, July 1st, 2013 After you told them about the conversation -- after you told the prosecutors about the conversation you had with the judge, you told them that you called Maureen and that you said you would loan them the money, but that you wanted to talk to the Governor first Do you remember saying that?

A I recall that

Q Okay And you said to them that you met with the Governor in the Governor's Office boardroom; do you remember saying that?

A I may have said that I was confused. Actually, I may have said that then, yes But later, I learned, my memory was refreshed, and I'm not sure whether on that occasion, because clearly, the second one I did, but on the first one, I wanted to just make sure that he knew about this loan. And I don't know if I did that on the phone or if I met with him.

Q Okay

A In person

Q Okay So you don't know if what you told them that day was accurate or not

A I'm telling you what I am telling you right now is I recall just making sure that the Governor knew before I gave Maureen these checks that he understood what I was doing

Q Okay And you told them that you agreed with the Governor to a two-year five percent loan; do you remember telling them that?

A I recall generally that, those terms generally

Q And you recall or you told them that the Governor asked if you guys needed to draw up some paperwork for the loan Do you remember telling them that?

A I recall having a conversation about paperwork.

Q And that you said it was not necessary because a handshake was still the law in Virginia You told them that that's -- that that's what you said to the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q Now, you met with the government again in around September, 2013; do you remember that?

A If a document says there is a meeting, that says I met with them, then I'll accept that

MR. BURCK: May I approach?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, I'm going to do the same thing I've been doing

A It's okay

Q This is an FBI report dated 10-16-2011 I'm sorry, 2013 Excuse me That's of an investigator interview that occurred on September 12th, 2013

A Okay

Q Now, at this second meeting, if you recall, were your lawyers with you for that meeting as well?

A Yes

Q And before you had this meeting, had you signed an immunity agreement with the government?

A Yes

Q Okay.

MR BURCK: Could you guys pull up Government Exhibit 523?

(Document displayed.)

BY MR BURCK:

Q All right, so the date of this document, you discussed this a bit with Mr Dry yesterday, this is July 1st, 2013?

A Yes

Q And this is the immunity agreement that you signed. It is separate from the prior agreement that we talked about earlier

A Yes

Q And this agreement gives you immunity from prosecution for anything related to public corruption and the McDonnells, right?

A That's my understanding

Q So the first document said that they couldn't use anything you said at the meeting against you, right? The first document you signed?

A The Proffer Agreement?

Q The Proffer Agreement

A I believe so

Q Right Now this one says you can't be prosecuted, right?

A That's my understanding

Q Okay And if you look at the second page?

A As long as I tell the truth.

Q As long as you tell the truth But again, there is nothing in this document that says anything about a court or a jury deciding whether or not it is true, right?

A You said there wasn't

Q You can read the document if you like, but I can tell you there is nothing in there that says that

A Okay

Q Look at the second page, please Signed by you?

A Yes

Q Dated July 2nd, 2013?

A Yes

Q It is a day after the interview? You testified that July 1st was the time of the first interview?

A I'm taking your word that it was on the 1st I don't know if it was the 1st or this was done on the 2nd. I'm just taking your word at that

Q I'm just asking when you signed it You signed it July 2nd.

A I signed it July 2nd.

Q So you got this agreement the day of or the day after you had talked to the government for the first time with your lawyers Right?

A I don't know if it was that day or the day after

Q But it was after the meeting

A After the meeting

Q And after the meeting, you got immunity

A I don't know, I'm sorry, I don't know if it was before or after the meeting I don't recall whether it was before or after the meeting

Q You don't recall if it was before or after the meeting But you got immunity

A I did

Q Okay Let's talk about that meeting in September, a couple months after you get immunity

A Yes

Q You tell them at this meeting, again, about the loan You told them that you had a private meeting with Maureen where she said that she had a background in healthcare supplements and was willing to help you in any way she could Do you remember telling them that?

A I recall that You are referring to May 2nd, that this is when I met with her?

Q That's right

A Is that what you just said?

Q May 2nd of 2011 is what you are discussing

A I just wanted to make sure I understood.

Q This is what I am asking you right now, is what you told the FBI and the prosecutors in September of 2013.

A Yes

Q Okay?

A Okay

Q So you told them, again, just to make sure I understand, you told them that she had a -- that she told you that she had a background in healthcare supplements and was willing to help Williams in any way she could, right?

A I recall her saying that she would help me in any way she could.

Q Okay, that's fine That's what you told them.

A I believe so, yes

Q Okay And that was something different than what you told them in July, right?

A I don't know why I don't recall why it would be different

Q Okay Now, you got another immunity agreement,

right?

A Later, I did.

Q And that was in May of 2014 So a couple months back

A Yes

MR. BURCK: Can you please publish Government Exhibit 530, please

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Now I'm going to read to you, this is already in evidence, I'm going to read to you the second paragraph of this immunity agreement It says: "The conduct for which Williams would receive immunity is limited to conduct involving his agreement to provide, and his provision of, things of value to former Virginia Governor Robert F McDonnell, former First Lady of Virginia Maureen P McDonnell, and their family members Two: Conduct related to loans Williams received from 2009 to 2012 in exchange for his pledge of Star Scientific stock. And three: Conduct related to Williams' gifts of Star Scientific stock to certain trusts from 2009 to 2012 "

Do you remember that?

A I do

Q And your lawyers discussed this with you before you signed it?

A Yes

Q And you got this agreement on May 30th, 2014, right?

A Yes

Q What date did you sign it? I think you signed it on, look at the third page, you signed it on June 5th, 2014 Right? Is that your signature?

A Yes

Q It says June 5th?

A Yes

Q The very next day you met with the government, right? Right after you signed this document, you met with the government

A I'm accepting that, that you know that

Q I'll do better than that I'll give you a document

(Document proffered to witness)

Now, Mr Williams, what I have given you is an FBI report of a meeting that occurred on June 6th, 2014 Now, this is after you have signed your second immunity agreement on June 5th, 2014

A Okay

Q Didn't you tell the FBI and the prosecutors that at this meeting, that Maureen McDonnell said that she and the Governor were in financial trouble and if you gave them the $50,000 loan, she would help you? Do you remember saying that?

A I recall that

Q Now, you had another meeting with the government about two weeks later And I will approach.

A On that last question where I said I recall that, I recall her husband -- she saying that her husband said it was okay for her to help me, too

Q Okay

(Document proffered to witness)

Now, you met with the FBI a couple weeks after June 19th Do you remember that? Roughly, June 19th? I've given you a document that is an FBI report of an interview you had with them on June 19th

A On June 19th

Q 2014 About a month-and-a-half ago

A Okay It says June 23rd, but you are saying the meeting was on the 19th.

Q The document, that's the date it was transcribed. The interview happened on June 19th

A Okay

Q Now, at that interview, which occurred a month-and-a-half ago or so, less, you told the government, didn't you, that Maureen said that she and the Governor were in financial trouble, and that if you would help them out financially, she and the Governor would help you and Star Scientific out Do you remember saying that to the government?

A I don't recall that as I sit here

Q Do you remember telling them at that meeting, the June 19th meeting, that you and your wife, Celeste, had driven to the Governor's Mansion and dropped off the $50,000 loan check to the First Lady? Do you remember telling them that?

A I may have

Q Do you remember telling them that you did not believe your wife knew that you were dropping off the check?

A My wife did not know I was dropping off checks

Q And you told them that You told the prosecutors that on that meeting

A I may have I'm trying to -- there is so much material, I'm trying to recall all this and I'm trying to tell you the truth. I'm just trying to make sure that I'm not rationalizing dates, and I just want to make sure that I specifically know that on this date these happened without me guessing So that's why --

Q Right now all I'm asking you is whether or not you remember telling them this, and I'll show you the document if you don't remember

A My answer to that question was that I did not -- my wife did not know what I was doing

Q Okay And at this time, you told the prosecutors that the Governor came over from his office using the tunnel between the Governor's Office building and the Mansion. This is right after you gave the check.

A Yes

Q Do you remember telling them that?

A I recall telling them that the Governor came over because I learned about that tunnel that comes over from the Patrick Henry Building to there But I'm not sure if that's -- I'm not 100 percent sure if that's where I met with him and briefly with his wife and made sure about that the loans or that I talked to him over the phone I'm not 100 percent sure of that as I sit here

Q Okay That's what you told them a month-and-a-half ago.

A I think that's -- I think that's what happened But I can't tell you with 100 percent that that's what happened I can just tell you that before I gave the Governor and his wife these checks, I made sure that the Governor knew about it

Q And you don't recall telling the Virginia State Police and the FBI back in January, 2013, that it was only after you had given Maureen McDonnell the check that you told the Governor about it?

A No, I don't recall

Q You don't recall telling them that?

A I don't recall saying that

Q Okay And do you remember that you met with the government about less than two weeks ago, on July 16th, 2014?

A Yes

Q And do you remember telling them at that meeting that when you were first interviewed by law enforcement officers in January of 2013, that you had not been truthful; do you remember telling them that?

A I do recall saying that

Q And you had never told them that before, right?

A I don't recall if I had or not As I sit here, I don't know if I've said that or not I may have

Q We talked a bit yesterday about --

A It wasn't truthful, but I don't --

Q Thank you, sir We talked a bit yesterday about John McKeon and the loans that he gave you.

A Yes

Q He gave you roughly $10 million; is that right?

A I thought it was a little more than that

Q A little more? $12 million?

A Maybe 12

Q $12 million. Now, you were interviewed by the prosecutors in this case for the first time about that McKeon loan in May of this year, right?

A I don't recall

Q You don't recall?

A If that was the first time

Q Had you talked to them about it last year?

A At some point, that's been discussed I just don't recall when it was

Q Okay

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, may I approach?

THE COURT: Yes

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR BURCK:

Q This is, what I have given you is an FBI transcript of an interview or summary of an interview that was conducted on May 27th of this year I'm going to ask you some questions about what you talked to them about, the prosecutors about, at that meeting Okay?

A Okay

Q Now, you were talking about the McKeon loan. You remember that was the discussion, that was the topic, right? Without looking at the document, the May 27th meeting, was that about --

A I don't recall whether -- I just don't have the recollection to go back. I'm not, you know, I just don't have a recollection to go back and just say on a date in May when I met with someone that I discussed --

Q That's fine.

A Discussed this Okay?

Q Please take a look at the document If you look at the first page of the document and you look at the bottom of the page first where there is some data, it says "Investigation on 5-27-2014 at Richmond, Virginia " Do you see that?

A I see 5-27-2014 I do.

Q Do you see the top, "Federal Bureau of Investigation"?

A I do

Q Can you read to yourself the second paragraph of this, on this page, without reading out loud? Just read it to yourself

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Does this refresh your recollection that you had an interview with the FBI about two months ago about the McKeon loan?

A It refreshes my recollection about when I met John McKeon.

Q Okay

A But I just don't recall that interview

Q Okay This was two months ago You don't recall the interview?

A I don't recall the specifics of it

Q I'm not asking about the specifics I'm asking if you recall being interviewed by the prosecutors about the McKeon loan.

A I don't

Q You don't recall that?

A No

Q Sir, can you turn to the second page?

A Not as I sit here, I don't right now.

Q I understand. I'm just asking some questions

A Okay

Q Second page, the second paragraph on that page, can you read that to yourself?

A The second paragraph on Page 3 of 7?

Q No, it is on Page 2 of 7

A 2 of 7

Q The second page The second paragraph Can you read that paragraph to yourself?

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Are you now refreshed that you had a meeting with the FBI and the prosecutors about the McKeon loan two months ago?

A Yes, I just couldn't place the time two months ago.

Q Okay At that meeting, did you explain to them that the McKeon loans were a way for you to access cash without having to report the sale of your stock? Did you say that to them?

A I recall saying it was a way to borrow money against the shares

Q Okay So you didn't say to them that it was a way to access cash without having to report the sale of your stock?

A I may have, because I wouldn't have to report it But there is no requirement to report that that I was aware of

Q Did you tell them that if you sold your stock, you would have to make a public reporting that you sold your stock in Star; did you tell them that?

A I may have

Q Did you tell them that it could look negatively to other investors if you were selling your shares and could cause the price of the stock to go down? Did you say that to them?

A I may have

Q You may have?

A I don't recall specifically whether I said that or not

Q Can you turn to Page 3 of that document?

A Okay

Q The top paragraph, the very first paragraph on that page Please read it to yourself

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Is your memory refreshed?

A It is

Q And did you tell them that?

A I believe I did.

Q Do you recall you were asked about transfers of shares you made to your children in a trust account?

A Yes

Q At that same meeting, right?

A I don't know if it was at the same meeting or not

Q Well, do you remember telling the prosecutors when they asked you why you did not just sell your Star shares, rather than gift the shares to your children and have the shares sold, you said that the benefit of getting Star stock to his kids was that the restrictions on the shares were removed and you would not have to comply with Securities and Exchange Commission regulations or Star's company policies? Do you remember saying that?

A I wouldn't have any filing requirements if I did that

Q I'm asking, did you remember saying that?

A I recall saying that I wouldn't have any filing requirements

Q Do you recall saying that the motivation for gifting the shares to your kids and directing the sale of them was to avoid people knowing that the CEO of Star was selling his stock in the company and to avoid insider trading rules; do you remember saying that?

Q Sir, would you turn to Page 6 of the document? Actually, I'm sorry, start with Page 5, the very bottom.

A Okay

Q There's one line on that page, "When Williams was asked " Do you see that?

A Yes

Q Please read that paragraph It goes over to Page 6 Read the whole paragraph to yourself, please

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Having read that paragraph, does it refresh your recollection about the things -- I'll ask you again if you don't remember what I asked you.

A Ask the question

Q I'll ask the questions again. Do you remember telling the prosecutors when they asked you why you did not just sell your shares and gift them to the children, that you said the benefit of gifting Star stock to your kids was that the restrictions on the shares were removed?

A Yes

Q And that you would not have to comply with SEC, Securities and Exchange Commission, regulations or Star's company policies Do you remember saying that to them?

A I believe so

Q And do you remember saying to them that your motivation for gifting the shares to your kids and directing the sale of them was to avoid people knowing that the CEO of Star was selling his stock in the company and to avoid insider trading rules?

A I don't recall that.

Q So if the document says that, that was not true, you didn't say that

A I'm just saying as I sit here, I don't recall that

Q And this interview happened two months ago, right?

A It says so But I don't specifically recall that part

Q All we can ask is for your recollection, sir

A Okay

Q Now, on Sunday, this past Sunday, July 27th, the day before the jury was picked, trial started, you met with the government again, right?

A I did.

Q And they asked you about the McKeon loans and the stock transfers to your kids' trusts, right?

A This past Sunday?

Q This past Sunday

A I don't recall if they did or not

MR BURCK: May I approach?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR BURCK:

Q Mr Williams, did you tell the prosecutors that you did not want the share transactions disclosed because there may be security law issues; did you tell them that? I'm not asking you to look at the document now, sir I'm asking you to tell me if you remember saying that to them.

A And the question again?

Q I'll do it again Mr Williams, did you tell the prosecutors on Sunday, less than a week ago, that you did not want share transactions disclosed because there may be security law issues?

A What kind of shares? That's a general -- I don't understand

Q I'm asking you whether or not you remember saying that

A Sorry to do this to you, but would you ask that question one more time, make sure I understand it?

Q I will Did you say to the prosecutors on Sunday that you did not want share transactions disclosed because there may be security law issues?

A I may have I don't recall sitting here

Q Okay Did you tell them that you did not know if it was a crime, but it could be?

A I don't recall as I sit here

Q Did you tell them that you knew what you did was wrong, and you were hiding it but you are not an attorney; did you tell them that?

A I don't recall that

Q Sir, could you look --

A I may have But as I sit here right now, I'm trying to answer your questions

Q Sir, the document that I provided to you, it is handwritten notes, but I'll proffer to you and to the Court that these are notes that the government provided us of a meeting between them and Mr Williams on Sunday

MR. DRY: The government will stipulate to the document

THE COURT: All right

BY MR. BURCK:

Q Please read the second paragraph, it is highlighted, to yourself

(Witness perusing document)

A I can't make out this writing

Q Okay So you can't read the --

A Would you read this?

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, with your permission? It is very short.

THE COURT: It is not in evidence If you all want to put it in, fine, you can read it all you want

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, we offer it

THE COURT: Okay

MR DRY: The government would object This is no way to refresh a witness's recollection. In fact, this wasn't even about the McKeon transactions

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, I would ask that Mr Dry is testifying here

THE COURT: I want you all to come up here a second.

(At Bench.)

THE COURT: Let me see it All right, I've got to read this myself I'm going to let you make your best attempt to read the highlighted, and then ask him the question.

MR. BURCK: Okay Thank you, Your Honor

(In Open Court)

BY MR BURCK:

Q So Mr Williams, to help you out, because I know it is handwritten notes provided by the government, I'm going to try to read this to you.

A Okay

Q "JW did not want share transaction disclosed because there may be security law issues Did not know if it was a crime but it could be Knew what he was doing was wrong and was hidding it," it is misspelled, should be "hiding it," "hiding it, not an attorney "

A What was this in relation to?

Q I wasn't there Do you recall saying this to them?

A I don't know in what context or what this is in relation to

Q Do you recall saying those words to them, or anything to that effect?

A I'm confused about that, because I don't understand what that's in relation to.

Q Okay Now, switching topics -- actually, before we switch the topic, on this immunity deal that you got, the one in May of this year?

A Yes

Q Which we read it, it is in evidence, we read it to the jury You got coverage for this case, for the McKeon transactions, for the stock transfer to your kids Right?

A Yes

Q You testified yesterday that you didn't ask for that That was additional immunities

A I said I didn't demand that

Q You didn't demand it?

A I didn't demand it I don't recall demanding that at all

Q Did you ask for it?

A I don't recall as I sit here I worked with the lawyers, my counsel

Q So your lawyers asked for it for you?

A I just don't remember exactly how it happened is all

Q But you didn't, it is your testimony that you didn't ask for it all or you just don't remember?

A My testimony is I did not demand anything like that

Q "Demand" is a little different than "ask." Right?

A I don't know if I asked for it

Q You don't know if you asked for it

A If I asked for it But I did not demand it

Q Okay So just so I'm clear, you don't know if you asked for immunity for a $10 million loan that you received from Mr McKeon in exchange for a transfer of stock, right? You don't know

A I don't recall I just know I didn't demand any of that

Q Okay And you are telling the jury that you didn't -- it wasn't something you were worried about It didn't bother you

A It was not something I was worried about I wasn't worried about those issues

Q You weren't worried about those issues?

A No

Q You weren't worried about those issues because you don't think it is a crime?

A I didn't think there was a crime there

Q So you don't think you violated insider trading rules?

A I don't think there was any -- I don't think there was any criminal activity there I don't recall that That's my view on it

Q Okay You don't think you committed securities fraud?

A I don't think so

Q And you don't think you committed any crime with any of these transactions?

A I'm not a lawyer I may have But I don't know that

Q So you are not sure, but you might have

A I don't think I did is what I'm saying

Q Did you ever tell the government that what you did with the McKeon loan and your stock transfers to your kids was wrong?

A I don't recall that as I sit here

Q So the only reason that you are sitting here today is because you got immunity to testify in this case; is that what are saying?

A I'm here today testifying because I've been subpoenaed to be here today to testify And I understand that I have immunity in certain areas from the government in exchange for my truth and cooperation, that they will not prosecute me in those areas for my -- and that's for me to be here and to cooperate and to tell the truth about any and all of these transactions or whatever happened.

Q So you are testifying because of your immunity in this case and in these other cases, right?

A I'm testifying, like I said, because I'm required to be here to testify But I am testifying with immunity in some of these areas where I may have legal exposure, and maybe -- some laws may have been broken. I'm not familiar with all of that

Q Okay Let's move on to another topic The shopping trip

A Yes

Q In April of 2011 You testified about that earlier, right? Yesterday?

A I did.

Q And you testified that Maureen McDonnell called you sort of out of the blue and said, "Take me on a shopping trip," more or less?

A She did Well, it was in connection with going -- she timed it with going to the event at the --
Q Timing of the event going to the --
A I think it was called the Union League Club in New York
Q Right So isn't it the case that you organized the entire shopping trip for Maureen and for Mary-Shea Sutherland, who was accompanying her; isn't that right?
A She called me and said --
Q I didn't ask you that I asked you, did you organize the trip for Mary-Shea Sutherland and for Maureen McDonnell? Did you organize the whole trip for them?
A Yes
Q Now, when you took Maureen McDonnell on this trip, she didn't make you any promises that she was going to help you do anything, right?
A She told me she was going to have me seated with her husband at the Union League Club that evening
Q Okay
A "Come up here so you can spend some time with the Governor and then we can go -- we will go shopping during the day And th[illegible]hat evening we will go spend time with the Governor "
Q So you understood you couldn't have access to the Governor unless you took her on a shopping trip; is that what you are saying?

A I understood that the two were linked.

Q But you had flown with the Governor for five hours in October, 2010 on your jet, right? You testified about that earlier

A I did.

Q And you had actually texted him in February or texted actually his body man, as Mr Dry described it --

A Right

Q In February, and he arrived at your event for CigRx, didn't he?

A He did arrive at the event for CigRx.

Q So you are saying that in April, a month later, you had to pay, you had to buy Maureen McDonnell dresses in order to sit next to him at an event in New York; is that what you are saying?

A She was calling it a rain check.

Q That's not what I asked you

A Okay

Q Are you testifying that in order to get to sit next to the Governor in New York at an event, you had to take her on a shopping trip?

A Absolutely

Q Absolutely

A That's my testimony

Q Okay Did she ever say to you at that event or in New York that she was going to get the Governor to do stuff for you in exchange for buying her dresses? Did she say that to you?

A No

Q Did she say to you that she was going to do anything other than seating you next to the Governor? Did she say she was going to do anything other than that for you in exchange for getting the dresses?

A She said she was going to arrange for me to be seated with the Governor and I would have time with the Governor

Q Okay

A And that was the -- I felt like that was the inducement for me to come to New York.

Q The inducement for you to come to New York?

A Yes

Q Okay To sit next to the Governor Okay You took Mary-Shea Sutherland shopping, too, right? Or she was there

A I didn't take Mary-Shea It wasn't my --

Q Was she there?

A It wasn't my understanding to take her shopping, but she was there She was present with Ms McDonnell

Q She was present with Ms McDonnell?

A Yes

Q Did you buy her a dress?

A I did

Q $1,600 or so?

A I did.

Q Did Mary-Shea go to the event that night, do you know?

A She did

Q Did she introduce you to somebody by the name of James Abel?

A If that was the catering -- there was a gentleman there that has a catering business But I don't know him. But she introduced me to someone

MR. BURCK: Your Honor, I'd like to publish just to the witness RM-0185

THE COURT: All right

A That evening when I met this gentleman at the Union League Club, he was someone trying to get business from us, and him and Mary-Shea were standing together when I was introduced to him. And I just talked to him for a few minutes Other than that, there was no conversation.

Q Okay Did you talk to Mary-Shea -- that wasn't quite the question I asked, but that's fine Did you talk to Mary-Shea in New York or in April, that time frame, about helping you launch your product, Anatabloc?

A That evening, I recall talking to both of them and told them that we were going to do a launch of the product, of Anatabloc

Q Okay, thank you Mary-Shea Sutherland was the Chief of Staff to Maureen McDonnell, right?

A Yes

Q And Maureen McDonnell was not present for those discussions with Abel and Mary-Shea Sutherland, right?

A Yes

Q And attached to it is a series of pages of a speech written by Ms McDonnell

MR BURCK: Your Honor, we would offer into evidence RM-2019

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, Mr Williams, you received this e-mail about one week after the shopping trip, right? Less than one week?

A Okay

Q Shopping trip was on April 13th, you received this on April 18th, right? That's what the document says?

A Yes

Q Okay And this is an e-mail from Maureen McDonnell attaching a speech or an article she had written about nutraceuticals, right? Go ahead and read the second page I'll read it to you to make it faster "Nutraceutical Healthcare, the'Life Insurance Policy You Can Cash In On When You Are Living " Second paragraph says I'm a work-from-home mom and I have been married for almost 23 years to a wonderful man. A No

Q You don't remember receiving this?

A No

Q Okay Now, you testified about a dinner you had, yourself and your wife, with the Governor and Maureen McDonnell on April 29th of 2011, right?

A Yes

Q Okay You testified that you and your wife brought a new gift to Ms McDonnell

A Yes

Q It was a Louis Vuitton --

A It was a wallet to match the purse from New York.

Q Okay And Ms McDonnell didn't ask you for that, right? That was a surprise

A My wife's suggestion.

Q But she didn't ask you, Maureen McDonnell did not ask you for that purse, right?

A No

Q It was a surprise

MR BURCK: Please publish for the witness only RM-0873 Actually, why don't you do the second page Blow up the middle You will have to show him the top so he can identify it

A She did not ask for that

Q You just delivered it I want to talk to you a little bit about the loan discussion you had with Ms McDonnell You testified that she had asked you to come to the Mansion on May 2nd and you talked to her, she told you about her financial problems, told you about the financial issues with the real estate, right?

A Yes

Q And then you said yesterday that she said that she would help you if you gave a $50,000 loan to her, right?

A The way it was said was, she said she would help me but she needed me to help her

Q She needed you to help her But she did not say she was going to help you with getting the Governor to help you, right?

A She did not

THE COURT: All right This is a good time to break. We will take a 15-minute break for the morning so that you all can make your switch

Q Mr Williams, I want to talk to you about the Roskamp event You testified that Maureen McDonnell traveled with you or traveled down on your plane to the event, right?

A Yes

Q And Mary-Shea Sutherland was with her, right?

A Yes

Q And you testified that she gave some remarks at the event?

A Yes

Q Ms McDonnell gave remarks --

A Yes

Q -- at the event, right?

And were they long or short? They were short, right? Were they 10 minutes --

A Few minutes

Q -- 15 -- few minutes?

A Five minutes

Q Few minutes?

A A few minutes Five minutes

Q So just a few minutes

A Ten minutes Five, 10 minutes

Q And you testified that you asked her if she would like to make some remarks, right?

A I did

Q So there was no expectation going in that she was actually going to give a speech or anything like that, right?

A That's correct She was a special guest

Q And she mentioned that you said in this -- at this event a launch She offered to have people come to the Executive Mansion for a launch or Anatabloc; is that right?

A Yes

Q Do you know if Mary-Shea Sutherland told her to say that?

A I have no idea

Q So you weren't present for all the conversations between Mary-Shea and Maureen McDonnell, were you?

A No

Q Did you know that Mary-Shea Sutherland bought stock in Star Scientific the same day that Maureen McDonnell did?

A No

Q Because you testified yesterday that you learned that

Maureen McDonnell had bought stock in Star Scientific because she told --

A At the end of that meeting

Q At the end of that meeting?

A Yes

Q Because she told you about it, right?

A Yes

Q Or she asked you about the stock price?

A As we left --

Q Right

A -- she --

Q But you didn't know until I just told you that Mary-Shea Sutherland bought stock --

A No

Q -- in Star Scientific?

A No

MR BURCK: Please put up on the screen Government Exhibit 161 Blow up the --

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir, you testified about this yesterday This was -- the attachment, actually, is from you to Governor McDonnell Do you remember talking about this document?

MR BURCK: Can you show the second page so that the witness can see it?

A Yes, I do

BY MR BURCK:

Q Okay Now the first page of this document is from Jerri Fulkerson -- who is your assistant, right? -- and it's to Mary-Shea Sutherland, right?

A Yes

Q And it's dated Thursday, June 16, 2011, right?

A Yes

Q And this is the letter you talked about where it sort of lays out what you want from the Governor, right?

A Yes I was responding to the request, is what this is

Q The request And you testified yesterday you weren't sure if it was Maureen McDonnell or Mary-Shea Sutherland who came to you and said you should draft a letter like this, right?

A I wasn't sure

Q You're not sure today?

A I'm not sure today

Q Okay So it could have been either one?

A It could have been

Q Okay

MR BURCK: You can take that down

BY MR BURCK:

Q I want to talk to you a little bit about your relationship with Mary-Shea Sutherland Okay?

A Okay

Q Do you remember calling her in June or so after the Roskamp event and talking to her over the phone?

A I don't --

Q Let me ask you this Do you remember speaking to her over the phone? Did you talk to her over the phone occasionally?

A Yes

Q Okay Do you remember telling her that she was the type of person you wanted working for you?

A I don't recall saying that But Mary-Shea is very professional, and I --

Q But you don't --

A -- respected her, but I don't --

Q You don't recall saying that to her?

A I don't recall saying that

Q Okay Do you recall telling her that you would pay her outside of her job with the State to help you?

A No

Q You did not say that?

A I don't recall saying that

Q Did you meet with her for breakfast in the summer of 2011?

A I did

Q Okay Do you remember at one of those breakfasts that you focused on her unhappiness and you told her that she couldn't fool an old Southern boy? Do you remember saying that?

A I had breakfast with Mary-Shea, but I --

Q Sir, before you explain it, tell me yes or no Do you remember saying that?

A I did not say what you just read

Q Okay Go ahead What do you remember about the breakfast? Go ahead

A I met with Mary-Shea for breakfast She wanted to talk to me And she expressed her unhappiness working for Ms McDonnell and that she would like to -- you know, she would rather be working for, you know, someone other than her Maybe our company

Q Maybe your company?

A Maybe our company

Q Okay And she told you that she was looking to leave her position as Chief of Staff, right?

A She said she was unhappy, and later she said she was going to leave no matter what

Q Okay And she told you that she wanted to go back to her position as an event planner for the firm Benedetti & Farris She told you that, right?

A At some point she did

Q And Benedetti & Farris, to your knowledge is an event planning company?

A It's a fundraising firm here in Richmond I'm not sure all of what they do

Q Okay

A But I'm -- I know the name

Q She told you that she needed an anchor --

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor Hearsay

THE COURT: Go ahead and answer the question

Q She told you, Your Honor (sic), that she needed an anchor client to cover her salary Did she tell you that?

A I don't recall

Q You don't recall or she didn't say it?

A I don't know if she said that or not

Q You told her, did you not, that you were not interested in being her anchor client, but you gave her a different suggestion, right?

A If you can help me with --

Q I'm asking you do you recall --

A I don't recall that

Q -- saying that you were not interested in being her anchor client?

A No, I don't recall that

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea to talk to a man by the name of Jerry Kilgore about the law firm of McGuireWoods putting her on its staff?

A I had her talk --

Q Sir, I'm asking you did you say to Mary-Shea that she should talk to Jerry Kilgore about the law firm of McGuireWoods putting her on the staff?

A I don't recall whether I did or not

Q Jerry Kilgore is who?

A Jerry Kilgore is a -- one of my lawyers, and he's the former Attorney General

Q Of the Commonwealth of --

A State of Virginia

Q -- Virginia?

A Commonwealth of Virginia

Q And McGuireWoods is a law firm based here in Richmond?

A It is

Q It's your law firm that's representing you in this case?

A It is

Q Okay And didn't you tell her that the law firm would just charge you extra for putting her on the staff?

A I may have I don't recall that

Q Okay So you may have said that?

A I may have I don't recall

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea Sutherland at this breakfast meeting, or one of the ones that you had that summer, that you didn't just want her working on Anatabloc but for you personally?

A That was her suggestion, not mine

Q So she said that to you? She asked you? You didn't say that to her?

A That's correct That's my recollection She was unhappy where she was

Q Didn't you tell her that you did not have time to organize your own life and that with the work going on at your home in Richmond and all of your travel, you saw Mary-Shea Sutherland as the person to manage all of that for you? Didn't you tell her that?

A I don't recall if I did or not I may have

Q Then you went on to talk about your secretary, Jerri Fulkerson --

A Yes

Q -- right?

And didn't you tell Mary-Shea Sutherland that she wasn't going to be with you much longer?

A I don't recall saying that Jerri is still with me

Q But you didn't tell Mary-Shea Sutherland that Jerri Fulkerson wasn't going to be with you much longer, did you?

A I don't recall that

Q Didn't you tell her that Jerri Fulkerson -- "her" being Mary-Shea Sutherland -- didn't handle all that you needed covered?

A I don't recall that

Q Do you remember testifying about a meeting you had with Maureen McDonnell and Mary (sic) Huffstetler on August 1st, 2011?

A Yes

MR BURCK: Please show the witness -- or publish Government Exhibit 186 I believe it's in evidence It is in evidence

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir, do you remember testifying about this document yesterday? This is a Mansion log of people who come in and out of the Mansion on August 1st

A Yes

Q And you talked -- the prosecutor showed you some names on this to orient you as to what time that meeting occurred between Mary Huffstetler, Maureen McDonnell, and yourself, right?

A Yes

Q Now, you see in sort of the middle of the document, about two lines up from the highlight, you see Mary-Shea, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And it says 9:04 she came in, and it looks like it says 17:34 that she left, right?

A Okay

Q It could be 12:34 It's hard to tell

A Yes

Q And you see further down the document, near the bottom it says 10:34, 11:31, and it says "Dr J Clore"?

A Yes

Q You see -- you testified about that yesterday, and it says "See Mary-Shea"?

A Yes

Q Now, the entry that you testified about yesterday, which is a little above that, it says 9:45, 12:14 -- in 9:45, out 12:45, Jonnie Williams, See 102 And I think that there's been -- that 102 is Maureen McDonnell, right?

A Okay

Q And Dr J Clore, though, is seeing Mary-Shea, right, according to this log?

A Yes

Q Now, do you know if these logs are 100 percent accurate?

A I don't know that

Q You wouldn't have any reason to know one way or the other, would you?

A No

Q Now, on that day, August 1, 2011, didn't you have lunch with Mary-Shea and Jerry Kilgore that afternoon?

A I had lunch with Jerry Kilgore and Mary-Shea at some point I don't know if it was that afternoon or not

Q So you don't know one way or the other whether it was August 1st?

A No

Q At this meeting, this lunch between Jerry Kilgore and Mary-Shea Sutherland, you asked Jerry Kilgore to handle compensation for Mary-Shea Sutherland, didn't you?

A I don't recall that I may have, but I don't recall it sitting here

Q At that lunch, didn't you decide with Jerry Kilgore and Mary-Shea that it would not work to have Mary-Shea working at McGuireWoods?

A I don't recall that

Q Now, this -- before we go on, the lunch that you recall happening -- it may have been August 1st, it may have been some other date -- happened at the Berkley Hotel here in Richmond, right?

A The Berkley Hotel At the restaurant in the Berkley

Q So you just testified that you don't remember if it was decided that she would not work at McGuireWoods, right?

A I don't recall that

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea and Jerry Kilgore that

Mary-Shea would return to Benedetti & Farris and that you would be the anchor client?

A I don't recall that

Q Didn't you shake her hand on the deal?

A I -- I don't recall shaking her hand on anything

Q When she asked you about compensation -- did she ask you about compensation?

A Don't recall having any conversations with Mary-Shea about compensation

Q Okay That's because you didn't want to talk about her compensation, right? Isn't that what you told her?

A I'm just telling you that I don't recall having any conversations like that

Q Didn't you tell her that you didn't want to talk about compensation because you're not worried about compensation?

A I don't recall anything like that

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea to just send the paperwork to Jerry Kilgore and you would get it all taken care of? Didn't you tell her that?

A I don't recall that

Q You had another breakfast with Mary-Shea thereafter, right?

A Yes

Q At The Jefferson Hotel?

A Yes

Q Here in Richmond?

A Yes I don't know if it was before or after or when it was, but I did have lunch with her

Q Didn't you tell her at that meeting that she would leave her job as Chief of Staff and that she would become your anchor client?

A I don't recall saying that

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea not to tell the Governor's office that she was leaving until after the luncheon event at the Mansion? Didn't you say that to her?

A I do not recall ever saying anything like that

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea to trust you and that you should only give them a couple weeks' notice -- "them" being the McDonnells -- instead of a month's notice, as she had suggested?

A I don't recall that

Q Didn't you tell her to stay in her job as Chief of Staff to Maureen McDonnell until you got Anatabloc launched?

A I don't recall saying anything like that

Q Didn't you agree with Mary-Shea that she would stay in her position until October 1st of 2011, about a month after the launch? Didn't you agree with her?

A I don't recall having that conversation with her

Q Sometime after these breakfasts and lunches, didn't you call Mary-Shea to tell her that because of your company's policies you could not sign a consulting contract with Benedetti & Farris?

A At some point I had a conversation -- if you would like for me to -- I'm trying to answer your questions as best I can, but --

Q I'm asking a simple question So --

A Okay

Q -- is that --

A Okay I'll just --

Q The question, I'll repeat it Did you tell her at some point after these breakfasts and lunches that because of company policies you could not sign a consulting contract with Benedetti & Farris? Yes or no

A I believe so

Q You believe you said that?

A Yes

Q And you told her that each month of her services to you should be invoiced and you would pay it out of your marketing budget? You told her that, right?

A I don't recall that specifically

Q Didn't you ask her to have Tom Benedetti of Benedetti & Farris call you and that while you couldn't sign the agreement with him, your word was something to take to the bank? Didn't you tell her that?

A I don't recall saying that

MR BURCK: I'd like to publish to the witness only RM-0009

BY MR BURCK:

MR DRY: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted

"Jerri, I was asked to forward this agreement so that Mr Williams could look at it today It is in reference to the services to be provided by Mary-Shea Sutherland "

Do you see that?

A I do

Q And then above that is an e-mail from Ms Farris to Ms Fulkerson saying, I typed your name wrong Please let me know if you got this one "

And then above that is an e-mail from Jerri Fulkerson to you forwarding this e-mail and an attachment, right? Do you see the attachment underneath that, "Star Scientific Agreement"?

A I do

MR BURCK: Please publish for the witness RM-1992-0001

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, can you read that okay --

A Yes Yes

Q -- or do I have to blow it up? Okay

Sir, this is a letter from -- on Benedetti & Farris letterhead dated August 23rd, 2011?

A Yes

Q And is it addressed to you, Jonnie R Williams, Sr ?

A It is

Q And is it from Benedetti & Farris?

A It is

MR BURCK: Your Honor, we would offer RM-1992-0001 into evidence

MR DRY: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted

MR BURCK: Objection?

MR DRY: No objection

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir, I'm going to read this e-mail -- this -- sorry -- this letter to you

A Okay

Q "August 23rd, 2011 " Before I read it, do you recall that the Mansion event was on August 31st, 2011?

A Yes August 31st

Q August 31st, 2011 Okay So this is dated about a week earlier?

A Right

Q It's to Jonnie R Williams, Star Scientific "Dear Jonnie We appreciate the opportunity to work with you and your company We believe our combined unique experiences and skills will be an asset to your efforts Mary-Shea Sutherland will be the lead consultant for Star Scientific "

Now, do you recall that Mary-Shea Sutherland was still working for the Commonwealth of Virginia on that date of August 23rd, 2011?

A I believe she was at this time

Q And she was still the Chief of Staff to Maureen

McDonnell, right?
A I believe so
Q "Benedetti & Farris" -- sorry I'm going to continue to read

"Benedetti & Farris, (B&F), has been contracted for consulting and event planning services for your ongoing efforts B&F will offer strategic advice, organize, manage and produce events as directed For these services, B&F will be compensated as follows: $9,000 per month for the period of October 1, 2011, to September 30th, 2012 In addition to fees for services, B&F will bill back expenses incurred in relations to activities undertaken for Star Scientific, Inc , to include, but not limited to, overnight shipping, event costs, and travel expenses "

And there's some more in there, but I think that the point -- you can get the point of the letter, right?
A Yes
Q Okay Do you remember getting this letter?
A I don't recall seeing this letter
Q Okay Even though it was e-mailed to you by Jerri Fulkerson?
A Yes I just don't remember seeing this
Q Okay And the e-mail that -- this is RM-0009 This is dated September 2nd, 2011, right, the top?

A Yes

Q So Jerri Fulkerson sent you this e-mail with this attachment on September 2nd, 2011?

A As I said, I don't recall seeing this agreement

Q Okay

A I knew Mary-Shea wanted to come to work for us, but I think she got ahead of herself

Q Okay She got ahead of herself

A No one had agreed to any of this

Q You received a contract from --

A No I'm just saying I don't -- I don't recall that contract going there I recall it -- her approaching it a different way

Q Okay But you're not disputing that this contract was actually sent to you, right?

A Oh, I don't know if I received that or not

Q Okay

A I don't recall ever seeing that is what I'm saying

Q Okay You're not sure if you received it I got it Okay

A I didn't say I'm not sure I said I don't -- I just -- I don't believe -- I did not receive this I don't recall seeing this

Q Okay That's fine That's fine

But the e-mail says September 22nd, 2011?

A Yes

Q And that's two days, three days, depending on how you count it, after August 31; is that right?

A Yes

MR BURCK: Please publish for the witness only RM-1991

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir, I'm going to tell you that this is an e-mail from Mary-Shea Sutherland to Jerri Fulkerson dated Friday, September 2nd, 2011 And it is -- the subject is "For Jonnie to read " Do you see that?

A Yes

MR BURCK: Your Honor, we'd offer RM-1991 into evidence

MR DRY: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, I'm going to read from this e-mail as well
Again, this is September 2nd, 2011 It's the same day as the Benedetti & Farris contract was e-mailed to at least your e-mail account This is from Mary-Shea Sutherland to Jerri Fulkerson, your assistant, and it says, "Can you print this and give it to Jonnie to read? Thanks "
It's from Mary-Shea to Jerri, right?

A Yes

Q "Jonnie, for your consideration PBS documentary

Idea 1) There is a filmmaker currently working on a documentary for PBS that has to do with Virginia agriculture and taking traditional products to new realms His name is Bob Griffith, and I can get you in to talk with him Your story is great and he could be convinced to include Anatabloc in his film

Idea 2) Fund your documentary (PBS only takes funded projects) According to our film office, it would be around $500,000 for a 30 minute program, and I have contact with the man that made the documentary on Virginia wine and had a lot of succes with getting national distribution Think about it, and I'm happy to discuss ideas anytime, exclamation point Mary-Shea Sutherland, Chief of Staff, Office of the First Lady "

Did you receive this document?

A I know about it It may have been read to me by my secretary, but I know about this

Q That was her practice, to read to you --

A A lot of the times she would just read it to me

Q Okay So you recall this document?

A I do

Q And did you have an agreement with Mary-Shea Sutherland to help you find ways to help you promote your product?

A No

Q No?

A No

Q So what was this -- what did you understand this e-mail to be about?

A This was Mary-Shea offering to introduce us to someone that produces documentaries I didn't pay much attention to it

Q To do a documentary about Virginia or about Anatabloc?

A About -- Anatabloc would be included is what I'm understanding from what I just read here

Q When she says "according to our film office," do you have any idea what she's talking about?

A Let me look at that again I don't know

Q Wasn't it about the film office that works with the Office of the Governor? Isn't that right?

A I don't know that

Q Okay

A But I remember -- I remember hearing about this

Q Now, sir, Mary-Shea Sutherland left her position as Maureen McDonnell's Chief of Staff sometime in around October of 2011?

A I'm not sure Sometime that year

Q Okay But it was after the launch event, right?

A Yes

Q Didn't you tell Maureen McDonnell, in sometime around September of 2011, that Mary-Shea had been approaching you for a job?

A I did

Q And you told her that because you didn't want Maureen McDonnell to find out only after Mary-Shea had left, right?

A That's correct

Q Didn't you tell Maureen McDonnell that you didn't think that what Mary-Shea had been doing was appropriate?

A I didn't comment on it I don't recall commenting on that

Q Didn't Maureen McDonnell get upset when she found out that Mary-Shea had been negotiating with you for a job for months and she had never known about it?

A She had mentioned that she had heard Mary-Shea was talking to other relationships that they have at the Governor's Office about finding work

Q And was she happy or was she upset about that?

A She was upset

Q And was she upset when she heard from you that you had been talking to Mary-Shea as well?

A Yes

Q Didn't you exchange a number of texts with

Ms Sutherland during those several months over the summer of 2011?

A I don't recall how many

Q Didn't those texts make very unkind comments about Maureen McDonnell?

A From me?

Q From you

A I don't recall

Q Didn't you tell Mary-Shea Sutherland that you really wanted her to be helping with your life?

A With our company

Q So you didn't say that you really wanted her to help you with your life?

A She had offered She says, "One of the things that I could do" -- Mary-Shea was unhappy and she was trying to get a job with us, and it was awkward for me She was helpful to us being at the Governor's Mansion, but she was unhappy and she wanted to leave and she wanted to come to work for us

Now, I have a great respect for Mary-Shea Mary-Shea is very professional I would have liked for Mary-Shea to have been helping our company, but it just -- that did not happen That was my view of Mary-Shea

Q So all those breakfasts and lunches that you met with her and talked to her about coming to work for you in one capacity or another --

A Yes

Q -- you weren't really that interested, right?

A No I was interested in her I was listening to what she had to say And it's like in one of those lunches with Jerry Kilgore and myself at the Berkley, she made the comment that "It makes me sick to go to work there and I'm leaving No matter what, I'm leaving my job "

Q Right

A So -- and I just listened

Q And the person she was upset with was Maureen McDonnell, right?

A She was

Q She didn't like working for Maureen at all, right?

A Not at all

Q And then you went to Maureen and told her, "Oh, by the way, I've been talking to Mary-Shea for the last several months and she's looking for a job with me," right?

A At some point --

Q Sir, answer --

A Yes

Q -- my question Did you do that?

A Yes

MR BURCK: I'd just like to offer a couple of documents into evidence, sir -- Your Honor, without asking questions about them

Please publish for.the witness RM-0523

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, this is a document produced by your lawyers, and it is the -- the front page of it is a summary of expenses, and attached to it are a number of invoices, and I direct you to the third to the last page

MR BURCK: Your Honor, I'm sorry I do have a few questions quickly on this

Before I do that, we offer RM-0523 into evidence

THE COURT: 0523?

MR BURCK: Yes, sir

MR DRY: What page is it? The whole thing?

MR BURCK: The whole thing, or we could just do the front page, RM-0523-0001 and RM-0523-0064

MR DRY: Are these all -- what Bates, JWS?

MR BURCK: JWS

MR DRY: Do the whole thing

MR BURCK: Okay I'm sorry

THE COURT: They will be admitted

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

Can you go back to the first page? Can you blow up the bottom of the -- not the whole thing Just the bottom, second to the last entry

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, do you see on that entry it says 7/26/2011?

A Yes

Q Martinair, comma, Inc ?

A Yes

Q $8,001 44 And it says, "Charter flight for doctors and First Lady McDonnell from Richmond to Baltimore for Anatabloc, slash, Johns Hopkins Symposium " Do you see?

A Yes

Q You went to an event called the Gibson Island event --

A I did

Q -- in that period, right?

A Yes

Q And that was to help promote Anatabloc?

A Yes, to the physicians To bring physicians from UVA, VCU And physicians from Johns Hopkins attended this symposium at Gibson Island that was being discussed by Dr Ladenson and Dr Mullan

Q Okay And the -- Mary-Shea Sutherland accompanied you on this trip, right?

A No I was in -- I was already there She didn't --

Q You were already there Excuse me

A -- accompany me

Q She was there? She attended?

A She came on one of the flights with the doctors

Q Okay These are your flights?

A On the -- I don't know if she was on the charter flight or on my plane I don't know

Q Okay Well, this -- this says, "Charter flight for doctors and First Lady McDonnell from Richmond to Baltimore for Anatabloc," right?

A Yes

Q Maureen McDonnell didn't go to that, did she?

A She wasn't able to, and Mary-Shea came in her place

Q Right But she did not attend, right?

A No

Q And these entries are made by your assistant, Jerri Fulkerson, based on information you provided her?

A Generally, yes

Q Okay And then if you turn to the -- it's the third to last page It's RM-0523-0064 Now, you'll see Martinair, and this is the invoice that corresponds to that entry And do you see the passengers?

A Yes

Q It says "John Clore, Mary-Shea Sutherland, Margaret Shupnik," right?

A It does

Q It does not say Maureen McDonnell, right?

A No

Q Okay Because she wasn't there?

A She wasn't able to attend

Q Okay And John Clore, he's a doctor from where?

A He's an endocrinologist at VCU's Medical School

Q Okay And do you remember --

MR BURCK: If you can flash up, please, Government's Exhibit 186 And if you can highlight the 10:34 entry and 11:34 departure of Dr J Clore

BY MR BURCK:

Q And this was dated August 1, 2011 So about five or six days after the Gibson Island event Do you see that it says Dr J Clore came to see Mary-Shea, right?

A Yes

MR BURCK: You can take that down Thank you

And also, just please publish to the witness RM-0618-0023 Sorry Just that page And -- thank you

BY MR BURCK:

Q Can you see that okay, sir?

A Actually --

Q It's very hard to read I'm sorry It's highlighted now so it's a little easier

A I see The Jefferson Hotel

Q Okay And before you start, this is a -- this is an expense report completed by your assistant, Jerri

Fulkerson?

A Yes

MR BURCK: Okay We offer RM-0618 into evidence, Your Honor

MR DRY: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR BURCK:

Q And you can see the highlighted entries One says, "7/25/2011, AMEX, Jefferson Hotel, lunch with Mary-Shea Sutherland, assistant to First Lady concerning Anatabloc "

Do you see that?

A Yes

Q And then below it it says, "7/26/2011, AMEX Jefferson Hotel, lunch with Mary-Shea Sutherland, assistant to First Lady, concerning Anatabloc"?

A I see that

Q And then a few entries down it says, "8/17/2011, AMEX Jefferson Hotel, lunch with Mary-Shea Sutherland, assistant to First Lay, concerning Anatabloc," right?

A Yes

MR BURCK: Can you take that down, please And can you show Government's Exhibit 182, please, which has already been admitted into evidence Can you blow up the entry that says, "Breakfast with Ms McDonnell, Anatabloc meeting"? If you can just highlight that, that would also be fine Thank you

BY MR BURCK:

Q That says, "7/6/2011, AMEX, Berkley, breakfast with Ms McDonnell, Anatablœc meeting," right?

And it says it was for $52 69 --

A It does

Q -- right?

A Yes

Q Isn't it true that you had breakfast with Mary-Shea Sutherland that day and not Maureen McDonnell?

A I definitely didn't have breakfast ever, that I can recall, with Ms McDonnell at The Berkley

Q Okay And this is information that is provided to -- or the entries that are in this document is information that's provided to Jerri Fulkerson by you to fill out the ledgers, right?

A Yes, but it's not always accurate

Q Okay

A Sometimes we have -- there are mistakes with that

Q That's fine Understood Thank you

One other document to talk about

MR BURCK: Please show the witness RM-1117-0001

Q Now, sir, you're not on any of these e-mails

A Okay

MR BURCK: But I would offer this document into evidence

MR DRY: No objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: It will admitted

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, again, I'm just going to read this to you I have no reason to believe you've ever seen this document, but I just want to -- I'm going to read it into the record Okay?

This is an e-mail from Mary-Shea Sutherland It's dated August 16, 2011 It's to Adam Zubowsky, and it reads as follows "The lunch is with doctors and researchers from MCV, UVA, Johns Hopkins, and Roskamp Institute, along with Jonnie Williams, and a few others that are involved in the various research projects

This would be an occasion to bring all of the medical professionals together as they begin to start the studies at UVA and MCV on Anatabloc and its uses for reducing public health costs Johns Hopkins has done the bulk of the research and now UVA and MCV are going to further the studies The dates for the lunch was selected due to the launch of the product Does that help?"

Do you see that?

A Yes

Q Now, the question that she's answering in that e-mail on the prior page is from Adam Zubowsky

Now, you knew that Adam -- you met him during the Cognac incident in December 2009 at the Four Seasons? Do you remember?

A I met him at the Four Seasons

Q Okay So he works for the Governor, right?

A He does He's his aide

Q He's his aide And this is from Mary-Shea to the Governor's aide, right?

A Yes

Q And this is on August 16 of 2011, right?

A Yes

Q And it says, "Can you send me info on the fl lunch at the Mansion, the wtop day, so I can ask him Know he's going to ask for details Thanks "

A I see --

Q And Mary-Shea answers with the e-mail we just read, right?

A Yes

MR BURCK: You can take that down

Please publish Government Exhibit 250 It's already been admitted into evidence

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, you were asked questions by Mr Dry about this document yesterday Do you remember this?

A Yes

A It's owned by the company

Q And -- you're right It's owned by the company You are the largest shareholder in Star Scientific and in Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals, right?

A I'm right up there

Q Okay This was a document created by your company, right?

A Yes

Q And it was your company that put the First Lady of Virginia, Ms Maureen McDonnell, on the advertisement; isn't that right?

A Yes

Q It wasn't the Office of the Governor, was it?

A No

MR BURCK: Can you please take that down and put up Government Exhibit 254

BY MR BURCK:

Q Again, similar to the last document, this is an advertisement, or advertisement, for -- from Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals for a breakthrough technology conference in Grand Blanc, Michigan And once again it says -- this is October 22nd Once again it says the First Lady of Virginia, Maureen McDonnell, right?

And this is an event that you testified about?

A Yes

Q And she did attend this event, right?

A She did

Q And her name is not on this because it was a last-minute decision, right?

A I don't recall that.

Q Well, didn't she plan to go to Salt Lake City for a Nu Skin convention at the time?

A I knew she was going there, yes

Q That's why she was traveling with you originally; isn't that right?

A I wouldn't have been traveling to go to a Nu Skin convention I'm not sure

Q You wouldn't be traveling to go to a Nu Skin convention Okay

MR BURCK: Well, can you publish to the witness RM-1262-0001?

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, this is a reservation form, Nu Skin, 2011 Nu Generation convention

A Yes

Q If you look below, it says something about guest information Do you see that?

A Yes

Q Weren't you planning to go to the Nu Skin convention with Maureen McDonnell?

A No She was planning for my wife and I to go, trying to get my wife to go I was not planning for it at all

Q Okay But it says Jonnie Williams on it?

A I had no intention of going to that convention

Q I understand you had no intention, but did you tell Maureen McDonnell that you would go? You did, didn't you?

A No

Q You didn't?

A No I stopped on the way back from Laguna Beach at Pelican Hill and dropped her off there and met -- she -- she arranged for a meeting with a couple of Nu Skin people there, and then --

Q Which you went to?

A -- I left --

Q Which you went to?

A -- at that point

Q You went to those meetings, right?

A No, no I didn't go to those meetings I just met with an individual there

Q An individual from Nu Skin?

A A doctor from there

Q Which --

A But I had not planned on going --

Q To the conference?

A -- to this Yes

Q But Maureen McDonnell introduced you to the doctor

from Nu Skin?
A No
Q Was it a social event?
A No It was a business meeting
Q And Nu Skin is a nutraceutical company?
A It is
Q And Ms McDonnell was receiving pay from Nu Skin; isn't that right?
A Yes, I believe so
Q And she had been -- she told you she had been receiving money from Nu Skin for many years, right?
MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor Hearsay
A I don't know how long or what --
THE COURT: Overruled
A -- what all of her involvement was with that
BY MR BURCK:
Q So you understood, did you not, that Ms McDonnell was free to take pay from private companies even though she's the First Lady of Virginia?
A That's what she said
MR DRY: Objection Objection, Your Honor He can't go --
THE COURT: Sustained
MR DRY: -- for Ms McDonnell's understanding
BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, you understood that she could receive pay, right?

A She said she could

Q Now I want to talk about some of the gifts that you talked about that you gave the McDonnells You told us about the Rolex story?

A Yes

Q The Rolex And I think you said that Ms McDonnell saw the Rolex on your wrist at the meeting with Mary Huffstetler or --

A Yes

Q -- around the time of the meeting --

A Yes

Q -- with Mary Huffstetler --

A Yes

Q -- right?

A Yes

Q And she said, "Oh, I'd like that for the" --

A Yes

Q -- "Governor," and you said -- or you said -- she said that she'd like something like that for the Governor?

A Yes

Q And you said that, "Do you want me to get that for you?"

A Yes Or I said, "Are you ask" -- "do you want me to get you one? Are you asking me to get you one for the Governor?"

Q Okay And you did, right? You bought one?

A I did

Q And it cost about $6,000, right?

A Six or $7,000

Q And you testified that that made you very uncomfortable, right?

A It did

Q And you were very upset with the fact that you had to do this to get the McDonnells to do stuff for you, right?

A It was uncomfortable

Q It was uncomfortable Do you remember the Cognac in December of 2009 --

A Yes

Q -- at the Four Seasons?

A Yes

Q That cost $5,000?

A Yes

Q And you served that to Phil Cox and Adam Zubowsky?

A Yes

Q And your friend, Brad Kroenig --

A Yes

Q -- Kroenig, right?

A Yes

Q Were you uncomfortable then?

A No, because Brad likes it and people seem to like it

Q So if Brad had been with you and Maureen McDonnell, you would have been fine with the Rolex?

A Pardon?

Q I'm asking you You said that the reason why you were okay with the Cognac was because Brad likes the Cognac

So if Brad had been present for the meeting that you had with Maureen McDonnell and Mary Huffstetler or -- let's excuse Mary Huffstetler from the scene for the moment -- Maureen McDonnell and you, she saw the Rolex and she said, "Hey, can I have a Rolex for the Governor," if Brad had been there, you would have been fine with getting her a Rolex for the Governor?

A That's outrageous

Q I agree I'm just asking the question You said that the Cognac, you were fine with the Cognac because of Brad Kroenig, right?

A I'm having a difficult time connecting a drink to a Rolex watch

Q The drink cost $5,000

A I understand that But I'm just having a difficult time That drink was shared by a group of people, and that Rolex watch was for an individual And I'm sorry, I'm just having a difficult time --

Q I understand

A -- with that

Q So it's more the sharing aspect of it that's -- that's --

A It's more the disconnect of what -- of a watch to the Cognac I'm having -- I don't understand -- I don't understand that, sir

Q Well, the Cognac you were -- you bought in December in order to impress people, right?

A People like it It was -- I was entertaining them, yes

Q Okay. And actually, you -- you -- you testified about Cognac that you shared with the McDonnells and the Coxes a couple years after December '09 at a vacation that you invited the McDonnells to and the Coxes to, right?

A I did

Q And didn't you take -- you drank some, or you and Mr McDonnell, everyone except the wives --

A Yes

Q -- drank the Cognac, right?

A Yes, but it wasn't a whole bottle

Q Right But what was left you poured into the fireplace, right?

A It was a little bit left I was curious what it would do

Q Okay What did it do?

A I didn't want to drink any more of it so -- it flamed --

Q So that was about $2,000 just tossed into the fireplace?

A No No, no, no, no It wasn't $2,000 into the fire It was maybe a small amount of it It could have been worth maybe $50, or it could have been as high as a hundred dollars of what I did

Q Okay

A I was curious what it would do

Q Now, the Rolex, isn't it true that Ms McDonnell never said to you, "Hey, can I have a Rolex? I'd like to get a Rolex like that for my husband"?

She never said that to you, did she?

A That's not true

Q Didn't she tell you, after you had offered her the Rolex, that it was -- that was a little too much? Didn't she say that to you?

A No, sir, she didn't

Q All right Didn't you offer her a Rolex as a surprise for the Governor?

A I offered her the Rolex because she asked me to get it for her, and that's why I had it engraved, which she asked me to engrave on the back of the watch, sir

Q Isn't it true that Maureen McDonnell actually said to you you should actually return the Rolex because it was too much and her husband would feel uncomfortable with it?

A That's false

Q Didn't she tell you that she couldn't give it to the Governor in the way that you were giving it to her?

A She never had that conversation with me, sir

Q Didn't you tell her, "I can't return the Rolex because I've already had it engraved to the Governor"?

A I never said that

Q Now, you testified as well about a conversation that you said you had with Cailin McDonnell Sometimes I think you referred to her occasionally as Caitlin, but she's the daughter

A Cailin

Q Cailin McDonnell

A Okay

Q And you said that she called you and told you that her mom would buy you -- would buy her -- I'm sorry Excuse me Let me reverse that

She called you and said to you that her mom had told her, Cailin, that you would buy Cailin a car, right?

A Yes

Q That didn't happen, did it?

A No

Q The phone call didn't happen?

A No I wouldn't buy the car is what didn't happen, sir

Q Cailin McDonnell never said to you that her mom said that you would buy her a car That didn't happen, did it? That conversation never occurred?

A That's false It did occur

Q It did occur Cailin McDonnell said to you on that call that her mom said that you would sell Cailin a car, one of your Range Rovers Isn't that what happened?

A Sir, that young woman called me and had a car --

Q Sir, I'm asking --

A -- picked out at a dealership --

Q I ask you to answer my question

THE COURT: Let him answer the question

A She called me and had a car picked out at a dealership, I believe a Ford Explorer, and it was 18 or $20,000, and said that her mother said that I was going to pay for it and to call me so I can make arrangements to do it because they didn't want to -- she didn't want to lose the car so she wanted to get it done quickly

And I said to her, I said, "I appreciate all that your mother is doing for me, but I need to call your mother and talk to her about this "

That's what happened

BY MR BURCK:

Q This conversation occurred two years ago?

A It happened sometime maybe in the summer of '11 or something I don't recall a specific date, but it was back early on

Q Okay But you remember a lot of details of that conversation?

A I remember that I remember her daughter calling me and asking me to buy this car, and I was surprised

Q Okay So you remember a conversation from two years ago, but you don't remember what happened on Sunday of this week with the prosecution?

A Well, sir, I can remember -- there's some things in my life that are more outstanding events than others, and that was one

Q Meeting with the prosecution before you get on the stand to testify against Bob McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell is not one of those things that's really important to you?

A Sir, they are asking me a lot of questions This young woman asked me one

Q Okay

MR BURCK: Please publish Government Exhibit 3, which has already been admitted into evidence

Can you blow that up, please, so that it's easier for the witness to read it

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, this is the letter that you testified about This happened -- I guess you got this letter from Maureen McDonnell in 2013 after the investigation had come to light, right?

A I did

Q Can you read that letter line by line to us?

A It would be easier if you read it for me

Q Okay I can do that

I'm going to ask you -- I'll ask you some questions as we go along Okay?

It says, "Dearest Celeste & Jonnie I can't begin to thank you how special you made me feel on Cailin's wedding day and on our 35th wedding anniversary day all dressed up in the beautiful outfits you adorned me in on both momentous occasions, period I'm so happy we've been able to share so many significant milestones in our lives with you both, explanation point I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits and show them off on many grand occasions, period "

Sir, just stopping on that sentence because you were asked about that sentence yesterday You testified about one daughter you have, Rachel?

A I did

Q Do you have another daughter?

A Caroline

Q In that sentence you testified yesterday -- what does that sentence mean to you exactly?

A It means that she was -- she was happy about the dresses that I bought that she used for her -- you know, part of the wedding That dress and another dress for her anniversary

Q And just focusing on the "I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these" --

A "I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits "

I thought she meant Rachel

Q Okay And let me ask you, does that sentence say that you had -- she had discussed with you previously returning the dresses to Rachel or your other daughter? Does it say that you discussed it previously?

A "Will now be able" -- I don't see that

Q Okay Let's keep reading "If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about who would welcome the opportunity to auction them for a wonderful cause, having been worn only once by the First Lady of Virginia to her daughter's wedding at the Executive Mansion and celebrating her 35th wedding anniversary with the Governor "

Okay That's a long sentence so let's break it up Start with the beginning "If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about "

Had you ever talked to her about charitable organizations?

A No

Q Maureen McDonnell

A Other than attending an event at Cure By Design, an auction, I don't recall ever having a conversation with her about any charities to donate dresses to

Q Did you talk to her about Cure By Design? You were there Did you talk to her about it, Cure By Design, at any point?

A I was at Cure By Design

Q Right So you probably talked to her about it, right?

A I don't think you can donate dresses to Cure By Design

Q That's not my question, sir Did you talk to Ms McDonnell about Cure By Design, a charitable organization?

A That's the cancer society event

Q And it's a charitable organization, right?

A I assume it's charitable

Q Okay And Cure By Design, do you know what "By Design" means?

A I'm having trouble with this

Q Okay

A Okay? I'm having trouble with what you're doing with this letter right here I'm just being honest with you

Q That's fine

A Okay That is --

Q That's all --

A This is a fabrication right here, and I'm trying my best to answer your questions, but you're putting me in a very awkward spot to answer questions for something that's not true

Q Well, what's not true?

A What's not true is that this -- these clothes were never intended to be returned to me I purchased these clothes for Maureen McDonnell And either one of my daughters is a size zero These dresses were never intended to be given back to my daughters

Q I'm going to read the sentence to you again

A Okay

Q "If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about" --

A But -- but -- but I'm having a problem with this, sir You're saying "if not " It's -- help me with this Because this implies that these dresses were intended to go back to one of my daughters, and I assumed it was -- one daughter is a school teacher that would never be wearing Oscar de la Renta dresses The other one is a fashion model for Ford in Los Angeles And so I'm just -- and she knows that

A Okay So I'm just -- I'm having trouble with you moving me around something that's not true I'm having a problem with it I'm sorry

Q Sir, I'm reading right from the letter and --

A I understand that

Q Sir --

A I'm trying to follow you, and you're just getting a reaction from me for the way you're handling me in asking these kinds of questions about something that's a fabrication

Q Okay You keep saying it's a fabrication I'm just --

A It is

Q Sir, I'm just trying to understand --

A Okay I'm sorry

Q -- how it's a fabrication Okay?

A Okay It's a fabrication because I purchased these dresses and went on this shopping trip because Maureen McDonnell asked me to do that

Q Understood, sir Sir --

A But they were not ever intended for my children

Q Sir, I'm just asking you a different question Okay?

A Okay

Q I'm asking you -- there are words written on this page Okay? You are aware, are you not, that Maureen McDonnell has been charged with obstruction of justice because of the words she wrote on this page, right? You're aware of that?

A I didn't know if this was the particular reason why No, I did not know that

Q The reason I'm focusing on the words is because she's been charged based on the words in this letter Okay?

A Okay

Q So I asked you a question about the -- the sentence before the "if not" where I said you -- where she wrote, "I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits and show them off on many grand occasions," right? That's what she wrote

And you agree that there's nothing in there that says you had a prior agreement or understanding that she would do that That's not what the words say, right?

A I'm just trying to follow you to understand this, sir You said you were going to break it down in parts

When it says, "I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits and then show them off," I'm saying how can my daughters, either one of my daughters, in -- how could either one of my daughters wear those dresses?

Q Okay That's what's in your mind?

A That's what's being -- that's what it says here I --

Q And I understand, but --

A Unless I don't read the words right, and maybe you can read it again for me, but it says --

Q Sir, I'm asking you a different question

A Okay

Q Does that sentence suggest that Maureen McDonnell and you had an agreement before to have her return the dresses to you to give to your daughters?

A Yes

Q To you it does?

A It does to me

Q Okay And then the next sentence, "If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about who would welcome the opportunity to auction them for a wonderful cause "

To you that means that you had a prior agreement with -- or that she's saying you had a prior understanding or agreement to return the dresses so they could be auctioned for a charitable cause? That's what that means to you?

A That's what she's saying

Q That's what she's saying to you?

A She's saying that if your daughters don't want the dresses -- if your daughters don't want the dresses, donate them to charity She's returning them

Q Okay That's what she's saying?

A That's my impression

Q Understood

A I don't know I'm sorry I'm having problems with this one

Q Okay No problem We'll put that aside

MR BURCK: Take that down, please Thank you

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, Mr Williams, you had a number of phone calls, texts, e-mails with Maureen McDonnell over the years you've known her, right?

A Yes, I have

Q Okay And your telephone number --

MR BURCK: Well, Your Honor, I -- just for privacy purposes, I'd rather not read it If I could ask just the government, I would like to move for entry into evidence of Mr Williams' telephone records

MR DRY: The government doesn't object as long as they are redacted for the last four Are they redacted?

MR BURCK: The last --

MR DRY: We stipulated to the authenticity and admissibility of the phone records I just --

THE COURT: Let's make sure we got the appropriate redactions, but I don't have any problem with the exhibit

MR BURCK: I think we do, right?

THE COURT: If you don't have it redacted yet, don't flash it up

MR BURCK: Okay, Your Honor Thank you Your Honor, what I'll do, then, is I will -- if I could give the witness copies?

THE COURT: Sure

MR BURCK: Thank you

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

THE COURT: All right Give him the paper copies and let's go on

MR DRY: And, Your Honor, we don't have paper copies here Could we not publish it externally but just to counsel?

THE COURT: Well, that's what I'm saying Don't publish anything until you're sure we got the redactions

MR BURCK: Yeah Your Honor, we won't publish it all We gave a hard copy to the witness, and that's it

THE COURT: Sure

MR BURCK: These are the government's records, actually So we're giving them just copies of their own records

THE COURT: Go ahead Ask your questions

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BURCK:

Q So, sir, you testified that you had essentially a business relationship with Ms McDonnell?

A Yes

Q And that you didn't really have a real friendship with her or the Governor, right?

A I like both of them

Q You like them both, but they were not real friends, right?

A No This was something that was important to our company and important for me to -- to bring the credibility of Virginia to this discovery and this product and to have the testing done in the State of Virginia

Q Understood, sir I think you have in front of you the exhibits We've highlighted -- there are over 10,000 pages of records So what we're doing is highlighting certain days --

A Yes

Q -- so we don't spend the rest of the year here There's a day, May 25th, 2011, that's in front of you That day there are ten texts between yourself -- I thought we weren't going to publish this, okay -- ten texts between yourself and Ms McDonnell on that day

A Okay

Q Eight of those texts are between 1 a m and 8 a m Do you see that?

A I don't recall having any texts with Ms McDonnell from 1 in the morning until 8 in the morning I think this is incorrect

Q Okay So this is -- the government produced this to us So the government's production is incorrect?

A Whomever produced it, the recording of the times, to think that I had texts and phone calls with anybody other than one or two doctors that I wake up in the middle of the night when I have questions about science problems that they tolerate me for sometimes, I don't do this And I did not have these calls and texts during the middle of the night

Q Okay August 5th, I think there's a second set of -- sir, if you would take off the clip I'm sorry Because we're not publishing this, I'm going to have to explain to you what to do There's a second set of records there, and this is for the date of August 5th, 2011 On that date, there are 15 texts between you and Maureen McDonnell That's what the records show

Q And they start at 2:20 and they end at 6:12 p m 2:20 p m and end at 6:12 p m , right?

A Let me make sure I have the right page here You're talking about the page number that says 15 here or -- and the top left corner it says in 001?

Q I believe that's right, sir

A Okay And you're asking me, on August the 5th, about the calls or texts --

Q Texts

A -- that day, right?

Q That's right I'm just asking the number I'm not asking you for the context I'm just asking the --

A How many of them are there or you're telling me?

Q You can count them I told you it was 15 You can count them if you want

A I don't disagree with that There's a lot of them

Q Okay And then if you take -- move to the next page -- the next document Put that one aside

A Okay

Q All right Thank you And then you'll see there's records from September 5th, 2011 Do you see that?

A This one says March the 6th, 2013 The second -- let's see We go from 5/25/11 to the next one is -- there's nothing highlighted until I get out to 9/22 with two on that day

Q Okay

MR BURCK: Your Honor, may I just grab the document?

THE COURT: Go ahead

A Pardon?

BY MR BURCK:

Q I just wanted to make sure I'll show you the right one

A Okay

Q Sir, if you -- now you'll see highlighted a series of texts dated September 5th, 2011?

A Yes

Q And you see that there are five of them between yourself and Ms McDonnell, correct?

A Yes

Q And they start at 9:51 p m ?

A Yes Texts or phone calls?

Q They are texts

A Okay

Q And did Ms McDonnell tell you that day that she had had a fight with Bob McDonnell?

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor Hearsay

THE COURT: Overruled

A No

THE COURT: If he recalls

A No, no

BY MR BURCK:

Q She didn't?

A She did not ever discuss her personal relationship with the Governor either with me

MR BURCK: Okay I'm just going to hand up more documents I'm just going to identify the pages so that we don't waste time

THE COURT: All right

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir -- sorry Now, sir, you have in front of you records of texts and phone calls between yourself and Ms McDonnell first on September 22nd of 2011, and this document shows that you had, on that day, you had 22 texts and 6 phone calls with her Do you see that?

A I'm actually taking your word for it

Q Okay You can flip to the next document I think that's right beneath that, and that should be from

December 4th, 2011, highlighted times

A Yes

Q On that day you had 52 texts, all in a 3-hour period with Ms McDonnell, right? That's what the records say?

A Yes

Q And you had one phone call with her, right?

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor If the witness isn't even reviewing it --

MR BURCK: Your Honor, it's in evidence I'm just trying to speed it along

THE COURT: You can answer the question

The objection is overruled Go ahead and get through it

BY MR BURCK:

Q And then finally, on November 11 of 2012 -- it's also there if you'd like to look at it --

A Okay

Q -- there are records that you had on that day alone of 2 texts and 8 phone calls with Ms McDonnell?

A Okay

Q And then in total, would it surprise you to find out that you and Ms McDonnell had over 1,200 texts and telephone communications during the period of April 2011 through February of 2013?

A I was busy

Q With Ms McDonnell?

A I was busy texting or she was busy texting and talking to me There was certainly a lot of activity in those period -- that period of time

Q And it's your testimony that every one of those texts and phone calls was about Anatabloc?

A I would say that --

Q Sir, first answer my question and then you can answer Yes, were they all about Anatabloc?

A Every single one?

Q Every single one

A I can't say that every single one was

Q But most of them were?

A I'd say 95 plus percent had to do with the business relationship, or 98 percent

Q Okay I just want to go through a few additional things that you had testified to over the last couple of days Make sure that I understand your testimony

You testified that you had a call in December 2009 where you say that Maureen McDonnell told you that she would take a rain check on the trip to New York?

A Yes

Q And that phone call was just between you and Maureen McDonnell, right?

A Yes

Q There was no one else on the call?

A No

Q You testified that there was a call in April 2011 between yourself and Maureen McDonnell where you say she called in the rain check and asked you to go shopping in New York, right? You testified to that?

A She did

Q And it was just you and Maureen McDonnell on that call too, right?

A Yes

Q You testified that you met with Maureen McDonnell on May 2nd of 2011 where you say that she offered to help you in exchange for you helping her?

A That's --

Q And the Governor was okay with that, right?

A She said the Governor said it was fine

Q It was just the two of you in the room, right?

A That's correct

Q There was no one else there?

A No one that I'm -- that I recall

Q Did you record the conversation?

A No

Q And then when you testified -- you testified that when you delivered the checks of $50,000 for the loan and $15,000 for Cailin's wedding on -- in late May of 2011, you testified that you left your wife in the car for a bit?

A In front of the Governor's Mansion while I went in to take these checks in

Q So when you took the checks in, it was just you and Maureen McDonnell together in the room, right?

A I'm -- I'm not sure

Q You're not sure? You think there might have been another witness?

A I'm not sure if the Governor came over through the tunnel that day or whether I talked to him on the phone about when I delivered the checks

Q Okay So it was either you and Maureen McDonnell or you and Maureen McDonnell and the Governor in the room together?

A Yes I just don't --

Q There was no one else present?

A Yes

Q And you didn't record that conversation either, did you?

A I did not

Q You testified that before the McDonnells went on the trip to your home in Smith Mountain Lake that you talked to Maureen McDonnell about meeting with a representative from Bill Hazel's office, that you had a conversation with her about that?

A Yes

Q And, again, it was just you and Maureen McDonnell on that call?

A It was

Q Okay No one else was on that call?

A I don't believe so

Q And then, of course, the Rolex that we talked about, that -- that meeting where you said that she asked you for the Rolex, essentially, that was just you and Ms McDonnell together, right?

A Yes

Q Ms Huffstetler wasn't there?

A No

Q No one else was there?

A No one else was there

Q And you didn't record the conversation, right?

A I did not record the conversation

Q And then the conversation that we talked about with Cailin McDonnell where you say that she said that her mom told her that you would buy Cailin a car, right?

A That's correct

Q That was just between you and Cailin, right? There was no one else on the call?

A Not that I'm aware of

Q And you didn't record it, right?

A I didn't record it

Q And then the January 2012 discussion -- this is now the time period with the MoBo Realty loans --

A Yes

Q -- that discussion that you said that you had with Maureen McDonnell about the MoBo Realty loans in January --

A Right

Q -- that also was just the two of you, right?

A Yes

Q The conversation?

A Yes

Q Right No one else was present?

A No one else was present

Q Sir, I want to talk a little bit more about --

A Other than there was a phone call Whether it was '12 or when I was there at the Governor's Mansion and she got her brother-in-law on the phone --

Q Right

A -- that would have been the only time there was another person

Q Right That was a second -- that was a subsequent call to the one you testified about where it was just you and Maureen on the phone?

A Yeah I just don't recall at the moment I just wanted to make sure that --

Q Of course Yeah

A -- when I was telling you that I had only met with her on that one or another one, there was another person on the phone, I believed to be her brother-in-law, discussing the real estate problem

Q Thank you I want to talk to you just now about -- a little bit about your relationship, business relationship, as you've described it --

A Yes

Q -- with Maureen McDonnell

A Yes

Q Okay You would agree with me that you were closer to Maureen McDonnell than you were to Bob McDonnell, right?

A Yes

Q You were much closer to Maureen McDonnell than you were to Bob McDonnell?

A Much

Q You spent a lot more time with Maureen McDonnell than you did with Bob McDonnell, right?

A Yes

Q You traveled with her to Michigan in October of 2011 --

A Yes

Q -- right?

On your plane?

A I did

Q You traveled with her to Utah and California in October of 2011?

A Yes, with a group of people

Q I think you even took her to a luxury hotel in California at one point?

A The meeting was at Pelican Hill Resort

Q Right

A The event was I didn't take her there specifically

Q You also had her over to your home in Goochland several times, right?

A No We -- after lunch at Kinloch one day, my house was on the way home and she wanted to see it

Q And that was the only time?

A I don't recall any other time

Q Okay You also testified you took her shopping in New York, right? We've gone over that many times

A I did take her shopping in New York

Q And you bought her dresses, shoes, purse, personal items on that trip, right?

A I did

Q And I think that you testified that she was happy about the trip, but would it be fair to say that she was like a kid in a candy store?

A I don't know about the kid in the candy store But I would say maybe not just happy, but I would take it up to exuberant

Q Exuberant All right You told the FBI and the prosecutors that she was like a kid in the candy store, didn't you?

A Well, I'm -- exuberant may be more how I would describe that to someone But she was -- I mean, she was very -- she was -- like I said, she was very happy about that day, was my observation

Q We've already gone over the phone calls and summary, about 1,200, over 1,200 phone calls in that period?

A Yes

Q Do you know -- well, I won't ask that question That's not a fair question

How -- how -- would it surprise you to find out that Bob McDonnell and you exchanged, during that same period, 60 texts and phone calls?

A That's a lot to the Governor

Q Compared to 1,200 to Maureen McDonnell?

A I'm working with her on this project, but 60 to me to the Governor is a lot

Q You were working on her on this project; is that right?

A I didn't say what you just said I was working with her You said I was working on her on this project, I thought you just said

Q I thought that's what you said

A This is a long process Maybe I made a mistake

Q Do you know how many calls you had with Maureen McDonnell in just April of 2011 when you first --

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor If he wants to --

THE COURT: Sustained We've heard enough of this

MR BURCK: Your Honor, just one last comment on this and then we can --

THE COURT: Sustained Let's move on

BY MR BURCK:

Q You testified that you had a business relationship with Ms McDonnell, right?

A I did

Q And that you -- the 95 plus percentage of your conversations with her were about Anatabloc or business, the business of convincing the First -- the Governor and the First Lady to help out your company, right?

A I'd say the whole -- the whole relationship of what I was doing would be 100 percent Maybe it's not

95 percent, but it's high I don't -- I have a difficult time with the percentage part It may be just 100 percent

Q Do you remember back in August of 2011 there was an earthquake in this area of the country?

A Was it an earthquake or a hurricane?

Q It was both, actually

A Okay I recall that

MR BURCK: Your Honor, may I just show this to the government?

THE COURT: Go ahead

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR BURCK: Please publish RM-0532 to the witness Can you blow that up, please

BY MR BURCK:

Q Now, sir, this is an e-mail from Maureen McDonnell to you on August 23rd, 2011, right?

A I don't recall ever seeing this, but it's funny

Q It is funny And it's a week before the -- the Mansion event, right?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR BURCK: Your Honor, we offer into evidence RM-0532

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR BURCK:

Q Sir, this is an e-mail from Maureen McDonnell to you on August 23rd, 2011, and it says, subject line, multiple explanation points, "I just felt the earth move and I wasn't having sex," multiple explanation points, right?

A It says that

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR BURCK: Your Honor, that's it for us Thank you

Thank you, Mr Williams

THE COURT: All right All right Before we get to Mr McDonnell's cross, this is probably a good place to stop right here, and we'll get started with that after lunch

You all come back at 2:00 We'll get started with the last cross-examination

(The clerk conferring with Judge Spencer)

THE COURT: All right Mr Burck, there were some phone records that we need at least an identification number --

MR BURCK: Yes, Your Honor

THE COURT: -- on those So we'll work that out with the clerk

MR BURCK: Yes, Your Honor

THE COURT: But we need to have something

MR BURCK: Absolutely, Your Honor I'm sorry I think that actually the document could have been admitted, but I wasn't sure because there are a lot of phone numbers That's why I stopped it

THE COURT: Right No, that's -- better safe than sorry

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Thank you

All right, Mr Asbill?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Williams How are you?

A I'm fine

Q My name is Hank Asbill You and I have never met; is that correct?

A I don't recall ever meeting you.

Q Did you know that I wanted to meet with you and I wanted to talk to you before this trial?

A No.

Q Never heard that?

A That you wanted to meet with me?

Q Yes, that I requested through your attorneys an opportunity to meet with you before this trial

A Not that I am aware of

Q If you had known about it, would you have met with me?

A No.

Q You didn't hurt my feelings I don't have anything you want, do I?

A No

Q There is nothing I can do to help you in any way Correct?

A Let me go home.

Q On the other hand, my folks to the right here, these colleagues of mine to the right, they can help you and you met with them repeatedly, correct?

A Can't help me with what?

Q Help you with immunity

A I already have immunity

Q Right. They helped you and you have immunity

A I do

Q Okay Now how many hours have you spent preparing for your testimony in Court this week, total? All your lawyers, all their lawyers, total, what's your best guess?

A Prior to this week?

Q Until today

A Until today?

Q Right

A How much time have I spent with the lawyers preparing from the beginning?

Q Right

A Number of days, can I do it in days?

Q However you want

A I don't think any more than two weeks

Q Okay Is there any reason why you didn't ask to see copies of the reports of your prior interviews with the government?

A Is there any reason --

Q That you did not ask to see copies of the reports of interviews that you had with the government

A I don't know why -- I don't recall -- I didn't ask for that

Q No, I know I said, is there any reason why you didn't ask so you would be more refreshed in terms of your memory and you would be more prepared to more quickly answer questions here?

A I think the lawyers, the lawyers that I have retained are very experienced lawyers, and I think they have used their best judgment to prepare me to answer these questions And apparently, that didn't include what you just asked, was reviewing those documents

Q Well, you have answered many times during the course of cross-examination that you don't recall, can't remember things, correct?

A From time to time Some things I can, some things I can't The dates are difficult for me I can generally recall what happened.

Q You have trouble remembering what you have told the investigators before, right?

A I have a problem remembering the dates But if I could just tell you what happened in my own words, I think I'm good at that

Q Well, you have had trouble during cross-examination remembering whether or not you said certain things to the investigators or to the prosecutors at the various times, the six or eight times you met with them before this trial, right?

A I have had to relive all of this, and it is a lot of material And I think I've done my best with trying to work with the lawyers to be prepared with the questions

Q Okay You have testified a couple of times that you historically and presently have a little trouble reading; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And that's something that is a lifelong thing?

A Yes

Q And to compensate for that, has your memory been really good over the years?

A I generally don't have a problem with my memory

Q All right And you are really good at listening and retaining even if you are not good at reading; is that true?

A I could be a better listener than I am.

Q Does Anatabloc help with your short term memory?

A In mice it does

Q You have taken it before?

A I take it now

Q And does it seem to improve your memory?

A I don't think it has had an effect on my memory I don't think I have a problem with my memory for it to need anything to address any issues with that

Q Okay I want to ask you a series of sort of miscellaneous questions. I hope they are not too miscellaneous, but I have taken notes during your testimony when prior attorneys have been questioning you, and I'm just trying to go through some follow-up questions that I wanted to ask. And I may get back to some of these subject matters in more detail But you remember talking about the April 29th dinner at the Mansion?

A I do

Q Correct? Is that right?

A I recall

Q You recall that

A A question about it

Q You recall generally being questioned about it?

A Yes

Q Okay And do you recall at that dinner that my client was very tired and very distracted?

A I don't

Q You don't Do you recall him talking about what he had been doing earlier that day, going to funerals, going to disaster areas, things of that nature?

A I don't

Q Now, at the end of Mr Dry's examination of you on direct, he pressed you hard. And you remember when he pounded on the table, said, "Stop beating around the bush" when he was trying to ask you whether you thought you had done something wrong?

A I remember being pressed at the end of his examination. But I don't remember him beating on the desk or the table

Q That was not staged by Mr Dry, was it, to your knowledge?

A I have no idea

Q Well, when you were preparing to testify, did you answer that question a little more easily than you did in Court when Mr Dry had to press you on it?

A What question is that?

Q Stop beating -- you know, "I did not want someone to know I was loaning money to the Governor I thought it was a problem. It could be wrong I don't know that "

A I'm not a lawyer I don't know if it was what the laws are.

Q This is when you said the ends justified the means in your view

A I took a high risk and I felt like what I was doing to try to bring this product to market, the ends justified the means, and I said it was a bad decision. And it was

Q Now, let's see if there are any other notes I want to go over before I get into --

(Counsel perusing notes)

You talked about the Union League dinner And I want to get back to that in more detail, but I had a question of you. I believe you said this afternoon or this morning that at that dinner, you felt you had to do the shopping trip in order to get a seat at that dinner

A I said that I believed the two were connected. Maureen was calling for the rain check to go shopping, and she connected the time with being seated there with her and the Governor, and I connected that

Q Okay And that connection cost you $20,000? Is that right?

A Yes It cost me that plus the transportation.

Q Okay And you had in the past offered your plane to the Governor for various trips just like you offered it to other politicians?

A I have.

Q Is that correct? So you could have offered the Governor a plane ride somewhere and had him as a captive audience where you could talk to him directly, $5,000?

A Only if he was going somewhere

Q He was always going somewhere, wasn't he? Don't these governors always need plane rides somewhere?

A Sir, I don't know if he would allow me to go with him where he was going

Q If you provided the plane, don't you think he would let you ride along?

A If I called his office and said, "The next time the Governor goes on a trip, would you let me take him on the trip?" That's possible

Q Okay I want to talk to you about, just a minute, about the one aspect of the MoBo loan transaction with the Governor Would you please pull up Government Exhibit 2, which is in evidence Page 3 of Government 2 Do you see that in front of you?

A I do.

Q Mr Dry, I believe, moved that into evidence, that particular Page 3 of five pages of notes He put that into evidence yesterday?

A Yes

Q Okay And in the middle of that page, where it starts $50,000 --

A 50,000 shares

Q That's your handwriting?

A That is my handwriting

Q And above that, that's the Governor's handwriting?

A I think so.

Q Okay And below, the part that you wrote, that's the Governor's handwriting as well, correct?

A Yes

Q All right You can take that down And this was the discussion that you described in which room, which building?

A In the Patrick Henry Building in the conference room.

Q Okay And basically what happened is the Governor had a pad of paper when he came to meet with you?

A Yes.

Q All right And you took the pad of paper at one point in time and you wrote the things that you have just seen on that screen here?

A Yes.

Q And he wrote other things, correct?

A Yes.

Q All right And take a look at the legend at the bottom of that page now Show that again to him. See all the way down at the bottom?

A Yes.

Q Where it says RFM 1431-0003?

A I do.

Q And would you take my word for it that that means it is a document that has been produced by my client, Robert F McDonnell, to the government?

A Yes

Q So whatever your discussions were that day, Mr McDonnell made notes about it and he saved those notes apparently, and he produced them to the government, didn't he?

A It appears so

Q You don't have any notes of that conversation, do you?

A I don't have any notes of that conversation.

Q Right And would it strike you as odd that if that conversation were somehow memorializing illegal activity and was problematic from my client's view, that he would keep handwritten notes and turn them over to the prosecutors in this investigation?

MR. DRY: Objection, calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let's talk a little bit about your first interview with the FBI This is the January 23rd interview And I believe we will give you copies of it There may be still copies on the desk There were copies before we broke for lunch up on the table I'm sorry Mr Burnham will give you some.

(Documents proffered to witness)

This is the report of the interview, at least according to the investigators who were there, Investigator Hagan and Investigator Kennedy, correct? Those are the ones who met you at your house?

A Yes

Q And obviously, they wrote up what they thought you said, and it may or may not be accurate from your perspective, but in any event, I want to ask you some questions And if you need to refer to this document to refresh your recollection, please do so. Okay?

A Okay

Q And would you rather see it on the screen or rather see it in hard copy?

A Both.

Q Both. Okay Let's put it up on the screen. Just for the witness

MR. DRY: Your Honor, he needs to pose the question, then if he doesn't answer it, then let him review it

THE COURT: Go ahead and ask the question, but he will have that available in whatever format he needs

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q You were surprised they were at your door, right?

A I was

Q What time of day or night, do you recall?

A Afternoon.

Q And basically, what were you doing before they came?

A I was sitting in the den on the phone

Q Okay And when they came in, they sat down, started talking to you, and this was totally voluntary on your part, correct?

A I was trying to answer their questions

Q And when the questioning began, you wanted to know why they were there

A I did.

Q And you wanted to know whether or not you were a target of any investigation.

A I asked them who was the target

Q And you wanted to be sure it wasn't you. Right?

A I wanted to know who was the target

Q Who was the target of their investigation.

A I had no idea.

Q Okay With respect to the question of who was the target of their investigation, you know, where did you learn how to answer a question like that? Ask a question like that? Excuse me

A The Chairman and the President of the company is one of my best friends for 20 years, Paul Perito, and Paul is the Chairman of the Harvard Alumni for the Law School for

Harvard, and he is a former federal prosecutor for major crimes

Q I know Mr Perito.

A Paul is a very good friend of mine, but Paul and I have been working together for many years He is the Chairman and the President of the company And Paul is my business partner So when you are around Paul that many years, you are used to lawyers

Q Okay

A I'm used to lawyers

Q Are you also used to --

A Being with Paul

Q I know you are used to lawyers, but are you also used to being questioned in criminal investigations?

A I am not

Q Okay But you knew enough to ask them whether or not you were a target or the target, correct?

A I don't know where I learned that

Q Okay TV, maybe?

A It may have been TV

Q All right And they told you they wanted to talk to you about a variety of different issues

A Yes

Q And they started getting into those issues sequentially; is that correct?

A Yes.

Q Okay And you basically told them that you were the CEO of Star, right?

A Yes

Q And that you owned 10 to 15 percent of the company, basically?

A Yes

Q And that was like 11 million shares of Star stock

A Whatever it was

Q Well, what did you tell them?

A Whatever it is

Q Did you tell them 11 million shares?

A I don't recall exactly what it was

Q Why don't you take a look at the third paragraph of the first page of the document in front of you and see if it refreshes your recollection.

A It says that I --

Q Not what it says Does it refresh your recollection? You can read it and just see if it refreshes your recollection about what it may have said.

A I just did.

Q Okay

A That's what I told them. I didn't give them an exact number I believe that I probably said that

Q And what were --

A I didn't have specific numbers, but that's close

Q Close enough.

A Close enough.

Q Okay I mean, it is not something -- you keep track of how many shares of Star stock you own, do you not?

A I don't keep close track of it

Q Well, I mean, you keep pretty close track, right?

A I don't keep pretty close track of it

Q What's within a ball park, a million shares more or less?

A A million two or three

Q So 11 million would be a reasonable estimate?

A Reasonable

Q Okay And at that time, this is the 26th of January, 2013, what were 11 million shares of Star worth?

A I believe 20-some million dollars

Q Okay And at various points in time in the life of Star, what would the 11 million shares have been worth, high, low?

A Anywhere from five-and-a-half million to 50 to 60 or 70 million.

Q All right Ar[illegible] u were shown some SEC Form 4's

A Yes

Q Correct?

A Yes.

Q All right And when they went over those forms with you and you realized that they related to you, you started to get the idea that the investigators were looking into possible securities fraud or securities problems, right?

A I wasn't sure

Q Well, they started asking you about your Form 4's

A Right

Q And you know they are there and they are criminal investigators

A Yes

Q And they want to talk to you about a variety of issues

A Right

Q They give you a document with your name on it It didn't dawn on you that they were suspecting some securities problems, looking into securities problems that you may have committed?

A Not right away, because I had asked them who it was that they were after

Q And did they --

A In the beginning

Q And did they mislead you and tell you that you were not a possible target?

A They did not say I was a target

Q Did they say that you were not a possible target?

A They didn't say I was a target They said they had some questions they wanted to ask me and they were just, they were interested.

Q Okay And as the interview went on, it became more and more clear to you that you might be one of their targets, if not the target, correct?

A It became clear to me who a target was when the State Policeman asked me would I wear a wire

Q It didn't dawn on you before then when they talked to you about various securities issues and talked to you about the Starwood Trust issues, tax issues related to that, before they got to talking to you about the McDonnells, that you were not possibly in the line of fire here?

A I think they were trying to learn about it, and it could be a possibility that there was a problem. But I didn't know that at that point

Q Well, they asked you to talk to them about the Starwood Trust assets, correct?

A Yes

Q And you told them you wouldn't do that

A I told them I wouldn't do that?

Q You told them you wouldn't do it; isn't that right?

A May I look at this --

Q Sure, look at the second page, second paragraph, and see if that refreshes your recollection.

A I'll take their word for it

Q And you will take their word that you didn't want to discuss it?

A I don't remember it specifically, but it is there.

Q Okay They then asked you about this Mr McKeon that you said is a friend of yours, right?

A They did.

Q Okay He has various loan transactions with you or he had loan transactions with you that you have said today are north of $12 million, right?

A Yes

Q And McKeon, was he an investor in Star?

A He is an investor

Q Was he a member of the board ever?

A No

Q How long have you known Mr McKeon?

A Six or seven years

Q He is a friend of yours?

A He is

Q And in fact, he has a 70-foot boat in Florida that you pay for the dockage for and you get to use when you want?

A No, he left it there after he had bought a new one and had that for sale and just put it at the marina.

Q At the marina where you have property?

A No, at a marina at a country club that I belong to

Q Okay And you told him you know Mr McKeon but you were not sure what he did for a living Right?

A He is a private investor, but I don't know of all his business dealings

Q You could have said he is a private investor or a money manager just like you said in Court today, right? Or yesterday

A I could have

Q So you basically sort of dodged questions about McKeon, right?

A I don't feel like I dodged any questions

Q All right They started talking to you about loan agreements with McKeon, correct?

A His name is pronounced McKeon

Q McKeon. Excuse me I apologize

A Yes.

Q And they started talking to you about various loans that totaled roughly $10 million, correct?

A Yes.

Q And whether or not you had repaid the loans?

A Yes

Q All right And you knew in fact that you had not repaid the loans?

A That's correct

Q And you knew that the loans were overdue, correct?

A It was basically a line of credit he had extended and there was no demand at that point

Q You had a deal with him basically where you got money from him and you gave him stock as collateral

A Yes

Q Correct?

A Correct

Q And the idea basically, in simple terms, was that you could pay the money back and get your shares back.

A That's correct

Q Right Okay And the deal was also that there was a time limit

A Yes

Q On the loan

A Yes

Q Right So if you didn't pay him back in time, then Mr McKeon could sell the shares

A Well, he would be -- he was required to make a demand before that in the agreements, I understand.

Q Is that what happened or did Mr. McKeon sell the shares?

A I don't know exactly what all he did with those shares. But it is my understanding that I could still get those shares back

Q Today?

A Yes

Q You don't know that the shares were sold long ago when the deadline for redemption passed? You don't know that?

A I don't know exactly what his number of shares, ownership, was But I understand he owns a lot of shares

Q If Mr McKeon sold those shares that you had pledged as collateral for the loans, you would be required to notify the SEC, correct?

A I don't know Because what I did with Latham & Watkins, the law firm in Washington, D C , is they prepared and handled the loan agreements And I believe it was their understanding that they were in forbearance and it was a line of credit

Q Well, the bottom line is that if the shares are sold, there has been a change in the beneficial ownership of the shares, correct? It is just simple

A I understand that, but the securities laws, if he sold those particular shares or he still has those shares, I just don't know, I'm not sure what the reporting is on that

Q Did you get the sense during the interview --

A Because I had legal counsel handle all of this at

Q Did you get the sense during the interview that they were concerned, the investigators were concerned that you had sold the shares, secretly sold the shares, basically, or let McKeon sell the shares, and you didn't report it to the SEC, which is why they are talking about Form 4's? Did you get that idea during this interview?

A It crossed my mind.

Q Okay And you told them you hadn't repaid the loan, right?

A I did say that

Q Now, they went through the various loans with McKeon, one, two, three, correct?

A Yes.

Q All right Then they started talking to you a little bit about Anatabloc and your company; is that right?

A Yes

Q And you told them that, in your view, that Anatabloc is probably the most important discovery since penicillin. Is that right?

A I believe so

Q And that's what you told them.

A Yes. I believe that now

Q All right And you told them that this was going to be a huge deal obviously, both medically and health-wise and financially

A Yes

Q Now, you also told them, did you not, that you had no loans with anybody other than McKeon; is that right?

A No loans of any kind?

Q Well, look down on that Page 3, three paragraphs up from the bottom, where it starts, "Williams stated. "

A Yes. Let me just read it just a second because it is like three or four sentences

(Witness perusing document)

Yes, I see it

Q So you told them that you have no other loans with McKeon or anyone else, correct?

A Any individuals Is that what that means?

Q I don't know Anyone else. You tell me what you thought it means

A I thought it meant any other individual

Q Was that true at the time? This is January 23rd.

A I don't recall anyone else that I owed any money to

Q All right They asked you about a company called JDS Limited Liability Corporation, correct?

A Yes

Q That deals in real estate in Virginia.

A Yes

Q Okay And you told them that JDS has three partners,

right?

A JDS started off with three partners, and now it has, the owners of that are, I believe, either three or four of my children.

Q Okay At the time of the interview, did JDS have three partners?

A At the time of the interview, JDS had -- I believe it was three of my children. The JDS, what did it stand for, was Jonnie, Donnie, and Sam, a friend of mine that's a lawyer in Boston. But it had, I believe it had three partners, which are three of my children.

Q Okay You told them that JDS stands for, you are the J, right?

A Yes.

Q And your brother, Donnie, is the D?

A Yes

Q And you told them that?

A That's correct

Q Then you had a friend, Sam, and you wouldn't give the last name

A Sam Sears, a lawyer in Boston.

Q You didn't give them the last name

A They didn't ask for it If they had asked me for it, I would tell them.

Q It says there, "Last name not provided," and that's not because you wouldn't give it to them?

A Not because I wouldn't give it to them.

Q Okay Now, they then got into a discussion with you about Jerri Fulkerson paying your bills, going over to the next page

A When you say next page, do you mean four?

Q Yes, sir

A Okay

Q Okay And they got into a discussion with you about Jerri Fulkerson paying a million-and-a-half dollars in gift taxes

A Yes

Q And this was gift taxes that you had to pay to the IRS?

A Yes.

Q Is that right?

A Right

Q And when they started to get into that topic, you told them that this was all about some accounting issue that went wrong and you had gotten rid of, you changed your accountants in Washington, D.C. to some guy whose name, some guy in D.C. that did your accounting work for you, but you couldn't recall his name but you now were working with someone in Fredericksburg, right?

A Yes I'm trying to think of the name of the firm in Washington.

Q I don't really need the name now I'm just asking if you knew that

A I didn't remember it at the time

Q Couldn't remember the name of the accounting firm that made a million-and-a-half dollar mistake for you?

A No.

Q As we speak, do you remember the name?

A No. What had happened here was, B.J Haynes, an accountant in Northern Virginia, would review the returns and work with the accountants and he made a mistake And I had to pay a million-and-a-half dollars in gift tax because of it

Q What was the mistake that the accountant made?

A He exceeded the gift tax amounts that an individual is alloted, I believe That's my understanding

Q Well, let me go back to the lawyers issue for a minute You've got some very skilled lawyers who represent you right now in this matter; is that correct? From Steptoe & Johnson and from McGuireWoods

A I think so.

Q And in the past, corporate securities work, you have used one of the largest and most prestigious firms in the country, Latham & Watkins; isn't that correct?

A Yes.

Q But when it comes to accountants, you know, they are not as good?

A I'm not saying they are not as good. They are not as large But I'm not saying they are not as good. B.J Haynes is a very sophisticated accountant, a tax lawyer, and a former IRS top agent in the United States He is very sophisticated. And he reviews my returns when the accountants are finished with it at the end of the year And he made a mistake

A The mistake from that cost me a million-and-a-half dollars that it shouldn't have cost

Q And did you go after him for that money?

A No, he is my friend.

Q Okay And it wasn't a problem with respect to you not providing accurate or timely information to him; it was all his fault Is that correct?

A I think he would tell you that

Q Okay They also talked to you about gifting stock to someone named Burton Haynes; is that correct?

A That's B.J Haynes

Q Same guy

A Same lawyer

Q This is the Certified Public Accountant and an attorney, right?

A Yes

Q And you said you had; is that right?

A Yes He is a friend of mine for 20 years

Q Okay And you also at one point in time gave gifts to Mr Haynes' daughter; is that right?

A I did.

Q And that's when she was getting married.

A I did.

Q Right And you like, do you not, in general, helping out young folks starting into business or starting into a marriage That's something you like to do, isn't it?

A I like helping anyone as far as people are concerned. I don't want anyone to have any problems I think I'm a compassionate human. But in this case, B.J Haynes had helped me with a lot of things over the years, and I was doing this to help him.

Q Okay

A He is a friend of mine

Q I'm not suggesting he is not. I'm just saying his kids were getting married and you gave them what, 20 grand worth of stock to help them get started?

A I think it was more than that

Q Okay

A I think it was much more than that

Q All right You also talked to the agents about having previously been fined by the SEC; is that correct?

MR. DRY: Objection, Your Honor We have gone over this before ,May we approach?

THE COURT: Come on up

(At Bench.)

MR. DRY: This was the issue that we filed the motion in limine on. The Court has already ruled.

MR. ASBILL: I'm not going any farther than this I'm not going into it in depth.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

(In Open Court)

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Now, at this point in the interview, you decide that you probably should have legal representation; is that correct?

A I don't know if it was that particular point, but there came a point in the interview where I felt like I tried to be polite to them, but I was, it reached a point where I felt like I needed to call Washington to the lawyers

Q All right You were getting into possibly dangerous territory and you thought you ought to stop

A I stopped it at the wire on the Governor, sir

Q All right You asked them before they asked you about wearing a wire whether or not there was a grand jury impaneled? Right?

A I didn't ask that question. I didn't know that

Q Look at the bottom paragraph on Page 6 and see if that refreshes your recollection

A I don't recall that

Q You don't recall any discussion about whether or not there was a grand jury that had been impaneled?

A No.

Q No?

A No

Q You don't recall asking them any questions about how long the investigation might take?

A No, I asked them when did this start, when did this investigation begin.

Q You didn't have any discussion about federal versus state grand juries?

A No.

Q And the difference between the two?

A I have no idea the difference between the two.

Q My question was, did you ask them about it at the time?

A I did not

Q You did not So if they wrote that down, that would be inaccurate; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay

A It would be a mistake

Q And you wanted to know whether other people were aware of the investigation?

A I did not ask that

Q Okay So that would be a mistake if they wrote that

A I don't recall asking that question at all

Q Did they tell you that several grand jury subpoenas had been served on financial institutions?

A I don't recall that

Q And did they serve you with a grand jury subpoena?

A It was a letter I don't know if it was a grand jury subpoena or not

Q Well, they gave you something and --

A Whatever they handed me, I sent to the lawyers

Q Okay I want to talk to you, move to a different subject matter, and I want to talk to you about some just sort of timeline issues

A Yes

Q Okay?

A Okay

Q Then I just want to make sure I have this straight And please correct me if I am mistaken. You first met the Governor when he was Attorney General; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And can you give me the month and the year?
A 2009, I believe.
Q Sometime in 2009?
A I think so
Q Okay And fast forwarding a little bit from whatever that was, in December of 2009, he had been elected Governor; is that correct?
A He was Governor-elect at that point
Q He was Governor-elect at that point in December of 2009
A Yes
Q That's when you all had this Four Seasons event in the restaurant off to the side of the lobby of the Four Seasons?
A Yes
Q Okay And you come up there and people have talked about the Cognac, et cetera, but in any event, your appearance at the Four Seasons that day or that night was not because you talked to my client, right?
A No It was to see your client
Q Right But you didn't talk to him about coming up there and meeting him. You came to see him, but you didn't talk to him about coming up
A No.
Q And how did you get there and how did that all happen? I don't mean how did you get their physically

A Through Adam Zubowsky, an aide to the Governor

Q I believe just,for the record, it is Zubowsky

A I'm sorry

Q And he is an aide to the Governor And you had met Adam before when you first met the Governor when he was AG? Or when he was running for office?

A Somewhere through there, somewhere prior to that, I had met Adam.

Q You had met Adam once with the Governor for about twenty minutes at a private airport?

A Here in Richmond at the FBO facility

Q And you had an opportunity at that point to chat a little bit with the Governor and Adam about your company?

A Yes

Q About twenty minutes or so?

A Yes. Before they took off on a flight in my plane

Q So that's how you knew Adam; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And in the meeting in New York, or the reason that the McDonnells were in New York was what?

A I'm not sure if it was a Regional Governors' Association meeting, I mean a Republican Governors' Association meeting I'm not sure

Q You think to the best of your recollection it was an

RGA meeting in New York?

A It possibly was

Q And you wanted to come up and attend some of that or try to attend some of that?

A No, I just wanted to come up and have an opportunity to meet with the Governor there

Q Okay So you call Adam and you get that opportunity

A Yes, I do

Q Is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And you have, you see him that night, and what do you do during the day?

A What did I do during the day?

Q Yes

A That day?

Q Yes

A I don't remember

Q Do you remember taking a cross-country -- I mean, excuse me, how did you get up there, just from Richmond to New York?

A I took my plane

Q Okay And at this event in restaurant/bar, whatever --

A It was a restaurant

Q That's when you were talking to Ms McDonnell about the dress issue; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q All right And as you have described it, you sort of tried to dodge the issue of whether or not you were going to have to buy the dress You were hoping you wouldn't have to --

A I was hoping I could borrow one.

Q You were hoping you could borrow one basically, but your plan was not to buy one.

A That's correct

Q That's what you wanted when you had this conversation.

A Absolutely

Q All right And you said that my client heard some or all of that conversation; is that correct?

A No, your client heard the part where Ms McDonnell turned to him when I'm seated beside her and she said to him, "Jonnie is going to get me a dress for the inauguration."

Q Okay And shortly thereafter, my client's lawyer, his counsel, Jasen Eige, made it very plain to you, "No way "

A He called me and said, "Jonnie, you can't buy the dress " And I said, "Thank you very much."

Q Right He said, "This is not something in terms of an image that we want to portray in the midst of a recession."

A No, he didn;t say that

Q He didn't say it looked bad in a bad economy?

A No, that's what Maureen McDonnell said. He just called me and said, "Jonnie, you can't buy the dress " And I said, "Thank you very much."

Q All right So he didn't give you any reasons, he just said no.

A He said "That's not --" "You can't do it "

Q "No way "

A He just said, "You can't do it," and that was good enough for me

Q And this was good enough for the Governor, too, I guess, right?

MR. DRY: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Fast forward from December, 2009, did you have any contact with my client until October of 2010?

A I don't recall any

Q So ten months or so before you have any contact with my client again. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q And that would be this California trip where

Mr McDonnell goes to give a million-dollar check from the Republican Governor's Association to Meg Whitman?

A He took my plane to California and I caught a commercial plane When I finished what I was doing, so I would be able to have the time with him to come back.

Q And did you tell him -- so you didn't fly out with him. You just intercepted the plane in California?

A I just let him use the plane and I flew to San Francisco and had the plane come from Sacramento to pick me up and went back and picked up the Governor

Q Okay Did he know that you were flying to California to meet him for the plane trip back or did you just show up for the return trip?

A I don't know

Q You didn't arrange anything with anyone about meeting him there to fly back with him. You just did it

A Somewhere through the office, I believe my secretary let them know But I don't have the specifics of that

Q Okay But you never talked to him directly about it. You just came out to meet him and take a shot at riding back with him, right?

A Well, it was my airplane

Q I understand. But he was on it and you wanted to have a chance to talk to him, right?

A It was a safe -- it was not a risky flight to San Francisco that I would be able to come back with him.

Q Since you owned the plane

A I did. Yes, it wouldn't leave without me

Q Okay All right And on the plane ride back, you know, you basically told him the same story that you spent 90 minutes yesterday telling Mr Burck, right?

A I spent more than 90 minutes telling that story

Q I know Yesterday was the Reader's Digest condensed version, right?

A No. Yesterday, that gentleman asked me about what I've been doing, and the flight from Sacramento wasn't about what I have been doing, it is about Anatabine, until he fell asleep And then when he woke up it was Anatabine again.

Q So you never got around to telling him your story about, you know, being an entrepreneur in five different companies and where you grew up and all that

A He knows that I am from Virginia, somewhere through here, that doesn't take 90 minutes to do that I was trying to answer that lawyer's questions yesterday, and I didn't know what to do with all of that

Q Okay In any event, aside from whatever time he spent sleeping, you spent four or five hours chatting him up about your company

A I was more than chatting I was working I was making sure that he knew the material I was comfortable that he knew the material because the State Policeman on the plane, he knew the material when I had finished.

Q I'm sure the pilots did, too. They already knew, right?

A The pilots already knew it, but the State Policeman asked me if he could have some for his father I knew he understood

Q So it was a pretty potent pitch; is that fair?

A As well as I could do it

Q And basically, as I think you have described it, you said, or Bob said basically, "You ought to talk to my Secretary of Health, Bill Hazel "

A He didn't say that I asked him, "I need to talk to someone in the administration that's equivalent of HHS in Washington."

Q He said, "That's Dr Bill Hazel, Secretary of Health."

A He said, "I'll set that up."

Q So he said he would get you an opportunity to make your case to Hazel

A That's right That's great

Q Right?

A It was worth the trip.

Q And, it is something that you felt in all fairness, because you had a company that you thought was really significant and a product you thought was really significant, and, you thought you should have access to somebody in the Virginia government to hear about your company Isn't that fair?

A I thought that because I thought I had the capability in Virginia, I was very proud of this, I thought this was an important discovery with our company and I actually thought it would lower the healthcare costs in Virginia And I still do

Q Okay Bob McDonnell didn't disagree that you should get an opportunity to meet someone to talk about that, did he?

A That's correct

Q And he set that up

A He did.

Q And said, "Call Hazel and get up with him and talk to him about it," right?

A I don't know if he said, "Call Hazel" or someone, I don't know how it was facilitated, but Governor McDonnell assisted me in meeting with Dr Hazel, yes

Q Okay And Dr Hazel is a physician, right?

A He is an orthopedic surgeon from Northern Virginia

Q And he is a scientist, basically?

A I don't think he is a scientist He is an orthopedic surgeon from Northern Virginia.

Q But medical issues relating to your product are something that he would know much better than my client would know; is that fair?

A Yes, that's fair

Q He is the expert in those sorts of things, not Bob McDonnell

A Yes.

Q Okay So you have a meeting with Bill Hazel in November of 2010

A Yes.

Q Right?

A Yes

Q You got the access or chance to make your pitch that you wanted.

A Yes

Q And you got the opportunity to make it to somebody who was much more experienced in these issues than my client, right?

A Yes

Q And Hazel heard your story, told you it was interesting, but he didn't think it was ready for prime time yet; isn't that fair?

A I didn't think it was ready for prime time at that point It was a starting point for me to establish a line of communication with that person.

Q All right

A In the government

Q And that at this time, and he declined to take any action or he didn't say he was going to take any action relating to your company?

A I didn't ask him to

Q Okay And at this point, whenever this was in November of 2010, no personal gifts to anyone in the McDonnell family, no loans

A Nothing

Q Nothing

A Except some jet rides for whatever the Governor was doing

Q Okay Just like you had given to many politicians in the past, right?

A Just like politicians in the past Not usually California trips, because they are so expensive

Q Okay Now, December, fast forwarding from November, 2010 to December, 2010, the next month, no contact, right?

A Right

Q January, 2011, no contact

A Right

Q February, 2011, you have your CigRx event at the Jefferson Hotel here in Richmond.

A I'm making progress, yes

Q You are making progress And you call and get in touch with Adam Zubowsky And you knew how to get in touch with him; you had met him before

A I did, and I liked him.

Q And Adam basically, this was pretty late that same day, right, of the event?

A Yes

Q And Adam gets up with the Governor and basically asked if he will stop by for a few minutes and he does

A He does

Q He comes in, and whatever your event is, he comes in and he gives his, you know, sort of canned remarks that are supportive of Virginia business, et cetera, spends a few minutes and makes some nice comments about your company

A He did.

Q He did.

A It was wonderful

Q And this is what he should do, shouldn't he?

A That's what I felt like

Q Right He should support Virginia companies that are trying to make a difference not only in Virginia but around the country That's exactly what he should do.

A I agree with that

Q Okay Now, as we have talked about, that was coordinated with my client's staff, not with him directly Right?

A Yes

Q And nothing in February, no gifts, no loans, right? No gifts, no loans, as of February, 2011

A Sir, may I say something just a moment so I don't forget about it? You had asked me about the accountant in Washington and I had a block with it The accountant was Al Feit

Q Spell that for the court reporter

A F-E-I-T You said it was odd that I didn't know my accountant's name, and I've known Al Feit for many years And just so I can get that out of the way so I don't have to think about that anymore

Q If you forget something when I am asking a question and you remember it as we go forward --

A I'm just trying to answer your question.

Q That's fine If you remember something you have overlooked as we speak, please interrupt me and add it

A Okay

Q All right So at this point, February, 2011, no gifts, no loans

A Yes

Q Right Moving forward to March, 2011, no contact, no gifts, no loans Right?

A That's correct

Q Then we get to April, 2011 And I believe you have testified that Ms McDonnell calls you and asks you to take her shopping

A She did.

Q She did.

A She said, "Let's go to New York."

Q Okay And this was the rain check.

A Yes She said, "Let's go to New York and go to Oscar de la Renta."

Q Okay And you do not recall from back in December Mr Eige telling you that if you want to do something like this, you should wait until Bob McDonnell is out of office

A I don't recall -- I don't recall any conversations like that as I sit here But Ms McDonnell, I asked her was it okay "Is this okay to do this?" And she said yes, it is okay now that it was all about the inauguration. I took her for her word.

Q Whatever she says, you don't discuss it with my client, do you?

A She is the Governor's wife

Q Do you discuss it with my client or not?

A No.

Q You said a couple of days ago that you would never loan money to a man's wife without talking to him first, right?

A I wasn't loaning him money I was going to New York with him where I was meeting him and his wife.

Q You are making a distinction between buying a man's wife $20,000 worth of clothes and loaning it to her and you think one is okay not to talk to a husband and one is not?

A If I'm going to do something like that, I want him to know And how you can hide those shopping bags from someone, I don't know that day

Q Go back You never talked to my client about it before you go on the shopping spree, right?

A I didn't, but he was there in New York

Q He was in New York

A He was in New York They were staying in a hotel in New York, and I assume with all these shopping bags, what are you going to do with them? What are you going to do with all these bags?

Q You are making assumptions You don't have any personal knowledge about whether he knew about it or not, do you?

A I just don't know how you could hide it

Q Do you know from personal knowledge whether he knew about it or not? Yes or no?

A No

Q You told the FBI when you were interviewed, do you remember being interviewed by the FBI in July of 2013, July 1st of 2013?

A I don't recall the dates

Q That would be the second meeting

A But I think I can recall generally what I have told them people

Q Okay This is the second meeting We talked about the one on January 23rd down in Florida. Please stop me if I'm talking too fast So the second meeting that you had with investigators in terms of describing the shopping event, you told them that that day or that shopping event with Mary-Shea and Ms McDonnell was the most awkward moment in your life, didn't you?

A It was very awkward.

Q My question was, did you tell them that?

A It still feels awkward. I probably told them that But you said a moment ago --

Q Is there a question pending to you? Or is this just something that --

A I was going back to what you said a moment ago, if I thought about something that I could tell you.

Q Okay Tell me

A When you said, "Did you tell the Governor's wife that day you were taking her shopping to buy her a dress," well --

Q I said did you tell the Governor

A Did I tell the Governor I wanted to make sure that you understood that the Governor previously thought at the Four Seasons that I was getting her a dress She told him I was getting her a dress

Q Right Then his lawyer said no.

A I understand that But I'm just following up with it It shouldn't surprise anyone if she showed up with them. It is just a thought

Q You don't know whether he saw the bags or not, do you? You don't know whether he saw the contents of the bags or not, do you?

A I don't

Q Okay

A But you just happened to think of that

Q But the one thing you know for sure is that never in life from that moment until now did my client thank you for the 20 grand worth of stuff that you bought that day

A Now, that would really be awkward.

Q Yes Well, he didn't ever acknowledge to you anything about it; isn't that right?

A That's the truth.

Q All right Now, during this trip, I believe you, excuse me, the shopping spree, you quarrel with whether or not you told the interviewers that you thought Ms McDonnell was "like a kid in a candy store? Or is that not a phrase that you would ever use?

A It is a phrase that I would use, but in public like this, I think exuberant is a better choice of words

Q Let's go back to private with the investigators I want to know what you said to them.

A I may have said "like a kid in a candy shop." That wouldn't be unusual for me, to say something like that But not in front of a group of people

Q And you obviously were very uncomfortable about this shopping trip; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And as it progressed, you got more and more uncomfortable; is that fair?

A Yes.

Q But I believe you told the investigators that Ms McDonnell was strong-willed and relentless about it, basically, and you caved. Right?

A I caved.

Q Now, that night -- this shopping trip was in the afternoon, right?

A All afternoon, from 12 o'clock all afternoon.

Q Several different stores

A Three At least three

Q And at some point, Mary-Shea was with you all and Mary-Shea got herself a $1,500 dress?

A Yes

Q So the rough total is $20,000, 18,500 for Ms McDonnell and --

A I think 20,000 plus a dress that she got at Bergdorf came and it didn't fit right, so I called and bought another one and had it shipped there, so maybe it was a little more

Q You tell me, 22? 23? What?

A I don't know 20 or so

Q Okay That night, you sat next to my client at the Union League Club dinner

A I did.

Q And you had never discussed Anatabloc with him, did you?

A It wasn't the setting for that

Q My question was, did you discuss it with him at that dinner?

A No

Q And you certainly didn't discuss with him what you had been doing all afternoon with Ms McDonnell and Mary-Shea, right?

A No

Q Okay Now, I want to move forward from there, a little later in April, to the April 26th dinner at the Mansion. Okay? Let's talk about that And this was Maureen McDonnell invites you and Celeste over for dinner This is about a week later after the New York trip.

A Yes.

Q You and Celeste go and you have talked to us about the wallet that you got, et cetera; is that right?

A Yes

Q And at that dinner, you don't say anything to my client about the shopping spree in New York that occurred a week earlier?

A No, I didn't

Q Okay And you all had a nice dinner, it has been described, and two of the girls came by, et cetera, right? That's when the two daughters stopped by?

A Yes

Q Okay Going forward --

THE COURT: Excuse me I have a question.

BY THE COURT:

Q Is this dinner we are talking about, is this when you provided the wallet as a gift?

A Yes

Q Was Governor McDonnell present when you provided the wallet?

A I believe so I think my wife handed it to them. I don't know, Your,Honor But it was brought in as you would go to someone's home with a gift And I just don't recall -- I don't know whether my wife handed it to them when they were both present or she gave it to Ms McDonnell, but it was my wife's idea.

THE COURT: All right Thank you.

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q But there was no discussion in front of my client about "This is a wallet and it matches the purse that you got in New York," and nothing like that

A No

Q All right Going forward another week later into 2011, this is May 2nd, that's when you meet with Ms McDonnell at the Mansion, correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And that meeting was one that you set up with her, not with my client Correct?

A She called me and invited me to come over

Q Okay The two of you had a conversation.

A Yes

Q You go to meet her

A Yes

Q Bob McDonnell is not part of that conversation,

correct?

A No. She just said that he said it was okay for her to help us

Q Okay You never talked with him about that But in any event, you go over and meet with her; is that right?

A Yes.

Q It is a couple-hour meeting? Is that fair?

A Yes

Q Okay And my client wasn't present in the meeting?

A No

Q And Ms McDonnell said that she could help you, right?

A Correct

Q And she didn't say Bob would help you, did she?

A No.

Q And Mr Dry made that very clear in his direct examination of you a couple of days ago; isn't that fair?

A It is accurate

Q Okay Now, at that meeting with Ms McDonnell, you agreed to the $50,000 loan and the $15,000 catering, wedding gift to Cailin; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q Okay And some 21 days later, May 23rd, so the meeting was on May 2nd, we are going forward to May 23rd, that's when you deliver the checks

A Yes.

Q To Ms McDonnell

A Yes

Q And this is the anniversary of you and Celeste, right?

A It is

Q So it is a memorable day in your mind?

A It is an important day

Q And you all are planning to go have lunch at the Jefferson and you have to stop by the Mansion first

A We have to stop by there for a few minutes

Q You end up staying there longer than you wanted; is that right?

A We had a difficult time getting away

Q Okay And Bob McDonnell was not present when you dropped the checks off, was he?

A I just don't remember I have a problem with that part I just don't know whether I talked to him on the phone or I met him briefly upstairs I just don't remember

Q You don't have any -- you have no recollection of whether you saw him that day at all or talked to him that day at all, do you?

A I either talked to him or I met with him there, because the purpose of me getting these checks from my secretary rather than just FedEx'ing them was I wanted to make it a point

Q We will get to that in a second. But before those checks were cut, between the 2nd of May and the 23rd of May, you never talked to Bob McDonnell about those checks, do you?

A No.

Q One was made payable to --

A I didn't make the checks out until then.

Q Okay One was made payable to Maureen McDonnell and one was blank because you didn't know the caterer's name

A I didn't know the catering company

Q All right Two days ago here under oath, you testified that you called my client a couple of days after that, so that would be roughly the 25th or 26th of May, about the loan.

MR. DRY: Objection. He didn't testify to that

THE WITNESS: I don't agree that I did that

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let me see if this refreshes your recollection. I'm reading from transcript, Page 682

MR. DRY: You can't read from the transcript to refresh his recollection.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. ASBILL: I called him and said that, you know, 'I met with Maureen. I understand the financial problems and I'm willing to help. I just wanted to make sure you knew about this ' Question: And what does he say? Answer: 'Thank you.'"

This is what you testified to two days ago, right?

A I may have testified -- you may be confused with two days ago versus two days after the 23rd.

Q So, I'm saying that you testified that you called him, here, in Court, that you called him a couple days after the 23rd and had this discussion.

A No, that's wrong I don't believe I said that If I said that, that's not what I meant Because it was that day that I was delivering the checks, on May 23rd, 2011, that I was there on purpose to do this

Q I know you were there on purpose to deliver the checks

A Not just deliver the checks I could have -- the checks could have been delivered easily without me Okay? It didn't take me to deliver checks there

Q You were coming into town to go to the Jefferson Hotel, right?

A No, I was in town. I made it a point to go there and do this and had my secretary bring me checks She could have easily taken those checks or just Federal Expressed them, sir I'm just trying to tell you that's what I was thinking

Q That's what you were thinking Regardless of what the transcript says, that's what you are thinking

A And I think that's wrong

Q Okay And Mr Dry has a complete copy of your phone records, does he not?

A I believe Mr Dry has copies of a lot of things Including the phone records probably

Q And they would show your phone records in May of 2011, correct?

A Yes

Q All right And do you have phone records that reflect calling Mr McDonnell on the 23rd?

A I don't know

Q Well, have they been introduced in this trial? Has Mr Dry introduced any phone records that would corroborate a statement by you that that's when you called him?

A Not that I know of

Q Okay The first time, and I think this was gone over by Mr Burck and I'm not going to get into it, but the first time you talked to the FBI after getting your immunity agreement, you told a much more elaborate story than you did in Court two days ago about a simple phone call in terms of talking to my client about these two checks, didn't you?

A I think that's when I confused the two and was explaining to them at that point the second meeting over at the Patrick Henry Building I believe that's what that was.

Q Okay That was a year ago, and you had a very -- it wasn't about a phone call or anything; it was about some personal meeting And now you say you have confused that

A I'm just telling you, a lot of things go by in those time frames, and the more I'm refreshed with all of this, it is like when someone calls you and asks you what happened, where did you meet with him, you know, I clearly remembered the meeting because I was there for a while sitting at the Patrick Henry Building the second time and may have gotten that confused at that point

Q As you say, as you are sort of going over things and thinking about it more, one of the things you are thinking about is looking at a log of the Patrick Henry Building that doesn't reflect you appearing on the visitor logs; isn't that right?

A On May 23rd.

Q Or on May 25th or 26th, right?

A Somewhere, I don't know that, but I've seen where the second trip --

Q I'm not talking about the MoBo meeting I'm talking about relating to the first $50,000

A I don't know

Q Okay Then you also came up with some story about a tunnel where you supposedly meet during the middle of the day, right?

A I thought that may have been possible, May the 23rd, because I learned about this tunnel where he came over through and I had met him once before when he came over that way But on May 23rd, I went, all I can tell you is May the 23rd, I personally delivered these checks, left my wife in the car out front so I could go make sure the Governor knew about these checks And whether I met with him there briefly or whether I called him, I did that That was my purpose of going to the Governor's Mansion. It was not just to deliver checks, because that was an easy thing to do

Q And what I am asking you is whether there is any documentation that you met with my client --

A And I don't know that

Q -- on the 23rd, that you are aware of of any kind.

A I'm not I'm not I don't know

Q Now, fast forwarding a little more to May 28th, you remember seeing an e-mail that my client sent you, correct? Would you please pull up Government Exhibit 134?

You have seen that before, correct?

A I have

Q That's in evidence now Correct?

A Yes

Q All right It says, "Jonnie Thanks so much for all your help with my family Your very generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated." That's relating to the $15,000 check, right?

A Yes

Q "As well as the golf round tomorrow for the boys "

A Yes

Q And you understood that Cailin was getting married in early June and all the family was coming into town?

A I don't know about all the family coming into town But I knew she was getting married right through that period.

Q All right "And Maureen is excited about the trip to Florida to learn more about the products and to see Celeste " That's Roskamp, right, on June 1st?

A Yes

Q That's what that refers to. "Have a restful weekend with your family Thanks." Correct?

A Yes

Q Okay There is no mention in this thank you note of the $50,000 check, is there?

A Just the $15,000 check to the caterer

Q Okay Thank you. You can take that down. Have you ever given Bob McDonnell anything where he has not sent a thank you note to you? Ever?

A Do you mean, are the loans included in that?

Q Yes. Have you ever given him anything that he hasn't thanked you for it, that he hasn't graciously thanked you for any assistance that you have provided?

A I assumed that when you just showed me that e-mail, if you would pull it back up --

Q Sure Pull it back up, please

A I assumed that when he says, "Thank you for all your help with my family," that he is also thanking me for the money that I have just loaned, too

Q Your assumption may not coincide with what he is thinking?

A It may not I'm just telling you what my thinking is when I see, "Thanks so much for all your help with my family," that's what that means to me

Q That's what that means to you. Okay

A "And your generous gift to Cailin was most appreciated." Well, I paid half of the catering bill

Q I know We have talked about that

A Okay I just wanted to make sure that that part where it says, "Thank you so much, thanks so much for all your help with my family" is, I assumed, I'm assuming that he is thanking me for loaning this money

THE COURT: There was a question pending Has he ever given you anything and not provided a thank you note?

THE WITNESS: I don't know

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q All right Now, I believe you testified a couple days ago, about three days ago, that you have offered the use of the Kinloch golf course to Maureen for her sons and Bob whenever they wanted to go?

A Yes

Q And you never expected my client or the boys or anyone else in the family to pay for golf at Kinloch, did you?

A No.

Q That was something that you were generously offering?

A Yes.

Q All right Now, the Roskamp Institute meeting --

A Generous in the sense that it was good for our business, for the relationship. I just want to make sure, I'm trying to make sure I answer these questions clearly

Q You don't want to tell me you have any kind of personal friendship, feelings towards my client, do you?

A I like your client I like Ms McDonnell But I'm doing these things because of a business relationship. But I like both of them.

Q And you made that plain every time you talked to --

A I just want to make sure

Q There is nothing friendship-related here

A It is a business friendship. I'm in business This is business to me

Q That may be, but that doesn't mean you tell somebody else that you are with that "The only reason I'm with you is for business purposes"?

A I don't think anyone does that

MR. DRY: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained. Mr Asbill, just ask a question, please

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q With respect to Roskamp, at the dinner on April 26th, going backwards a little bit, you described that to my client as, it was a meeting for researchers and you show clinical studies, et cetera?

A Yes

Q You never said anything about it being an investors' conference, did you?

A There were investors there

Q I know Did you tell my client at the dinner it was an investors' conference as opposed to clinical studies researchers' meeting?

A No, because there were only a handful of investors there Most of them were people coming there to learn about Anatabloc So it was a fundraiser, and it was also the science and the technology and the Roskamp Institute --

Q I know what you are describing it as I'm asking what you told my client it was

A At the Roskamp Institute, it was a fundraiser highlighting Anatabloc

Q My question again to you is, you did not tell my client it was an investors' meeting, did you?

A It was not an investors' meeting

Q That wasn't my question. My question is, did you tell my client it was an investors' meeting?

A No, because it wasn't

Q All right Now, my client didn't go to Roskamp, right?

A No

Q And his scheduler got back to you all and said he was too busy; is that right?

A He did.

Q And he wanted to spend particular -- the reason he was busy is he wanted to spend time with his family right in advance of his daughter's wedding on June 4th, correct?

A Yes

Q Now, June 16th, 2011, the "Virginia Study " Would you pull up, please, Government Exhibit 161? This is in evidence Would you go to the attachment, please? Excuse me, back up one second first This is a letter from you about Roskamp that you send to Mary-Shea Sutherland, correct?

A Yes

Q Through Jerri Fulkerson. You asked her to send it to Mary-Shea

A Yes

Q All right And it is a letter to the Governor, PDF attached. Is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay Now please pull up the attachment And this is a letter that you have talked about

A Yes

Q Several times during this case; is that correct?

A It is

Q And you talked about the first sentence is yours because that's something you learned in school?

A Eighth grade

Q Right And the rest of it is all, who, Ladenson's?

A No, the rest of it, I went over to the Roskamp Institute because there are two doctors that run the Roskamp Institute, Dr Fiona Crawford and Dr Mike Mullan, and I asked them to assist me with preparing this letter, that the Governor wanted a letter stating what it is that we wanted.

Q Okay So two doctors wrote the rest of the letter, basically

A Yes, they helped me with that Yes

Q Okay And you send that to Mary-Shea, and you don't have any idea whether my client, you have no personal knowledge that my client saw that letter, do you?

A I don't

Q Now. I want to move forward to June 24th-June 26th time frame This is the Homestead PAC retreat Remember that?

A Yes

Q And you told us the story, the long story about the plane having to go to various places and you tried to simplify it

A I did.

Q Okay And my client didn't ask you to do that, did he? He didn't ask you to send your plane to pick up his family members and from various locations?

A He did not

Q Okay And if I am correct in terms of remembering your testimony here in Court, you couldn't recall whether you talked business with my client that weekend.

A I couldn't recall specifically I played golf with him for four hours. And I was at a breakfast meeting with him that morning before golf But I just don't recall

Q Okay

A Specifically

Q And if you were playing golf with him and you weren't talking about business, would you talk about your family or other things social friends might chat about?

A Sir, I just don't remember what I talked about that day

Q Fair enough.

A You know, I just don't remember what all I was talking about

Q Okay I want to talk to you about the Tobacco Commission. I believe you said yesterday that it is sometime in June is when you became interested in the Tobacco Commission as a possible source of funding

A Yes

Q For clinical studies Is that correct?

A Yes. Well, we were making progress and moving forward to where that, too, became an issue with that

Q Coming up with some serious money to fund studies; is that right?

A Well, we wanted the studies done in Virginia and the

Tobacco Commission made sense

Q As a possible source of funding?

A As a possible source of funding And that way it would be independent

Q And this was not something that at this particular point in time Star could or wanted to fund on its own; is that right?

A Not unless we had to

Q Not unless you had to. And by the way, I know you told us yesterday that, not your present salary from Star, that historically, it was north of a million dollars, right?

A You mean before 18 months or 20 months ago when I lowered it to a dollar a month?

Q I'm not talking about right now It used to be north of a million dollars And often it was in the $10 million range, right, in terms of stock and cash that you got?

A I don't remember -- there may have been for accounting reasons the stock showing up But the salary has been around a million dollars for a while Up until a couple of years ago.

Q If you get salary of a million bucks and you get nine million bucks in options, you've got 10 million bucks, right?

A Right

Q Okay And that's the kind of money that you were taking out of Star, right?

A Well, they were options I still have all those options and they are under water now

Q And your friend, Mr Perito, at the time was getting roughly salary and stock options, $8 million?

A Paul and I generally got paid the same But again, those, I just want to make sure you understand, the cash portion of the million dollars, the option is something that's down the road.

Q I understand.

A I want to make sure you know we didn't just walk out with eight or nine million dollars

Q Okay But the company at that time could not afford or didn't want to afford, even if it could, paying for clinical studies Fair?

A If it needed to pay for the clinical studies, if we needed to pay for the clinical studies, I could raise the capital to do that I was dealing --

Q You would prefer to have someone else -- you prefer to use other people's money

A I preferred to use the Tobacco Commission in Virginia, because that money was sitting here and it was for revitalization to benefit Virginia from the Tobacco Fund.

Q You called it the MSA, right?

A Well, it was a result of the MSA. The Master Settlement Agreement with the tobacco industry caused that to happen here in Virginia and Virginia to be allocated these funds annually from the tobacco companies

Q Okay And basically, you know, this was your goal, right?

A It was.

Q Okay And you hired Jerry Kilgore to help you.

A I did.

Q You said that Jerry Kilgore was a former Attorney General

A Yes

Q Ran for Governor?

A Yes

Q Lobbyist-lawyer at McGuireWoods, right?

A Yes.

Q And you didn't know or you don't know as we speak whether he has family relationships with the Tobacco Commission?

A I have learned through this process here that his wife may now or maybe in the past, that she worked there

Q Wait a minute When you hired Jerry Kilgore as your lawyer-lobbyist --

A When I hired him did I know that? No

Q Did you know it the day after you hired him?

A No

Q You didn't know?

A I didn't know

Q That his brother, Terry Kilgore, is the Chair of the Tobacco Commission and Jerry's wife, Marty, is the Director of the Virginia Foundation for Healthy Youth, which is another Tobacco Commission that funds research on health?

A I didn't know that

Q Never came up in your discussions with Jerry Kilgore?

A Maybe somewhere later on it came up, but I didn't know that when I did that, no

Q Did you think that Jerry was a well-connected lobbyist-lawyer in Richmond?

A I think Jerry Kilgore is a very capable person, yes

Q I'm sure he is a very capable person. But my question is, do you think he has those kinds of connections with the Tobacco Commission and with the program that Marty runs, Foundation for Healthy Youth?

A Again, I didn't know about the Foundation for Healthy Youth. And I don't recall whether his brother was the head of the Tobacco Commission. But I knew that Jerry Kilgore, being a former Attorney General, would know how to go about dealing with this Because I've known him for a number of years, and have a lot of confidence in him.

Q Okay Regardless of whether he is related to somebody that possibly could help you, he sure knows who to call; isn't that fair?

A That's why I went to him. I thought he was an able person to deal with this.

Q Now, next time frame I want to talk to you about is July, 2011 Gibson Island. July 23rd, 2011

A Yes

Q That's the Star symposium at Gibson Island, right?

A Yes

Q And you never talked to Bob McDonnell about that event and he didn't go.

A No

Q And you say Mary-Shea did.

A Mary-Shea did.

Q Okay And then fast forwarding to a little bit later, five days later in July, this is the July 28th to 31st time frame, Smith Mountain Lake

A Yes

Q Okay That's when you graciously offered to let the McDonnell family use your house there for a couple of days Right?

A For a few days I believe the weekend or so. I'm not sure how many days

Q My client never asked you to make that house available to him, did he?

A No.

Q And you had previously offered that house to other politicians for a few days or a week or whatever; is that fair?

A Yes

Q And my client never asked you to arrange to have a Ferrari there for him to drive, did he?

A No.

Q And the photo of him driving the Ferrari, he didn't take that of himself, did he?

A I don't think so.

Q All right And you don't have any idea what he knew about how the Ferrari got there or why it was there or whether somebody asked you to get it there or not, do you?

A It showed up

Q It was there Okay

A It was delivered in the afternoon.

Q Do you know when he got there the first day?

A I have no idea

Q So it might have been there when he got there

A Like I said, the Ferrari just showed up.

Q Okay Do you know whether -- you needed that car back or you wanted it back in Richmond, right?

A At some point I would like to get it back I had it delivered over there for them to use it

Q Okay And you thought it would be fun for him to drive it; is that right? Is that fair?

A I don't have any problems with that

Q Is it fun to drive?

A It is okay I'm driving a Toyota Camry right now and
I'm all right with that, too

Q You had a Rolls-Royce you didn't like, right?

A I didn't care for that much. I kind of like this
Camry I'm driving

Q Okay So Bob McDonnell brings it back to Richmond, correct?

A Yes

Q All right And any reason to believe that he didn't think that he was doing something that in essence was a favor to you, just driving it back?

A I wouldn't call that a favor to me

Q It was a favor to him, too.

A Favor to him.

Q But you needed it back in Richmond and it had to get there somehow, didn't it?

A I would probably send a truck to bring it back I would get it there somehow

Q You don't want to put a hundred miles on it?

A It is not something I drive much. I just don't do that

Q The next day, August 1st, 2011, that's when you meet with Molly Huffstetler, right?

A Yes

Q And that weekend you say --

MR. DRY: Can we approach for a second?

THE COURT: Come on up.

(At Bench.)

THE COURT: We are going to take a break.

MR. DRY: That's what it was about

(In Open Court)

THE COURT: All right We are going to take 15 minutes Jury, would you please follow the Marshal?

THE COURT: Mr Dry, what did you say?

MR. DRY: I have one matter to bring to the Court's attention. When Mr Asbill is cross-examining the witness with the transcript, he says it is in evidence The problem being is, he mischaracterized what the transcript said. He did not put the entire thing for the witness to be able to review If he is going to use it that way, he shouldn't just be flashing it back and forth without publishing it to the jury

THE COURT: You don't have to respond to that

Look, if the transcript is available, and as long as Mr Asbill gives his page and line, he can use it to impeach if there is something different And then when you stand up. you can clear up whatever there is to clear up by giving full context

MR. DRY: I just want it up on the screen for long enough for the characterization to be clear to the jury one way or the other That's all I'm asking for

THE COURT: Well, I don't even think it has to be up on the screen. As long as the witness is looking at it and has an opportunity to see it, he can say yea or nay, then that's all that can be done with it

MR. DRY: Yes, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right

(Recess taken from 3:41 p.m. to 3:53 p.m.)

THE COURT: Counsel, if you all would approach

(At Bench)

THE COURT: I -- the jury was really dragging I mean, they -- you know, they were fighting not to go to sleep, and one fella actually nodded off I'm thinking about quitting early, like at 4:30 But, Mr Asbill, if it will mess you up in any way

MR DRY: Judge, we'd like to be -- we understand Mr Asbill could be done by 5, and then we would do our redirect and be done by 5:30 So it's only an hour more

THE COURT: How much more do you have?

MR ASBILL: Well, I don't know the answer to that I truly don't

THE COURT: From all the areas, I figured from all the areas that you were going into, you wouldn't finish today

MR DRY: Mr Asbill told us that he might be done by 5 today

MR ASBILL: I didn't raise this I am -- I am willing to do whatever If the jury is falling asleep --

THE COURT: I'm going to stop early There's no point in going on when they are not listening

MR DRY: That just means that we have to bring everybody back to do the whole thing over again Monday

THE COURT: That's exactly right, what it means, but -- but it is what it is

MR DRY: Yes, Your Honor

THE COURT: mean, the witness is here until he's exhausted

MR DRY: Absolutely, Your Honor

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

(In Open Court)

THE COURT: All right Bring in the jury, please

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right, Mr Asbill

MR ASBILL: Thank you, sir

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Mr Williams, before I get into the August 1 meeting with Ms Huffstetler, I want to go back to Government Exhibit 161 and ask you a few more questions

A Okay

Q This is the letter that we've talked about where you wrote the first sentence?

A Yes

Q Now, in the second paragraph of that letter, at the bottom, would you please read aloud the last sentence of that second paragraph?

A "We propose to use Health Diagnostic Laboratory, Incorporated, a Virginia company, for some of the blood analysis to be carried out in these studies "

Q Okay Now, with respect to that company, Health Diagnostic Laboratory, going back to the shopping trip in New York, do you recall telling Mary-Shea Sutherland that that company, HDL, was the company that you needed to partner with to perform blood sample testing for proposed clinical trials in Virginia?

A I don't, but I met with them

Q Right And do you recall that Mary-Shea's cousin, Leslie Strickler, was HDL's marketing director?

A Okay I had forgotten or didn't realize that was her cousin

Q Okay And that she contacted her cousin and set up a meeting for you with the co-founder of the company in May -- May 16th of 2011?

A Yes

Q And Mary-Shea personally drove you to that meeting?

A Okay

Q And Ms McDonnell did not attend, did she?

A No

Q Thank you All right Let's go back to the Molly Huffstetler meeting, the Huffstetler meeting on August 1st, 2011 That's the Monday after the weekend of the Smith Mountain Lake trip, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And you met with Ms McDonnell and Molly Huffstetler, who was a member of Dr Hazel's staff --

A That's correct

Q -- is that correct?

And my client didn't go to that meeting, did he?

A No, he didn't

Q All right And you never talked to him about that meeting, did you?

A No

Q And initially you were going to go meet that day with Ms McDonnell and Mary-Shea; is that correct?

A I don't remember

Q Do you know how Molly -- I mean, do you have any personal knowledge about how Molly Huffstetler happened to attend that meeting?

A I thought she came from Ms McDonnell, from Maureen McDonnell

Q All right But you don't have any personal knowledge of how that occurred?

A I don't know I don't recall exactly how it happened

Q Well, do you recall --

A I just know I met with her there

Q I'm sorry I didn't mean to --

A I met with her there --

Q Yeah

A -- is all

Q Well, do you recall talking to Ms McDonnell that weekend or before the weekend or talking to Mary-Shea and wanting to get up with the two of them to talk about clinical trials in Virginia and -- do you recall doing that --

A Yes At some --

Q -- and trying to set up a meeting with them?

A At some point, yes

Q Okay All right And you met with -- with Ms Huffstetler at the meeting --

A Yes

Q -- is that right?

And do you recall at the meeting telling Ms Huffstetler that you had already gotten $3 million approved or earmarked or whatever from the Tobacco Commission for your company?

A No

Q And that wouldn't have been true if you said that, would it?

A It would not have been true

Q Okay All right Let's -- let's talk about the Rolex I believe you said that after the meeting that same day, I think it's August 1st, that that's when Ms McDonnell, you say, asked you for --

A Ms McDonnell

Q That's what you say?

A Yes

Q Okay My client didn't ask you for a Rolex?

A Your client, no

Q And he never discussed a Rolex with you?

A No

Q Did you think it was weird, for lack of a better term, to buy him an expensive watch without talking to him?

A She asked me to get it for him, that it was going to be coming to him as a gift from her

Q Without him supposedly knowing about it?

A That's what --

Q Knowing that it was from you

A That would be between the two of them That's between the two of them

Q Well, you said it was going to come to him as a gift from her?

A From her

Q Not from you?

A Not from me

Q And you described a couple of times that you felt bad about this and you bought it out in California and your wife was with you, et cetera, right?

A I didn't feel bad It just was a little uncomfortable buying something like that But I was asked to do it and I agreed to do it So I was doing it --

Q Okay

A -- while I was shopping with my wife and my daughter

Q Now, you said that -- by the way, did you ever hear of a company in Virginia, Northern Virginia, jewelers by the name of Michael Beem, B-E-E-M, Jewelers?

A Never heard of him

Q Okay With respect to the disclosure of gift issues within Star, I believe you said that Star's CFO reviews your expense reports, correct?

A Yes

Q All right And because he reviews the expense reports, that's why you didn't want to put the Rolex through the company for business expense reimbursement; is that correct?

A I didn't -- I didn't want to turn it in to the company, period

Q Okay

A I just paid for it myself

Q All right And you disclosed everything else to Star's CFO in those expense reports; is that correct?

A That's the practice

Q All right And you disclosed the golf, the travel, the golf bags for --

A Yes

Q -- Bobby McDonnell, the flights All of that you disclosed to your company, to your CFO; is that correct?

A Yes

Q You did not disclose the shopping spree in New York or the Rolex?

A No, because I paid for them myself

Q Okay Now, how about the Chatham Bars trip up in Massachusetts where the Cognac got poured into the fire, did disclose that to them?

A To the --

Q To the CFO?

A To the company?

Q Yeah

A It was on the bill

Q It was on the -- I mean, all the expenses for that trip?

A All the expenses of that trip that we went on with Dr Ladenson and the Governor and Governor's friends was -- was on the bill

Q All right And neither you nor the CFO thought there was anything wrong about that, did you?

A It was expensive, but nothing wrong

Q Okay Now, back to the -- or, you know, going back -- I want to go back to the August 30 Mansion lunch And with respect to the lunch at the Mansion, you never had any discussions with my client about that lunch, did you?

A Prior to it, no

Q Not prior to it I mean, obviously, until he shows --

A Yes

Q -- up at the lunch?

A That's correct

Q You never had any discussion with him?

A That's correct

Q And your conversations about that event were through Maureen McDonnell and Mary-Shea --

A Yes

Q -- is that right?

And at the event, my client showed up at some point midway through or towards the end of the lunch?

A Towards the end

Q Towards the end of the lunch He asked some hard questions?

A Asked good questions

Q Good questions of the folks who were presenting?

A I thought so

Q And then he left; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And I believe, you said that this lunch, you all were giving $200,000 to Virginia universities, in total; is that correct?

A Not just Virginia universities There were eight physicians there I believe one of them or two of them were from Johns Hopkins But most of that was -- maybe seven out of the eight, maybe 175,000 out of 200, or 150,000 of it went to --

Q 75,000 went to out-of-state universities?

A No, no I'm saying 175,000 went to in-state The majority of the money -- I just don't recall There was a cardiologist from Johns Hopkins there, and I'm just trying to recall was there another doctor there that we gave the grants to from Johns Hopkins, but I think the rest of it was UVA and VCU

Q Okay

A I'm just trying to make sure I'm giving you an accurate --

Q No I appreciate the accuracy But I guess my basic question, whether it's 175 or whatever, this is money you're giving to Virginia, not taking from Virginia, right?

A That's right That's right

Q And, again, you thought it was appropriate to be able to do that and to make those gifts to Virginia universities, and that was an appropriate thing to have done at the Mansion, didn't you?

A I couldn't imagine a better place to have it done

Q All right And by the way, in terms of whether it was a launch or a lunch or some combination of the two, at one point your marketing folks sent over some description of a press release in advance of the lunch that they wanted to issue about this event --

A Yes

Q -- is that correct?

A Yes

Q And my client's staff dialed that way back, in terms of making it a launch or making it something like that?

A Right

Q They dialed it way back in terms of the press release, didn't they?

A I didn't have the input with that That would have been between the staff and Sara Machir at Paul Perito's office in Washington Meaning our office in Washington

Q Okay But they give -- in advance of this event, they give how they're going to describe it, in terms of --

A Yes, because that was the day --

Q -- the press releases?

A That was the day that we began the sales, and it was the launch -- formal launch of Anatabloc was that day

Q You said it was a national formal --

A Yes

Q -- launch?

A Yes

Q That day?

A Yes, that day

Q Okay We'll get back to that in a second

In any event, whatever promotional materials they wanted to use, the Governor's Office staff dialed -- dialed -- dialed the language of -- you know, the description of it way back?

A I'm not familiar with all of that

Q Okay

A I didn't have anything to do with that

Q All right Let me go forward to September 24th, the Cure By Design event, the Cancer --

A Yes

Q -- Society event

A Yes

Q Bob didn't invite you to that event, did he?

A No

Q All right And Maureen invited you to the event?

A She did

Q All right And Bob didn't ask you to bring Brad Kroenig down, did he?

A No

Q And he showed up at the very end of the event, basically?

A He did

Q And he wasn't in a suit He was in a blue blazer or sports coat or something and khakis, right?

A I think so

Q And did you understand that he had been up at UVA attending a football game with his sons?

A I didn't know where he had been

Q Okay But he came separately to the event; is that correct?

A Yes

Q All right And to your recollection, was a weekend in New York with the First Lady and the Governor a listed auction item?

A No

Q So this was something that the MC or the auctioneer just sort of dreamed up on the spot?

A He did

Q And would it be fair to say that he had had a little too much to drink?

A I don't think he was drinking at all It was maybe a glass of champagne A few people had champagne But I wouldn't characterize it as that This was a very serious and a very sad event for me because there were cancer survivors and young children there

Q I'm not -- yeah, I understand the --

A Okay

Q -- the nature of the event --

A Yeah

Q -- basically, but this was -- the weekend in New York with my client and his wife was not a listed auction item, and this is something that the auctioneer just --

A Yes I was just --

Q -- just free --

A -- responding to whether he was drinking or not I don't --

Q Or whatever

A Maybe he had a glass of champagne I don't know what he had But that's --

Q But in any event, he came up with this on his own --

A Yes

Q -- right?

A It appeared that way to me

Q Okay And -- and it was a surprise to my client?

MR DRY: Objection Calls for speculation

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Did you observe any sort of physical reaction to this announcement?

A No

Q Okay Did you think it was awkward for my client?

A I didn't pay any attention to it

Q Well, you sort of jumped in and, you know, made it --

A I only jumped in when he got in trouble

Q You jumped in and made it work, right?

A I just made it work That's true

Q Okay The money went to a good cause, didn't it?

A It did

Q And my client and his wife didn't have to spend some weekend in New York at some place with strangers, did they?

A I didn't do it for that reason, but --

Q Okay Now, afterwards there was a dinner?

A Yes

Q And who went to that dinner?

A Brad Kroenig, my friend, the Governor, and his wife

Q Okay And you paid for the dinner --

A I did

Q -- is that right?

And I believe, if I'm -- please correct me if I'm mistaken I think you said it was something like 15 -- 12 or $1,500; is that right?

A Somewhere around there
Q And clearly the food would have been in the couple-hundred-dollar range, right?
A No That was -- let's see Two, four --
Q Four people
A -- of us I think that place is a little bit more expensive than that And the rest would have been wine
Q And who picked the wine?
A I did
Q And, you know, so when the wine list came, you basically took it and you ordered, and you didn't consult with anybody about the price of the wine; is that right?
A No
Q Now, you also talked earlier about having discussions with Ms McDonnell about cars for Cailin and Rachel; is that correct?
A Not at this dinner
Q No, no, no I'm just talking earlier in your testimony today
A For Cailin and the -- and the two boys, the cars
Q Oh, okay
A Is that what you're referring to?
Q Yeah You testified about -- about that issue earlier today, did you not?

A Yes

Q Okay And did my client ever ask you to buy a car for anyone?

A No

Q And do you have any personal knowledge that he has any -- that he was involved in any way with whatever discussions were going on about this?

A No

Q Now, I want to forward to the October 18th Westin event This was when Rock Creek, you said, was owned by Star --

A Yes

Q -- at this Westin Hotel event?

And did Bob McDonnell attend that event?

A No He wasn't able to

Q Okay And did he ever talk to you about that event?

A No

Q And, again, back at the -- back at the Mansion, you know, event where you give away these checks -- David Dean, who is he?

A David Dean is in charge of sales

Q At Star?

A He is

Q Okay And would -- do you have any idea why David

Dean, on the Westin event, would have issued or drafted promotional materials that announced the Westin Hotel event as the national launch of Anatabloc?

A What was the date?

Q October 18th was the Westin event, I believe

A I don't know I thought it was August the 31st was when we did that

Q Well, is it possible that the national launch was really 45 days later, basically?

A I would have to check with someone.

Q Okay But do you recall that the -- that the flyer that shows the event details says national launch at the Westin?

A I'm taking your word for it at the moment

Q I can bring the exhibit back up

A Unless you -- I'll trust you with that

Q Thank you, sir The October 22 event, the Michigan event -- and by the way, I've gone back and looked at the transcript, and I was mistaken talking about those calls

You didn't -- you testified you called my client at some point, undefined in terms of when, about the first loan It wasn't two days later I'm mistaken

A It wasn't undefined, though I want to make sure I got that part straight

Q Well, I'm just saying --

A It was sometime prior to that

Q I'm just saying when you testified, you didn't say --

A Yes

Q -- you didn't say --

A Yes

Q -- what the --

A Okay

Q -- date was

A Okay

Q Now, with respect to the Michigan event, that's Flint, Michigan, right?

A That's correct

Q And you -- your recollection is that -- that Ms McDonnell went, but Bob McDonnell said he sleeps in -- or wanted to sleep in and --

A Well, I talked to him briefly

Q -- have her back early?

A That afternoon --

Q Okay

A -- before the event

Q So you would have talked to him on the 22nd, the same day of the event?

A I think that's when it was And then he said, "Just make sure you have her home" -- "I'm going to sleep in late in the morning Make sure you have her home by 1:00 or 2:00," or something Whatever it was

Q So he said --

A By the afternoon I'm not sure what time

Q And you talked to him on the 22nd or the 21st?

A When -- I thought I talked to him on the 21st

Q Okay And, again, if -- if you had called him, that should be in the phone logs?

A Yes Unless she called him and handed me the phone

Q Okay

A But one of those phones would have it, you would think

Q Okay I mean, do you recall anyone in this trial showing you a phone log with a call from you to Bob that day?

A No

Q Okay And the videos of that event that -- that Mr Dry played in court here yesterday, did you ever show those videos to my client?

A No

Q And would that be true about the Pelican Inn, or whatever the name of that place is out in Malibu?

A Pelican Hill

Q Pelican Hill Out in Malibu?

A Laguna

Q Laguna Okay

A Newport Beach, actually

Q Never showed those -- that's a real nice place, isn't it?

A Pretty nice place.

Q Okay And you never showed Bob McDonnell those videos?

A No

Q Did you ever talk to Bob McDonnell about what Ms McDonnell may have said at any of those events?

A No

Q Roskamp, Flint?

A No

Q Okay Now, forwarding to November 2012, no contact between you and the Governor --

A Between --

Q -- is that right?

A What are the dates?

Q November 2012 Fast-forwarding from October 2011 to November 2012

A Okay

Q Thirteen months

A Okay

Q No contact?

A I don't think that's right

Q Well, as you think about it, if you think of something, please let me know

A Okay I don't know That just doesn't sound --

Q That may be wrong

A -- right

Q My associate has just --

A It doesn't sound right, but --

Q I may be wrong

A Okay That's okay

Q December 2012 you don't remember anything?

A December?

Q Excuse me This is 2011 It's supposed to be 2011 That's why

November -- we were talking about October 2011 Now I'm talking about November 2011 Nothing happens between you and Mr McDonnell; is that right?

A You've confused me now

Q We talked about the Westin event October 2011 And now I'm going to the next month, November 2011

A Okay

Q Nothing happens --

A We're still in '11

Q Still in '11

A Okay The '12 threw me --

Q We're fast-forwarding to '14 soon --

A Okay

Q -- I promise

A Okay

Q Nothing happens in November 2011 between you and my client; is that correct?

A Not unless someone shows me something

Q Okay

A I can't sit here and recall it

Q And -- and as you sit here, you don't recall anything in December of 2011 happening either, correct?

A Not unless someone shows me something

Q Okay And then I believe the next year, we're into 2012, in January --

A Yes

Q -- that's when you say that you had some discussions with Ms McDonnell about the beach properties?

A Right

Q And my client was not on that call, was he?

A I don't think the initial one

Q Okay And February 2012, that's when Ms McDonnell tells you that my client is furious that these people at UVA are not calling you back?

A Well, she contacted me and asked -- said the Governor wanted to how things were going --

Q Yeah

A -- at UVA, and I said they're not The bureaucracy is bogged down It's just stopped, it appears to me

And she said -- she came back to me and said the Governor wants a list of the contacts at UVA

Q And, I mean, you know, were folks not returning your calls or what?

A No No The medical director, scientific director of the company, were working with UVA, and they were -- they had been complaining to me that it was just bogged down

Q Okay

A That nothing was -- you know, after we had given these grants, they were basically -- it wasn't moving forward And -- and then Maureen McDonnell asked me how it was going And I shared that with her, and she asked for the -- for the contact information, and -- and I had it sent to her

Q All right But my client never asked you for the names and numbers of anybody at the school, did he?

A No He just told me on the phone that he was following up with it one day

Q Okay And whatever e-mail exchanges you had about that issue, you don't know whether my client read them or not, do you?

A I have no knowledge of that

Q All right Do you remember when my client called you on the phone and said he was, quote, following up on it?

A Sometime in February, I believe

Q Could you find that call on the logs?

A February or March or -- I think the call would be there I don't know what date But he called me and said that he was following up with UVA and he also needed to talk to me about the problem that he needed some more money for Sandbrige

Q And with respect to the issue about following up at UVA, were you shown any phone log that you identified in this trial as being the call of the day that --

A That he actually did follow up?

Q Yeah -- well, no

A That he followed up?

Q No That he told you on the phone that he was going to, supposedly?

A Oh, I don't know That was just a phone call between him and myself

Q Yeah But my question is has anyone shown you any phone log in court where you've identified a call on your phone records that's consistent, date wise, with your memory of that discussion?

A As I sit here, not that I can recall

Q Okay The Healthcare Leaders Reception, what day was that on?

A I believe that was February the 29th

Q Leap year?

A Yes

Q And would I be accurate in saying that you viewed yourself as a healthcare leader?

A I think so Our company

Q And you personally?

A I think we were one of -- I think -- well, I would say representing the company, I think we were -- we were leading the way towards trying to lower the healthcare costs in Virginia So I would say we would be included in that

Q Okay And there were a lot of other folks at this event as well that -- that you would agree were healthcare leaders --

A Yes

Q -- in the state?

A I would

Q Did you ever have any discussions with my client about the Healthcare Leaders Reception before the event itself?

A I thought that morning I met with him at the Patrick Henry Building

Q It was already -- but the event was already in place, essentially, right?

A The event was scheduled a while ago, I believe But you're -- I'm just responding to did I have any discussion with him And it was the same day

Q Well, you surely saw him that day at the event as well; is that correct?

A I did

Q Yeah

A And I had dinner with him afterwards

Q And what I'm saying is that prior to it, in terms of setting up the event or anything, did you have any discussions --

A Not prior to it, no

Q -- with my client at all?

A Not prior to it

Q Okay And your discussions about it prior to the event were with whom?

A Maureen

Q Do you have any knowledge that -- that my client ever spoke with Caroline Birgmann about who to invite?

A No

Q And please remind us who Ms Birgmann is

A She's a sales representative for the company

Q Okay And Mr McDonnell welcomed Dr Ladenson to the event publicly; is that correct?

A I asked Maureen McDonnell during the meeting, while it was going on, to walk over to the Governor and have the Governor recognize him as a special guest

Q And when his wife asked him to do that, he did it?

A He did that

Q And, in fact, Dr Ladenson is a healthcare leader in your view, is he not?

A He is

Q He's the head of endocrinology at Johns Hopkins?

A I think that qualifies him as a healthcare leader

Q All right And after that event, you folks went to La Grotta, a restaurant in town?

A We walked over to the restaurant, I believe

Q All right And, again, you ordered the wine and the liquor?

A You know, I don't think of it as "the wine and the liquor "

Q Okay That's --

A But I think I ordered the wine

Q I'm sorry?

A I ordered the wine

Q You ordered the wine Okay

A I don't know if there was so-called liquor involved --

Q I don't know if there was either

A -- but I ordered the wine

Q But if the bill was expensive, it was because of the wine; is that right?

A Well, if I can just clarify that, since you know Mr Perito, is I spent time -- Mr Perito used to represent the French wine industry So that's the only reason I learned a little bit about that

So I did order the wine

Q Okay And, you know, I mean, the folks that are -- and you paid for the dinner, didn't you?

A I did

Q And the folks who are at the dinner with you, I mean, they're not trying to figure out, you know, whether you were ordering a 500-dollar bottle or a 50-dollar bottle of wine?

A I wouldn't let them know that

Q Do you even recall whether my client was drinking any -- any alcoholic beverages at that time or whether he was not drinking alcohol because it was Lent and he had given up alcohol for Lent?

A I can't tell you who had what to drink

Q Okay Now I want to talk to you about the first MoBo loan This is in February 16th to the March 12th time frame

MR ASBILL: And, Victoria, would you please pull up Exhibit 138

Your Honor, this is going to take about 15 minutes

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Cont'd.)

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Good morning, Mr Williams How are you?

A Just fine, thank you

Q Over the weekend, have you talked to any lawyers about your testimony from last week?

A I did.

Q And who were they?

A Lawyers for McGuireWoods and Steptoe & Johnson

Q All right And did you talk about adjusting any of your testimony based on what you had said in Court before?

MR. DRY: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let's go back to the timeline we were talking about when we left off Friday I want to talk to you about the beginning of 2012 Okay?

A Okay

Q All right And the first MoBo loan was in the February 16th to the March 12th time frame That's where I'm trying to concentrate right now Okay?

A Okay

Q I believe you testified that Ms McDonnell was the one who initially asked you or solicited the $50,000 loan from you for MoBo; is that correct?

A Yes

Q All right And at some point after that, my client calls you about that loan?

A Yes

Q And do you recall when that was exactly or do you have any dates you can give me for that?

A I think it was sometime in February

Q Can you be more specific than that or is that the best you can do?

A It was either January or February. It was at the beginning of the year. I believe it was in February

Q All right And after you all talked on the phone, then my client sent you an e-mail; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Let me pull up Government Exhibit 318 I believe this is in evidence This is the e-mail that we are talking about?

A Yes

Q That's dated February 16th, 2012, correct?

A Yes So it was sometime after that

Q Sometime before that you all had a phone call

A Yes

Q Okay And this e-mail to you is: "Jonnie Know you have been slammed. Do you want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents Thanks for all your help Gov " Right?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, apparently he wants to talk to your lawyers and to document the loan; is that correct?

MR. DRY: Objection, calls for speculation

MR. ASBILL: Is that the way you read the e-mail?

THE COURT: Overruled Go ahead

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Is that the way you read the e-mail? He asked you, "Do you want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents " Right?

A Yes, he did

Q Okay But I believe you testified that my client didn't want to document the loan because he had disclosure issues; is that correct?

A We both said that This was part of we had been discussing a variety of different ways to get this real estate problem under control And one of the ways, what's being referred to here, as I understand it, is one of the things that we were considering doing at that time was, not knowing how much money was going to be required at Virginia Beach during this negative cash flow season was, one of the things that had been discussed was maybe I could loan him stock certificates that he could borrow against Because I was trying to get a handle on just how much money was going to be involved, and that would keep him away from cash

Q Keep him away from your cash.

A From my cash.

Q From your cash. My specific question to you, I understand you have testified to that before essentially, but you say that my client didn't want to document the loan. I'm not talking about you He didn't want to document it because he had disclosure issues Is that right?

A Well, we both discussed it And as part of that, we considered whether it would be rent, whether it would be with the stock certificates or whether it would be a cash loan or, you know, different things

Q Let me try my question again one more time

A Okay

Q The specific question is, you say my client didn't want to document the loan because he had disclosure issues True or false?

A He said he had disclosure issues

Q Okay And therefore, he didn't want to document the loan. That's what your testimony is; is that correct? Forget about this e-mail You are saying that he told you he didn't want to document the loan because he had disclosure issues Correct?

A I don't recall the document part, but our discussion that we had was, I sa [illegible] him, I said, "Governor, I would just as soon keep this between us and just do this as a handshake," is where this ended up. And after this

A So, you know, we sat there and we had this conversation I said, "A handshake, as far as I know, is still the law in Virginia I have disclosure issues " He says, "Well, I have my own " And I said, "Are you comfortable with us just keeping this between the two of us?"

Q The answer to my question is that you say he said he had disclosure issues he was concerned about, correct?

A Yes.

Q Now, with respect to any disclosure issues that my client had, had you ever seen any of the forms or any of the materials relating to whatever disclosure issues or disclosure things my client had to go through? Did you ever see those forms or know anything about them?

A No

Q Do you know whether he had disclosure issues regardless of whether the loan was documented or paper? Let me give you an example You walk in with a bag of cash for $50,000, and you give it to the Governor Do you think he still has disclosure issues or he only has disclosure issues if there is a paper trail?

A I don't know his disclosure issues I just knew that I had them. I don't know what his disclosure issues are

Q So you can't say whether he had disclosure issues no matter how the loan was actually consummated.

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: He just said he doesn't know what they are

BY MR ASBILL:

Q I believe you also testified that my client was supposedly advising you about SEC disclosure requirements Do you recall that?

A Well, what is being referred to, I believe, there is I was telling -- I had found out that if it was done as a sale, I had to report who it was being sold to. And he had told me previous to that, he says, "Well, even if you do it as a sale you don't have to list who you are selling it to." And I said, "Well, I don't know if that's right or not I'll find out " And I found out that that was wrong

Q My specific question to you is, did my client give you advice about SEC disclosure requirements?

A He gave me his opinion that I didn't have to disclose who it would be sold to

Q Do you have any reason to believe that my client has any knowledge about SEC disclosure requirements?

A Well, I didn't rely on him for that. I went to the securities lawyers, because even though he said that, I went to the securities lawyers because I knew they knew

Q Okay And you are the CEO of a public company at this time, right?

A I am.

Q Right And you were experienced, highly experienced in trading securities, were you not?

A I wouldn't say highly experienced in trading securities, but I have a good level of experience at this point in my career.

Q Okay And you had outside and inside lawyers, basically, that were securities law experts?

A Experts

Q Right? Okay Now, Mr Dry asked you about the notes that my client took during the meeting on February 29th with you That was an in-person meeting, correct?

A Yes

Q Victoria, please pull up GX 2, Page 3

(Document displayed.)

Did you not tell my client during that meeting that you were going to have the stock transaction, if there were going to be a stock transaction, reviewed by securities and tax lawyers? You didn't do that?

A I recall telling him that I had to make sure what we were doing, you know, wasn't going to trigger any disclosure issues and I would find out about that

Q From your tax and/or securities law experts, correct?

A I don't recall the tax, but from the securities people

Q Securities law experts Okay But nonetheless, despite that conversation, you claim that my client and you agreed to keep all this between us; is that right?

A Yes.

Q And that's why no lawyers were contacted afterwards?

A There were no lawyers representing either one of us other than the information that I was obtaining from our lawyers outside the room just to get a general understanding of this to try to understand what we were doing Because this was prior to the end of the month when we actually finalized what we were going to do

Q Okay

A This was a meeting where we were -- this meeting was, the purpose of that meeting where all of this paperwork took place that day, what I was trying to do was understand how deep the hole was, also, in Virginia Beach.

Q Whether $50,000 was what my client needed or he might need a little more?

A If he needed more, that's what I was trying to do, and this was an example of what we could do.

Q You say at the end of the meeting, whatever the discussion was at the meeting, at the end of the meeting the basic agreement, you claim, between my client and you was, "Let's just keep this between ourselves"; is that right?

A We shook hands And when I was walking out of the room at the Patrick Henry Building, the only thing that was odd about it was the Governor said, "Jonnie, by the way, a handshake is not the law in Virginia."

Q Regardless of that conversation, what I am trying to get at is, did you, according to your testimony, do you claim that my client and you at the end of the meeting basically agreed "Let's keep this between ourselves"? Is that accurate or not?

A Yes

Q All right Victoria, please load up Government Exhibit 348, Page 1. You saw that document last Thursday, I believe

A Yes

Q In Court

A Yes

Q And you are familiar with it?

A I am.

Q Now, Mr Dry showed that to you last week?

A Yes

Q Okay And this is an e-mail --

A Mr Dry or the lawyers showed it to me I don't recall which one

Q Okay And it is an e-mail to you from John

Piscitelli, correct?

A Yes

Q Dated the 2nd, of March, 2012

A Yes

Q And the subject is transfer instructions Correct?

A Yes

Q And there are some, there is some information relating to that subject matter relating to transfer instructions below in the body of the e-mail

A That's correct

Q Is that correct?

A That is

Q So these are basically electronic wiring instructions from Mr Piscitelli, the stockbroker at Davenport?

A Yes

Q So that's March 2nd That's two days after you and my client supposedly agreed to keep this between ourselves, and here comes Mr Piscitelli talking about it, right?

A Yes

Q Okay So by the 2nd of March, my client had already broken this agreement to keep it between ourselves, didn't he?

A Well, what I was doing right here and the reason this didn't go forward was because of that meeting, because this didn't happen because I couldn't transfer the shares into his name because I didn't want anyone to see those shares going into his name This was sent to me, but it didn't happen because of that

Q I understand, you say it didn't happen

A It didn't happen

Q My question to you is, Mr Piscitelli is asking you about it, whether or not it happens or not. So obviously, my client brought the stockbroker into the mix, correct?

A He did bring the stockbroker in

Q Okay Now, after -- you can take that down After Mr Piscitelli e-mailed this to you, at some point you told my client that this share thing or stock transfer or whatever was not going to work and you needed to write him a check; is that correct?

A Yes, I did.

Q Do you recall that you actually had this discussion on the 12th of March with my client?

A I don't know if it was the 12th of March unless someone shows me a phone record. But I recall having a conversation with the Governor I said, "This is too much trouble It is easier just to write you a check."

Q All right Let me show you a document, and this is to see if it refreshes your recollection Just read it to yourself Victoria, please pull up RM-1431-0001? Just look at that and read it to yourself And if it refreshes your recollection about the date, tell me

A There's a lot,of information.

Q Does it help refresh your recollection about the date?

A Oh, on March 12th, yes It does

Q Okay

A I'm sorry.

Q Does it refresh your recollection that that's the date?

A It does

Q Okay Now, you can take that down, please Let's go now to another exhibit, this is RM-0104-2525 This relates to phone records that are all in evidence Now, these are your phone records; is that correct? Your phone bill?

A Yes

Q From March, 2012?

A Yes

Q And would you look at the entries for the 12th of March, 2012?

A Okay

Q And do you see some calls there to my client's cell phone number, or one in particular for 23 or almost 24 minutes?

A Okay

Q Do you see that?

A I do

Q Does that also help refresh your recollection about the date and the further discussion with my client?

A Yes

Q Okay That was a call from you to my client, I believe, around 10 o'clock at night?

A Yes

Q Okay And it is 23 minutes and 49 seconds, correct?

A It says that

Q Do you have any reason to doubt --

A I don't

Q Okay Take that down, please, and pull up Government Exhibit 352 You recognize this document; this is in evidence, correct?

A Yes, I've seen that

Q So this is the $50,000 check that ultimately you send to MoBo Realty, correct?

A Yes

Q And it says "Beach Properties" at the bottom, right?

A Yes It does

Q And what's the date on that check?

A March 6th.

Q So despite having conversations with my client about various alternatives, you had already written a check on March 6th

A I asked them to hold the check while we were exploring this

Q Asked who to hold the check?

A Whomever I sent it to or the Governor It must have been the Governor

Q Must have been?

A Well, it was whomever $50,000 went to I asked them to hold it while we were trying to clear this up, and it is my recollection as I sit here that it was the Governor

Q But you had already sent the check six days before you were having later conversations about alternative types of loan arrangements, right?

A Yes If that didn't work out, my commitment basically when I went there was, and it had been from May 2nd, the previous year, that "I'll help you with your financial problems " And so I was letting him know that I'll help you; let's try to figure out and maybe we will talk about some other ways to do it, just because I was trying to get a handle on whether is this $50,000 here makes $100,000, is this $200,000, is this $300,000, exactly what's going on here when you start pulling that much cash out and it is just sitting in dead -- it is dead money

Q The bottom line is, you don't know who you sent this check to, whether it was my client or whether it was Maureen McDonnell or whether it was Michael Uncapher or somebody associated with the MoBo partnership?

A I sent that check to -- I made that check out to MoBo Realty because I was told to make it out to MoBo Realty And I believe it was the Governor at this point, because at this point, the financial dealings here have shifted to where the Governor and I are having direct communication I believe it was the Governor When I sent him the check, I said, "I'll send you the check, but let's try to figure out if we can come up with various ways to try to cover this hole " And again, as I said, I was trying to figure out just how deep it was

Q Do you recall between the 6th of March and the 12th of March having discussions with people other than my client about this transaction? Ms McDonnell, for example?

A As I sit here, I don't recall talking to Ms McDonnell about this part

Q Victoria, please pull the phone records back up, RM-0104 And would you look for an entry on the 2nd of March, see if you had a phone call with Ms McDonnell

A I see that

Q All right And on March 3rd, did you and

Ms McDonnell exchange three text messages?

A If it says that, I don't dispute it

Q Okay And how about March 4th? Is there a text message between the two of you on that date?

A Yes, I see that

Q And on March 5th, are there three texts and seven phone conversations between you and Ms McDonnell?

A If it is there, I don't refute that

Q Okay And March 6th, were there four text messages and a phone call, one or two phone calls between you and Ms McDonnell?

A It appears so

Q Okay You can take that down, please And give me RM-1427 Blow that up a little, please You recognize this document, do you not?

A I don't I don't recognize this one I recognize the one that was the $50,000 check, but I don't recognize this one

Q Do you recall asking Jerri Fulkerson, your secretary, to write a check from Starwood Trust to MoBo MoBo Realty, and in the memo line, she puts "Maureen McDonnell" instead of "Beach Properties"?

A I'm not familiar with that, but Jerri wouldn't write a check unless I told her to

Q She wouldn't void it unless you told her to, either, would she?

A No

Q You can take that down. You viewed this $50,000 loan to MoBo as another loan you were making to Ms McDonnell at her request?

A I viewed this $50,000 loan as what I viewed the first one as: they were in trouble financially, and I was helping their family out

Q And that first loan was to her, was it not?

A The first loan was

Q Okay

A The first loan, the check was made out to her But the loan from my perspective was to both of them.

Q All right Now, you say that you didn't want anyone to know about the loan Yet there is a paper trail here from the check itself Isn't that right?

A Paper trail between my secretary and myself

Q Well, there is a paper trail from the final check that is in your bank?

A Yes

Q Is in the MoBo bank accounts

A Yes

Q Your secretary knows about it

A Yes

Q MoBo people know about it

A Yes

Q All right Now, I believe last Friday, you testified that you had a friend who was a judge in Florida; is that correct?

A I do

Q And that's Judge Farrance?

A It is

Q F-A-R-R-A-N-C-E?

A It is

Q A good friend of yours?

A He is

Q What kind of a judge is he?

MR. DRY: Objection, Your Honor We went over all this on Friday Now he is retreading things he has already gone over

MR. ASBILL: I'm trying to correct one point

THE COURT: Go ahead.

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You recall talking to him about making a loan to the Governor of Virginia, correct? You discussed that topic with him.

A He didn't give me an opinion We were playing golf and I just asked him generally, I asked him generally, "You know, Bob, is it okay? The Governor is having financial problems Is it okay if I loan --" "He is hitting me up for money," is what I actually said to him. And "Is it okay for me to do this?"

Q And you testified that he said to you, "As long as you don't get any state contracts " Right?

A Yes.

Q But in fact, what he told you was much broader than that, wasn't it?

A I remember him saying, "As long as you don't get any state contracts," but I don't recall after that It was just a general question where I was trying to get some comfort about what I was doing

Q You don't recall him --

A In a casual way I was not asking him for a legal opinion.

MR. DRY: Objection There is more than one question.

MR ASBILL: I'm trying to set it up

THE COURT: So far we have gone over stuff I've already heard So if you have something, go ahead

MR. ASBILL: A new thought on it right now

THE COURT: Go ahead.

BY MR ASBILL:

Q In fact, Judge Farrance told you it didn't just relate to contracts He said it was okay for you to loan money to the Governor of Virginia as long as you didn't get anything in return

A Actually --

Q Isn't that correct?

A No Actually, what he said, he says, "Jonnie, you can loan money to anyone you want If you loan money to the Governor, it is his problem, not yours "

Q And he didn't limit it to contracts, is what I am asking you. He told you it is okay as long as you don't get anything in return, not just a contract

A I don't recall him saying that, but I do recall him saying that "It is not your problem, Jonnie, it is the Governor's "

Q I'd like you to take a look at something to see if it refreshes your recollection Take a look at the notes of the report of your interview with the FBI on the 1st of July, 2013

MR. DRY: He has already said he doesn't recall

MR. ASBILL: I want to see if I can help him recall

THE COURT: Go ahead

(Document proffered to witness)

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Please look at that, Page 5, last paragraph.

A Okay

Q Can you read that last paragraph to yourself?

A Yes I did.

Q Okay Does that refresh your recollection about whether Judge Farrance told you that it is okay to loan money to my client as long as you don't ask for anything in return?

A That's not what Judge Farrance said.

THE COURT: All right That means it doesn't refresh his recollection Let's go on to the next point.

MR. ASBILL: Okay

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q By the way, I'll get back to it in more detail in a minute, but the Chatham Bars Inn trip?

A Yes

Q You had another judge friend of yours on that trip; is that correct?

A My good friend, Chris Amrhein, from when I was 20 years old, is a lawyer in Massachusetts, and we have been friends for 40 years And his wife became a judge over the past few years

Q So the answer is yes, there was another judge, a friend of yours, on that trip?

A She is a friend of mine, but her husband is my good friend.

Q Okay

A And he is a lawyer

Q And I believe you said on Friday that you extended this loan, this $50,000 loan, to keep getting my client's help Is that correct?

A Yes

Q Is that what you said?

A Yes

Q So please tell me a single thing that my client did for you or your company after you gave him this $50,000 loan to MoBo

A Okay

Q Let's do it month by month Try March.

A I was going to answer it with an example You asked me for a single example

Q Let's do it month by month, and you give me your example

A We will get there

Q March, 2012, nothing Right?

A I need to ask you a question first before that, if it is okay, to help me recall, to answer that question for you on a date, since you have all these papers

Q That's not the way this works

A Okay All right Then let me -- I'm trying to help you with it On the day that --

Q Just your memory

MR. DRY: Let him answer the question.

THE COURT: Let him answer the question.

THE WITNESS: I recall that one of the outstanding ones was that at the Healthcare Leaders event at the Governor's Mansion, in which I was allowed to invite basically the doctors that I wanted to invite to the Healthcare Leaders meeting that day, and while the Governor was addressing the Healthcare Leaders meeting, I asked Ms McDonnell to interrupt him and recognize one of our consultants, Dr Ladenson, from Johns Hopkins, as the special guest And she did

Q Okay

A And after that dinner, after that -- during the course of that evening, one of the people that was there who was very important to the company, where I felt like I was making good progress, was a lady named Sara Wilson, who was in charge of the $400 million a year that Governor -- that Virginia spends on healthcare for drug treatment And then we went that same evening, we went down to the La Grotta restaurant with the Governor and his wife with my consultants and talked about Anatabloc And my consultant was asked by the Governor, "How big of a discovery is this?" And then the Governor and his wife invited my consultant and his friend to spend the night at the Governor's Mansion. And for me --

Q This is on the 29th This is the 29th of February

So the question is, in March of 2012

A I'm trying -- I'm thinking in that time frame That's why I asked you for a date, because that was a very significant -- that was a very significant evening, to have all those sort of important events happen for our company

Q It was significant because you dropped about a thousand bucks on wine for four people, right, at La Grotta?

A I thought I was answering a question about the $50,000, the second $50,000 that I was loaning them.

Q April, 2012 Anything you remember then?

A I'm not sure whether it was April -- sir, I have a hard time I can tell you what happened, but I can't, unless you direct me to something, for example, when the Governor contacted me about, you know, "Jonnie, I'm going to look into the problem you have at UVA --"

Q We will get to that.

A Okay The dates I'm having trouble with There is no way I can recall -- I can tell you what happened.

Q Okay

A Okay

Q But you can't tell me as you sit here whether anything happened in April or not

A I can't give you specific dates --

Q Okay

A -- is all

Q Let's go to May In May, basically, that's when you give my client another $20,000 loan to MoBo

A Yes

Q Okay And that was a wire transfer from Starwood Trust?

A Yes

Q Correct?

A That's correct

Q And that's the trust that your brother, Donnie, supposedly is a trustee on?

A For my children, yes

Q And the same trust that your secretary administers and your children are supposed to benefit from?

A Which they do

Q Right. And that transfer, wire transfer, also creates a trail of records, does it not?

A Yes

Q Okay And Mr Dry, I believe, asked you last week some questions about my client saying he owned stock. Correct?

A On multiple occasions he confirmed that to me

Q You can't tell me the dates of those or whether anyone else was present, and you have no notes of that

A No one was present

Q Okay

A But on multiple times, he would say to me, confirm to me that, "Jonnie," the stock looks good. I'm a shareholder. I'm rooting for you."

Q "I'm a shareholder."

A "I'm a shareholder."

Q Not just "Your stock looks good" because there is some news article or something you send over It is, "I'm a shareholder and the stock looks good"; is that what you claim?

A Yes

Q And there is no record of that anywhere

A Not that I am aware of

Q So we have your memory for that and your word for that; is that correct?

A We do

Q And the fact is, according to you, that you told Ms McDonnell when she first bought stock in your company to sell it and pay down credit card debt, correct?

A I did.

Q And that's because you thought Star's stock was too volatile?

A I thought it was -- I thought -- the first thing I thought was that "You told me you folks needed this money because you were in trouble in Virginia Beach, and now I just walk out of a meeting and find out that you have purchased stock in this company " And yes, I did say, "You shouldn't have your money in this stock because you can't afford to make these sorts of risky investments "

Q So let me see if I get this right Did you tell her that the stock was risky because it was too volatile; is that essentially what you said?

A I said to her, I said, "These companies at these stages, the stock gyrates until they gain traction and reach these milestones, and I think this is too risky of an investment given that you don't have the extra money to be able to afford to take these risks " I told her that

Q Gyrate, volatile, these are distinctions with a difference to you?

A Gyrate, volatile, it is the same for me

Q High beta factor? Does that ring a bell?

A I don't know what that means

Q You don't know what that means Okay Let me go forward to June, 2012 Nothing you recall then, right?

A Again, if you have an event, just to say June or May or May 16th, I don't know how to respond to that

Q If you have a memory of June and something --

A Unless you ask me a question about June and show me something that happened.

Q The question is nothing, right?

A Then I'm okay with that

Q July, 2012, July 12th, the National Governors' Association meeting in Williamsburg I want you to focus on that with me, please

A Okay

Q I believe you mentioned that Maureen McDonnell asked for some Anatabloc to put in gift bags for the governors' spouses at that meeting and you sent some over

A I had some delivered, I believe, to the Williamsburg Inn for that

Q You never discussed that issue with my client, did you?

A With the Governor? No

Q Yes

A No

Q And you had no reason to believe that he was personally involved with gift bags, did you?

A I didn't think he was

Q Now, moving on to August of 2012, late August, last day of the month, the 31st of August, 2012, to the beginning of September

A Yes

Q Three days That's the Chatham Bars Inn trip.

A Yes

Q Correct? All right And other than the things that we have talked about, that's it basically You decide you are going to ask him and Maureen to come up to Chatham Bars for the weekend, correct?

A I didn't decide that at all

Q You worked that out with Ms McDonnell

A Maureen worked that out with me and wanted to go to Bar Harbor, and this was the trip from the previous year And my wife said she didn't want to go to Bar Harbor And so I talked her into settling and going to Chatham Bars Inn instead

Q Okay Now, the Bar Harbor trip the previous year would have been, if it had happened, it would have been in the same time frame, roughly?

A Yes, I think so

Q The idea about Bar Harbor the previous year --

A I don't know if it was the same, it was somewhere between May and the summer, somewhere through there

Q And the idea about the Bar Harbor trip was that both couples had either gotten married or honeymooned in Bar Harbor Independently, obviously?

A Yes

Q So that was something that you all had in common, the two couples had in common; that you had both spent a honeymoon in Bar Harbor, Maine?

A Yes

Q That was something you were trying to arrange the previous year just, for the four of you to celebrate your mutual anniversaries?

A I was accommodating her I was not celebrating our mutual anniversaries

Q They just happened to coincide at the same time.

A I don't remember if the trip was on the anniversary I was trying to explain, which mine is May 23rd, and you asked me earlier, "Was this the same trip the previous year in August, September, for the following year?" And I responded and said, "Well, somewhere through May through that period" is all

Q That trip was canceled because there were multiple emergencies in the State of Virginia; is that correct?

A Yes

Q In 2011

A Yes

Q All right. Now, at the Chatham Bars Inn trip, you testified, I believe, that you are working the whole weekend, correct?

A I am working the whole weekend.

Q That's 100 percent work and you are 100 percent sure about that; is that right?

A I'm working

Q And you are 100 percent sure that's what you are doing the whole time, right?

A Even when I am sitting around that fireplace at night outside, I'm working

Q And even when you are talking family stuff and children and the rest of it, you are working Is that right?

A When I'm --

Q When you are talking about anything, you are working Is that right?

A No, I would just consider that weekend as that was an opportunity for one of our consultants, Dr Ladenson, and I to spend more time with the Governor to get him to help us, and I thought we achieved that I thought that went very well

Q Okay So when you golf you are working?

A I'm always on point when I'm around the Governor, sir

Q So when you are sailing you are working?

A It doesn't matter what I am doing

Q Having dinner on the beach, you are working?

A Even if I'm goofing around.

Q Throwing the Cognac into the fire you are working?

A Right down to that

Q Tell me, you are not social friends, this is just business friends, right?

A Absolutely

Q Is it difficult for you to three days straight, all your waking hours, pretend you are a personal friend? Is that hard for you or does that come easy?

A I don't feel like I was pretending They brought their businesspeople, too

Q Phil Cox and his wife are not personal friends of my client?

A It is my idea that if they are personal friends, the conversations I was there with are about raising money and budgets and advertising budgets like the people that he invited out to dinner that run the campaign advertising events that were there at dinner with us one night, another couple

Q Can you be both personal and business friends simultaneously with somebody?

A I can be business friends The difference for me is I needed something here, okay? It is business My personal friends, I just don't recall paying my personal friends money to hang around with me and go play golf and do things

Q You have never loaned money to a personal friend you played golf with; is that your testimony?

A I don't recall loaning money to many -- I just can't sit here and recall loaning money to, other than just family members I loan money to, it seems like, quite a bit

Q How about Burt Haynes, one of your board members we talked about?

A B J Haynes is a very close friend of mine that Paul Perito and I asked to come on the board because we had so much confidence in him and his background And he has been a friend of mine for a long time

Q I don't challenge that I'm just saying he is a business friend and a personal friend.

A He is both

Q And you gave his kids money when they got married; is that right?

A I gave it to B.J to help out, and I believe I gave B J maybe $200,000

Q Okay

A Because B J has been very helpful to me over the years

Q Let me move on to September of 2012 Nothing you remember for that month?

A What month was this?

Q September, 2012 The month after Chatham Bars

A Not unless you show me something

Q Okay October, 2012, remember anything then?

A Not unless you show me something

Q Okay Let's go to November of 2012 Nothing that you recall until Thanksgiving of November, 2012; is that right?

A Unless someone shows me a document or something, I can't recall anything specifically

Q All right You remember testifying basically that you had this text message exchange with my client, "Happy Thanksgiving from the Williams kitchen"?

A Yes

Q Okay And my client responding back to you that "Your family is very special"? That's what he said back to you?

A He said that or I said that

Q No, he said that

A He said that Okay

Q Right And again, this is not about friends This is just about business

A It is about a business relationship. I'm maintaining a very important business relationship.

Q Okay And in late, I believe you said, in late 2012, your brother, Donnie, did some home improvement work at Ms McDonnell's and Mr McDonnell's home; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And Ms McDonnell offered to pay Donnie for that work? Any time he did something at the house, she offered to pay him for it, didn't she?

A I believe she said she offered to pay for it

Q Okay And isn't it true that my client, whatever work Donnie did, my client thanked you for that?

A Yes

Q Now, in December of 2012, fast forwarding one month, you recall you were invited to a tool party for Adam Zubowsky and Jeanine McDonnell; is that correct?

A Yes

Q So this is the guy's equivalent of a bridal shower; is that what you understood?

A That's what I came to understand. I had never heard of it before

Q Okay People are bringing tools as gifts

A I got it But I just never heard of that before

Q All right And it was Ms McDonnell that invited you to that event?

A She did

Q And --

A Wait a minute I don't know if she -- I don't know if she invited me to the event, but she called me and said, "Jonnie, you are going to do the same thing for Jeanine as what you did for Cailin?"

Q You don't even get to come Just send money Right?

Is that what you are testifying?

A Basically

Q Just send the money You can't even come to the party, right? Just send the money Is that it?

A I'm sure I could come to the party But I was in Florida, and so I'm in Florida, and I'm going to fly all the way to Virginia for a tool party?

Q Well, whatever You were invited. You didn't come for whatever reason, but it wasn't because you weren't invited, correct?

A I don't recall whether I was invited or not But I recall being asked for the money

Q It wasn't your idea to try to give a generator? This was Ms McDonnell's idea, you ought to give a generator?

A That generator is a long story, sir

Q I don't want the long story Was it your idea or not?

A That generator was a way for me to keep from writing another check.

Q If the generator cost a lot of money, it is $10,000, you have to buy that, that's different than writing a check?

A No What I ran into, I thought the generator, I actually spent that Saturday going to look for generators myself And I thought, I went to the Honda store first thinking "They can't cost but so much, I'll just buy them a generator " They live down at Virginia Beach And then I ran into trouble with that, and then I eventually laid it off on my brother and then my brother said, "These generators can cost 15 or $20,000 " Finally, by Sunday afternoon, I threw in the towel and sent a check for $10,000

Q You can also get a generator for three or $400, can't you? Fills up with gasoline and plugs into your garage outlet?

A I don't know that I wasn't, I didn't see any three or $400 It was called -- GE makes these generators, and then what had happened, it was more to it than that. I actually had my secretary even send a generator company in Virginia Beach over to see what kind they wanted and what they had picked out was 15 or $20,000 So it was actually not just that Saturday and Sunday, but it had turned into a production.

Q You are claiming that Jeanine McDonnell picked out a $15,000 generator and asked you for that specific one? That's what you are saying?

A I'm saying right here, sir, under oath, that her husband and her met with the generator company that my secretary sent from Virginia Beach to their home to assess what they needed for a generator Because I wasn't -- I couldn't, you know, I was trying to find one I certainly couldn't, the one I was looking at, I certainly couldn't fit it in the airplane And so I gave it to my brother, I gave it to to my secretary, and said, "Get this generator thing away from me "

Q Secretary, brother, whatever, you didn't talk to my client about it at all, did you?

A I talked -- not about --

Q My client

A I talked to your client the evening --

THE COURT: Let him answer the question, Mr Asbill Don't talk over him.

THE WITNESS: I talked to your client the evening of the tool party

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q And you told him you were giving a generator?

A No I told him -- they called me and said, "Thank you for this wonderful gift for Jeanine and Adam," and I don't know if that was the generator or the $10,000 check that they were calling me to thank me for It was one or the other

Q You claim you talked to my client that night as opposed to the kids, Jeanine and Adam, and Maureen?

A I did talk to your client and Ms McDonnell that evening

Q Okay Let me talk to you about December, 2012

A Okay

Q The Rolex photo. That's a topic I want to talk to you about

A Okay

Q Now, last Thursday, you talked about a photo of Chef Leo that you sent to my client on Christmas Eve, 2012 Do you remember that?

A I will never forget it.

Q Okay You send him this picture, and this was the shared Chef Leo, right?

A Yes

Q You had Thanksgiving, you had Christmas

A I paid for Chef Leo that evening myself, though.

Q I understand. I'm talking about this is your house

A This is my home

Q You reserved him, you had used him in the past and when the other chef at the Mansion leaves, that's when Chef Leo starts working at the Mansion?

A Yes

Q But you have reserved Christmas and Thanksgiving for you.

A Yes

Q Okay So Chef Leo was at your house on Christmas Eve

A Yes

Q Correct And you send my client a text with a picture of Chef Leo at your house on Christmas Eve at dinner time Is that right?

A I sent him a picture of Chef Leo and my wife standing beside the Christmas tree in the living room.

Q Dinner time, Christmas Eve

A Yes

Q Correct Mr Dry asked you if you got a text message response to that text from you with the photo of your wife and Chef Leo, correct?

A Yes

Q And your response was what?

A I received a picture of the Governor showing the watch on his wrist

Q Okay And are you testifying that my client sent you a photo of himself with the Rolex on his wrist; is that what you are saying?

A Yes

Q That's what you say

A That's what I'm saying

Q That's what you are saying All right, let's go to Government Exhibit 444 This is the photo that you identified when Mr Dry was examining you; is that correct?

A Yes, it is

Q And you claim this was in response to your text to my client He responds by sending you this picture; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And you interpret that as "You've got my chef but I've got your watch." That's your interpretation of this picture, even though there is no text written associated with the picture

A My first thought was I was scared to death

Q Okay That's one way you interpret it The other way you interpreted it is, you know, "You've got my chef but I've got your watch"; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay This is the first time you claim you ever heard anything from my client about the watch for a year-and-a-half from the time you bought it

A First time that I knew for sure that he knew it came from me

Q You knew for sure because he sent you back this text message in response to your photo of the chef to him.

A Yes

Q Is that right?

A Yes

Q All right Would you please pull up Government

Exhibit 444 Government Exhibit 445 And is this related to that picture?

A Is what related to the picture?

Q This message right here, this exhibit.

A That's the picture --

Q That's the picture you claim my client texted you

A No

Q Go back to the document that reflects what you claim he sent you in response

A To the photo of my wife and Chef Leo Yes.

Q Okay How did you get that photo? You don't know, right? You don't have any idea

A On my iPhone It came to me on my iPhone

Q Where on your iPhone is there any legend of any kind that reflects this is in response, in direct response to your text to my client?

A I don't --

Q Where do you see that?

A I have no idea I'm just telling you that came right away

Q It came right away And you assume it came from my client

A Because it said GOV on my phone

Q Okay And during the course of this investigation, you turned over documents to the government, did you not?

A Yes

Q And they pulled text messages and photos from your iPhone?

A They did.

Q The Chef Leo photo and that text was one of the messages they collected; is that right?

A Yes

Q You can see at the top of that, blow up the top of that, this is the 24th of December, 2012, at about 7:46 p.m. Correct?

A Yes

Q And the (804) -5321, what's that number?

A I think that's the Governor's number But I would have to look on my phone and see

Q All right That's when you are sending it to him. It is to him from you and that's the picture of the chef and your wife

A Yes

Q Is that correct?

A Yes

Q And at the top of that exhibit, 445, blow that up at the top. See it says, "Mobile Phone Examiner Plus Report"?

A I see that

Q Do you know what that means?

A I have no idea

Q And is there all kinds of data about this message on this text?

A Okay

Q All right, there are to, from, date, time, message type, file name, all of that is on this text; is that correct?

A I don't understand it, but okay

Q It is all there

A All right

Q And that shows that you sent the message to the phone number at the top that we have agreed belongs to my client, correct?

A Yes

Q And it looks like all that data comes from your phone, correct?

MR. DRY: Objection, Your Honor He just said he didn't know what the report was

THE COURT: If you have a point, get to it

MR. ASBILL: I do

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Let's go back to Government Exhibit 444 Do you see any message data on this exhibit?

A No

Q No to, no from, no date, no time.

A I just see a picture

Q No message, no file name Right?

A No

Q All right So your attorneys pulled both texts from your phone, but for some reason there is no data on the picture, e-mail; is that correct? Or picture text

A If there is no data, there is no data There is nothing I can do about that

Q Please pull up RM-0104-1003 These are your phone records from December 24th, 2012; is that right?

A Yes

Q All right And do you see at 6:08, 12-24 at 6:08 p.m., there is a text to the Governor from you?

A Okay

Q I want you to look down there and find me one from my client back to you

A What was the time of the, when I sent the picture on your --

Q I think it is 6:08

A Was it 6:08? I thought this was later in the evening, like at 7:30 or 8 o'clock.

Q Go down further

THE COURT: The other message said seven something

THE WITNESS: Seven something

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Look in the 7 o'clock to 8 o'clock time frame

A That's what I,was trying to do And the Governor's four numbers for the Gov phone number ends in what? I'm just trying to answer your question

A 1

Q It ends in 1? Numeral 1, the originating number?

A The originating number from him is 1

Q Right

A Okay I don't see a 1

Q There is one at 6:08 p.m.

A Right But I don't see -- go down to 8:16 What is that? No, scroll back the other way I thought I saw some 1's Go up a little more Maybe when you move it, move it so I can see, it looks like when you move it, it goes to 1's, all 1's across there

Q We will try to blow up the whole thing for you.

A I don't know I'm just telling you that when I sent that picture, that's how I received that picture, was in response to me sending that text of the chef with my wife

Q I understand you say that And what I am asking you --

A I believe that

Q Can you find any record on your phone bill of my client texting you that night with any attachment that would include the photo of himself with the Rolex watch?

A I don't see any on these phone records

Q So you just assume that the responsive text you got was from my client, but you don't have any proof of that at all, do you?

A I sent him a picture of my wife with the Christmas tree and I received this as a response on my phone that said GOV

Q And you assume that he sent it to you, but there is no record of him doing that, is there?

A I don't see it I don't see that, no

Q And if he didn't send it to you, the unstated "I've got yours, you've got mine" message is not from him, is it?

A I don't know who else would have GOV on their phone to send me a picture of his wrist with the watch

Q You don't have --

THE COURT: Mr Asbill, the document was, parts of it was previously admitted but not all of it And we are using parts that weren't previously admitted. So if you could just move it in

MR ASBILL: I will move it in I apologize, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sure It will be admitted.

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let's move on to January, 2013

A On the 23rd of January, that's when you first met with the investigators You have talked about that at some length; is that correct?

A Yes

Q At the end of the meeting they asked you to wear a wire

A They did.

Q You said no, right?

A I didn't say no I stopped the meeting and called the lawyers

Q To call your lawyers You understood at some point that in terms of some sort of a public corruption kind of case, if you had worn a wire and had captured my client saying something incriminating, that would be a very valuable thing for you to be able to negotiate with in terms of a deal with the government, correct?

A Those things never crossed my mind that day I just wanted those fellows to leave

Q I don't mean that day I'm talking about you said you had to think about it and you went forward.

A I didn't say I had to think about it I stopped the meeting, I said, and called the lawyers

Q And my question to you is, at some point after the meeting, going forward --

A Yes

Q -- into the year, did it dawn on you that if you had a recording of my client saying something incriminating, that that would be a very valuable thing for you to have in terms of negotiating a deal with the government?

A Never crossed my mind that day. I thought he was in trouble

Q I'm not asking you that day Did it ever cross your mind that that would be useful?

A No

Q Never thought about that?

A No That's a movie scene

Q Oh, it is If you have an admission from my client of some criminal activity, you are basically irrelevant, right?

MR. DRY: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't say I'm irrelevant

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q To a prosecution of my client

A I don't think that -- I didn't think any of the things that you are saying, sir

Q Okay Now, we talked or somebody talked to you a while ago, I believe last week, about Government Exhibit 470, Page 1 Will you pull that up? Blow up the e-mail on that This is the next day, basically, where there is an opportunity to, an offer to go down to the beach house at Sandbridge where you would have had an opportunity to spend time alone with my client; is that right? That's a text message to you?

A Let me read it, just a second, to make sure

Q Okay

A Yes She is inviting me to come down to spend some private time with the Governor where it is comfortable at the beach

Q Okay And you don't take her up on that; is that right?

A It is cold in Sandbridge

Q Okay Regardless of whether it is cold or not, you don't take her up on it; is that right?

A I don't know if I would or not

Q Did you, is the question.

A No

Q And you never think about, "Gee, maybe if I wear a wire, this would be a great opportunity to get some evidence against the Governor"?

MR. DRY: He has already said --

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let's go next to RM-0607 Do you recognize this?

A Who is it from?

Q Blow it up for him, please Did you ever see this e-mail?

A I asked, who is it from?

Q Ms Fulkerson to you on April 22nd, 2013

A Okay So it is from Jerri to me.

Q 2013, April 22nd, 2013 Do you recognize that?

A Okay. Okay. This is from -- this is my secretary referencing Mike Bujakowski

Q Who is Mike Bujakowski?

A Mike Bujakowski was the HR person at the company

Q Okay And this is after the investigation in this case broke in the press; is that correct?

A Yes

Q So we are in April of 2013 and the investigation story, first story about the investigation broke when?

A Yes

Q Broke when?

A Okay

Q When is your recollection of when the story broke of your giving gifts for my client's family?

A I don't know what day I'm not sure exactly when that happened

Q March, at least March

A It happened in March Okay

Q So this is in April

A Okay, after it is already in the newspapers

Q It is in the newspaper about the investigation, correct?

A Right What's the question?

MR. ASBILL: I want to move the admission of that e-mail

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR ASBILL:

Q And in discussions, in the discussion in this e-mail, basically, Ms Fulkerson is saying here that the idea that you wanted anything in return is totally ridiculous

MR. DRY: Objection, Your Honor

THE WITNESS: Does it say that?

THE COURT: Hold up The objection is sustained. The form of this question, you are asking him what was in her head, which he can't answer

BY MR ASBILL:

Q What does she say?

A Do you want me to read to you what it says?

Q What does she say to you about the investigation?

A She is saying to Mike Bujakowski, is what it looks like, "I swear, it is totally ridiculous Mike called me," I'm assuming Mike Bujakowski, "called me and wanted to know why Star doesn't tell everyone that you give to everyone and write good stuff on you." I'm assuming that's because of the tar and feathering that I was taking

Q Your secretary of what, almost 20 years?

A Yes

Q Thinks that the idea of you doing this is totally ridiculous Apparently that's what she says

MR DRY: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: I don't know --

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Please pull up RM-1958 Do you recognize this document?

A No

Q Dated April 15th. Take a look at it, take a close look at it It is dated April 15th, same year, 2013

A Okay

Q And is it a message to you? Text message?

A To me, and it says Talhia, referring to Talhia Tuck --

MR. DRY: Objection, Your Honor He doesn't recognize this document How is he supposed to get it in the record?

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Take a look at this document and take a look at the attachments to it.

A I've never seen this before

Q See if you see any of the attachment, this Draft 3 attachment

A Sir, the only thing on my screen is one sentence

Q You say you received this text message, did you not, whatever is on it right now? You got it, right?

A I'm just saying to you, I don't recall seeing a text message that says, "Talhia sent Draft 3 of press "

MR. DRY: Objection.

THE COURT: That's the end of of it He doesn't recall

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Do you know who Talhia Tuck is?

A She is our investor relations -- Vice-president of Communications in the Washington, D.C. office

Q And she is a Harvard-trained lawyer that works for Star?

A She is, but she is the Vice-president of Communications

Q VP of communications

A Yes She has no legal business She is a lawyer by training, but she was not hired in that capacity

Q She is hired a Vice-president of Investor Relations, is that what you are saying?

A Yes Vice-president of Investor Relations/Communications.

Q Okay Do you know whether or not she issued a press release from Star about the investigation?

A At some point, probably

Q Do you recall approving a press release from Star about the investigation in response to whatever you call it, the tar and feathering of you all?

A No, that would be Mr Perito's responsibility

Q And you would not approve a public press statement on a matter of this significance?

A I may have an opinion on it, but no, when you go into this area, sir, you are in Mr. Perito's department now Nothing goes out that he doesn't -- you have just gone into Mr Perito's department And you know him, so --

Q And if Mr Perito and Ms Tuck working together issued a press release to the effect that your company never sought or received --

MR. DRY: Objection Can we approach for a second?

(At Bench)

MR. DRY: Where Mr Asbill is going with this, basically he wants to get in a Washington Post quote by Talhia Tuck commenting on the investigation. The problem is, it is not a press release He keeps mischaracterizing it as a press release, and the actual press release that coincides in time with what that text message was saying has nothing to do with the investigation He is mischaracterizing what happened It is inadmissible hearsay to the newspaper article, what Talhia Tuck said

THE COURT: You are just going around in circles and he is not the witness, bottom line

(In Open Court)

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Did you personally take any role in response to the news of the investigation? Did you personally have any role or any consultations with Mr Perito or Ms Tuck or anyone else in your company about what Star's public position about the stories ought to be?

A I don't recall that

Q Never discussed it

A I discussed a lot of things with Mr Perito If this was discussed, this was very serious, but generally, Talhia writes a draft of it, Mr Perito finalizes it, and sometimes I don't see them until after he sent them out

Q Well, would a comment, a formal comment from the company to the press on this issue be something that you would be interested in at all?

A I can't say I wouldn't be interested in it But at this point, you know, everything had come unglued Mr Perito -- you are in legal now As you know, he is a trained prosecutor,

MR. DRY: Objection.

THE COURT: Let's go on to another topic

THE WITNESS: I don't know what to tell you about that It is just not what I do

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q To your knowledge, nobody from Star ever admitted that you had done anything wrong, is that correct, in the press at this time frame?

A I don't recall that press release

Q That's not my question Do you recall anybody from Star saying anything to the press admitting the company did anything wrong?

MR. DRY: Objection

THE COURT: He can answer this

THE WITNESS: I don't recall that

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Now, I believe your testimony, I'll move on to another topic. Your testimony in Court is the only time that my client actually told you he would do something for the company after January, 2011, was when he said he would look into the UVA and the VCU bureaucratic delay?

A Right

Q Okay And that was supposedly between the two of you on a private phone call?

A Right

Q Nobody recorded it, nobody ever heard it?

A Right

Q All right And you do not claim that my client did anything to assist or promote your company after that, correct?

A At what time frame is this?

Q This is in 2012 when the UVA -- you are having problems, you can't get your phone calls returned, whatever

A Right

Q Okay. And from that point forward, you said that, I believe you said that one of the things you wanted is, aside from the Healthcare Leaders event that you have talked about in February, nothing forward after that, but I want to talk to you about the Tobacco Commission. You say you want funding from the Tobacco Commission That's one of the things you wanted; is that right?

A Yes Because the Governor encouraged that, that the studies be funded independently instead of me funding them here in Virginia

Q Okay That's what you say, I know that's what you say, and you don't have any proof of that other than your word; is that correct?

A Other than after that I went to McGuireWoods and hired a lawyer for that

Q And you talked about that before But you never applied, Star never applied to the Tobacco Commission for any funding, did it?

A I don't know the particulars of that We missed -- the idea was they were working with the lawyers. There were several lawyers involved with that, to file with the Commission, and we had missed a cutoff date of that I didn't deal with that

Q Before the cut-off date, after the cut-off date, Star never sent in an application to the Tobacco Commission, to your knowledge

A Not to my knowledge

Q Is that correct?

A Yes

Q Never filed a request for funding with the Tobacco Commission, to your knowledge; is that correct?

A To my knowledge

Q And you say you wanted UVA and VCU to do some clinical research; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And I believe you testified in answer to a question from Mr Dry that you know the Governor controls the medical schools here in Virginia Correct?

A I did say that

Q You did say that

A What I meant was, he approves the budgets for the medical schools So it was my understanding that he had influence there

Q You don't have any real idea how those institutions are governed, do you?

A I don't

Q So the idea, your testimony that "I know he controls the medical schools here in Virginia" is an assumption or maybe an overreach?

A No, it is based upon me hearing from one of the lawyers that the budget is approved by him. That's not something I speculated about

Q That's one of your lawyers, you are saying?

A Our lawyer, one of our lawyers, I heard say that

Q All right You say that no one was returning your calls as of February, 2012; is that right?

A Returning the calls to the doctors at our office in Gloucester, Massachusetts that are responsible for dealing with the medical schools

Q No one is returning Star's calls

A Star's calls Those doctors' calls Not mine personally

Q Are you aware that three Star representatives had a conference call with UVA officials on November 29th, 2011?

A I don't recall that specifically I know they were in communication with them.

Q And that was a discussion about grant applications to the Tobacco Commission where Star people are directly talking to UVA people?

A Great.

Q And Paul Perito and Bob Pokusa, your General Counsel, and Chris Nolen, one of your lobbyists, were on that call?

A Okay

Q Nolen is a lobbyist from McGuireWoods, your law firm?

A He is

MR. DRY: The witness said he didn't know about a specific call

THE COURT: Right He doesn't know about it, and everything else is testimony from you, Mr Asbill So ask another question

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You didn't get any intel back about that phone call?

A I can't tell you that phone call At some point, Dr Wright and them through Paul Perito, Paul is always the person, generally the person that delivers messages to me when things are important, and Paul called me and said that "They are stiff-arming us over at UVA."

Q Okay

A "They are going slow "

Q They are stiff-arming you

A Yes

Q The bottom line is, three months before you say you have a conversation with Ms McDonnell where you are asking "Can you get somebody to return our calls," you have already had the calls and it has gone nowhere, right?

A I don't know where it -- I don't think much is going on.

Q Right

A And it has been, for some reason, it is bogged down in the Administration, is what I later understood

Q It is also bogged down --

A I recall that call, but things have been stalled That's what the people that work for me say

Q It is also bogged down on the Star side because you are not even applying to the Tobacco Commission; isn't that right?

A My understanding was that our doctors were complaining that there was a slowdown there

Q Did you really want clinical studies at a major university? Is that something you really wanted? Yes or no?

A That's what I was -- I needed that I needed those studies

Q What if they failed?

A I would go back to the drawing board.

Q Star is gone

A It is never gone Number one rule of business, sir, is stay in business

Q We will get to that Have you ever told anyone aside from Agents Hagan and Kennedy on your January 23rd, 2013 first interview that Governor McDonnell was your friend? Anyone else in life?

A I may have

Q Photos on your wall, playing golf with the Governor, anything like that?

A I don't have any photos that I can recall other than a Ferrari picture and a Rolex picture And I don't know of any other pictures I have

Q No pictures with you and the Governor at all?

A I don't have any that I can recall

Q No bragging to friends or business colleagues or associates that you are friends with the Governor?

A Clearly, our company, the business friendship, I developed this relationship with the Governor, was important to our company

Q We already talked about Dr Hazel and the meeting with him and we talked, I believe, a little bit about the meeting with Molly Huffstetler You got meetings with those two folks as we discussed previously, correct?

A Yes

Q All right And nothing was coming of it, correct?

A Well, just this is work in progress

Q Right But nothing solid or concrete was coming of it; is that right?

A I can't say that It was working in progress

Q Okay And nonetheless, you kept making loans and continued being generous to my client and his children and his family; isn't that right?

A I wouldn't file that under me being generous

Q That's just business

A It was business

Q Just business Was it business when you asked my client to call your father on his 80th birthday?

A It was very personal for me

Q It was?

A Yes

Q What kind of business was it?

A That was very personal for me because my father likes the Governor, from watching him on television and in the news And so I was at his birthday party and I thought I had enough pull to call Maureen and ask her to have him do that for me

Q Please pull up RM-0559 I would ask you to take a look at this and just see if that's a text message from you to my client on March 10th, 2012

A Okay

Q Do you recognize it as a text message from you to my client?

A I do.

MR. ASBILL: I would ask that that be moved into evidence

MR. DRY: No objection

THE COURT: It will be admitted What's the number on that?

MR. ASBILL: The number on that, Judge, is RM-0559

THE COURT: All right

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Let's publish that and highlight it. This is you to my client, right?

A Yes

Q At your father's birthday party?

A Yes

Q Why don't you read to us what you say to him.

A I'm happy to "You are a wonderful man I am proud to know It has been a highlight in my life You made an old man very happy Anything I can do for your family I will. On way to Florida now Thank you Jonnie "

Q All right You can take that down I take it your dad, is he Albert;,is that his name?

A His name is Albert

Q And he was proud to know that his son from a modest upbringing was now a friend of the Governor of Virginia; isn't that right?

A I don't think it was that I think it just made him feel good that it was the Governor of Virginia

Q But again, it is just all business, right?

A Well, this was a very personal thing for my father, but this cost me, in my mind as I sit here, hundreds of thousands of dollars to be able to even do that

Q So you paid for that gift to your father, too; is that right?

A I wouldn't have been able to have the Governor of Virginia call my father in the evening to somebody in rural Virginia and wish him happy birthday

Q Just because you were close friends with the Governor and his family, you don't think he would have done that?

A I had a business relationship, and I don't believe I would have been close friends with the Governor's family other than this business relationship if not for all of this money

Q Okay That's your belief?

A That is what I believe sitting right here

Q I want to talk to you about your immunity agreement and some issues relating to your immunity agreements

A Okay

Q You testified you signed two? Correct?

A I did

Q And the first one of those was in July of 2013, correct?

A Yes

MR. ASBILL: Okay Would you pull up that one, please, Victoria, GX 523

BY MR ASBILL:

Q All right And I want you to go down -- this is in evidence I want you to go down to the fifth line

A Could you highlight where the fifth line is?

Q Yeah.

MR. ASBILL: That one, right That section Okay And would you highlight three lines above that too, please

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Okay Basically, twice in the first paragraph in this immunity agreement it talks about seeking your cooperation, essentially, regarding potential violations of criminal law, right?

A Yes

Q It doesn't say actual It says potential; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay You read that document carefully and you signed it; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay And in that agreement, you are not conceding that you were involved in any public corruption or violations of federal public corruption laws; am I

correct?

A I understand that what I was doing was wrong What I'm trying to understand here is, to answer the question, regarding what you described as -- it says here "potential violations of criminal law "

I don't know the law, but I just know what I was doing was wrong.

Q Well, then those would be actual violations rather than potential violations, right?

A No I'm just telling you, I'm not a lawyer I don't know the laws --

Q Okay

A -- that are being referred to here under this Hobbs, under color of official right extortion by government officials I'm saying I don't know what all of that is No one has ever read all that to me But what I'm saying is I thought what I had done was wrong

Q But you didn't -- you weren't conceding --

A But I didn't know the laws

Q Right But you weren't conceding in this letter that it was necessarily illegal; is that right? That's my question to you

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor He didn't write the letter

MR ASBILL: He signed it

THE COURT: If he can answer the question, go ahead

A I don't know the laws of whether -- that's why I'm trying to help you I knew what I was doing was wrong It couldn't be right for me to be paying all this money

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Okay

A Okay So what I'm trying to say is these sections and this Hobbs Act, no one, through the course of this, has ever read me these laws of these definitions of all of that

Q Let me see if I understand this You, on your own, or anyone else you work with --

A Yes

Q -- whether it's the government or your lawyers --

A Yes

Q -- nobody ever read you the laws that you were getting immunity from?

A No The lawyers have explained to me --

Q Okay

A -- what it means But I'm just saying, I don't know all of this area I'm relying on the lawyers for this

Q Okay

A I'm just saying I know what I did was wrong, but I don't know all of that

Q And in this immunity agreement, you are not just protected from your own words being used against you, correct? Whatever you say to the government in your debriefings, that can't be used against you, right?
A My understanding of the immunity agreement is that in exchange for cooperating on this issue --
Q Yes
A -- and telling the truth about it --
Q Yes
A -- then we're going to give you immunity from exposure here
Q Okay
A That's what I understand
Q And so you get immunity from exposure even if the government could make a case against you through totally independent witnesses? No reference to what you say No leads you give them If they had some other witness who could come in and say you did something wrong, you still get a pass from the government, right?
A It's my understanding that if I don't tell the truth or didn't truth -- tell the truth about any aspect of this case, it's off the table, null and void
Q That's one aspect of it The other aspect I'm asking you about --
A Okay

Q -- is your understanding you cannot get prosecuted -- it's not from a truth issue

A Okay

Q You can't get prosecuted with any evidence the government might have, whether it comes from you or whether it comes from independent sources Isn't that your understanding of this agreement; transactional immunity?

A In regards to the first one?

Q Yes

A In the -- in these corruption charges --

Q Right

A -- that are referenced here?

Q Right

A Again, it's -- I don't want to go back to that, but my understanding of all of this is is if I cooperate and I'm truthful and they believe I'm truthful, then I am immune from the consequences of these laws

Q Okay

A That's -- that's my understanding

Q You're immune no matter where the evidence that could be used against you comes from, right?

A I don't know -- I don't know that part right there

Q Okay

A I'm just -- I'm trying to let you know what I understand and what I'm familiar with

Q This was an important agreement for you?

A It's a very important agreement And like I said, it's my understanding that I have immunity as long as I tell the truth about what happened for the potential corruption violations as they rely -- relate to these laws right here in the letter That's my understanding

Q All right

MR ASBILL: If you can take that down

BY MR. ASBILL:

Q Do you have any understanding of how unusual it is in federal criminal prosecution --

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor

BY MR ASBILL:

Q -- to get transactional immunity?

MR DRY: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q In your deal, if you cooperate, if the government thinks you're truthful, you have no problems, correct?

A That's correct That's my understanding

Q And I believe you testified that you didn't want anything from the government because you already had your deal; is that right?

A Are you talking about the first one or the second one?

Q Both

As we speak --

A No

Q -- you want nothing from the government, right?

A No Let me answer the question

Q Sure

A What I wanted from the government is I did not want to be prosecuted for telling the truth and telling what happened with my interaction with the Governor and his wife I didn't want -- I didn't want anything from that

Q I thought you just said you didn't want to be prosecuted?

A I didn't want to be prosecuted for anything to come out of that

Q Okay

A Of course

Q All right And going forward, you had a second deal, right?

A Yes

Q You had a deal that was broader?

A Yes

Q Than the first deal?

A Yes

Q And in the second deal, you not only got immunity from public corruption charges, or potential public corruption charges --

A Yes

Q -- right?

You got immunity from three years' worth of potential securities crimes between 2009 and 2012 --

A Yes

Q -- right?

And you got immunity from anything relating to the Starwood and other trusts that might be criminal; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And so that could include tax violations with respect to the trusts, or other types of criminal activity relating to those trusts, right?

A I don't know if it included taxes or not

Q Well, anything relating to Starwood and other trusts --

A Yes

Q -- that's the language, isn't it?

A I understand, from that second agreement that I have, that immunity covers me for transactional on those areas

Q Of those three areas?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, what other trusts are they talking about in that second letter, aside from the Starwood Trust?

A None that I know of

Q Although the language in the agreement --

MR ASBILL: Pull up the second agreement, please

A Unless it's the individual trusts for children There's a Starwood Trust and then there are individual ones

BY MR ASBILL:

Q There are individual trusts for the children too?

A Yes

Q Do you have any other trusts that are encompassed by your deal?

A Not that I'm aware of

Q I mean, do you have any other trusts? You'd be aware of that, wouldn't you?

A That's what I'm saying Not that I'm aware of

Q So it's Starwood and other individual trusts for the children?

A Yes

Q Okay Now, in your second agreement, that's the latest -- that's the latest agreement you've got; is that correct?

A Yes

Q All right Now, is it your understanding that you are also immunized, given a pass, for any kind of obstruction or lies to government agents that you may have engaged in before the deals were signed?

A You know, I'm just not that familiar with that part here.

Q Okay Let me try it this way

A Okay That's -- I didn't understand it very well

Q You've had how many, six interviews with the agents and the prosecutors; is that right? Roughly six?

A Maybe more

Q Okay Six, eight Let's start with the first one And you claim that on at least that occasion you lied to them about the Governor?

A I did lie about it

Q Okay So my question is in any of the interviews that you had with the government, if you ever lied or ever misled them, do you know that that is an independent crime, to mislead federal agents who are interviewing you on purpose?

A I think if I did that and they felt like I did that, that's a problem

Q That would be a problem That would be a false statement to --

A It would just be a problem and they could break these agreements

Q Well, they could prosecute you too; is that correct?

A Probably so

Q Okay So my question to you is even though there is nothing in your deal that specifically -- your latest deal --

A Yeah

Q -- that specifically references false statements to the government or obstruction, you think you are immunized from all of those kinds of issues if you ever made a false statement to them before the deal occurred; is that right?

A I can say this That's complicated, what you just described

Q Well, how about yes or no?

A My response would be if I don't tell the truth to any of these questions that I'm asked, then the agreement could be torn up

Q All right Let me back up I'm sorry Did you want --

THE COURT: No, I didn't say anything

MR ASBILL: Oh

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Let's back up I want two distinct time periods

A Okay

Q Going up till the second deal is signed

A Yes

Q That's what I'm talking about Not after it Not what's happening right now

A Okay Prior to it

Q Right So prior to your second deal, that's what -- when was your second deal?

A The second one was back a few months ago

Q Okay Shortly before this trial?

A Yes

Q Okay So from January -- March '13 -- excuse me, January 2013, up until a little bit before this trial, during that time frame -- that's what I want you to focus on --

A Okay

Q -- if you ever lied to the agents or the prosecutors in any of your meetings and you could be accused, if you did lie to them, of false statements -- making false statements to them or obstructing --

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor

BY MR ASBILL:

Q -- their investigation --

MR ASBILL: Can I finish my question?

THE COURT: What's your --

MR DRY: The agreement explicitly has a provision on that If he wants to ask Mr Williams about that provision, he's free to do so

MR ASBILL: I'm asking him about his memory of it

THE COURT: We're going to -- we've gone around the Roseberry Bush here. Let me ask the question directly

BY THE COURT:

Q Mr Williams, you have acknowledged that in the first interview you were untruthful with the agents, and if that's true, there's the potential that that could have been an independent crime.

A Yes

Q Right?

A Yes

Q Is it your understanding, as you sit there now, that whatever deals you have covers that; that they can't prosecute you for telling a lie initially?

A Yes

THE COURT: Okay All right

BY MR ASBILL:

Q And if at any time during that interview or any other interview you ever said anything that was untrue, is it your understanding that you could not be prosecuted either?

A You've lumped a lot together

Q I'm just talking about all your pretrial statements to the government

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor That's not what the agreement says

THE COURT: He's answered the question sufficiently Let's move on

MR ASBILL: I'm asking for his understanding, though, Judge

THE COURT: No Let's move on to something else

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Now, in terms of deciding whether or not -- let me back up for a second

Your understanding, as I get it, is that if you lie in court, then the government can break the deal?

A Yes

Q And if they broke the deal --

A If I lie at any time Whether it was in court or any time during any of this --

Q All right

A -- they could break the deal

Q And if they broke the deal, in your view, that would be catastrophic; is that right?

A It would be a problem

Q Is that fair?

A It would be a problem

Q It would be a problem

A It could be a problem

Q And if they think you have lied and you don't, who wins?

A I think my understanding of it is this agreement from the government is offered to me to tell the truth, and they are the ones gathering all the facts and they are determining whether I'm telling the truth or not

Q So it's not your independent belief that you have told the truth that controls; isn't that right?

A No It is that too I think the truth is the truth no matter how many different ways it could be trying to color it

Q Well, if you say it's the truth and they say it isn't the truth, can you still get prosecuted?

A You know what I have to tell you, I'm operating under that I'm telling the truth, period Okay

Q And I'm asking you if there's a disagreement, does your belief control or not?

A I'm -- I don't -- I'm not going to have to have a disagreement because I'm not going to not tell the truth here This is a very serious situation Okay I'm telling the truth, period

Q I hear that's what you say

A Okay

Q Now, let me ask you if you've got any problems, as we speak, with any other government agencies? Any other federal government agencies?

A Me personally --

Q Yeah, you personally --

A -- or the company?

Q -- and Star

A Well, you -- Star has an issue right now where they have been working with the Food & Drug Administration over there Anatabloc product, over the claims

Q And you recall that the FDA also contacted you personally about that; is that correct?

A Well, I'm the CEO They sent me a letter I'm the person that they would send it to, and they sent me a warning letter at the end of December about claims in the way it was being marketed

Q About the way Star was marketing Anatabloc?

A Yes About the claims

Q All right

A A warning letter

Q A warning letter And the essence of that was that the FDA thought that Star was marketing Anatabloc as a drug, not a supplement; is that correct?

A They thought that some of the claims were drug -- could be construed as drug claims

Q And if they were drug claims, then your product had not been approved by the Food & Drug Administration That would be illegal, correct?

A Well, we just stopped -- whatever they directed our attention to that they were uncomfortable with, we stopped it And the company has, since then, filed the application with them and is working with the Food & Drug Administration to have it approved as a dietary supplement

And at the same time, we have a drug application now over at the Drug Division to do clinical trials on this for a drug at the same time

Q That issue, or what the FDA's concerns are, is still ongoing, still pending, still up in the air; is that correct?

A They are working with the FDA to try to -- like I just described, when that happened -- you know, that happens many times, and what we did to try to correct it was you contact the FDA and you work with them First of all, we stopped whatever they were uncomfortable with, and then we prepare an application, which is not required, but we -- we went ahead and prepared -- the company prepared an application to have it as an approved vitamin or, slash, dietary supplement

Q Okay

A But at the same time, over at the Drug Division, we filed to begin prescription drug clinical trials for a variety of diseases

Q Yeah, you got a lengthy letter from them -- I'm not going to go into it -- right?

A I just said, sir, we received a warning letter from them

Q Okay. And the warning letter was a lengthy document, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And the essence -- the essence of their concern was that your company had made --

MR DRY: Objection Asked and answered

MR ASBILL: I don't think it's been answered yet specifically

THE COURT: He -- he spent a considerable amount of time telling us what it was If you've got something else specific out of it that you want to highlight, go ahead

MR ASBILL: Yeah

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Do your websites, or did your websites, promote Anatabloc for conditions that caused a product to be considered a drug?

A We didn't think so, but they did

Q They did Did your website say that Anatabloc was intended for use in the cure, mitigation, treatment or prevention of disease?

A I don't believe so.

Q That isn't what your website said?

A No, not to cure diseases Not -- not the dietary supplement version

Q Well, this is still up in the air and pending, as you've described, right?

A I'm just saying, I don't know of anything where we would say anything that it cures a disease A prescription drug is approved on safety and efficacy

Q Would it refresh your recollection about exactly what the FDA was concerned about if I showed you the letter?

A If you would like

Q All right

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor We've gone over far enough with the FDA thing He hasn't -- the witness said he thinks there was a problem with the websites There's been no linking that Mr Williams is responsible for any of this

THE COURT: Yeah, I don't know how much of these particulars are really very helpful I'll let you --

MR ASBILL: I'll finish up quickly, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right

BY MR ASBILL:

Q I'm just asking you to look at the highlighted paragraph

A Okay

Q Is that a letter that you received from the FDA?

A Yes

Q All right And what do they say their concern is, generally?

A Here's what they are saying their concern is is there are therapeutic claims on these websites that establish that this product is a drug because it's intended for use in the cure, mitigation, treatment or prevention of disease

We disagree with that

Q Okay In this battle, who wins? Just because you disagree, you win?

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor Relevance

THE COURT: Sustained It doesn't matter who wins

BY MR ASBILL:

Q All right Let me ask you about another topic

A Okay

Q How many civil suits are there now pending against you and Star for securities violations, or alleged securities violations?

A I'm not sure I'm not sure They may have -- most all of that may have been resolved I'm not sure

Q Settled?

A It's possible

Q You don't know?

A There were -- there's been -- you know, I'm not an officer or director in the company, but I understand that all of that is being settled or has been settled, or there's discussions to -- that these issues have all been settled or are about to be settled

Q You don't know that there are several -- there are six cases pending against you and Star where your name is --

A And those are the ones I'm just describing to you I believe that they recently are in discussions to be settled or have been settled right here

Q To be settled or have been settled?

A Or they are in the process -- it's in -- it's -- I don't know the particulars of it, but I understand that it's in mediation and it may have been -- it may have been resolved in the past few days

Q Those were suits in various parts of the country that were filed against you and Star?

A As a result of this, you mean?

Q No, not necessarily as a result of this alone

A Yeah

Q Just as a result of allegations by shareholders that Star and some of its officers and directors --

A Yes

Q -- were involved in securities fraud?

A I'm not sure of all the allegations in there, but I believe -- it's my understanding that it was brought about primarily because of this

Q No other -- no other type of fraudulent activity?

A It was brought about because of this, and someone wrote a negative report on the company out of Boston, Massachusetts, claiming that, you know, one of the press releases misrepresented a -- a consultant versus an institution -- a doctor's role as a consultant versus the institution And it's my understanding that that's what caused this

Q And you don't recall specifically the details of the allegations in the complaints that were filed; is that correct?

MR DRY: Your Honor, it's asked and answered And what is the relevance of all this?

THE COURT: He can answer that question

You don't recall?

THE WITNESS: Mr Perito -- Mr Perito is a very skilled lawyer, Your Honor, and he keeps me up to speed on what's going on

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Do you recall that two of the suits that were filed were filed in the Eastern District of Virginia; one here in Richmond, and one in Alexandria?

A That's -- that may be the case

Q Okay Do you recall that, in connection with those suits, they were filed and they were pending before this trial started? Correct?

A Before the trial?

Q Before this trial started, there were two civil securities fraud cases pending against Star and you personally?

A After -- you mean -- before the trial started --

Q Before the trial

A -- or after all of this came out in the press?

Q Before the trial Before the --

A Yes

Q -- trial

A Yes

Q There were two cases pending?

A Yes

Q Okay

A And I just said that I think that that is about to be resolved or may have been settled, all of that

Q And do you recall that those cases were stayed, you know, pushed pause, on those cases because the government intervened in those cases?

A I do

Q And you were in favor of that intervention and stopping those suits in their tracks Is that fair?

A The suits are going to be what the suits are going to be

Q Did you want the suits stayed or stopped, in the short term at least?

A Not from a concern of the contents of the suit Just from the concern of how many more lawyers and how many more meetings do I deal with right here over this

Q And how much more money Star has to spend on those lawyers and those meetings?

A It's been expensive

Q Were you concerned that if the suits progressed, that you might be deposed under oath?

A No

Q Did you know that that is likely what would happen if you were a defendant in the lawsuit?

A Yes, but I wasn't worried about it I just said to you it was the combination of what was going on here compared to all of that I didn't think those suits would go anywhere

Q Did you know that -- that discovery in civil suits like that is very expensive, the discovery process?

A The insurance would handle that

Q And if the insurance ultimately concluded that there was fraud, Star or you personally would be on the line for whatever the insurance company advanced, correct?

A Then I would handle that

Q And you would handle that Okay There is -- you know, was it advantageous to you personally and to your business to have those suits stayed?

A From my perspective, it was just -- not from the business part of it My perspective it was is, you know, this has been quite an ordeal If -- if you're in my shoes and you've been dealing with all of this, this has been quite an ordeal, and to pile on another one, nuisance ones, it's just a lot

Q Well, I mean, if the suits are not yet settled, you can't tell whether it's a nuisance suit or not, can you?

A My view is they were nuisance suits because that's what the lawyers have expressed to me

Q Right And the plaintiffs may not agree with you, correct?

MR DRY: Objection It's calling for speculation

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q You said, I believe, way back at the beginning of your testimony, that the first rule of business is to stay in business?

A I did And I still say that

Q Right Okay And would you agree with me that the second rule of business is to stay out of jail?

MR DRY: Objection Argumentative

THE COURT: No He can answer

A I don't think any businessman wants to go to jail

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Well, I mean, these days in public companies, that's a --

A Yeah

Q -- that's a concern, that's a real concern, is it not?

A You know what I just don't think businessmen generally think about going to jail I think they think about what you just said is number one; staying in business

Q But you can't operate your business from a prison, can you?

A No

Q Now, you say right now that you are -- you are not really in the CEO position You've got some side position?

A I'm a dollar-a-month employee

Q Dollar-a-month employee But you're protecting your interest in your Star stock, are you not?

A I am

Q So you are, in essence, being retained by Star to be a litigation consultant and to be a witness for them in all the litigation or other problems that you all have got?

A I was a dollar-a-month employee way before this started I think I'm there just to help them with whatever they need, whether it's capital raising or -- or whatever I've done in the past, whether it has to do with anatabine or any of the business relationships that have been developed over the years I think that's -- you know, I'm just there to help them as long as they need me The day they ask me to go home and don't want to pay me a dollar a month, I'm okay with that

Q Because you do think that there's some financial value to your being still with Star?

A As long as they do I don't run the company But I have -- I have an agreement with them that I would stay through the end of this year at a dollar a month and help them

Q Have you ever tried to, in your own mind, come up with some dollar figure about the potential value of all the benefits that you've received from the government?

A From the government?

Q Yeah

A Been a big expense I haven't thought about the financial benefits

Q Well, you haven't thought about not getting prosecuted, not possibly going to jail?

A I haven't spent --

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Objection sustained

Mr Asbill, are you about finished?

MR ASBILL: About another five minutes

THE COURT: All right

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Let me talk to you about your business relationship with my client's son, Bobby McDonnell

A Yes

Q That was a business relationship too, wasn't it?

A I like Bobby But this family and what I was doing, I was there for business But I think a lot of Bobby McDonnell

Q Okay

A In the brief times I've been around him

Q Open invitation to play golf, right?

A Yes

Q Played golf with him at The Homestead?

A Yes

Q Sent him some golf equipment unsolicited?

A Yes

Q Called, texted over a hundred times?

A I don't recall it being a hundred times, but --

Q Would you quarrel with that number?

A Not if you have it on your screen I like Bobby McDonnell I think he's a nice young man

Q Talked to him about college life, first year college life, that sort of thing?

A No, I don't recall ever having a conversation like that

Q Did you know that he had an argument with his father about whether or not he could keep the gifts that you gave him?

A I did not know that

Q All right And --

A His mother thought it was a good idea

Q So you talked to her about it, right?

A I did

Q So you knew there was an argument within the family?

A No, I didn't -- I've never known they have ever had an argument

Q Did you know that Bobby admired you and thought you were a mentor?

A That's good

Q Did you know that?

A No

Q Would that surprise you that he thought that?

A It wouldn't surprise me that Bobby McDonnell didn't have an unfavorable impression towards me because I like Bobby McDonnell

Q Okay

A I just naturally like him

Q I'm going to wrap up in a few minutes, but I just want to ask some concluding questions to you. Just to make sure I'm clear and we're clear on a few things, never got any state contracts, right?

A No

Q No state grants?

MR DRY: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sustained We just -- we don't need a summary

BY MR ASBILL:

Q Did you get any money from the Virginia Economic Development Partnership Fund?

A No

Q And you know that that's an organization where the

Governor appoints all the board members and they have got millions of dollars to give away to companies, correct?

A I don't think I ever asked for it

Q You know that is what the VEDP is all about, right?

A I'm not familiar with it

Q You never applied --

A In general --

THE COURT: He's not familiar with it

A In general, I understand it, but --

THE COURT: He never applied Let's ask another question

A -- I'm not familiar with --

THE COURT: Mr Williams, there's no question before you

THE WITNESS: Okay

BY MR ASBILL:

Q No visits by the government or photo ops at Star headquarters?

A No Visits by the government or photos ops?

Q -- ops at Star headquarters?

A At the headquarters itself?

Q Right Right

A No

Q No executive commissions, boards, anything like that at all, right?

A What do you mean by that?

Q That you got on the executive commissions or any kind of boards of the State?

A No

Q And no money, period?

A "No money " What do you mean?

Q No money from the State to you?

A No You mean no checks --

Q To Star

A -- written to Star?

Q Right

A No

Q No Okay Okay Did you have any idea about whether or not my client's marriage was complicated or difficult in any way?

A No idea

Q You said what you did was wrong, correct?

A I did

Q And what you did that was wrong was misjudge that man's --

MR DRY: Objection

BY MR ASBILL:

Q -- integrity --

MR DRY: -- closing argument

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR ASBILL:

Q And what he did that was wrong was misjudge yours?

MR DRY: Object --

THE COURT: Sustained

MR ASBILL: No more questions

THE COURT: All right Before we do the redirect, we're going to take 15 minutes We'll see you all in a few minutes Follow the marshal

(Recess taken from 11:37 a m until 11:51 a m)

THE COURT: Let's bring in the jury, please

(The jury entered the courtroom)

THE COURT: All right Mr Dry, go ahead

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, during cross-examination, Mr Burck and Asbill spent a lot of time asking you about what exact statements you made to the government on exact dates during your interviews

Do you recall those lines of questioning?

A Yes

Q And they showed you a lot of the reports of interviews of the agents and tried to refresh your recollection, correct?

A Yes

Q Had you ever seen those reports before your testimony?

A No

Q The government never provided those to you, did they?

A No

Q Did you write those reports?

A No

Q When you were interviewed, were you taking notes during all of your interviews?

A No

Q Now, I think Mr Asbill said that you were interviewed about six times My count is ten Does that surprise you that you were interviewed about ten times?

A No

Q Okay Can you list all of the dates of each of those interviews for me?

A No

Q Do you recall exactly what topics were discussed on each of those dates?

A No

Q Now, let's talk about the interviews themselves Sometimes during those interviews, did you go back over topics that you had already discussed with the government previously?

A Yes

Q And were you asked additional questions about things you had brought up in prior -- prior interviews?

A Yes

Q Now, sometimes during the interviews, did prosecutors and agents ask you about new topics that you never discussed before?

A Yes

Q Now, on cross-examination, you said that you did not recall saying something on a specific date When you said that you don't recall that, are you saying that you just couldn't recall saying anything like that or just anything like that on a specific date?

A On that date

Q When you're being interviewed by prosecutors and agents, are you focused on what you said in the prior interviews or are you focusing on what's being asked of you then?

A I'm trying to just answer their questions

Q Apart from that first interview with Agents Hagan and Kennedy down in Flor[illegible] have you been truthful?

A I have

Q Now, Mr Asbill spent some time talking about the Rolex photo

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 444, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, when he was asking you about it, you said that you were scared, but you didn't explain why you were scared when you received the photo Why was that?

A If this shows up on the nightly news, I have a problem We have a problem

Q What does that mean, you have a problem?

A I had no business paying for things like that to get -- to do business here

Q I'm sorry I just --

A I just had no business buying -- when I was asked to buy that, I should not have purchased it, but it was -- I didn't want anyone to know that we had a relationship -- the business relationship involved buying a Rolex

Q Now, you got lots of questions from Mr Asbill about this exchange of photos He made a big deal out of the fact that there's no data on Exhibit 444, right?

A Yes

Q And that that text message didn't show up on your phone records Do you remember him --

A I do

Q All right Well, let's look at Government's Exhibit 445, please

MR DRY: Can we blow that up?

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, this is the text message that you sent to the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q What's the time listed there?

A 7:46

Q P m ?

A Yes

MR DRY: I hate to ask you guys to do this, can you all pull up -- I think it's RM-0104, and it's page 10032

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, that's Christmas Eve that you're sending that, right, sir, at 7:46:26 p m ?

A Yes, sir

MR DRY: I think it's 104, RM- -- no, no RM-0104 Okay And can we go to the page, Christmas Eve at 7:46? Can you blow up that part that would have the time that that text message was shown, that Mr Williams sent that text message from the Governor at 7:46 p m ?

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, do you see in your phone records a text message that was sent at 7:46 p m ?

A No

Q And, sir, do you have an iPhone?

A I do

Q And was that your primary cell phone number over the last years?

A Yes

Q And do you know whether the Governor had an iPhone?

A I think he does

Q And did you know whether Ms McDonnell had an iPhone?

A I believe so

Q And do you know that iPhone messages often don't show up?

MR BURCK: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Overruled

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you know that iPhone messages don't show up in your phone records, do they?

A I don't know much about that

Q Okay Well, we'll go on

You spent a lot of time with Mr Burck talking about Mary-Shea Sutherland yesterday Do you remember those questions generally?

A Generally

Q I know There were a lot of them

MR DRY: Can we show Government's Exhibits 186, please

BY MR DRY:

Q And you've previously testified about a meeting with Ms Huffstetler, right?

A Yes

Q And that was on August 1st Where was your meeting with Ms Huffstetler?

A In Maureen McDonnell's private office downstairs in the Governor's Mansion

Q Okay And was Ms McDonnell there?

A Yes

Q And you also testified about meeting with Dr Clore on that day Do you remember that testimony?

A Yes

Q Where was that meeting at?

A In the same office

Q I'm sorry The same office?

A Same office

Q And whose office was --

A Ms McDonnell's, downstairs in the Governor's Mansion

Q Okay The log says to see Mary-Shea Sutherland, but as you sit there today, you know that Ms McDonnell and you met with Dr Clore in her office?

A Yes

Q Did Mary-Shea Sutherland ever ask you for cash or loans?

A No

Q Did she ask you to buy a Rolex?

A No

Q How about vacations?

A No

Q Did Mary-Shea Sutherland ever ask to use your Ferrari?

A No

Q How about cars for family members? Did she say, "Hey, can you buy my sister a car"?

A No

Q Now, you did buy her something, though? You bought her that dress, right, during that shopping spree for Ms McDonnell?

A I did

Q Did she ask you for that?

A No

Q How did that come about?

A In the dress department, in the department that we were in Bergdorf Goodman, they don't -- they don't have a comfortable place for you to sit And so there were like these little ottomans, and we were sitting on these little ottomans for a long period of time And so I was just sitting there with Mary-Shea, and it was kind of awkward just sitting there with these -- the dresses back and forth going on

And so I'm just sitting there and it's kind of like Ms McDonnell is having, you know, a great time trying these dresses on and everything, and Mary-Shea is just sitting here And I said, "Mary-Shea, you should go ahead and just try" -- "try a dress on "

Q Okay So that was your idea?

A It was my idea That one was

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 101, please

BY MR DRY:

Q You were shown this e-mail on cross -- all of these have been admitted Government's Exhibit 101, by the way

Do you remember being shown this?

A Yes

Q Okay And what's the date on that e-mail?

A April the 15th, 2011

Q And in the body of this -- I think you were read this -- "Mary-Shea and I had a wonderful dinner brainstorming about your launch event "

Do you remember being asked about that, generally? I'm not --

A Yes

Q Now, specifically, though, do you remember Mr Burck saying, "Did Mary-Shea Sutherland talk to you during the meeting or the shopping trip in New York about helping your" -- "you launch your product at the Mansion?" I mean, do you remember that specific question as you sit there today?

A She didn't do that

Q Okay Well, let's talk about that a little bit And first of all, have we spoken since you testified on direct that very first day? I think it was Wednesday Have we spoken?

A No, sir

Q Okay So before you went to New York, had you been planning to do some kind of launch, or thinking about doing some kind of launch, for your new product, Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q Now, before you went to the Roskamp meeting on June 1st of 2011, what kind of event are you thinking about having?

A Normal one at a hotel, at a banquet facility A gathering to invite doctors and a lunch

Q And, in fact, in February of 2011, you had an event like that for CigRx?

A We did Very similar to that

Q And where was that at?

A At The Jefferson Hotel at one of the banquet facilities

Q Okay So back in April of 2011 when you're discussing -- well, first of all, how long did this conversation with Mr Abel occur? You said that he was trying to sell you something --

A Just a couple of minutes He was trying to get the business of doing this

Q And in your discussions with Mary-Shea Sutherland and Mr Abel -- well, do you even remember Mary-Shea participating in that discussion?

A She may have been standing there

Q Okay Does the idea of the launch of Anatabloc at the Mansion, is that ever discussed in that meeting?

A No

Q Okay Well, when is the first time this idea of launching the product from the Mansion ever take place?

A At Roskamp Institute

Q Okay And whose idea was that? Who brought that up?

A Maureen McDonnell, while she was standing in front of everyone

Q And before that Roskamp event, had you had any discussions with Mary-Shea Sutherland about launching the product from the Mansion?

A No

Q Now, you were asked a series of questions about discussions with Ms Sutherland about the idea of her working for Star or you, right?

A Yes Yes

Q All right You remember, generally, those? In those discussions, did she make it clear to you that she was leaving government employment?

A No matter what

Q No matter what?

A No matter what

Q No matter whether she got a job with you or not, she's out?

A No matter what, with Jerry Kilgore and I at The Berkley Hotel at lunch

Q And what was -- what was the reason that she was leaving?

MR BURCK: Objection, Your Honor

BY MR DRY:

Q That she expressed to you?

THE COURT: The second question is okay

A What was the second question?

BY MR DRY:

Q What did she say to you was the reason she was leaving?

A She said she's tired of the way she's treated and she didn't -- it was embarrassing for her that Maureen McDonnell hits everyone up for everything

Q What was her demeanor during this?

A Well, when she said it makes -- with Jerry Kilgore and I sitting there, when she said, "It makes me sick the thought of coming to work every day," Jerry and I looked at each other like we -- we understood what she had just said It was -- it was unpleasant It was unpleasant for Jerry and I to sit there

Q And when she's saying this, is she upset? What's her demeanor?

A She's upset She's emotional about it

Q Now, I think that you were asked a question, you started to talk about what your thoughts of Mary-Shea Sutherland was, but I don't think you got to finish Just tell everybody here, what did you think of Mary-Shea Sutherland?

A Mary-Shea --

MR BURCK: Objection Relevance

THE COURT: Overruled

A Mary-Shea Sutherland is very professional She's a wonderful, wonderful person, from my perspective, and I would have liked for her to be at our company

BY MR DRY:

Q Okay

A I would like -- I liked Mary-Shea

Q You said that you -- you would like her -- for her to be at your company But you didn't hire her?

A No

Q All right And, in fact, you said that it would have been awkward if you had hired her?

A I couldn't hire her while she was working there at the government or -- I couldn't do anything like that

Q Okay Well, why? Why couldn't you hire her? You like her

A I like her, but, you know, it's going to foul up the relationship It's going to foul up the relationship with the business of all I've been working on during this time

Q Foul it up how?

A Well, I wouldn't want to take someone from there

Q What were you worried was going to happen?

A Maybe the McDonnells would be upset about it

Q Okay But you -- despite the fact that you like Mary-Shea and you'd be interested in hiring her, you go to Ms McDonnell and tell her that -- I think you testified you told her that you -- Mary-Shea was looking for a job?

A Yes

Q Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Why did you tell Ms McDonnell that Mary-Shea is looking for another job?

A Mr Perito

Q What does that mean?

A Paul Perito and I had discussed Mary-Shea coming to work And I said, "Paul, Mary-Shea has contacted -- "Mary-Shea wants to come to work for us And he said, "We can't do that "

And so -- and then he said, "You need to let Ms McDonnell know that she's thinking about leaving or it's going to be a poor reflection us "

Q Okay So what were you worried would happen if -- if Ms McDonnell found out that Mary-Shea had been talking to you about the possibility of her being hired from somebody other than you?

A From being hired other than us?

Q If she learned that from someone other than you, what were you worried was going to happen?

A That could foul up the relationship Because it was my understanding that she was talking to other people

Q Okay And let's talk about Mr Perito for a second Did you ever -- well, did you tell Mr Perito, before you were interviewed by law enforcement, that you had been loaning money to the McDonnells?

A No

Q Did you tell him you bought him a Rolex?

A No

Q Did you tell him that you -- you were doing this to further Star's business?

A No

Q Other than your secretary, does anybody at Star know what you're doing?

A No

Q As it pertains to the 50,000, the 50,000, the 20,000, the Ferrari ride, the shopping spree, nobody knows?

A No one knows

Q Okay In your mind, what's more important, your relationship with Mary-Shea Sutherland and how much you like Mary-Shea Sutherland or your relationship with the McDonnells?

A The McDonnells

Q Who could do more for you?

A The McDonnells That's not even close

Q Now, Mary-Shea Sutherland, she leaves -- I think you testified you knew she left in the fall of 2011?

A Yeah

Q You didn't know a specific date?

A Right

Q Was Ms Sutherland even employed when you're being recognized as a healthcare leader in February of '12?

A No

MR BURCK: Your Honor, asked and answered

A Not that I know of

THE COURT: No He can answer Go ahead

A Not that I know of.

BY MR DRY:

Q Was she employed at the Governor's Mansion when you gave the Governor another $50,000?

A No

Q Was she employed at the Mansion when the Governor asked you for another $20,000?

A No

Q Now, Mr Burck, he spoke a little bit about comparing a Rolex to the Cognac Do you remember that?

A I do

Q You got upset, I think

A No I was confused about it --

Q All right

A -- I think I probably didn't understand the analogy

Q Okay Well, let's talk about that a little bit

A Okay

Q I think you said -- Mr Burck reminded you that you testified that buying the Rolex made you uncomfortable?

A It did

Q And then he asked you about, well, were you uncomfortable buying the Cognac in December of 2009 Do you remember him asking you that?

A Yes

Q And you said I'm not uncomfortable about the Cognac?

A Right

Q But as you sit there today, is that still your testimony, you're not uncomfortable about the Cognac?

A Right Everyone is sharing that

Q Now, when Mr Burck compared the Cognac to the Rolex, you said it was a, quote, outrageous comparison, I believe You do you remember that, using the word "outrageous"?

A I remember saying that word

Q Okay But he didn't let you explain why you were uncomfortable about the Rolex

Now, I want you to explain, when you're thinking about buying that Rolex, when Ms McDonnell -- you're in the meeting, it's August 1st -- she's saying -- and you've talked about this repeatedly -- "I'd like you to buy the Rolex for the Governor" --

A Right Right

Q -- why are you uncomfortable?

MR BURCK: Objection, Your Honor This is a repeat of direct

THE COURT: Overruled

BY MR DRY:

Q Why are you uncomfortable?

A I don't want anyone to know about it

Q You don't want anybody to know about what?

A I don't want anyone to know that I'm buying this watch that's going to the Governor

Q Okay And were you worried that somebody would find out?

A I was worried if -- I was worried not only that part, but I was worried if -- what I was really worried about is if someone -- you know, if it came out that the Rolex, the loans, all of these things, why was I doing all of these things, then the Rolex, in particular, was -- the Rolex was a hard thing to hide It was just -- that's a difficult one

Q Mr Burck asked you, quote, Isn't it true that Maureen McDonnell actually said to you you should actually return the Rolex because it was too much and her husband would feel uncomfortable with it

Do you remember being asked that?

A No

Q Okay

MR DRY: Can we bring up page 1016 of the transcript?

MR STARNES: We do not have 1016

MR DRY: It's okay I can do it a different way

BY MR DRY:

Q Let's just bottom-line it In all of your interactions with Ms McDonnell and all the things that you bought for and paid for for the McDonnells and the children, did she ever, ever tell you, "Hey, that's too much"?

A No. I turned down a lot of the requests

Q But did she ever tell you, "It's too much" regarding the Ferrari, the Rolex --

A No

Q -- the money, any of it?

A No It's like I said, a lot of the requests I declined

Q Before you were interviewed by law enforcement, did Ms McDonnell ever try to return anything to you?

A No

Q Let me ask you this Before the investigation, did Mr McDonnell, did he ever call you and tell you, "Hey, you shouldn't be buying things for my family"?

A No

Q Never said a word?

A No

Q Golf clubs?

A No

Q Never calls you up and says, "Hey, you shouldn't send a $1,000 set of golf clubs to Bobby That's too much"?

A No

Q When he gives the -- when you give him the $50,000 check, he never calls you -- that's made out to Maureen -- he never calls you and says, "Mr Williams, we really can't be taking these" -- "these loans"?

A He asked for the loans

Q He asked for the later loans But on the first loan, did he ever call you up right after it happened and say, "Hey, can't have this"?

A No

Q And you had spoken to him about the first loan?

A Yes

Q If he had called you during this whole period of time and said, "Look, Mr Williams, I appreciate that you're trying to help me and my family, but no, this just" -- "this just isn't right and you can't do it," would you have continued to do these things?

A No

Q Why not?

A If he said don't do this, I wouldn't do it Because that would mean also there was -- you know, there was no business There was no -- nothing was going to come out of that

Q Mr Burck asked you a series of questions about phone records and text messages -- and I think Mr Asbill had some this morning -- between you and Ms McDonnell Do you remember sending those questions, or the general nature of the questions?

A Just -- I remember questions

Q Okay He showed you phone records for specific dates and tried to get you to read them Was that difficult for you?

A Yes

Q And they weren't all highlighted and you had never seen -- had you ever reviewed your phone records before testifying?

A No

Q Never been shown your phone records by the government?

A No

Q Do you -- one of the days he asked you about was May 25, 2011, and he talked about eight phone records -- or eight text messages between 1 a m and 8 a m Do you remember that specific?

A Yes

Q And you -- it looked like you were upset about the idea that you were text messaging between Ms McDonnell and yourself at those times?

A Well, I was upset about it after I heard about what happened this week and then with text messages in the middle of the night

Q Okay And Mr Burck seemed to suggest that, you know, you and Ms McDonnell are text messaging back and forth from 1 a m to 8 a m , right?

A He did

Q Okay Well, let's -- you denied texting Ms McDonnell, I think, quote, in the middle of the night You denied that, right?

A A hundred percent

Q Okay Well, let's talk about --

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 625, please And I believe that this is the same thing that's already been admitted We've just redacted and -- Judge, we have a redacted copy that doesn't show the phone numbers, and we have an unredacted copy So there's a -- there's a version that we think that we can publish to everybody, and then there's an unredacted -- an unredacted portion that we can show the witness

THE COURT: All right

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, this is a phone record excerpt from May 23rd to May 25th of 2011 Okay? And for ease, we've highlighted in yellow --

MR DRY: Can we go ahead and admit this, Your Honor, the redacted version?

THE COURT: Let me make sure, now What's on my screen now, is this redacted or unredacted?

MR DRY: That's the redacted version, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Go ahead and publish it

BY MR DRY:

Q Okay Okay And for ease, Mr Williams, we've highlighted in yellow texts that Ms McDonnell has sent to you, and then we've highlighted in green texts that you've sent back Okay? And the green doesn't happen for a couple pages in

A Okay

Q Now, on page 1, that goes to -- in the middle, that's where the May 24th starts In the grayed out portion, those are text messages that are not between you or Ms McDonnell Those are text messages you have with other people

Do you see any text messages that are yellow on that first page?

A No

Q Okay

A Other than up at the top

Q At the top there's one And what's the date on that message?

A May the -- May the 23rd

Q And what time is that text message sent out?

A 4:49 p m

Q Okay Now, let's go down another page Any text messages between you and Ms McDonnell on May 24th? Any yellow that you see on that screen?

A No

Q Okay And then the next page Do you see -- all right Let's go to the split between May 24th, 2011, and May 25 That last text message on May 24, 2011, what time do you send that -- or actually, that's sent to you

What time is listed as the last time May 24th, on the 24th?

A 9:18

Q Okay Now, those next four text messages are the ones in the yellow from Ms McDonnell to you What time are they sent?

A 1:02 to 1:11

Q Okay Now, do you see any green in between those?

A Yes

Q No, no, no In between the first four?

A No No No No

Q Okay Now, on May 25th, you respond at 4:31 a m with one text Do you see that?

A Yes

Q And then two more texts from Ms McDonnell at 6:44 and 7:06

A Okay

MR DRY: Can you scroll down a little bit?

BY MR. DRY:

Q Now, you're texting other people in between those times, and then what's the time -- the next time you text back? What time is that?

A 7 -- 7:27

Q Okay So is that consistent with what you said; that you're not text messaging Ms. McDonnell in the middle of the night?

MR BURCK: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams, you text message a lot, don't you?

A I do

Q And you make a lot of phone calls?

A I make a lot of phone calls

Q Okay Do you remember, Mr Burck, I think, made a big deal that he asked you if you'd be surprised that you text messaged Ms McDonnell 1,200 times between April of 2011 and February of 2013 Do you remember him asking you that?

A I do

Q And you said that you were busy, or a busy man?

A I am busy

Q Okay And that was calls and text messages between you and Ms McDonnell?

A Okay

Q Would you be surprised that during that same period of time that Mr Burck talked about, April of 2011 to February of 2013, that you had 109,000 phone calls and text messages in that period of time?

A I'm a busy person

Q All right Mr Burck asked you, I believe, if every single one of your communications with Ms McDonnell was about Anatabloc, and then you said, well, 95, 98, it might have been more, but it was about the business relationship And it sounded like you were drawing a distinction between you talking about Anatabloc and the business relationship, but you didn't explain what you meant by the business relationship Can you talk -- just tell me about that, briefly

A The business -- the business relationship is that really everything I'm doing is because of that Even if there's a -- a personal response to something that she sends or whatever, this was -- you know, this -- after what happened with my thyroid -- my wife's thyroid disease, this became my purpose So that business relationship was important to me So I maintained it

MR DRY: Can we bring up defense -- can the defense do this? I'm sorry I don't know if we've got this loaded in RM-053 -- you know what Actually, we don't have to even do this We can do this

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you remember a text message that Mr Burck sent you about -- I'm paraphrasing It's August 23rd, 2011, from Ms McDonnell to you saying something about I felt the earth move and I'm not even having sex Do you remember seeing that?

MR BURCK: Objection, Your Honor I have never sent Mr Williams a text message

BY MR DRY:

Q I'm sorry That Ms McDonnell sent you a text message?

MR DRY: Are you sure? Are you absolutely positive? Okay

THE COURT: The objection is sustained

MR DRY: Very good, Your Honor

BY MR DRY:

Q Do you remember seeing the e-mail from Ms McDonnell to you saying I felt the earth move and I wasn't even having sex?

A I did

Q You saw it?

A I think I saw that.

Q Okay And I think you said it was --

A I'm not -- you know, when I saw it the other day, you know, I think I saw it, but it was funny to me

Q All right Well, why was it funny?

A I don't know what to say about things like that I mean, it's just -- you know, it's just an odd message to get

Q Well, let's -- let's --

A It's so odd

Q Let's just ask you this question Did you ever have a physical or intimate relationship with Ms McDonnell?

A You know, I've never -- I didn't know Ms McDonnell had any -- I didn't know she had any interest in me until this past week

Q Well, let's be clear Did she ever express to you in any way --

THE COURT: All right Let him answer the question You didn't answer that question, just so the record is clear

BY MR DRY:

Q Did you have a physical --

A No

Q Did you have any physical --

A No

Q -- or intimate --

A No I've never had any contact with Ms McDonnell

Q Okay

A Any physical contact with her, period

Q Okay Did she ever indicate to you in any way, while you're giving all the money and all the -- the Rolex and all the rest of that, did she ever indicate in any way that she had any romantic interest in you whatsoever?

A No

Q Did you ever indicate to her that you were romantically interested in her?

A No, I didn't

Q When Ms McDonnell asked you to take her shopping for the dresses, I believe you said that one of the dresses was for an anniversary party Whose anniversary?

A Hers

Q Hers and who else's? Mr McDonnell?

A Yes

Q And you attended that?

A I did

Q Who did you attend it with?

A My wife

Q And who did Ms McDonnell -- did Ms McDonnell invite both you and your wife?

A She did

Q When Ms McDonnell asked you to have the Ferrari at the Smith Mountain Lake house, whose use is she asking -- who does she want to have that car available for?

A Her husband

Q When Ms McDonnell asked you to buy the Rolex, who -- who's the Rolex going to?

A Her husband

Q As you sit there today, did Ms McDonnell ever indicate to you in any way that she was ever having marital problems?

A No

Q Before this trial began, had you ever heard anything like that?

A No

Q From your interactions with the McDonnells, did you think they were having marital problems?

A No

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 548, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Did you go to Cailin's wedding, sir?

A No

Q But you were invited?

A I was

Q Okay

A I think

MR DRY: Actually, let's go -- let's do it a different way Can we go to Government's Exhibit 246, page 2

BY MR DRY:

Q You attended the Cure By Design dinner?

A Yes

Q And when you're interacting with the McDonnells, is this typical; that they would have public displays of affection in your interactions with them?

A Yes

Q Did you ever notice any tension between the two of them at this event, this Cure By Design event?

Because you went out to dinner with them after, right?

A Yes, I did

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 338

BY MR DRY:

Q That's the Healthcare Leaders Reception, right?

A Yes

Q And you went out to dinner with them after that?

A Yes

Q Notice any tension there or any marital discord?

A No

Q Let's -- on a side note, regarding the Healthcare Leaders Reception, you told Mr Asbill, I believe, that you thought that Dr Ladenson was a healthcare leader, right?

A Yes

Q You think that?

A I believe that

Q All right And Dr Ladenson was at the event and the Governor recognized him, right?

A Yes

Q Now, the event was for healthcare leaders of Virginia, wasn't it?

A Yes

Q Dr Ladenson is from what school?

A Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine

Q Okay What state is John Hopkins in?

A Baltimore, Maryland

Q Why did you ask Ms McDonnell to recognize Dr Ladenson? Was it just because you think he's a great guy?

A Because I thought it would be important for our company

Q Explain that

A Well, for two fronts One is Dr Ladenson had invited a colleague of his, a distinguished endocrinologist from McLean, Virginia, to come with him

Q Do you remember who that was?

A Dr Crantz They went to medical school together in Boston

Q Okay

A And so the second reason -- I thought that was important Dr Ladenson, after they completed the animal models on their own up at the medical school, then he became a consultant to our company

Q So --

A And I thought given who he was, it was -- would be important that he be recognized, and it would benefit our company with anyone that was in the audience, including the people that we invited

Q Because Dr Ladenson was associated with Star?

A Yes, as a consultant

MR DRY: One moment, Your Honor

THE COURT: Sure

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Williams --

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 211? This is already in evidence And can we go down --

BY MR DRY:

Q Well, you see on the top, that says "Itinerary docx," correct?

MR DRY: Can we blow that up?

BY MR DRY:

Q It's from Mary-Shea Sutherland to the First Lady, August 26 to 28th This is August of '11

MR DRY: Can we go down? The next page

BY MR DRY:

Q This is about a trip on August 26th through 28th, 2011, that was planned And then the next page, do you see where you're arriving at, sir? Just take a moment with it

A Okay

Q Okay You didn't -- you said the Bar Harbor story was a long story, and you didn't really get a chance to explain it What I'd like you to do is take me through, whose idea was it to go to Bar Harbor Inn?

A Maureen McDonnell

Q And specifically, what did she ask you?

MR DRY: And you can take that --

A She said she would -- you know, "Let's" -- "I'd like to go away with the Governor and" -- "so let's go to Bar Harbor, Maine, since you had your honeymoon there "

BY MR DRY:

Q And who was going to be paying for this trip?

A Me

Q Okay And was this trip -- this was before the Cure By Design, right?

A Yes

Q Okay And I think Mr Asbill said something to you about, well, that was -- it was canceled because of a hurricane

Did you have communications with Ms McDonnell about -- well, first of all, do you remember around that time where you were planning to go that there was a hurricane coming?

A I do

Q Well, talk me through what's going on there, your conversations with Ms McDonnell about this trip Walk me through that

A I contacted her too, and I said, you know, Jerri says there's a hurricane coming and, you know, it may come on up the East Coast, and it could be a real problem here

And she kept insisting on, you know, that -- you know, to go And -- and the hurricane is getting a little closer, and, you know, we've gone ahead -- even myself I've talked to the golf courses up there in Bar Harbor, Maine, to try to set up some tee times

And then finally she called and she goes, "The Governor" -- "we can't go because of this" -- "it would look terrible to be gone while the hurricane hits here

MR DRY: Can we bring up that itinerary one more time, and just the last page of it?

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, so the original plan was for you to take Ms McDonnell and Mr McDonnell to Bar Harbor three days before your launch event at the Mansion?

A Yes

Q Okay

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibit 318, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Asbill talked to you about, "Do you want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents " That was just an hour or two ago

And then you testified about, well, yeah, you'd need to talk to the lawyers about whether it was going to -- whether the transfer of the shares was going to trigger reporting obligations Do you remember that testimony?

A I do

Q And then you said something about, well, I spoke to him generally?

A Yeah

Q Do you remember specifically who you talked to about this?

A Bob Pokusa

Q And when you're talking to Mr Pokusa -- first of all, who is he?

A General counsel.

Q Of Star Scientific?

A Yes

Q When you're talking to Mr Pokusa about it, are you disclosing to him that, hey, I'm thinking about transferring 50,000 shares of Star stock to the Governor of Virginia?

A No

Q Why not?

A I didn't want him to know I was trying to find out, you know, what you could and what you couldn't do

Q Mr Asbill yesterday, I think, was talking about -- and I got a little con- --

MR ASBILL: That would be a Sunday

THE COURT: Not yesterday

MR DRY: I'm sorry Friday It's been a long weekend

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Asbill, on Friday, spoke to you about the 50,000-dollar loan, the first one, and your certainty about whether you -- the certainty of when you spoke to the Governor And you indicated that you weren't certain on whether it was a phone call or a meeting; is that right?

A That's correct

Q Okay As you sit here today, how certain are you that before you hand those 50 -- that first $50,000 check and that next $15,000 check, how certain are you that you had a conversation with the Governor of Virginia explaining that you were loaning $50,000?

A A hundred percent

MR DRY: Show Government's Exhibit 134

BY MR DRY:

Q And five days after that, you get this e-mail, right?

A Yes

Q And you interpret that e-mail as what?

A He's thanking me for helping him out

Q Okay And he also thanked you for the $15,000 check, right, that you had given?

A Yes

Q Mr Williams, Mr Asbill made a big point of saying, well, we only have your word to thank for various things

Was this e-mail sent to you before this investigation -- before you were ever even interviewed by law enforcement?

A Yes

MR DRY: Let's bring up Government's Exhibit

352, please

BY MR DRY:

Q This check was sent before you were ever interviewed?

A Yes

Q Mr Asbill asked you questions -- a question about whether you had discussions with the Governor before he appeared at the launch event about the launch event You said no, I can't recall any specific conversations

Do you remember that testimony?

A Yes

Q Who showed up at the launch event? Did the Governor show up?

A He did

Q Was the First Lady in attendance?

A Yes

Q When he came into the room for the launch event, did he look surprised; "Oh, my gosh, here's Jonnie"?

A No

Q Did he look surprised when the Anatabloc is at the place settings?

A No

MR DRY: Can we bring up Government's Exhibit 186, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Sir, I believe that there were questions about not only these meetings that you had, but whether you believed that they were linked, in your mind, to your meetings with giving the Governor and Ms McDonnell things of value

Before -- how certain are you that you spoke to Ms McDonnell the weekend before you got this meeting, before you're sitting in that room with Ms Huffstetler and then Dr Clore, how certain are you that you had conversations with Ms McDonnell --

A Yes

Q -- confirming that you're going to get your meeting?

A I'm certain

MR DRY: Let's go to Government's Exhibits 312, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Mr Asbill asked you questions about whether you had conversations with the Governor in which he told you that UVA and VCU were, in fact, going to do the studies And you said -- I believe what you said was, well, we had conversations that he was going to look into it

Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Did Ms McDonnell ever tell you that she forwarded the information that your son had given to the Governor and he was going to look into it?

A Yes

MR DRY: Can we go down?

BY MR DRY:

Q And that's the information from your son to Ms McDonnell, right?

A Yes

MR DRY: And then go up

BY MR DRY:

Q And there's Ms McDonnell forwarding it to the Governor So that's consistent with that conversation?

A Yes

Q Was this e-mail in existence before you were interviewed by law enforcement?

A Yes

MR DRY: Let's just quickly do the next one Government's Exhibit 318 Actually, you know what Let's take that one down I think the more important one, Government's Exhibit 2, page 3

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, you've been shown this a few times And that middle part, again, is what? The middle part, whose handwriting is that?

A That's mine

Q And I think Mr Asbill, in his questioning, he said that the bottom part was the Governor's handwriting

Who -- when you're discussing this with the Governor, who did you understand the loan was going to be to? Like are you giving Ms McDonnell money or are you negotiating with Mr McDonnell to give him money?

A The Governor

Q But, sir, can you see at the bottom there? Whose idea was it that the loan of the shares would go to Ms McDonnell instead of Mr McDonnell? Did you come up with that idea?

A No

Q Whose was it?

A The Governor's, or whomever wrote this on this paper

Q Oh, so you don't know whether this handwriting is the Governor's?

A I can't -- I'm talking --

Q You were just taking Mr Asbill's word for it?

A I'm just taking his word But this is not something that I know that that's the Governor's I can tell you that that's my handwriting of what was going on

Q Well, let's do it this way Did you have discussions with the Governor about this in which he discussed that the shares should go to Maureen and not him?

Don't worry about the notes I just want your best recollection as you sit there today, sir

A I thought they were -- I actually thought they were going to the Governor I didn't realize that they were going to Maureen

Q Okay Eventually, where did the -- well, let's --

A I thought this was going to the Governor's account here I'm just realizing that it was Maureen

Q Okay That's fine Now, you testified that those notes, your notes, were in your meeting on February 29th of 2012, right?

A Yes

Q Who is asking you for this money? Is it Ms McDonnell at this point or is it Mr McDonnell?

A It's the Governor

MR DRY: Government's Exhibit 379 Second page, please This has already been admitted

BY MR. DRY:

Q Do you know who Mike is in this one, sir?

A I think that's the brother-in-law

Q And Mr Asbill asked you, he said, well, the MoBo people would know about this loan, right? The MoBo people Who were the MoBo people?

A My understanding, I learned that the MoBo people were the Governor and his wife and the Governor's sister and her husband

Q Okay So those would be the people that would know about the loan?

A Yes

MR DRY: Let's bring up Government's Exhibit 348, please

BY MR DRY:

Q I believe you were shown this by Mr Asbill, and he said that Mr Piscitelli would know

Do you have any idea what conversations the Governor had with Mr Piscitelli and what he knew about this transaction --

A No

Q -- or this proposed transaction?

A No

Q Okay Oh, one last thing I apologize for skipping around on you Mr Williams, I have to ask, Mr Asbill asked you about the end of the meeting on February 29th and that you got to say something about there was some kind of handshake is not the law discussion

Do you remember that?

A I do

Q Can you explain what was said? Because I don't think you got an opportunity to kind of explain where you're at, who you're talking about, what was said, and what was your impression

A I always thought it was still on the law books in Virginia, I had heard someone say, that if you shake hands with a man or a woman in Virginia, that's the law It could be upheld in a courtroom even if you shake hands in Virginia

And -- and I was doing this with the Governor on a handshake

Q No loan documentation?

A No paperwork of any kind And I'm the one at risk advancing this money

And as I was leaving the conference room at the Patrick Henry Building, he said to me, "Jonnie, by the way, it's" -- "it's no longer the law that a handshake is the law in Virginia "

Q And how did you take that?

A Actually, it was just like, that's an odd thing to say to someone that's loaning you money

Q Okay

MR DRY: Let's bring up Government's Exhibit 530 And I do not want to beat this dead horse any more than I have to

BY MR DRY:

Q This is your immunity agreement, right?

A Okay

Q And this is the one you're operating under now In other words, your testimony -- your agreement with the government is this?

A The first one or the second one?

Q This one The second one?

A The second one Okay

Q Is that right

A Okay

Q Well, and let's go to the first paragraph, last sentence Do you see that? "This letter supersedes and replaces the one from" --

A Yes

Q -- "July 1st" --

A Yes, I see that

Q Okay And then let's go down on the very -- where is this? In the very bottom, the second -- the very bottom where it starts "Second " "Second," and I'll give you a chance to read that, and then I want to go to the top page Just signal to me when you're done reading that

A Okay

MR DRY: Second page, please

BY MR DRY:

Q Now, your first meeting in which you laid out what happened between you and the Governor was July 1st of 2013?

A Thereabouts

Q If you had lied after that meeting in any way to law enforcement, what happens to your agreement?

A Tear it up

Q As long as you tell the truth to this jury, what's your understanding of the risk that you face of going to jail?

A None

Q Is your immunity agreement in any way conditioned on whether Mr or Ms McDonnell are convicted?

A No

Q So it doesn't matter You know -- it doesn't have anything to do with whether they are convicted or acquitted, right?

A It's just whether I tell the truth

Q What if you tell the truth and no one gets convicted? What happens?

A That's -- that's the law That's the justice system

Q What is the first thing that you've been told in every interview with prosecutors in this case?

A They have always said, "All we're looking for from you is to answer the questions truthfully "

Q And have they made it clear what would happen if you didn't?

A Yes

Q What's that?

A That there would be no immunity, and I may be prosecuted

Q And they could use all your statements?

A Everything

MR DRY: Nothing further, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right You may stand down, sir

(Witness stood aside)

THE COURT: We will stop now And if you all could come back -- let's make it 2:05, we'll get started with the afternoon session Just follow the marshal

THE COURT: All right, bring in the jury

(The jury entered the courtroom.)

All right, government, call your next witness

MR HARBACH: Your Honor, the government calls Phil Cox

PHILIP COX,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Cox.

A Good afternoon.

Q Could you please state your full name and spell your last name for the court reporter?

A Philip Cox, C-O-X

Q What do you do for a living, sir?

A I'm Executive Director of the Republican Governors' Association

Q What's is that?

A It is the political committee for all the nation's 29 Republican Governors

Q What is its purpose?

A Support them, reelect them, elect them.

Q How long have you held your current position?

A Since January of 2011

Q Could you tell us about your educational background, please?

A I graduated from the University of Virginia

Q With what kind of degree?

A A B.A. in history

Q During your career, did you work for Mr Robert McDonnell?

A I did.

Q Tell us about when you started working for him.

A 1999 I was his political advisor/consultant on his state House race

Q At the time was he serving in the Virginia House of Delegates?

A He was He was running for reelection.

Q What about his campaign for Attorney General, did you work on that?

A I did I was his political advisor for that as well Essentially, I wasn't the campaign manager but was essentially responsible for the campaign

Q During the time that Mr McDonnell was running for Virginia Attorney General, did you develop a personal relationship with him?

A Yes

Q Would you say that you became friends?

A Absolutely

Q As you sit here today, do you still consider Mr McDonnell a friend?

A Very much so

Q Did you work in the Attorney General's Office while Mr McDonnell was serving as Attorney General?

A No.

Q What did you do next professionally?

A Well, we prepared the run for Governor

Q Who is "we"?

A Governor -- Bob and I And Attorney General McDonnell and I

Q When did the campaign for Governor begin, what year approximately?

A You know, really probably picked up steam in 2007, 2008

Q What was your role with respect to the gubernatorial campaign?

A I was the campaign manager

Q What does that mean?

A I was responsible for the campaign.

Q What sorts of things did you do on a daily basis generally?

A Everything, managing the staff, we had a staff of, now, probably anywhere, at its height, probably 70 or 80 people Managed the fund raising operation, made sure we had the resources ,to do what we needed to do Managed the message, and then managed the candidate

Q Let's talk about your professional relationship with Mr McDonnell during the gubernatorial campaign. How often would you say in your role as campaign manager was it that you interacted with him?

A Multiple times a day

Q Would it be fair to say that you were one of his closest advisors during that time?

A Yes

Q Based on your interactions with Mr McDonnell and your relationship with him, would you say that he is an intelligent guy?

A Yeah, very much so

Q How would you describe his management style?

A Well, I mean, I think he at times would try to micromanage But, you know, when you are running for statewide office, it is impossible to do so And he very quickly learned he couldn't do it, and he was focused on being the best candidate he possibly could be, and by all accounts, I thought we ran a pretty good campaign

Q In general during the time, focusing on the time you have worked with him or for him, would you say that he was more of a details guy or more of an altitude guy?

A I think he could be both. At times he was very detail-oriented, but at times, you know, he needed to kind of take a look from 30,000 feet He was able to do both.

Q During the 2009 campaign for Governor, did the campaign have a bumper sticker-type motto?

A Yes. Bob's For Jobs

Q And what did that mean?

A Well, we were in the middle of a recession. You remember sort of the world kind of falling apart in the fall of 2008, and there was a lot of concern about the state of the economy And if you polled voters at that time, 2008 throughout 2009, by far the number one issue in the campaign was jobs and the state economy

Q So was that an important issue?

A It was the central issue

Q For Mr McDonnell's campaign?

A The central issue

Q Are you familiar with an entity called Opportunity Virginia?

A Yes

Q What is that?

A It is the Governor's political action committee

Q What is a political action committee?

A It raises money to support, in this case, the Governor's political and policy agenda

Q And about when was the PAC, that's what people call them, right?

A Uh-huh

Q About when was the Opportunity Virginia PAC started?

A It would have been just after the campaign was concluded. So sometime in the fall of 2009.

Q Okay. After Mr McDonnell was elected, to your knowledge, did he participate or have any other campaigns after that?

A After he was elected Governor?

Q Yes, sir

A No

Q Did a campaign even exist after the gubernatorial campaign wound down?

A No

Q Who was in charge of the Opportunity Virginia PAC?

A I was responsible for it

Q And what were your duties in that capacity?

A Look, I was the Governor's political advisor, so in that capacity, you know, the PAC was really focused on two things One, you know, we were looking ahead to the 2011 legislative elections when the House, State House and State Senate were up for election We raised and spent probably $4 million that year, in 2011, so we spent a lot of time, you know, sort of driving towards that Then we also supported his policy agenda So there were, you know, at times when there were big debates happening just down the street here in the General Assembly and the PAC would spend money on advertising in support of his jobs agenda or his transportation agenda or ABC privatization, those sorts of things

Q Speaking for yourself, were you personally involved at all in the Governor's transition team after he was elected?

A Yes I was the director of his transition.

Q Tell us generally what the transition team's mission was

A Really, we had, you know, probably the hardest job I have ever had. 75 days, you know, starts the day after the election, essentially 75 days to staff the government and hire his core senior staff and his cabinet and then get him ready for the first legislative session which, you know, started January 15th.

Q So about when would you say the transition team's work was finished approximately?

A Well, I mean it was officially concluded when he was sworn in

Q His inauguration?

A Yup

Q After your duties working with the transition team, did you continue to work for Mr McDonnell's administration after he was inaugurated?

A No, sir

Q Where did you go next?

A Well, I was a consultant, continued to do what I have been doing for 20 years, which is helping candidates around the country One of my clients was the Republican Governors' Association, and in that capacity I handled eight to ten campaigns, governors' races across the country This was in 2010 I was hired as the Executive Director in 2011 Throughout that time, I was continuing to offer strategic advice, political advice to the Governor and his team.

Q Okay Let's go back a little bit in time from the 10-11 time frame to December of 2009 Is that during the time that the transition team is most active?

A Yes, sir

Q Do you recall roughly in that time frame meeting someone named Jonnie Williams?

A I do

Q Tell us what the circumstances were What event do you associate with that meeting?

A You know, we were in a hotel restaurant in New York. We had flown up there, I believe the Governor was attending an RNC, Republican National Committee fundraiser around that time, and so, you know, we had flown up to do that

Q Who is "we"? Who went up on the trip besides you and the Governor?

A Myself, the Governor, Maureen, the First Lady was there, Adam Zubowsky, who is his personal aide, and probably some of his protective detail.

Q And if I were to suggest to you that this was approximately December of 2009, does that sound about right?

A Yes, sir

Q You have just told us what the purpose of the trip was Could you describe for us the specific circumstances of how you came to meet Mr Williams?

A Yeah. I mean, we were at dinner, and, you know -- I think it was a dinner That was the circumstance

Q Let me ask you, do you recall whether Mr or Ms McDonnell had any plans that evening in particular?

A Yes I think they were going to a play

Q So you were at dinner before they go to the play?

A Yes, sir

Q Who all is at the dinner?

A Just the folks I mentioned. There was also a friend of Mr Williams who was apparently a male model who had a billboard in Manhattan, downtown Manhattan.

Q Just so the record is clear, the folks you just mentioned a moment, ago who flew up on the trip with you, namely Mr Zubowsky, the Governor, Ms McDonnell, yourself, Mr Williams, and possibly this model person?

A Yes

Q Before this occasion where you met Mr Williams in New York, do you recall ever having heard of him before that occasion?

A I don't recall I don't think I had

Q Do you have any recollection of Mr McDonnell ever mentioning him to you before that trip to New York?

A No

Q Do you have any recollection of Mr McDonnell mentioning Mr Williams' company, Star Scientific, before this trip to New York?

A No

Q Do you recall during the dinner the subject of an inaugural dress for Ms McDonnell coming up during conversation?

A Yes

Q Tell us what you remember about that

A You know, there was discussion about, you know, potentially the First Lady potentially wearing an Oscar de la Renta dress, very nice dress at the inaugural, potentially very expensive dress at the inaugural

Q What do you recall Mr Williams' participation in that conversation to be?

A Well, I mean, I think he was essentially offering the dress He had the relationship with Oscar de la Renta, and was offering the dress to Maureen

Q And based on what you saw and heard, did you have an impression just speaking for yourself one way or the other about whether Mr. Williams was offering to pay for the dress?

A Yes That was my impression.

Q Do you recall whether he actually said that?

A I don't But I think that was my strong impression at the time

Q Understood. Was Mr McDonnell present and within earshot when this discussion about the dress was happening?

A Yes, he was present

Q When you heard about this prospect of Mr Williams helping find or, as you interpreted it, pay for a dress for Ms McDonnell, what did you think about that idea?

A I didn't think it was a good idea

Q Why not?

A You know, we were in the middle of a recession, and I thought the optics, you know, again, as his political advisor, I thought the optics of something like that were not something we should -- were not ideal

Q Could you spell that out, please? What was the optics concerning?

A We were in the middle of a recession You are going to wear a 20 or $30,000 dress, you know, someone is going to write about that

Q Any other concerns besides this optics concern?

A Yes. The potential legal concerns. I didn't know what the law was We were in this sort of interim period between the campaign and when he took office, or in this transition period And, you know. before we did anything like that, we would have to check with legal counsel

Q Are you yourself a lawyer, sir?

A No

Q Did you express these concerns that you have just described for us, the optics concern and the potential legal concern, did you express those to Mr McDonnell?

A I did.

Q Do you recall whether you did so at the dinner?

A I don't think so I think it was probably after

Q Afterward?

A Yes

Q Based on what you observed at the dinner, what was Ms McDonnell's reaction to the idea of Mr Williams helping find and/or pay for a dress for her?

A She was excited about it

Q Okay Show for the witness for identification, please, Government Exhibit 53 We will blow that up for you, Mr Cox Can you see that okay, sir?

A Yes, sir

Q You recognize that to be an e-mail exchange between you and, among others, someone named Jasen Eige about the dress issue?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 53

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Let's start at the bottom, Mr Cox First question is, who is Jasen Eige?

A At the time, he was our policy director on the campaign, and he was the policy advisor during the transition, but also legal counsel So he was policy and legal He kind of wore two hats

Q Is he a lawyer?

A He is a lawyer, yes

Q What about the other person to whom Mr Eige sends that first e-mail, Mike Reynold. Who is that?

A Mike was the political director on the campaign, kind of ran all the grassroots efforts for the campaign

Q Is he a lawyer?

A He is

Q Okay Mr Eige's e-mail says, "Spoke with Jonnie Williams He said he absolutely understands and agrees with the decision. Hopefully this is the last chapter of the dress saga " What was the decision?

A The decision was no Oscar de la Renta dress

Q Okay And then your reply to that simply is "Thanks " Did you have discussions with Mr Eige about the dress apart from this e-mail exchange?

A Yeah, I did

Q Tell us generally what the substance of those discussions was

A Look, I thought from my standpoint as the political advisor, I thought it was a bad idea And so I sort of asked Jason as a lawyer to see if there was a legal reason we could offer -- that would prevent us from being able to take it So it would be an additional reason to give to Maureen outside of just "It is not a good idea "

Q Do you recall whose job it was to inform the First Lady of the tough decision that you mentioned a moment ago?

A You know, I think it was probably Jasen. But I don't know for sure

Q Okay Did you yourself --

A I did not

Q Did you and Mr Eige at any point discuss any alternatives to Mr Williams' buying a dress for Ms McDonnell?

A Yes. There was some discussion about, you know, could we take the Oscar de la Renta dress, she could wear it at the inaugural, and then we could auction it off for charity, which I thought was a good compromise

Q As opposed to her keeping it?

A Yes

Q Do you recall whose job it was to communicate this alternative idea or any others to the First Lady?

A I don't know who did.

Q Did you yourself do it?

A I did not communicate it, no.

Q Now, based on your personal observations, what was Ms McDonnell's reaction to the news that she wouldn't be able to keep or receive this designer dress from Mr Williams?

A She was not happy about it

Q How do you know that?

A She sent me an e-mail

Q When was that?

A December 24th, 2009

Q How do you remember the exact date?

A It was Christmas Eve

Q Tell us what you remember about her e-mail, sir

A I mean, she basically called into question my loyalty and said, you know, that I didn't have the best interest of, you know, her or her husband, you know I wasn't looking out for their best interests And so, you know, the e-mail had literally no basis in reality It was sort of an insane rant of an e-mail And coming on Christmas Eve, I just thought it was inappropriate and it really angered me

Q Did you draft any e-mails in response to Ms McDonnell?

A Yes, I drafted about half a dozen.

Q Did you send any of them, sir?

A No, I did not I thought better of it

Q Did you ever show the e-mail that Ms McDonnell sent you to Mr McDonnell?

A I didn't show it to him. I talked to him about the contents of it

Q Tell us about that

A I just remember it was two days later, I was in Pittsburgh with my wife's family and he called me just to wish me a merry Christmas because, you know, that's the kind of guy he is, and he wanted to see how Christmas was

I raised it with him. I said, "Look, I think you need to talk to her about this, or I will, and if I do the conversation is probably not going to go very well " So, and he said he would.

Q Could we see Government Exhibit 56 for identification, please? I'll blow this one up, too Can you see this okay?

A Yes, sir

Q Does this appear to you to be an e-mail exchange where you are on at least part of it involving a meeting with the Governor to discuss the dress?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 56, please

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Okay Let's start at the bottom. The first e-mail on the chain is from Mr McDonnell It is addressed to cjeige@hotmail com. Is that your address in the cc block?

A Yes, sir

Q It says, "Please set call in a.m. with you me and Lee to discuss the dress and gift issues Thanks " Did I read that correctly?

A Yes, sir

Q That's the only e-mail on this chain that you are on. Let's just talk about that one Who did you understand Lee to be when you received this?

A Lee Goodman.

Q Who is that?

A He was also, I think he was officially counsel to the campaign or one of our lawyers, and so he was counsel to the transition, one of the transition's lawyers

Q Now, do you recall whether this call that the Governor requested ever in fact occurred?

A I don't I wasn't on the call

Q You can take the exhibit down A moment ago when I asked you about what you did after the transition team, I believe you talked about going to work for the RGA or them being one of your clients And did I understand you correctly to say that you continued to be a political advisor to Mr McDonnell even after he was inaugurated as Governor?

A Yes

Q Did you remain close with him?

A Yes

Q How often would you say you either saw or spoke to him while he was Governor, if you can generalize about that?

A I mean, the frequency was certainly less than during the campaign, which was many times a day When he was Governor, you know, probably a couple times a week.

Q Okay Did you continue to have communications with the Governor's staff during that time frame?

A Yes

Q Do you recall becoming aware at some point of a request from Mr Williams' company, Star Scientific, for Mr McDonnell or the PAC to tweet about a product of theirs?

A Yes

Q Can we take a look for identification at Government's 63, please. And could we maybe just blow up the bottom half so we can identify it Mr Cox, do you recognize this to be an e-mail exchange between you and someone named Monica Block about this twitter issue?

A Uh-huh

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 63

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q I'd like to start at Page 2, please Correction, the bottom of Page 1, just for the header information at the bottom. This is the first e-mail in the chain. This is from someone named Jerri Fulkerson to Monica Block. Do you know who either of those people are, sir?

A I don't know Mr Fulkerson. I know Ms Block.

Q I'll just let you know that Jerri Fulkerson is a female, okay?

A Sorry

Q Quite all right Who is Ms Block?

A The Governor's scheduler

Q Let's look at the substance of that e-mail on the next page, please, at the top. Can you see that okay?

A Yes.

Q All right She is asking, she is relating that "Jonnie asked that she forward the following information to you and if you would ask the Governor and the AG if they could possibly view the link and twitter or whatever about it, he would really, really appreciate it It is very important to him." Did I read that correctly?

A Yes

Q Okay So let's go back to the first page of the exhibit now, please. Let's see when it lands in your in-box Which is the e-mail that's currently highlighted, at 9:40 a.m. Who is the cc there, DJ Eckert, do you know who that is?

A He works for the PAC Political director of the PAC.

Q So a little over an hour after the first e-mail, this lands in your in-box And you can see the request that Ms Block relates there Let's scroll up and see what your response was About an hour and 40 minutes later, you say, "The Governor should not twitter about a product launch." Why did you write that, sir?

A Well, first of all, the Governor would never personally tweet He doesn't do it Somebody does it for him. But, you know, in this case my opinion as his political advisor is that the Governor should not be a pitchman for a specific product You know, he shouldn't be picking winners and losers within a marketplace and shouldn't be a product pitchman

Q How is that different from what you described earlier as the theme of the campaign being to promote Virginia business and Virginia jobs; can you distinguish those two for us, please?

A Yes I mean, first of all, this is nuanced and it is a judgment call and these things are subjective But, you know, my advice, my opinion as his political advisor is that there is a line there between supporting industry and supporting a specific product And I think you need to be careful not to pick winners and losers I'll give you an example The Governor and his administration did a great job promoting the Virginia wine industry, and I think that's perfectly appropriate and that ought to be what he does He ought to wake up every morning thinking about "How do I create more jobs and opportunity for the citizens of the Commonwealth?" And he did a great job of that But I think it would be, I wouldn't recommend him going out and saying, you know, promoting Barboursville at the expense of, you know, Williamsburg or King Family Vineyard or some other wine, because I think then you are picking winners and losers. I think that's where the line is. But again, it is subjective and it is a judgment call

Q Did you have any discussions to your recollection with Mr McDonnell about the two categories that you just described for us?

A Not that I recall

Q Why not?

A I don't think I needed to I think he got it

Q Your impression was that he understood that concept?

A Yes

Q In particular, the e-mail we were just looking at a moment ago, do you recall having any discussions with Mr McDonnell about this specific request from Star that there be a tweet about the product?

A No Again, he didn't tweet That would never rise to the level of something he would look at

Q Understood. During one of Mr McDonnell's campaigns, do you recall there arising an issue concerning Ms McDonnell's promotion of specific products along the lines that you are talking about?

A Yes, nutraceuticals

Q Tell us what you recall about that

A I think it was during the governor's race, although it may have come up during the AG's race, I can't remember, but during the governor's race, I do specifically remember there were a couple of instances where she was contacting donors or activists, supporters of the campaign, you know, kind of pushing this product or line of products

Q And was that a concern to you?

A It was, yeah.

Q What did you do about it?

A I talked to the Governor about it

Q Why?

A Because it wasn't something, I mean, it wasn't something we should have been doing And I think it may have made, from an optics standpoint again, as his political advisor, I didn't think it was something we should be doing, and I think also in some cases it may have made our supporters uncomfortable

Q Did you discuss those concerns with Mr McDonnell?

A I did

Q What was his reaction when you explained it?

A He agreed, and, you know, it didn't happen. It stopped

Q Do you recall whether he said he would do anything about it?

A He talked to her about it

Q Different subject now At the time that it happened in April of 2011, did you know that Mr and Ms McDonnell had hosted Mr And Ms Williams for a private dinner at the Mansion?

A No

Q To be fair, is hosting private dinners something they did from time to time?

A Yes

Q But you didn't know about that one

A No

Q At the time that it happened in April of 2011, did you have any idea that Mr Williams had spent some 19 or $20,000 on designer clothes for Ms McDonnell?

A No

Q Did you know at the time that in May of 2011, Mr Williams cut a $50,000 check to Ms McDonnell as a loan to the McDonnells?

A No.

Q Mr McDonnell never told you that?

A No

Q Do you recall when you learned about it?

A Probably in the Washington Post

Q About when?

A It would have been Easter, well, around March of 2013

Q When the investigation broke in the papers?

A Uh-huh

Q At the time, meaning May of 2011, did you know that Mr Williams also gave the McDonnells a check for $15,000 to cover the catering expenses for their daughter, Cailin's, wedding?

A No

Q Mr McDonnell never told you about that before it broke in the papers?

A No

Q What about Mr McDonnell golfing on Mr Williams' tab at a private golf course twice in 2011 and racking up some $3,000 in charges; did you know about that back then?

A No

Q Do you recall how you learned about that?

A I'm sure it was in the Washington Post

Q Do you know what the Roskamp Institute is?

A I do now, yeah

Q Okay Were you aware at the time, and by that, I mean in June of 2011, that Ms McDonnell flew down to Roskamp and spoke about Star and its products?

A No

Q Do you recall how you learned about that?

A I'm sure it was published reports

Q Similarly, did you know at the time that either Mr On Ms McDonnell ever owned Star stock?

A No

Q When did you learn that Mr McDonnell received a Rolex watch?

A Again, in the spring of 2013 when it was written about in the Washington Post

Q Do you know who Dr Bill Hazel is?

A I do

Q Who is that?

A Secretary of Health and Human Services or whatever we call it in Virginia Secretary of Health

Q Did he serve in that position under then-Governor McDonnell?

A Yes, he was in the Cabinet

Q Did you know at the time that on August 1st of 2011, Mr Williams got a meeting with a member of Dr Hazel's staff?

A No

Q Did you know at the time that that meeting was on Mr McDonnell's request?

A No

Q New subject Do you recall hearing about an issue surrounding a press release related to an event that happened at the Mansion in late August of 2011?

A Yeah, I vaguely remember Tucker Martin, the Communications Director, flagging something and having concerns about it

Q You remember any other details?

A I don't really remember the content of it

Q Did you yourself attend the event?

A No

Q Did you ever discuss this particular event on August 30th, did you ever discuss that with Mr McDonnell?

A No I did discuss it in probably April of 2013

Q Thank you for clarifying it But at the time?

A No

Q Mr Cox, in your experience, could a private company just rent out the Governor's Mansion for an event?

A I'm not expert on the Mansion, but no, I don't think so

Q Understanding that you are not an expert, based on your experience, is it your understanding that in order for an event to get scheduled, you know, and actually happen at the Mansion, would some sort of government official need to approve that?

A Yes

Q Sticking with this event that happened on August 30th of 2011, do you have any recollection of how that event was paid for?

A Opportunity Virginia, the PAC, paid for the event

Q Okay Now, generally speaking, if a member of the Governor's administration was of the view that the PAC should pay for something, who would they go to?

A Me

Q And in your experience, who on the staff would make the decision about whether it was appropriate to use state funds or whether they should seek funds from the PAC for a given event?

A It would be the Chief of Staff or the counsel, either one Jasen Eige or Martin Kent

Q Which was which?

A Martin Kent was the Chief of Staff Jasen Eige was counsel

Q And in this particular case, do you recall whether a member of the Governor's staff came to you seeking to have the PAC pay for this August 30th event at the Mansion?

A Yes

Q Who was it?

A It was Martin, I believe

Q Mr Kent?

A Yes

Q Did you authorize the expense to be billed to the PAC?

A Yes

Q Was this any kind of momentous decision for you?

A No

Q Did you spend a lot of time thinking about it?

A No

Q Did you have a lengthy discussion with Mr Kent or any of the other staff about this?

A No

Q By the way, were you aware at the time that samples of Mr Williams' product had been placed at each setting at the event?

A No

Q At any time, again, leaving aside post-investigation, at any time during the events in question, did you ever discuss the fact that the PAC paid with Mr McDonnell?

A No

Q Were you part of a trip in January of 2012 with Mr McDonnell and others to South Carolina?

A Yes

Q What was the purpose of the trip, sir?

A He had just endorsed Governor Romney for President He was in -- we flew from New York to South Carolina It was going to be his first appearance after the endorsement

Q Now, at this time, to your recollection, was Mr McDonnell's name, you know, at least in the discussion as a possible Vice-presidential candidate?

A Yeah. It was in the discussion, I would say

Q Could we take a look for identification at Government Exhibit 292, please If we can blow up the top half for the witness so he can see it Then maybe scroll down to the bottom so we can see the whole page You recall, do you recognize this to be a schedule for Mr McDonnell for January 20th of 2012?

A Yes

Q Let's just for further identification look at Page 2, briefly Blow up the top for him, please Do you recognize this schedule to include the trip to South Carolina we are talking about?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 292

THE COURT: It will be admitted.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q And let's start with Page 2, please And if you could, Mr Starnes, blow up the entry for 1:45 and go down to the entry for 3:20 and include that The first entry I want to talk to you about, Mr Cox, is the one that is from 1:45 to 3 o'clock. Do you see that there?

A Yes, sir

Q Right in the middle of the screen Where is it that you were flying from, you know, what state were you flying from to get to South Carolina?

A We were in New York in the morning, flying to South Carolina.

Q Where it says "Wheels up" there, what does that mean?

A You are taking off.

Q On an airplane?

A Yes, sir

Q Okay The manifest for that entry includes who? Read those names off for us

A Governor McDonnell, Adam Zubowsky, Tucker Martin, Phil Cox, and Ron Kaufman

Q I believe you have already told us what Adam was Who was Tucker Martin?

A Communications Director for the Governor

Q Who was Ron Kaufman?

A Ron was an advisor to the Romney campaign

Q So those are the folks who flew down on that airplane with the Governor; is that right?

A Yes

Q Let's scroll down a little bit to the entry for 3:20 to 3:30, please That's good. All right, now, this says, "Depart for Charleston Area Convention Center " And who are on the manifest for this trip?

A Governor McDonnell, Ms McDonnell, myself, Tucker Martin, Adam Zubowsky, Ron Kaufman, and Jonnie Williams

Q Okay So there are two new people now, namely, Ms McDonnell and Jonnie Williams, who are on this manifest but did not fly down with you in the plane according to this schedule Is that fair?

A That's correct

Q Is that consistent with your recollection?

A Yes

Q Could you tell us about your memory of when you first became aware that Mr Williams was present? What were the circumstances, where were you? Tell us about that

A We were in a conference room at an airport The Governor had been on the phone, you know, literally all day giving interviews He was really focused on that Tucker and I were, you know, acting in support of him during those calls And at some point, Ms McDonnell and Mr Williams came in

Q What happened after they came?

A I don't know, there was sort of a flurry of activity

Q Okay Do you recall either Ms McDonnell or Mr Williams or some combination of them expressing an interest in doing something?

A Yeah. My understanding was that they were trying to get a meeting with Governor Romney

Q About what?

A It was about Anatabloc

Q When you say they were trying to get a meeting, who are you talking about?

A I would assume Jonnie and Maureen

Q Okay I believe you answered this You mentioned that Mr McDonnell was on the phone and what not Were all these folks in the same room?

A Briefly I think we sort of, you know, got him out of there because he was, again, doing interviews with national reporters

Q Do you know one way or the other whether Mr McDonnell actually overheard in that conference room this interest about meeting Mr Romney?

A No

Q Based on what you observed, did it appear to you -- well, let me ask it this way: How did it appear to you that Ms McDonnell was reacting in terms of this idea -- withdrawn. That's a terrible question Did Ms McDonnell appear to you to be interested in meeting Governor Romney for the purpose of talking about Anatabloc?

A Yes

Q What did you think about that idea?

A I just -- it wasn't going to happen.

Q Did Ms McDonnell and/or Mr Williams get a meeting with Mr Romney?

A No

Q Why not?

A It just wasn't going to happen. It is not the way things work.

Q Tell us what you mean.

A I mean, something like that would have had to have been vetted far in advance and arranged far in advance and they just sort of showed up

Q During any portion of this trip, did you witness yourself Ms McDonnell have a conversation with Ms Romney?

A Yes

Q What were the circumstances?

A We were on a campaign bus

Q Who is "we"?

A Myself, Maureen, Tucker Martin, Communications Director, the Governor, Governor Romney, probably a half dozen other Romney staff

Q And Ms Romney, I assume?

A And Ann Romney, sorry

Q Was Mr Williams on the bus?

A No

Q Tell us what you saw

A Ms McDonnell was talking to Ann Romney within earshot of me about how Anatabloc could potentially cure MS And Ms Romney has a well-publicized case of MS

Q How far away were you sitting or standing?

A I was sitting. I was probably four or five feet away.

Q How long would you say this interaction between the two ladies lasted?

A Not long

Q A few minutes?

A Yes Five minutes

Q Based on what you saw, how did Ms Romney appear to handle it?

A I mean, I think she was incredibly classy and she listened. She listened.

Q Politely?

A Yes

Q As you are watching this happen four feet away from you, what are you thinking?

A I was horrified.

Q What do you mean by that?

A I just thought it was a train wreck, basically

Q Why?

A Well, you know, I thought it was inappropriate that Maureen would be trying to kind of push this product on to Ms Romney, and I didn't think it sort of showed the Governor in a great light

Q Do you have a recollection of where relative to you Mr McDonnell was when this was going on?

A I really don't You know, he was probably in the back of the bus with Governor Romney

Q Did you yourself do anything to try and intervene in this conversation that the two ladies were having?

A I did

Q What did you do?

A I just kind of interjected and found an opening in the conversation and changed the subject

Q At least from what you observed for the remainder of that bus ride, was there any further discussion between the two ladies about Anatabloc?

A No

Q Did you observe any further discussion between the two of them on this subject for the remainder of the trip?

A No.

Q Just speaking for yourself

A No.

Q Focusing on this trip now, meaning the trip to South Carolina we are talking about, at any point during that trip, did you have any conversation with Mr McDonnell about Mr Williams or why he was there?

A You know, I don't remember any specific conversations I'm sure I sort of raised it in the context of "What the heck is he doing here?"

Q Do you have a recollection of doing that generically but without remembering exactly what you said?

A Yeah.

Q Okay Do you recall anything about Mr McDonnell's reaction to that?

A I mean, he always listened

Q Do you recall whether he said anything?

A I don't

Q Now, let's talk more generally for a second. Not in the context of the South Carolina trip specifically, but do you recall generally at any time during 2012 having conversations with Mr Williams about what you perceived -- excuse me, with Mr McDonnell about what you perceived to be Mr Williams' intentions?

A Yeah, I mean, I think I raised it a couple of times

Q How so?

A Just like, you know, "He is around a lot What's he looking for?" That kind of thing

Q Why did you feel it necessary to raise that with the Governor?

A Look, I just, you know, he struck me, Mr. Williams struck me as a very over-the-top salesman, and he seemed like he was trying,a little too hard, and he was around a lot

Q Did it appear to you that he wanted something?

A You know, I mean at the time, a lot of people want something from the Governor So I think it was a possibility, but it wasn't anything concrete

Q Did you express your concerns that Mr Williams might want something to Mr McDonnell?

A Yeah. I just said, "Look, he is around a lot " He definitely raised some red flags for me because he was around a lot He was sort of over the top. You know, he was a sales guy And, you know, I thought he was a little bit of a snake oil salesman

Q When you say snake oil salesman, can you spell out what you mean by that?

A Yeah, I mean, he had this product that he would say could cure this, that, and the other thing I mean, it was a cure for everything, according to him. And so I just -- you know, I didn't really believe in the product

Q When you raised with the Governor, for example, that "He is around a lot," again, is it your concern about what he is looking for? In other words, when you say he is over the top, spell that out for us

A He is just aggressive He was just an aggressive salesman.

Q Okay. Did you yourself believe that Mr Williams was looking for something in return based on how much time and energy he was spending?

A I mean, nothing specific It just, there's some red flags that were raised, and so I had some concerns in general, but there was nothing specific I could point to

Q And I want to be clear, I'm not asking you about whether you knew chapter and verse what he wanted.

A Right

Q I'm just trying to understand whether you had a concern that in general he was looking for something.

A Yeah. But a lot of donors are looking for something

Q Okay Had other donors in your experience raised the same red flags for you that Mr Williams had?

A Sure, some did.

Q At the time you had the conversations with Mr McDonnell that you have been telling us about, were you aware of the $50,000 loan that we talked about earlier?

A No

Q Were you aware of the payment for Cailin's wedding that we talked about earlier?

A No

Q Were you aware of the Rolex --

MR. BROWNLEE: I object We have been through this

THE COURT: Sustained. We don't need to go through that litany again

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Approximately how many times did you raise your concerns about Mr Williams with Mr McDonnell?

A Approximately, you know, a couple times, two or three times

Q And when you would raise it, what would he say?

A I really don't recall

Q Do you recall whether in 2012 it was your perception that the Governor knew about the Anatabloc product?

A By 2012?

Q Yes, sir

A Yeah.

Q Do you recall whether the Governor said anything about that in answer to your raising concerns about Mr Williams?

A No, I don't recall what he said.

Q Okay Did you testify before a grand jury in this investigation, sir?

A I did.

Q Was there a court reporter in there just like there is a court reporter here today?

A Yeah

Q Taking down the answers and questions just like this gentleman is here today?

A Uh-huh

Q Do you recall the date that you testified in the grand jury, sir?

A It was, I think it was the day after the election.

Q In what year?

A Sorry, 2013.

Q So sometime in early November of 2013?

A Uh-huh

Q About nine months ago?

A Yup

Q Nine months closer to the events that you have been testifying about?

A Yeah.

Q When you testified in the grand jury, did you take an oath just like you did today?

A Yes

Q Okay Bear with me one minute, please Do you recall -- withdrawn. Were you asked this question and did you give this answer, sir

MR. BROWNLEE: Could we have a page number?

MR HARBACH: I apologize, counsel It is Page

95

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Starting at Line 4 "Question: Mr Cox, I don't -- it just seems somewhat incongruous that your job is to protect the Governor, you've got the First Lady pitching Anatabloc to Ann Romney You've got Jonnie Williams, the only donor on the plane You're trying to figure out who this guy is You have your antenna up And there is no discussion? I mean, you said that you -- Answer: Yeah, we had discussions about Mr Williams I can't tell you exactly when they occurred."

MR. BROWNLEE: I object

THE COURT: What are you doing?

MR. HARBACH: I'm impeaching, Your Honor

THE COURT: Go ahead, proceed

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Continuing with the answer: "I would say it was probably sometime in 2012, you know "

MR. BROWNLEE: I object The question that he has just asked is not the question he just asked this witness

THE COURT: Go ahead and finish

BY MR HARBACH:

Q " when were we were on some, you know, flight going somewhere or coming back from somewhere in the context of the Republican Governors' Association I remember being very frustrated and uncomfortable that he would be around and, you know, clearly, you know, he had an interest in this -- in pushing this product And I remember being a little confused, thinking, okay, what is he trying to get out of this? I mean, he wants Ann Romney to be the poster child for Anatabloc. It just seemed like an odd way to go about doing business But you know, beyond that, I had --I certainly had some discussions about -- with the Governor about, you know, what is Jonnie -- what does he want? What is he trying to get? And -- because somebody who spends that much time and energy is looking for something in return. Question: And so you asked the Governor -- did you express that? Hey, what does he want? Answer: I did express that "

Were you asked that question and did you give that answer, sir?

A Yes

Q You mentioned a moment ago that you raised this issue with the Governor, I think you said a couple three times Why did you stop?

A I think he knew where I stood, sort of We had the conversation.

Q Did Mr McDonnell ever tell you that Mr Williams was interested in pursuing studies of Anatabloc at UVA and VCU?

A Not at the time I don't think I was aware of that at the time.

Q Next subject: Did you go on a vacation trip with the McDonnells to Cape Cod on Labor Day weekend of 2012?

A Yes

Q Tell us how that came about

A I got a call from the Governor, you know, fairly late one night, and I recall it because he was on speaker and Maureen was on the phone as well

Q They are both on the other end?

A Yes And my wife and I were on the line

Q Very good. What was said?

A Actually, I think Maureen extended the invitation for us to join them for this weekend in Cape Cod

Q What did you think about that when you got invited?

A It was nice It was a very kind invitation

Q Did you have any discussion with Mr and Ms McDonnell during that phone call about who was paying for the trip?

A I did Yes I asked, you know, how did this trip come about And Maureen indicated that Mr Williams had bid on the trip in a charity auction.

Q I'm sorry, who was it who said that?

A Maureen said that, I think.

Q Okay During that conversation, did you ask any other questions or express any concerns about how the trip was being paid for or anything related to that?

A Just raised, I just recall raising with the Governor just making sure that this was reported correctly

Q What was his response to that?

A That it would be

Q Did you yourself attend the charity event?

A No

Q Did you question at the time -- withdrawn. How did you get up to Cape Cod?

A On Mr Williams' plane

Q Who all was there once you got up there? Who was the party, the vacation party that was together? You, your wife, who else?

A The McDonnells, the Williamses, and there were a few other people And pardon me, I don't recall exactly who they were, but there was somebody there from Johns Hopkins and there was a judge that was a friend of Jonnie's, and a few other couples

Q Do you recall the name of the hotel where you all stayed?

A Yes, we were at the Chatham Bars Inn

Q A nice place?

A Very nice, yup

Q During the trip, well, actually, can we pull up for identification Government's 411? Just blow up the top half for the witness, please, Mr Starnes Mr Cox, do you recognize this to be the itinerary for the trip to Cape Cod that you and your family went on?

A Yes, sir.

MR. HARBACH: The government offers Government's 411

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Just leave the zooming right where it is, Mr Starnes The bottom of this screen mentions a sailing trip on the Sea Witch Did you go on that?

A I did not

Q Did others in the party go sailing?

A Yes We had a eight-month-old, so we weren't taking her on a sailboat

Q Can you scroll down a little bit? Toward the bottom of the page on Sunday There you go, from 11 to 3 there is an entry for golf Do you see that there?

A Yes, sir

Q Did you play golf?

A Yes, sir

Q The schedule says you played at the Chatham Seaside

Links Golf Course; is that where you all played?

A We actually played at Eastward Ho, which is another course there locally

Q Was it nice?

A Yeah, it was very nice

Q Who else played golf?

A It was the Governor, myself, Mr. Williams, and then it must have been -- the fourth must have been a member, club member

Q You can take down 411 please Did the group that you described a few minutes ago who was on the trip together, did you all have dinners together in the evenings?

A We did. We participated in two dinners

Q Do you recall a private clambake?

A I do

Q From your perspective, if you can generalize about the weekend, was it mostly business or was it mostly, you know, R&R?

A I thought it was far more social R&R. I didn't really see any business being done

Q Okay How many nights did you and your family stay there?

A We were there two nights

Q Do you know if the McDonnells stayed longer than that?

A Yeah, we left a day early

Q Did you pay for anything on the trip, sir?

A No, sir

Q You know one way or the other whether Mr McDonnell did?

A I don't know

Q Did you see him pay for anything?

A No

Q You told us not too long ago about your concerns that you raised with Mr McDonnell about Mr Williams, why he was around, and what not After you had expressed all these concerns in 2012, why was it that you agreed to go on the trip?

A Well, I mean, it was a very kind invitation And, you know, I thought the way it was presented to us was, you know, this was for, I think it was for the Governor's birthday And, Maureen had asked Bob, you know, "Who do you want to invite? Who can you relax with, who can you have fun with?" And they invited us

Q Was it your understanding that Mr Williams paid for this whole trip?

A Yeah, my understanding was that he bid on the trip in a charity auction.

Q I assume that -- I shouldn't assume anything Did the fact that he was the one who was funding the trip at all deter you from going?

A Clearly it didn't We went

Q Why didn't you tell Mr and Ms McDonnell on that phone call when you learned that Mr Williams was paying for it, why didn't you say to them, "Hey, you know, this is a bad idea, we shouldn't be --"

MR BROWNLEE: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Did you tell him that in the phone call, sir? Did you tell Mr and Ms McDonnell during the phone call that you thought it was a bad idea?

A No

Q Did you think it was a bad idea?

A I don't recall thinking that I recall asking him, making sure that it was going to be reported correctly

Q And you were satisfied that he had addressed that issue?

A Yes

Q After the investigation broke and you learned in the newspapers so many of the things that you didn't know at the time, and we have been through this them, did you have a conversation with Mr McDonnell?

A Sure I had a number of conversations with him.

Q Do you recall how soon after it broke in the papers that you had your first such conversation with him?

A I'm sure it was within a day Yeah, definitely

Q What do you remember? Again, I'm not intending to point to any specific conversation But generally, what were the tenor of the things that you communicated to Mr McDonnell?

A I mean, at first we were just trying to get the facts and trying to understand what had happened Again, my role as his political advisor is to really help out on the communications And so we were trying to figure out, you know, does the Washington Post, who wrote the story, do they have the facts right And at a certain point pretty quickly after that happened, after the story broke, lawyers got involved And so one of the first things they tell you is not to discuss the facts of the case And so, you know, I think we were at that point kind of speaking more in terms of generalities My advice to him at that time was really along the lines of "Let's get back to governing Let's get out there, let's remind the people, you know, let's go back to the business of governing Let's do our jobs and let's, you know, try to stay focused on that "

Q At any point, did you, again following the disclosure of the investigation in the newspapers, did you ever communicate to Mr McDonnell your views about his conduct?

A Yes

Q In what context?

A So, I remember being, you know, frustrated, particularly when the disclosure came out on the loan, I think it was -- I can't remember. It was like three months after the initial article came out, so probably, I think that occurred around Easter and then this would have been in, you know, probably July, somewhere in that time frame, when there was disclosure about the business loan

Q Okay.

A I thought we had made progress over the course of the last, you know, the previous 90 days in terms of, you know, kind of getting back to the business of governing and not letting this story consume us And so I expressed my, you know, frustration that I thought that this revelation, this disclosure of the business loan, was, you know, I think the way I said it, it was a couple steps back for us

Q Did you tell Mr McDonnell that you were angry?

A Yeah, I think I was angry, frustrated, upset

Q Did you tell him that you were disappointed?

A Yes

Q Did you tell him that you thought he showed very poor judgment in taking this loan from Mr Williams?

A Yes

Q Is there anything wrong with the Governor getting a loan, sir?

A No

Q What was different about the loan from Mr Williams in your view?

A I think it was just about the context of it, that we had all been working really hard for three months to try to, you know, sort of, you know, continue to move beyond the story And it came at a really bad time, and, you know, it just really set us back from a public relations standpoint

Q Was it not your view that what made the Governor's acceptance of the loan from Mr Williams different, that he was obviously, he, Mr Williams, was obviously trying to get something?

Q I'm sorry, can you repeat the question?

MR BROWNLEE: Objection

THE COURT: The objection is sustained

MR. HARBACH: Can I have just a moment, please, Judge?

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Sir, in the grand jury, were you not asked this question and did you give this answer: "Question: But why was it so --"

MR. BROWNLEE: Your Honor?

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

BY MR. HARBACH:

Q Mr Cox, why did you think it was poor judgment for Mr McDonnell to accept the loan from Mr Williams?

A Well, in light of what we knew at the time, you know, there was the gift of the wedding, and so from a public relations standpoint, it didn't look good.

Q Is your testimony that, in your judgment it had nothing to do with Mr Williams' obviously trying to get something?

MR BROWNLEE: Objection, leading

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Based on the job that you held and your closeness with Mr McDonnell, are these things that you learned about only when the papers broke them things that you would want to have known?

A Sure

Q When you expressed to Mr McDonnell that you were angry, disappointed, and thought that he showed poor judgment, what was his reaction?

A I mean, I think he felt bad about the whole thing

Q Did he blame his wife for it when you confronted him about this issue?

A No

Q Is that something that in your knowledge about him you would have expected him to do?

A No.

MR. HARBACH: May I please have a moment, Judge?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

(Counsel conferring with co-counsel)

MR. HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor I have no further questions at this time

THE COURT: All right. Cross?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Cox My name is John Brownlee I represent Bob McDonnell I've got a few questions for you here today

It was your testimony that you first met Bob McDonnell in 1998; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And that is, is it accurate that you had graduated from UVA, went to work on a political campaign, won, and then you went to work for the House of Delegates or for the Delegate; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Through that, you met Bob McDonnell?

A Yes, sir

Q He was a member of the House of Delegates?

A He was

Q And in the year later, in 1999, I think you testified that you joined his campaign for his reelection that year; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q Was that a particularly tough year or an important year?

A Yes. It was an important year The margins were really close in the House, and there was a lot of money involved in those races He was viewed as, you know, a rising star in the party He had a big target on his back. And the Democrats spent a lot of money, it was well over half a million dollars, which was pretty much unheard of at the time for a state House race

Q Is it fair to say that in 1999 he was the number one target?

A I think it is fair to say that, yes

Q Okay You won the race

A We did.

Q And so after that he went back to the House, and did you stay in touch? Did you stay close?

A Yeah, we did. You know, he was, you know, thinking about perhaps a leadership post within the House or running for Attorney General

Q And then in 2002, late 2002, is it fair to say that you all together decided he would run for statewide office, Attorney General?

A It was his decision He made the decision and off we went

Q You joined him in that endeavor?

A Yes, sir

Q So that election would have been then in 2005?

A Yes, sir

Q He won that one as well?

A Yes, by a landslide

Q I believe that was about 300 votes or something

A 360 votes

Q Was there a recount?

A There was

Q Did you stay with him throughout that process?

A I did.

Q Is it fair to say that you all became closer through that process?

A Yes, sir

Q And then he served as Attorney General and you stayed close through that?

A Yes, sir

Q Then he decided to run for Governor and he came back to you to ask for your help

A Yes, sir

Q And then you two ran that campaign for Governor, and then he was elected there as well

A Yes, sir

Q Now, after he was elected, you ran his transition, I believe you said; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And then after he was inaugurated, you did not join the administration, but you ran the PAC

A Correct

Q And he set up this political action committee that essentially raises funds and uses them to forward the party and his agenda

A Correct

Q That was your role at that time

A Yes, sir

Q Okay And then after you did that for a while, you then, I believe you said, in January of 2011, became the Executive Director for the Republican Governors' Association.

A Yes, sir

Q I think what you said there is that you kind of managed, for lack of a better phrase, the 29 Republican governors in their elections and reelections

A Yes, sir

Q So counting all that up, I think you have known Bob McDonnell about fifteen years; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q So is it fair to say that in your opinion, this is a man who volunteers public service?

A Yeah. He's got a great heart for public service.

Q His work ethic --

A He is a workaholic

Q What does that mean? Describe for us what that means

A First time I ever saw him he was walking around the General Assembly building He had, you know, just binders full of legislation underneath his arm and, you know, was prolific legislator He usually carried the most legislation of anybody But honestly, you know, he would work from morning until very late in the night, you know, including weekends I would often get calls, you know, when his sort of days of appearances were over, that would be sort of his time to think, and it ended up unfortunately for me being between 11 o'clock and one in the morning And that's where we got a lot of work done

Q And when he was Governor, he worked a lot as well?

A Yeah Nothing changed.

Q Traveled a lot?

A Yeah, even more

Q From your vantage point, from what you saw, he was pretty much kind of always on the job when he was Governor?

A Oh, 24/7

Q In watching not only Bob McDonnell but other politicians you are involved with, is it fair to say that others have a similar kind of schedule?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And does this schedule that these folks keep, have you seen that in some cases it has an impact on their family life, takes a toll?

A Sure It can be very stressful

Q Did it take a toll on your life?

A Yes

Q Let me switch gears just a bit You have known this man a long time Have you ever known him to talk about or indicate his desire to have luxury items like Rolexes or Ferraris?

A No, he is like the least materialistic person I know

Q Let me switch gears a little bit You talked a little bit about this bumper sticker, I believe Mr Harbach talked about it Bob's For Jobs

A Yes, sir

Q Fair to say you were part of the group that came up with that idea?

A Yes

Q This was part of his campaign?

A Uh-huh.

Q And tell us once again, what was the economy, what was kind of it like here in the United States and in Virginia when he started his campaign?

A It was a mess He had TARP, he had the bank bailouts It looked like the financial sector was coming apart at the seams in the fall of 2008, you know Unemployment was increasing rapidly and people were feeling it They were watching their retirement funds get cut Many people were losing their jobs. We were in a recession, a serious recession

Q All right And so the central theme, I think you said, of his campaign for Governor was to put people back to work

A Yes, sir

Q And part of that from his perspective was to get the private sector, companies, to expand and hire more people

A Yes, sir

Q And so is it fair to say that part of your plan for his campaign was to have him out there talking about this expansion, private companies, bringing more jobs to Virginia?

A Central focus of the campaign.

Q After he was elected, was that the central tenet or central part of his Governorship?

A Yes

Q Now, fair to say you have been around politicians a lot in your professional life Is that pretty much what you have dedicated your life to, are these folks?

A Yes, sir

Q Okay And so for a politician to promote a home state company, is that just what pretty much every Governor does?

A Yes, it should be It should be their central priority

Q And nothing wrong with that, right?

A No, sir

Q Okay Now, is it fair to say that over his four years as Governor, that the program that you helped design and he helped implement with others actually worked?

A Absolutely The unemployment rate came down dramatically Virginia is viewed as a magnet for jobs

Q All right Let me switch to another topic for politicians, and that is aircraft. Is it fair to say that Bob McDonnell is not the only Governor in the country who will use, take a donation of a private aircraft and use it to travel from Point A to Point B?

A Yes, it is a common occurrence

Q Okay. And unless a particular state prohibits it, pretty much all of them do; is that correct?

A Correct

Q Okay Some states have restrictions on how much a candidate or an official can accept, and that might limit them; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: Objection, relevance, state laws on this issue

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And in Virginia, it is unlimited; is that right?

A That's correct

Q So for either a candidate or an official for the Commonwealth of Virginia, they can take unlimited amount of donations with regard to whether it is a flight or money or whatever

A Yes, from a corporation or an individual Yes

Q That's the same for gifts; is that right?

A Yes, sir

Q Okay And what's required is that under the state laws, that these, for instance, a flight, it would be an in-kind contribution; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And that they need to be publicly disclosed; is that right?

A Yes.

Q All right Now, when Mr McDonnell was running for Governor, he had an entity that was kind of the fund raising, and it was called McDonnell for Governor; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q So that entity raised funds and then spent funds; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And people could donate to that entity

A Yes

Q And so if a company or an individual wanted to allow the candidate to use the aircraft, they could make an in-kind contribution to that entity; is that correct?

A That's correct

Q And then it would be reported?

A Yes

Q Now, and Mr McDonnell did that when he was running for Governor

A Yes

Q Okay And he used many different people's airplanes?

A Yes, sir

Q And there was a whole team of people who would help schedule these things.

A Yes

Q Okay And let me just talk with regard to Mr. Williams' aircraft When he was running for Governor, were you aware that Star Scientific, the corporate entity, donated the aircraft?

A I don't think I was aware at the time.

Q Okay If I were to show you a document, first of all, do you know what VPAP is?

A The Virginia Public Access Project

Q What does VPAP do, sir?

A Kind of takes all these financial reports, the campaign expenditure reports that are filed with the State Board of Election and puts them online in a user-friendly format that the public can access

Q If I were to show you a screenshot from VPAP, might that refresh your recollection?

A Yes, sir

(Document proffered to witness)

Q If you will take a look at that and just read it to yourself

(Witness perusing document)

A Okay

Q Okay Now, so I asked you when Mr McDonnell was running for Governor, were you aware Star Scientific made in-kind contributions to his campaign through the use of an aircraft?

A I wasn't at the time

Q Does that refresh your recollection?

A Yes, it does

Q How many times was that done?

A Four times

Q All right And is the total value of that $28,582?

A Yes, sir

MR. HARBACH: I will lodge an objection. The witness wasn't aware of that at the time

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Now, once the campaign was done, you said you started up the PAC; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q Okay And did the PAC function much like the entity for the campaign in which it would raise funds and would accept from time to time in-kind contributions?

A Yes

Q Okay And were you aware while the PAC was created, or active, that Star Scientific made certain in-kind contributions through the use of Mr Williams' aircraft to the PAC?

A Yes

Q Okay And do you know exactly the number and the amount?

A No

Q Okay If I were to show you a screenshot from VPAP once again for the PAC, might that refresh your recollection?

A Yes

(Document proffered to witness)

(Witness perusing document)

Q Please take a look at that document Does that refresh your recollection? How many flights were donated by Mr Williams?

A Four flights

MR. HARBACH: Same objection, Judge

THE COURT: You never asked him how many His recollection wasn't -- there was no indication it was exhausted. It is so marginal in its relevance, I'll let him go ahead and answer the question. But you are not doing this refreshing your recollection If I don't know something and you give me a piece of paper, that doesn't mean that I'm now recalling I don't know You are now educating me. There's two different things So do it right or don't do it

MR. BROWNLEE: Thank you, Your Honor

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Fair to say there were four flights donated by Mr Williams' aircraft?

A Yes, sir

Q Totaling over $79,000?

A Yes, sir

Q All of these flights, in light of the fact they are on VPAP, were publicly disclosed?

A Yes

Q Now, with regard to these flights and all these contributions and the disclosure here with regard to the flights, was there any time that Bob McDonnell ever asked you not to disclose a flight or any other donation that would have come in through either one of these entities?

A No

Q Okay Now, the government showed you an e-mail from 2010, from Monica Block Could we pull up RM-704? Mr Harbach asked you about this e-mail

MR. BROWNLEE: I believe this is in evidence, Your Honor This is not? You didn't put it in?

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q He asked you a question about whether or not -- well, what is this?

A It is an e-mail from Monica Block saying that

Mr Williams offered his plane, and I'm asking Monica if Mr Williams is doing any state business

MR. BROWNLEE: We would offer RM-704 into evidence

THE COURT: It will be admitted

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q And so you sent this e-mail, they said that, the e-mail is coming from Monica Block, the Governor's scheduler; is that correct?

A Yes, sir.

Q She is saying that Mr Williams changed his plans and had called back to offer his plane

A Yes, sir

Q She sent that to you

A Yes

Q And you responded back, "Jonnie is not doing any state business, correct?"

A Yes

Q She responded back, "That's correct, he has no --" Why did you ask that question?

A There was a new law that went into effect, I think it was July 1st of 2010, that said that we cannot, a PAC could not accept contributions from any business that was doing business with the state or potentially could end up doing business with the state. Might be an RFP process or bidding process

Q So you were confirming that in fact it was okay to take this plane

A Correct

Q Is it fair to say that your boss, Bob McDonnell, would want you to do just that?

A Yes, sir

Q And that's how he expected you to conduct yourself?

A Yes, sir

Q To make sure that things were done right

A Yes, sir

Q And legal

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Okay Let me talk a little bit about fundraising I think they raised that You have raised a lot of money for and with Mr McDonnell over many years; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q And these were dollars that were raised or funds that were raised for his political campaigns

A Yes, sir

Q And you raised them for his campaign for Governor; is that correct?

A Yes

Q And then with his PAC?

A Yes

Q And now you do that for the RGA; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Now, at some point, was -- did Governor McDonnell have a leadership position within the Republican Governors' Association?

A Yes, he was the chairman.

Q Was he the chairman in 2011?

A He was through part of 2011 and then through 2012

Q Now, when a candidate has to raise money, it is fair to say there are times when they just literally sit in a room with a phone with someone like yourself and a book and call potential donors and ask them if they will donate to the campaign?

A Yes

Q Okay Fair to say you have sat in those rooms with Bob McDonnell for numerous hours over your career?

A Yes

Q Okay And in engaging with a donor, I think Mr Harbach talked to you a little bit about this, some donors ask for something back. Some donors -- tell me how that works, what kind of donors are they, and some ask for things Give us a sense of what that's like

A I think there's any number of kinds There's folks who want something, that are more transactional There are plenty of people who don't want anything. There are folks that just like the candidate, want to support the candidate And there's some people who, you know, for lack of a better term, are sort of groupies and just like being around politicians

Q Okay. And in your time in working with Bob McDonnell, was there ever a time that you can recall in which you felt he crossed the line or did something unethical with a donor?

A No

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Let me talk a little bit about a term we have heard called "donor maintenance " Do you know what that is?

A Yes, I mean, it is the idea that you want to have a relationship with these people outside of just asking them for money And so, you know, you don't want to, every time where you are calling them, you don't want to just be asking them for money So you find points to contact them, see how things are going in their life

Q And this is folks like yourself train candidates and officials to do these things. It is important These campaigns are expensive and they need to raise funds; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Let me show you Government Exhibit 370 This one is in evidence, Your Honor This is a text message from Bob McDonnell to Mr Williams "Stock going great Alzheimer's study announcement really helped. Thanks for coming to Romney event and helping him. Gov "

Is that the kind of thing you would view as donor maintenance?

A Absolutely

MR. HARBACH: Objection, relevance

THE COURT: No, he can answer that

THE WITNESS: Yes

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Can we show Government Exhibit 396? This one is in as well, Your Honor "Good announcements lately Stock looks good. Hope all is well You and Celeste enjoy the 4th of July Gov " Same kind of thing?

A Yes

Q From a candidate or official, you would expect them to do this with their donors; is that correct?

A Yes

MR. HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Overruled

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Now, sometimes when a candidate, or particularly an official, interacts with a donor or non-donor, has it been your experience that they will suggest that they go meet with other people, perhaps in their Cabinet?

A Yes

Q Okay Is that a common thing for politicians that you see?

A Very common.

Q Have you seen Bob McDonnell do it?

A Yes

Q And is it true that he has a radio show from time to time where callers will call in and he will on the radio show say, "You know, we will get your name and number and we will forward you to the person you need to talk to"?

A Yes

Q Nothing wrong with that

A No It is constituent service

Q Thank you Let me move here to this event at the Mansion. Mr Harbach asked you some questions about that I just want to make sure we are clear on this If there was -- if a donor had an event at the Mansion, and that donor was giving $200,000 to various state universities, research universities at that event, and the Governor was invited to attend that event and make remarks, do you think that's appropriate for him to go to?

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I do

MR. BROWNLEE: Okay

THE COURT: So we can stop this constant objections, it is all right for him to describe the facts that he is familiar with. He has been around the governors and other politicians. But you keep bumping up against asking his opinion on things, which is not right. So please don't do that

MR. BROWNLEE: Yes, Your Honor, thank you

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q All right, now, I think you talked about this Mansion event and how it was paid for Is it your recollection that your political action committee paid for the Mansion event?

A Yes

Q Okay And Martin Kent, the Governor's Chief of Staff, came to you and said, "We believe it is appropriate that the PAC pay for this"; is that correct?

A Yes

Q I believe you testified that when it is a non-official event, then the PAC will pay for it; is that right?

A Correct

Q And in this instance, Mr Kent came to you, had made a judgment, and asked the PAC to pay for it; is that right?

A Correct.

Q And you have no problem or issue with Mr Kent's judgment on these things

A No

Q Okay Now, Mr Harbach asked you if the Governor had spoken to you directly about whether or not the PAC should pay for it or not Does he routinely get involved in those things?

A No

Q He has staff to do that, right?

A Yes

Q The government asked you about Twitter I believe they showed you an e-mail in which there was a request that -- I think we can pull it up, 0720 So this came to you and your response was "The Governor should not twitter about a product launch"; is that correct?

A Yes

Q All right Now, you understand, is it true, Governor McDonnell doesn't twitter about anything

A He doesn't tweet Somebody does it for him.

Q Doesn't do Facebook. Staff sets these things up and does this for him.

A Yes, sir

Q Okay Thank you. Mr Harbach talked to you a little bit about, as he describes it, a product launch I think you all had a discussion about what would be appropriate and what's not Is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay. And you talked about, as you described, he shouldn't be picking winners and losers; is that right?

A Yes

Q Okay Tell us what you mean by that

A I've used the example of the wine industry, which is, you know, I think it is very, in my opinion as political advisor, it is very appropriate that the Governor, you know, be supporting the wine industry But I don't think, you know, as Governor, you want to be careful about, you know, supporting Barboursville at the expense of Williamsburg and another winery So I think it is kind of subjective, but there is a line there

Q Okay And if there is a Virginia company that only has one product, where does that fall?

MR HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q If there is a Virginia company and they only have one product and the official were to promote that business, do you believe that would fall in this winners or losers since there is only one?

THE COURT: The objection is sustained. He is discussing a market when he is talking about wines.

MR BROWNLEE: I understand

THE COURT: All right

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q In an instance where there is not a market, where there is just one, where the company --

THE COURT: Is there a dietary supplement market? So if you are going to ask him about something, you ask about the same thing

MR BROWNLEE: Yes, Your Honor

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q So in this instance, if there is a Virginia company and there is only one Virginia company that makes this particular product, what is your view of that?

MR. HARBACH: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR BROWNLEE:

Q Have you ever heard of Sabra?

A Hummus

Q Sabra is a company, an Israeli company, isn't it?

A I don't know

Q Do you know or do you recall that Sabra opened a facility in Chesterfield County?

A I'll take your word for it

Q Okay And, well, let me ask you, are you aware that Sabra had an event at the Governor's Mansion?

MR HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q Let me move on to Mr. Williams. You were in New York with him; is that correct?

A Yes, sir

Q I just want to make sure that we are correct on a couple of things Is it your testimony that Mr Williams indicated through his conversation with you that he knew Oscar de la Renta?

A Yes

Q And he told you that?

A Yes, he told the table about it, yes

Q Okay And when there was this conversation, Mr Williams was talking about perhaps getting Ms McDonnell this inaugural dress I believe it is your testimony that it was your sense that he was going to say he was going to pay for this; is that correct?

A Yeah, that was my perception, yes

Q Okay You thought that was a bad idea?

A Yes

Q And that idea was eventually killed; is that correct?

A Yes

Q Okay And when you discussed that with Mr McDonnell, he didn't fight you on that, did he?

A No

Q Okay Now, when Mr. Williams, after the McDonnells left, Mr Williams stayed behind with you and I believe it was the male model and a couple others; is that right?

A Yes, Mr. Zubowsky

Q Is it at that time he bought this $5,000 bottle of Cognac?

A Yes

Q What was your sense of Williams; what was your impression of him at that time?

A I thought he wanted everybody to know how much money he had.

Q Was he bragging about it?

A Yeah He made sure everyone knew it was a $5,000 bottle of Cognac

Q Let me move to this event, the Romney event down in Charleston, South Carolina I believe Mr Harbach showed you the manifest You flew down there with Mr McDonnell and others on a Romney charter; is that correct?

A I believe that's correct

Q And Mr Williams and Ms McDonnell were not on that plane with you

A Correct

Q Okay So when you show up there, Ms McDonnell and Williams are there together; is that right?

A Correct

Q Okay And then there is a bus and everybody gets on the bus.

A Yup Not Mr Williams and Ms McDonnell They did not get -- Ms McDonnell got on the bus, Mr Williams did not get on the bus

Q Where was he?

A I don't know

Q But he wasn't on the bus?

A No

Q Okay You talked about this e-mail that you got from Ms McDonnell Christmas Eve, 2009; is that correct?

A Yes

Q All right And you said that it angered you

A Yes It angered me

Q Okay And over the next several years with you watching Ms McDonnell, whether it be at the Romney event or these other things, what was your sense of her and how she conducted herself

A Well, I think when she was happy, she could be incredibly sweet and caring But when she was unhappy, she could be very difficult, and at times mean.

Q All right And did you all go through many staff members?

A We did

Q All right Is it fair to say that someone who is in politics like you are, that you kind of bring a certain level of skepticism about folks?

A Yeah

Q All right And in your interactions with Bob McDonnell, does he share that? Does he have that same thing?

A No, he tends to, I think he tends to think the best of everybody

Q Okay Has that served him well as a politician?

A Absolutely Never lost an election

Q Now, as close as you are to Bob McDonnell, does he typically discuss his personal finances with you?

A No.

Q Okay And so were you aware of -- Mr Harbach asked you if you were aware of certain loans he got from Mr Williams Were you aware of any loans that he ever had?

A No

Q Okay Were you aware that he had purchased some real estate down in Virginia Beach with his younger sister and had this little business, MoBo?

A I knew he had some properties, just because, you know, he would ask,us if we wanted to go stay at Wintergreen, so I knew he had the house at Wintergreen. I knew he had the house in Virginia Beach.

Q And he would offer that to you?

A Yeah

Q Would he typically talk to you about the -- about the privates of his marriage?

A No

Q All right You testified about being, when this story broke, of learning some of the facts and being disappointed; is that correct?

A Yeah. Specifically on the loan, the business loan, I think it was

Q And is it fair to say that that disappointment stemmed from a political perspective; that politically, this was damaging to him?

A Yeah We had gone through, you know, three months of Washington Post stories and I thought we had sort of gotten beyond it, and then we had another story that came, and it was sort of, as I think I described it, it was sort of two steps back from a public relations standpoint

Q And you let him know

A Yes

Q Okay I just have a couple things In your judgment, is Bob McDonnell an ethical man?

MR. HARBACH: Objection

THE COURT: Sustained

THE WITNESS: Absolutely

BY MR. BROWNLEE:

Q In your time with him, have you ever seen him do anything that you believe would be unethical or illegal?

A No.

MR HARBACH: Same objection.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained If you want to turn him into a character witness, then do it right.

MR BROWNLEE: Okay Thank you, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right Why don't we go ahead and stop here for our afternoon break before you get started. We are going to take 15 minutes

MR BURCK: Thank you, Your Honor

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR BURCK:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Cox My name is Bill Burck I represent Maureen McDonnell

A Good afternoon

Q So you are an expert in politics and political elections, right?

A Most of the time

Q Okay Can -- can someone run for First Lady of Virginia?

A No

Q Can someone be appointed to First Lady of Virginia?

A No

Q Does the First Lady of Virginia receive a salary from the State?

A No

Q Is there an official position called the First Lady of Virginia, in your expertise?

A No

Q Now, you testified about various discussions you had with the Governor about concerns you had about Jonnie

Williams Do you remember those -- that testimony with Mr -- Mr Harbach?

A Uh-huh

Q And you testified that you thought it was a bad idea for Jonnie Williams to buy the inaugural dress for Maureen McDonnell back in 2009 Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Your main concern was how Maureen McDonnell, having such a dress, would reflect on the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q It was a political concern?

A Yes

Q And that's because this was about the politics and the appearance of having an inaugural dress of this sort during a recession, right?

A Yes

Q And the Governor, of course, is a public official, right?

A Yes

Q Now, you testified that during the campaign, prior to the Governor being elected, that you had concerns that Maureen McDonnell was pushing nutraceuticals on donors and on activists, Republican activists, right?

A Yes

Q Your concerns there were also about how that would reflect on the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q It wasn't a legal concern?

A No

Q And you testified about the Romney event and your discomfort with Maureen McDonnell's pushing Anatabloc on Ann Romney. Do you remember that?

A Yes

Q Again, your concern there was how it would reflect on the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q There wasn't -- you didn't have a legal concern about what she was doing, right?

A No

Q In fact, you testified that the type of behavior that you were concerned about with Ms McDonnell was how it -- how it would cast the Governor in a -- as you said, it would not cast him in a great light Is that what you said?

A Yes

Q So is it fair to say that your concern was about how Maureen McDonnell's behavior, as you saw it, would reflect on the Governor's image and on his popularity?

A Yes

Q But you weren't really concerned that Maureen

McDonnell might be breaking any laws, right?

A No

Q It was your understanding that Maureen McDonnell, as the First Lady of Virginia, could have a private sector job?

A You know, I'm not a legal expert so -- I'm not a lawyer I don't know the answer to that I assume she could She's a -- you know, it's a volunteer position It's not an official position, as you said.

Q Now, you also testified about how you would occasionally raise concerns about Jonnie Williams to the Governor and whether he wanted something, when he wanted something, when Jonnie Williams wanted something from the Governor, right?

A Yes

Q You didn't raise those concerns directly with Ms McDonnell, did you?

A No

Q So as far as you know, she didn't know about your concerns about Jonnie Williams maybe wanting something, as far as you know?

A Correct

Q And that's because it wasn't your job to protect her, as it were, right? You were there for the Governor?

A Correct

Q That was somebody else's job, right?

A Correct

Q Just a few more questions

A Uh-huh

Q Now, you had an opportunity to observe Ms. McDonnell and Jonnie Williams together, right?

A Uh-huh

Q How would you describe Maureen McDonnell's demeanor around Mr Williams?

A She adored him She would light up when he would walk in the room

Q She adored him She would light up when he walked into the room Is that what you said?

A Yeah

Q And what was Mr Williams' demeanor around Maureen McDonnell?

A I think, you know, very -- very friendly I think he returned -- returned those feelings

Q From your -- from what you could see?

A Yeah

Q So it was your understanding that Maureen McDonnell and Jonnie Williams were friends?

A Yeah

Q Good friends?

A Yes

Q Was there anything that -- did anything about their relationship strike you as unusual, from your perspective?

A I think just the amount of time that he was around and -- and, frankly, the amount of time she spent talking about him It was constantly -- constantly talking about Jonnie

Q Was it always about business?

A No

Q It was about Jonnie Williams the person?

A Yeah

Q Chatham vacation that you had testified about?

A Uh-huh

Q You said that it was mostly a social event?

A Yeah I really didn't witness any business going on So it was completely -- it seemed completely a social event to me

MR BURCK: No further questions, Your Honor Thank you

THE COURT: All right Redirect

MR HARBACH: Thank you, Your Honor

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Good afternoon, Mr Cox I think I'll start right there where Mr Burck left off

These occasions when you would witness Maureen

McDonnell and Mr Williams in the same room together, was Mr McDonnell present on those occasions?

A Sometimes These were usually like receptions, big receptions, that kind of thing

Q Fair to say that if you're bothering to show up at an event, given your role related to the Governor, that odds are that he's going to be there?

A Pardon me? That the Governor will be there?

Q Yes, sir

A Yeah

Q And a moment ago when you said that Mr Williams -- I believe the phrase you used was -- returned those feelings, I just want to make sure I understand Were you suggesting that based on your observation, Mr Williams adored Ms McDonnell and Mr Williams lit up whenever Ms McDonnell walked in the room?

A Yeah Yeah I think he was --

Q That was your observation?

A I think he really liked her, yes

Q So both of those things?

A Yeah

Q Okay At the beginning of your cross-examination by Mr Brownlee, you were asked some questions about what a political campaign is, how campaigns work and so forth

Do you recall those questions?

A Sure

Q Okay After Mr McDonnell was elected Governor in November of 2009, to your knowledge, was there any campaign in existence after that point?

A After he was elected in 2009?

Q Yes, sir.

A No The campaign shuts down at a certain point, although the committee may have stayed open legally

Q That was his last campaign, wasn't it?

A Yeah I mean, unless he -- you know, unless he decided to, you know, run for senate or run for president or something like that

Q Did he do that between then and now, sir?

A He did not, no

Q Okay Now, let's talk a little bit about the subject of how the campaign works You were asked about the concept of in-kind contributions, both in the context of the campaign and in the context of the PAC

Do you recall that?

A Yes, sir

Q In your experience, how is it that a campaign person becomes aware of an in-kind contribution?

A Well, you know, in-kind contributions, first of all, they are services So they can be, you know, flights or catering is a good example of it So they will be on the report

Q Okay And the reports are prepared by whom?

A Usually our -- you know, someone on our finance team

Q A member of the staff?

A Yes, sir

Q Fair to say that as far as the reporting is concerned related to the campaign or the PAC, that the reports are only as good as the information that the staff receives about the various contributions or events?

A Yes

Q Sort of a garbage in, garbage out situation?

A Yeah

Q With respect specifically to the Political Action Committee and the four flights I believe you testified about that Star Scientific donated to the PAC, do you know how the PAC become aware of those flights, meaning -- and then the fact that they needed to be disclosed?

A You know, I don't I just know, you know, we had someone who handled that, and we made sure that they were reported correctly

Q And, again, same phenomenon The reports are only as good as the information that's flowing to the staff, correct?

A Yeah

Q You were asked several questions by Mr Brownlee about donors to either the campaign or to the PAC The loans that you've testified about not becoming aware of until after the investigation broke, to your recollection, were any of those donations to the campaign, sir?

MR BROWNLEE: Objection, Your Honor

THE COURT: Overruled

A No

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Were any of those donations to the PAC?

A No

Q What about the check for Mr and Ms McDonnell's daughter's wedding? Was that a donation to the campaign?

A No

Q Was that a donation to the PAC?

A No

Q What about the Rolex and the golf -- last one, Judge -- were those a donation to the campaign?

A No

Q Were those a donation to the PAC?

A No

Q Would you take a look briefly at Government's 370 in evidence? Mr Brownlee asked you about this one, and if memory serves, you described this or were willing to accept his description of this as donor maintenance; is that right?

A Yes

Q And, similarly, with Government's 396, if we could take a look at that So that one -- before we leave that one, Mr Starnes -- let's just note the date

The date of Government's 370 is April 28th of '12, okay?

And then Government's 396 is July 3rd of '12 This was -- this second one, 396, was another one that you agreed could be fairly characterized as donor maintenance; is that right?

A Yes

Q And in either October -- excuse me, April 28th, which is the date of 370, or July 3rd of '12, at either of those times did you know that Mr McDonnell or Ms McDonnell owned Star --

MR BROWNLEE: Objection Leading Objection Leading, Your Honor

THE COURT: Go ahead and finish your question

BY MR HARBACH:

Q Did you know whether on October -- I keep saying October -- April 28th of '12 or July 3rd of '12, at either of those times did you know that either Mr or Ms McDonnell owned any Star stock?

A No

MR HARBACH: You can take the exhibit down,

please

BY MR HARBACH:

MR DRY: The government would call Monica Block to the stand, Your Honor

MONICA BLOCK,

called as a witness by and on behalf of the government, having been first duly sworn by the Clerk, was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR DRY:

Q Good afternoon, Ms Block

A Hi

Q Could you please state your full name for the record?

A Monica Jean Block

Q Okay And how do you spell your middle name?

A Jean J-E-A-N

Q Okay Can you tell the jury about your educational background?

A Sure So I went to George Mason University and got a double major in government and international politics and communication

Q And then after college, where did you go to work?

A I went to work on the McDonnell campaign for Governor

Q Okay And what -- approximately when was that?

A That was in March of 2009

Q And what type of work did you do on the campaign?

A So I started off being the political assistant So I was our campaign manager's assistant, basically And then also was kind of like the political assistant for the Governor

Q And when you say "campaign manager," who is that?

A That was Phil Cox

Q Okay So Phil Cox was your boss?

A Yes

Q Okay And then at some point did you become the Governor's scheduler?

A I did I think that was in August July or August of that year

Q Of 2000 --

A Of 2009, yeah

Q Okay Now, as Mr McDonnell's scheduler, how often would you interact with him?

A Every day

Q Okay And could that be by -- what mode of communication?

A Phone, e-mail or texts

Q Okay And walk me through, what are the duties of the Governor's scheduler?

A Sure So the way it was described to me when I very first started was that I was responsible for his personal, political, and official duties

At the time, he was still -- he wasn't AG anymore, but when he transitioned into the official office Basically anything that he was doing in his day, making sure he was prepared for it and ready to go

Q So you were responsible for making sure he was where he was supposed to be, with who he was supposed to be, and he was doing what he was supposed to be doing Is that fair?

A As much as humanly possible, yes

Q Okay And as your role as scheduler, were you aware of various requests by people for the Governor to attend events?

A Oh, yeah

Q Okay And how would those requests typically come in?

A So in the Governor's Office, everything we required to come in through writing, typically through like an e-mail, or we had an on-line form that people could fill out to request a meeting or for him to come to an event, thing like that

And then from there, we put them all -- if it was something he would consider -- in a log, an Excel spreadsheet, and then we had weekly meetings to talk about what would be recommended that he do or not do

Q Do you have an sense of an average week how many requests for the Governor to come to something would come in?

A A lot

Q A lot?

A I don't know how to put a number on it, but it was -- it was overwhelming, yes

Q Okay And is it fair to say that he couldn't attend everything he was invited to?

A Yeah No way

Q Okay So can you walk me through the actual process? A request comes in for the Governor to attend an event What happens? And walk me through the decision on yes or no

A Sure So like I said, the requests would come in Some things would be -- could be immediately declined just based on the fact that he would be overseas or it wouldn't work in the schedule or something like that

And then from there, we would put it in the log, in the spreadsheet And then once a week, in his scheduling meeting, we would go through and recommended whether or not -- basically talk through with the staff what we thought he should go to, what he should not go to And then from there, that was updated and given to the Governor to look at for his final sign-off to agree or disagree with our recommendations

Q And this scheduling -- I'll call it a conference --

A Uh-huh

Q -- for lack of a better term, who typically attended that?

A So in that meeting was Martin Kent, our Chief of Staff; Jasen Eige, who was our counsel For the beginning, or when I was there, it was often Eric

Finkbeiner, who was our policy director; Janet Kelly, who was Secretary of the Commonwealth; Tucker Martin, the communications director; myself; and then Phil Cox would sometimes attend via phone

Q And Mr Cox, is it fair to say, attended during the early parts of the administration, but --

A Yeah I mean, he was really busy So when it worked, he would be on, but there was oftentimes he couldn't be

Q And you mentioned Janet Kelly?

A Uh-huh

Q Was Janet Kelly also known as Janet Polarek?

A Oh, Janet Polarek Sorry Yes

Q No No

A She's married now

Q She's married Okay So when you say Janet Kelly or we see a document that says Janet Polarek, that's both the same --

A Same person, yeah

Q Okay And I just want to make sure I understood Who had the final say when you guys were finished with your conference?

A Well, we would make recommendations It was kind of a group recommendation, what everyone thought And then from there, I would update it, give it to the Governor every week for him to sign off or agree or disagree

Q And how much in advance would you give that to the Governor? Would it be for the next week's events or a month out or how did that work?

A I mean, usually pretty far out things would be put on the schedule We said nothing more than six weeks in advance, but as far as events would come in, typically, it was for things further down the road, like in the next month

Q Were there times where the Governor couldn't attend an event but somebody else would go in his place?

A Yeah So we actually created on our website a whole surrogate scheduling process The Governor was really big about saying no with a smile If I had a dollar for every time he told me that, and being able to give people something if he couldn't make it So whether it was sending them a letter that could be read at the event or doing a proclamation or having a cabinet secretary go or having the First Lady go, offering them something while we said no with a smile

Q Okay And when you were sending someone else, are they going as the Governor's surrogate?

A Yeah, typically

Q And that included -- when you say "cabinet secretaries," what kind of cabinet secretaries would you send to what kind of events?

A Well, it would depend what the event was If it was a winery, it would make sense for Secretary Haymore to go Or if it was some sort of public safety event, it would make sense for Secretary Decker to go So just based on whatever the event was and whose, I guess, place it would fall into

Q And the First Lady was a surrogate as well, used as a surrogate?

A Yeah, she was sometimes

Q When did you first hear about Jonnie Williams?

A So I first heard about Jonnie Williams, he was on a list I had gotten, or that was used during the campaign, of people who had offered their plane to help fly the Governor when he needed to be flown places

Q And were there other donors that were on this list?

A Yeah

Q Okay And so was the list 100 people or 50 people or --

A Probably like 20, 20 to 30 maybe

Q And how did you decide when to make requests to particular donors for their -- for their jet?

A So I had a spreadsheet that listed everybody, and then I would keep track of when we asked people, when they said yes and when they said no, just because we didn't want to ask somebody too much and use them too much and kind of overstay our welcome

Q Okay

A And then there was notes Like different planes would make more sense for different trips based on if it was a -- you know, trip to Blacksburg or a trip to Chicago or a trip to California
